The LION'S ROAR

That wasn't an earthquake in New York last week. It was Bob Taylor's arrival in person. THE CROWD ROARS when Bob appears.

A summer release and better than "The Yank." This isn't hoarding.

"YELLOW JACK" gets editorial praise. (Yellow journals included.) We've got stacks of editorials. Things like that help the whole industry.

A big hand for Bob Montgomery too. All our Bobs are swell actors. Bob Taylor, Bob Donat, Bob Young, Bob Benchley. S'help me, Bob.

DIPLOMA FOR ANDY HARDY

Get a diploma Mr. Showman and hand it to the Judge Hardy Family. They have completely won the public. "LOVE FINDS ANDY HARDY" is the hardiest of them all. In addition to popular Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone, Cecilia Parker and all the other folks there's Judy Garland for the songs. It's a sweet attraction for the good old summertime. Give it "A" time. Enjoy pay-time.

"BUSINESS IS GOOD THANK YOU!"

If you don't like to read box-office reports, skip this. But for the statistical-minded: Hold-Overs on "Three Comrades" continue: 3rd Week, Capitol, N. Y.; Chicago; 2nd Week at Louisville, Los Angeles (day and date State and Grauman's), Portland, Salt Lake City, Seattle, San Francisco, Cleveland, Hartford, New Haven, Washington, D. C., Worcester, Philadelphia, Buffalo. "Yellow Jack" played two weeks in 'Frisco, New York, Hartford, Cleveland, Philadelphia, Cincinnati, and elsewhere. "Woman Against Woman" opening nicely in first engagements.

"Sweetheart of the day"

AMERICA IS WAITING FOR MARGARET SULLAVAN IN "SHOPWORN ANGEL"

No underground rumors this time. This is above-ground news. We get it straight and you'll get it straight at the box-office. "THE SHOPWORN ANGEL" is a wow. Predictions about Margaret Sullavan's boom at the box-office come true. (And Jimmy Stewart's the perfect choice opposite her.) Remember what the critics said about Miss S. in "Three Comrades". "One of our greatest actresses"—Herald-Trib.; "Brilliantly effective"—Mirror; "Performance of real and poignant power"—Telegraph; "Best of her career"—News. Building star assets is an uncommon talent in film industry but Leo knows how. He gives you Margaret Sullavan.

Hollywood Preview Audience In Stitches

It takes a particularly special grade of comedy to throw a calloused Hollywood preview audience into stitches and tears and that is what this one did.

It's as full of gags as the breakfast food broadcasts are of prairie tenors and it is one of these, as phoney as he is melodic, that Dick Powell plays and sings in championship style. The film is fast, loud, tuneful, witty, smart in a very melodious and purposely naive manner.

Pat O'Brien, in a faster and funnier role than he's had in years and Priscilla Lane as a crooning cowgirl top a large and competent cast which seems to have enjoyed every moment of their several chores. Their gayety comes across with a bang.

Five of the highly singable songs are by Richard Whiting and Johnny Mercer, the latter also collaborating with Harry Warren on the sixth. As threaded through the action the tunes highlight the story without stopping it. As sung by Powell and Miss Lane they are quite, quite something!

It's for laughs exclusively and packed with said same!

'Cowboy From Brooklyn' A Hit!

Great Cast, Script and Direction

The picture is great entertainment and should click heavily with any type audience and requires only a good start by enterprising showmen for a certain successful engagement!

With the trend toward Westerns, Warners have put their tongue in their cheek and pulled a gay and riotous "hoss opry" out of their saddle bags. The story speeds along to a fast finish and polished direction and an able cast keep the film going at top pace throughout. The tunes by Richard Whiting and Johnny Mercer are catchy, situations are side-splitting, and a good time will be enjoyed by all!

YES, WE ARE HOARDING!

If delivery of a picture every week, as we promised, is hoarding—we are guilty!

If delivering two or more A pictures every month through the heat of May, June, July and August is hoarding—we are guilty!

If delivering to Exhibitors in July three of our most expensive A pictures—Shirley Temple in LITTLE MISS BROADWAY, ALWAYS GOODBYE, and I'LL GIVE A MILLION—is hoarding—we are guilty.

Since April 1 our release schedule shows the following class A pictures:

April 15 — IN OLD CHICAGO
April 29 — FOUR MEN AND A PRAYER
May 13 — KENTUCKY MOONSHINE
May 20 — RASCALS
May 27 — KIDNAPPED
June 3 — JOSETTE
June 17 — THREE BLIND MICE
July 1 — ALWAYS GOODBYE
July 22 — I'LL GIVE A MILLION
July 29 — LITTLE MISS BROADWAY

With the exception of the Jane Withers picture, not one of these cost less than $600,000. Every one of them had been promised. Every one of our promises has been kept.

If this is hoarding, we are guilty.

Twentieth Century-Fox is not only guilty but proud of this kind of hoarding. Last year, this year, next year—always—we consider commitments for delivery of pictures our most serious responsibility. This responsibility runs through the summer, for it knows no season—knows no break.

We have kept faith with our customers, and they know it. We are not interested in the opinion of any competitor.

Our policy remains the same:

To produce the best possible pictures to get the public into theatres, not to produce statements to keep them out.

WHITE HOUSE

THE motion picture industry moves into a new period of internal and external adjustments. Unionizations and labour affairs are newly astir, with Government taking a hand through the National Labor Relations Board, this week certifying the American Newspaper Guild as the bargaining agent for editorial, and some other, employes of Paramount News, and conducting a poll in Hollywood, first of its kind among studio workers, resulting in designation of the Screen Writers Guild as the bargaining agency for writers.

The New York order brings, substantially at the home office of the industry, the C.I.O. face to face with A.F.L., as represented by the I.A.T.S.E., with its projectionists who tend the machines where Paramount edits the News.

On the larger stage was the scene of Saturday last when the heads of eight of the principal corporations of the organized industry, accompanied by the head of their trade association, had audience with President Roosevelt at the White House.

ALMOST probably closely related development came Tuesday afternoon with the announcement that a special committee or board to consider a program and code of revised trade practices had been designated to represent the organized industry. The membership includes Mr. Sidney Kent, Mr. Nicholas M. Schenck, Mr. Leo Spitz, Mr. Abraham Montague, Mr. Ned E. Depinet and Mr. William F. Rodgers.

It is much in the consciousness of the whole of the screen industry that there are and long have been many pending and impending legislations and litigations addressed at the structure and conduct of the business. Conspicuously impending is that ponderoso promise of wide and deep inquiry into industrial monopoly as one of the President's personally planned projects. And one may not forget that for several years now official Washington has been at least knee deep, or deeper, in committee reports, complaints and findings of sorts about the motion picture industry and its operations.

There may or may not have been something beyond coincidence in that Mr. Nicholas M. Schenck was up to Hyde Park to see the President, on an unrelated errand with a delegation bearing a charities check, on the Wednesday before the gathering at the White House on Saturday. Anyway that was twice in one week.

ALL that officially emanates from the White House session, issuing from the hand of Mr. Will Hays, says that "we were called to discuss the general conditions," and remarking that "these are times that call for cooperative endeavour."

Regardless of what the details of that conference may have been, in a broad sense every student of the industry must know what was in the minds of both sides of the table and the approximations with which it was discussed.

Meanwhile distinct progress is had when leaders of the industry get audience and hearing at the White House. Understandings can clarify. The situation is at least more promising than that day some years ago when the motion picture industry got called to the Blue Eagle's cage down in Washington without even a letter of introduction to the White House.

FAMILIAR story. Out at Herrin in Illinois Mr. John Marlowe had been trying to build a new theatre. He had been paying the scale for labor, to A. F. of L. unions. CIO demanded recognition. The job stopped. Business is like that, nowadays.

DICTATORSHIPS do have their points. A cable to Film Daily from Berlin announces that "new German film laws provide for the shortening of credits on film titles . . ." It seems that only those who really contribute importantly to the production are to be named. For some pictures that would let in no one except the stockholders.

WHEN the first Atlantic cable united the New World and the Old its first message, from the hand of Samuel Morse, was: "What God hath wrought." The other night all that the science of applied electronics could bring to bear, armies of technicians, millions of dollars worth of intricate equipment, were brought to focus on the job of telling the world about a brace of sluggers socking at each other in a ball park. Time, they say, marches on—if so, time is on the loose.

IF you should want to know which is the editor's desk in any motion picture journal's office, look for the one which has on it cocoanuts, pineapples, painted turtles, chameleons or other miscellany supposed to suggest a title tie-up. Our janitor says this business is literal minded. So are the customers.

THE Associated Press reports that the physicians to Mr. Bernard Shaw have issued instructions to him including: "Do not talk to any one about anything. Do not write articles. Do not read controversial articles." That fixes him up to one reader's liking. All that could now be asked is that he be ordered to shave.

IT was just possibly with a consciousness that he might be discussed in print that Mr. Heywood Broun suggested the other day that the government might well launch daily newspapers in certain centers not now enjoying the service of competing papers. Uncle Sam's highest attainment in journalism so far is the Congressional Record. The greatest distinction of that publication is that it has no over-set.

This Week

Self-Regulation

First official step was taken Tuesday by distributors for effecting self-regulation in distribution-exhibition when they formally announced the appointment of S. R. Kent, president of Twentieth Century-Fox Film as chairman of a committee "charged with developing a program for the solution of such trade problems in the industry as are still matters of contention."

Alternates to Mr. Kent as chairman are Nicholas M. Schenck, president of Loew's, and Leo Spitz, president of RKO Radio Pictures. The committee itself is composed of William F. Rodgers, general sales manager of Loew's; Ned E. Depinet, vice-president of RKO Radio, and Abe Montague, general sales manager of Columbia.

On completion of the program, the distributors will "renew cooperative efforts with representatives of all exhibitor interests for new steps in the self-regulation required for the further progress of the industry."

The distributors' announcement appears on page 12, together with an analysis of possible forms of action and details of events leading up to the move.

Treaties

Germany, Italy and Japan, already allied in an economic partnership which includes the motion picture industry, have entered, at the instigation of Japan, upon a tripartite agreement under which "cultural" films will be exchanged and distributed in each country free of charge except for transportation. The Italo-Japanese treaty is already in operation and the Nazi-Japanese pact is nearing completion.

A motion picture trade agreement between France and Germany has been renewed in spite of protests in the French trade press that the treaty in the past has worked almost wholly to the advantage of the Reich.

The treaties are reported on page 39.

Rainbow in the South

RKO Radio's business is on the upgrade in South America and the future for American companies generally looks bright, Phil Reisman, foreign head, said this week on his return from an extended survey in that territory. Ben Y. Cammack, Latin American manager, accompanied him.

The trip was Mr. Reisman's first to South America. He visited 12 countries, including Brazil, Argentina, Uruguay, Chile, Peru, Ecuador, Panama, Cuba, Colombia and others. Mr. Cammack installed Max Gomez as Mexico manager, the latter being succeeded by George Kallman as manager in Chile. No changes in the distribution personnel were made.

Armed Truce

Observers detected the glint of cold steel beneath the present friendly negotiations between the Cinematograph Renters' Association and the Kinematograph Renters Society on rental concessions under the proposed "Small Exhibitors' Terms" plan. The CEA, strong with the memory of the determined stand they made on grading, will not take no for an answer in spite of disinterest and the claim of the renters that the terms are or should be a matter of negotiation between the exhibitor and the individual distributor.

Aubrey Flanagan's London letter is on page 45.

Reissues in Court

Clinton E. Miller, trustee for Ambassador Pictures, Inc., and Conn Pictures, Inc., undergoing reorganization, will seek permission of the Federal Court, Los Angeles, to reissue 32 pictures which the corporations, headed by Maurice Conn, produced during their lifetime as active organizations. Mr. Miller will present his proposal to the court August 29th. He will suggest that the films be resold and the accumulated revenue from the bookings be used to liquidate debts as far as possible, following which the companies would be disbanded.

French Decree

An effort on the part of the French Government to relieve a situation under which American distributors in the last year have found their quotas for dubbed pictures too quickly exhausted because of a flood of old pictures has been made in the regulations for the year beginning July 1, 1938. Chief among the new provisions is one which prohibits the dubbing of films more than two years' old. Exceptions will be made in the case of pictures of outstanding artistic merit or technical interest. Other provisions are that registration for dubbing films may be had only after the dubbing work has been completed, that the distribution of visas among importing countries may be decided by ministerial decree, that films not fulfilling the terms of the decree and already registered for the second half of 1938 will not be given visas, and that French language films made in other countries must carry the name of the country of origin.

Anti-Trust Case

George Wright, attorney of Interstate Circuit, filed motions in Dallas Wednesday with W. H. Atwell, federal judge, asking additional findings of fact and conclusions at law in the anti-trust suit recently sent back from the United States supreme court for proper findings and conclusions. Arguments on the motions will be heard next Tuesday. This is the Dallas case concerning the right of distributors to govern admissions charged by theatres showing their pictures. The additions asked by Mr. Wright include the exclusion of dealings in the Rio Grande Valley and the city of Austin and a conclusion which finds agreements entered into between Interstate and individual distributors did not constitute a conspiracy or violation.

Radio "Shocks"

The Federal Communications Commission, target of numerous debates during the last Congress, received two additional shocks this week. The first came when George Henry Payne, FCC commissioner, and E. E. Cox, representative of Georgia, traded insults and the second resulted from John Shepard III, president of the Yankee Network, declaring that approval of general super-power use would probably lead to the formation of a new network which would ruin broadcasting. Then, as a climax to the FCC's troubles, Station WTAR. Norfolk, Va., demanded that the commission carry out the duty imposed upon it by the communications act and issue regulations governing the use of stations by political candidates.

The FCC's troubles are fully detailed on page 18.

Communists Attack

Hollywood producers were charged this week with "sabotage" by the Communist Party, in a three-article attack appearing in the Daily Worker—"Central Organ" of the Communists in the U. S.

Apparently pointed to gain the sympathy and support of studio workers, particularly the Guilds, the Communists alleged studio employers were "wrecking" Hollywood unions, in order to "beat down" workers.

The Guilds and other production workers were urged to "fight the producers and bankers," and in this they "will find immediate support in the dynamic progressive movement that has developed on the West Coast," said the Reds.

The Communists further called for the production of "another kind of film" other than those now being produced—"the kind that carries the message of international security and peace."

See page 15.

Clearing the Decks

Murray Silverstone, executive head of the United Artists Corporation, resigned this week as managing director of the United Artists British company, a post he has held for some years.

The resignation was not unexpected. Mr. Silverstone arrived in London last week to clear up personal and business affairs connected with his tenure of office as managing director of United Artists there, before returning to the United States July 11th. On Tuesday Mr. Silverstone will be tendered a joint complimentary luncheon in London by the KRS and CEA.

E. T. Carr and George Archibald have been appointed joint managing directors of the United Artists British company. Mr. Carr will head the sales organization, and Mr. Archibald will be in charge of administration and finance.

Disney Features

Negotiations for the release of future feature length cartoons are being carried on by Walt Disney and RKO-Radio Pictures, Mr. Disney revealed in New York this week. He also said that "Pinocchio" will be his second feature length film and that it probably will be released next Spring. The growth of the Disney company, from employing about 250 employees five years ago to the employing of 800 now, will result in the erecting within the near future of a new Hollywood studio at a cost of from $1,500,000 to $2,000,000. In addition to producing "Pinocchio," Mr. Disney plans to make feature length cartoons based on "Bambi," "Alice in Wonderland" and "Cinderella."

Details are on page 22.

Optimistic Note

Earnings of Loew's, Inc., for the first six months of the year will be comparable to the 1937 period, allowing for present business conditions, David Bernstein, vice-president and treasurer, said before sailing with Mrs. Bernstein on the Normandie Wednesday.

Bernard Hyman, production executive at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, has been named to the administrative executive group. In addition to announcing Mr. Hyman's promotion, the studio this week stated that Al Lichtman in the future will spend most of his time at the studio, acting in a general advisory capacity.

Hunt Stromberg will continue as an independent producer, the studio said.

Aid for Musicians

Members of the executive board of the American Federation of Musicians will go to Hollywood in August to discuss the question of reemployment of musicians in theatres, particularly those controlled by producer-distributor companies, officials of the Federation said this week. It was indicated that the Federation is not especially concerned with the music problem at present in Hollywood itself but the full attention of the organization's leaders will be devoted to the question of employment in theatres as soon as present widespread negotiations with broadcasters and recording companies are completed.

Films in Education

All sections of the United States were represented this week when 20,000 educators gathered in New York City for the 75th annual convention of the National Education Association. Films and the part they are playing in education were among the important topics discussed. Coincident with the convention, the New York World's Fair, Inc., announced that its department of education is cooperating with the Federal Government and the motion picture industry in the preparation of a feature film on the history of the United States.

Both matters are discussed in stories on page 31.

Joins Selznick

B. P. Schulberg, lately an independent contributor to the Paramount release schedule, this week joined the producing staff of David O. Selznick. The exact nature of his first assignment was not disclosed but it is generally understood that he will have a responsible post with relation to the future operations of the studio.

Mr. Schulberg, a graduate of the College of the City of New York, started his career as a reporter for the old New York Evening Mail. Two years later he left the newspaper to become associate editor of a magazine known as Film Reports. A year later he accepted a dual post of publicity director and scenario writer with Rex Pictures Corporation, and a year later went with Adolph Zukor when Mr. Zukor launched his Famous Players Company. He exploited the first feature length motion picture sold in America, "Queen Elizabeth."

Reelections

All the present officers of Paramount were reelected for the coming year at the monthly meeting of the board of directors held at the home office this week.

The officers are: Barney Balaban, president; Adolph Zukor, chairman of the board; Neil F. Agnew, Y. Frank Freeman, George Bagnall, John W. Hicks, Jr., and Austin C. Keough, vice-presidents; Walter B. Cokell, treasurer; Mr. Bagnall, assistant treasurer; Mr. Keough, secretary; Norman Collyer, Jacob H. Karp and Frank Meyer, assistant secretaries; Fred Mohrhart, comptroller.

Elected to the executive committee of the company were: Stanton Griffis, chairman; Mr. Agnew, Mr. Balaban, Stephen Callaghan, Mr. Freeman, Harvey D. Gibson, John D. Hertz, Maurice Newton and Mr. Zukor. Alternates are Mr. Hicks and Mr. Keough.

William H. Wright this week was appointed an associate producer at the Paramount studio.

EXECUTIVES of eight motion picture companies and Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, were received by President Roosevelt in the White House on Saturday, June 25th, for a half hour audience. The group included, besides Mr. Hays, Barney Balaban, president of Paramount; N. J. Blumberg, president of Universal; Harry Cohn, president of Columbia; Sidney R. Kent, president of Twentieth Century-Fox; George J. Schaefer, general sales manager of United Artists; Nicholas M. Schenck, president of Loew's, Inc.; Leo Spitz, president of RKO, and Albert Warner, vice-president and treasurer of Warner Brothers.

It was understood the discussions touched the Government's anti-monopoly campaign plans for which were announced this week by the Department of Justice and by the joint legislative committee appointed to investigate big business. Also mentioned, it was said, were the aid given American pictures abroad under the reciprocal trade agreement policy and industry cooperation with the Administration in its drive for recovery.

Speaking for the group following the conference Mr. Hays said:

"The motion picture industry, with its world distribution, is a peculiarly sensitive barometer of business conditions everywhere. We were glad to discuss with the President the general conditions and the steps of industrial activity by producers and distributors. We were particularly struck with the President's close knowledge of our industry's problems, and I believe the President in turn received an encouraging picture of production activities and of the continued progress in self-regulation by the motion picture industry. These are times that call for increased cooperative endeavor not only within the industry but between industry and government."

On Tuesday it was announced that distributors had appointed a committee, headed by Mr. Kent, to study and develop a trade practice program.

Nicholas M. Schenck, as a member of the committee which supervised the balls in honor of President Roosevelt's birthday, joins in presenting, right, a check for $1,010,000 to the President at Hyde Park for the Foundation for Infantile Paralysis. DISTRIBUTORS ANNOUNCE COMMITTEE TO EFFECT SELF-REGULATION

by JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

First official admission by distributors that a trade practice program will be devised for self-regulating distributor-exhibitor relations came on Tuesday afternoon in a formal statement from the distributors announcing that Sidney R. Kent, president of Twentieth Century-Fox Film, has agreed to act as chairman of a committee "charged with developing a program for the solution of such trade problems in the industry as are still matters of contention."

Serving with Mr. Kent as alternates are Nicholas M. Schenck, president of Loew's, Inc., and Leo Spitz, president of RKO Radio Pictures, Inc.

The negotiating committee will consist of William F. Rodgers, general sales manager of Loew's; Ned E. Depinet, vice-president of RKO Radio, and Abe Montague, general sales manager of Columbia Pictures—all of them considered friendly toward self-regulation, thus strengthening the possibility of its enactment.

The program which they will devise, when completed, will be the basis of "renewed cooperative efforts with representatives both of all organized and individual exhibitor interests throughout the country for new steps in the self-regulation required for the further progress of the industry."

Completing Program First

Not until the program has been completed will the distributors have any open or direct negotiations with exhibitors or their representatives, the distributors on this occasion preferring to avoid the stalemates met in the numerous "round table" trade practice conversations with exhibitors which preceded the present action.

Statement of the distributors' intention was issued through Mr. Kent's Twentieth Century-Fox offices in New York. It follows exclusive publication in MOTION PICTURE HERALD, on May 7th, that "machinery for adjusting local disputes and a program of 'fair practices' will be presented to exhibitors by distributors by midsummer." It also follows exclusive HERALD publication, on June 18th, of the fact that "distributing companies are now at work, secretly, on the formulation of a program."

Designation of Mr. Kent as chairman of the committee is further recognition of his position as the leading spirit for years for a program pointing to amicable adjustment of distributor-exhibitor problems.

The announcement by the distributors came three days after Mr. Kent and Mr. Schenck, accompanied by Will H. Hays and six other leaders of the organized industry had discussed trade problems with President Roosevelt at the White House (see page 10). At the conclusion of the conference Mr. Hays, speaking for the film group, said: ". . . I believe the President . . . received an encouraging picture . . . of the continued progress in self-regulation by the motion picture industry."

Presumably the "self-regulation" mentioned by Mr. Hays as the subject of discussion between Mr. Roosevelt and the industry leaders had to do with the present action pointing toward regulation of distribution-exhibition practices, since the only other forms of industry self-regulation concern production (Production Code) and advertising (Advertising Code), both of which forms have been operating for years, and, so far as is known, require no discussion with Mr. Roosevelt.

As pointed out, it has been definitely known since May 7th that the distributors intended to effect a program of self-regulation, but following last Saturday's visit of leaders to the White House, Broadway wondered whether the leaders' explanation of "self-regulation progress" to the President, plus Tuesday's announcement of appointment of a committee to effect that regulation, might not have had something to do with the proximity of the Administration's long-promised anti-trust probings of all "big business." Motion pictures frequently have been mentioned in this connection as one of the industries to receive early Department of Justice attention. (See box on opposite page). In any event, Mr. Hays, following the Roosevelt conference, said: "These are times that call for increased cooperative endeavor not only within industry but between industry and government," which might mean that the film conferees "suggested" cooperation of the Administration during the period at hand out of which self-regulation is expected to emerge.

Explaining his own position and that of the new committee entrusted with the responsibility of preparing a program for the distributors, Mr. Kent said:

"I have agreed to head the committee for the purposes outlined . . . with the understanding that I will give to it as much time as I can, but without undertaking a load that I cannot physically carry. The gentlemen who have been appointed with me know the problems as well as I do and are as determined as myself to make an honest effort to seek a solution of our trade problems. All branches of the industry recognize the necessity of an industry program, but finding a method to work it out is not easy. The committee has no arbitrary method or plan in mind. Whatever we do will be done in cooperation with all exhibitor groups. Our first task, naturally, is to canvass the situation and then determine with the exhibitors which steps can be taken best.

Cooperating with Exhibitor Units

"The work ahead will require patience and moderation. There are tremendous obstacles to be met and these cannot be adjusted overnight. The committee will ask the help and consideration of all. We are determined to do everything possible once and for all to find a solution for our trade problems. If we fail it will not be because we have not tried.

"I am conscious of the fact that many exhibitor organizations have been urging for some time that such a program be undertaken, but there have been many difficulties in the way. However, we wish to assure the various exhibitor groups that the moment we are organized for action we will get in touch with them and arrange our program jointly with them from that point on."

Not mentioned by Mr. Kent but understood to be the basis of administering self-regulation will be industry conciliation boards in the field.

At the national Allied convention, in Pittsburgh last May, members of that organization sounded a keynote of continued regulation-by-legislation. They left the door at least partly open, however, when their leaders indicated that they might abandon their campaign for government intervention or legislation, and lis-

THEATRE LICENSE BAN REVERSED ON APPEAL

The New York appellate division ruled this week that License Commissioner Paul Moss is without authority to deny a license for the erection of a theatre on the ground that it would cause adverse traffic conditions. The court directed the Commissioner to issue a license to Frederick Small to build a theatre at 3500 Riverdale Avenue, the Bronx.

Associate Justice Joseph M. Callahan declared that if the License Commissioner could apply the traffic test in issuing an original license he likewise might apply it with respect to the renewal of licenses for existing theatres.

"To permit a License Commissioner to say that existing theatres might be denied a license because of congested traffic conditions that arose in the neighborhood in which they were located, caused perhaps by the very good-will of the theatre patrons is, we think, a power that would not have been conferred upon a License Commissioner without clear statuatory provisions," Justice Callahan said.

"TEN POINT" PROGRAM WILL BE BASIS

ten to talks for self-regulation on condition that distributors invite Allied to participate in negotiations for "a solution of all major as well as minor problems," and give assurances of participation by every member of the "Big Eight." Whether the continued absence of Warner Brothers in distributor activities pointing toward a program will be sufficient reason for Allied to refuse to participate remains to be seen. In any event it is a foregone conclusion that the distributor leaders will invite Allied's chieftains to talk about the program at the proper time.

Board Meeting Indicated

At the same time Allied inferred this week that its board probably will meet shortly to discuss the distributors' new move.

Meanwhile the distributors' principal guide to Allied demands is in the trade "problems needing correction" which were cited by Abram F. Myers, Allied's general counsel, at the fifth annual convention of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, at Columbus, last December. The "problems" follow:

(a) Compulsory block booking.
(b) Unreasonable protection.
(c) Undue theatre expansion.
(d) The "right to buy."
(e) Contract revision.
(f) Designated playdates.
(g) Unfair allocations.
(h) Non-delivery of pictures.
(i) Radio competition by stars.

Allied has been attempting to correct "compulsory block booking" and "undue theatre expansion" by large circuits through the Neely anti-block selling bill in Congress and "theatre divorcement" bills in the states.

Expected to Arise in Congress

Enactment of the industry program is almost certain to come before the next session of Congress, and is expected by the organized industry to cancel any arguments advanced by critics of the industry or by minorities within the industry in behalf of federal legislation or intervention. It will be remembered that Neely block booking bill advocates in Congress announced at adjournment, three weeks ago, that the fight for elimination of the practice would be resumed at the next session. This was after the Senate, at the last session, passed the bill, without a record vote, and the House Interstate Commerce Committee refused to allow the bill to reach the floor for a vote. That the industry was concerned over the position of the bill in Congress was no secret.

10 Point Program Starting Point

The death of the Neely bill was the signal for the distributors to go ahead with formulation of their self-regulation plan. They previously had said that as long as the bill was apt to regulate wholesale distribution by an inflexible criminal statute, no distributor was willing to undertake voluntary regulation of trade practices. They have long been convinced that statutory regulation prevents self-regulation.

Distributor spokesmen repeated this week the announcement in MOTION PICTURE HERALD of May 7th that "The Motion Picture Theatre Owners' 'ten-point' program, originally proposed in April, 1936, will be the basis of the distributors' presentation" of a system of self-regulation for distribution-exhibition.

As originally presented, the ten points of the MPTOA program follow:

1. Local conciliation boards.
2. More liberal cancellation with the right to cancel unconditionally.
3. Clearance adjustment.
4. Mediation of overbuying.
5. Mediation of unfair competition between theatres.
6. Adjustment of non-theatrical competition.
7. Short form of contract.
8. Score charge elimination.
9. Adjustment of preferred playing time.
10. Elimination of forced short subject sales.

It is because the MPTOA's ten points represent, in the opinion of distributors, a tangible and comprehensive proposition that meets with widespread exhibitor approval, that they are disposed toward its selection as basis of discussions for a system of conduct for the industry.

The MPTOA program does not provide for Allied's demands for elimination of "undue theatre expansion" by distributor-circuits, nor is any such demand expected to be recognized by the distributors in their present program formulations.

On the subject of block booking, the distributors always have contended that such buying is not compulsory, adding that a more liberalized cancellation clause, which is certain to be granted, will give relief from any "burdens" which block buying might entail.

Distributors feel that the block booking and blind selling regulation by criminal statute proposed in the Neely bill would be effectively accomplished by a liberalized unconditional cancellation clause in the exhibition contracts for groups of pictures, enabling exhibitors to cancel out at their own option undesirable pictures even after they are licensed and are ready for booking.

Adjustment of clearance and "protection," the distributors hold, is a matter for adjustment by the contemplated conciliation boards, distributors feeling that inasmuch as clearance and protection are purchased by exhibitors, it is a matter for adjustment between exhibitors.

Both Allied and MPTOA "demands" provide for contract revision, which is expected to be forthcoming.

When the MPTOA presented its "ten-point" program to the distributors, in 1936, replies from the companies were reported to be 66 per

Government Oiling Machinery for Probing Monopolies in "Big Business"

by FRANCIS L. BURT
in Washington

United States Department of Justice forces at Washington this week are being augmented by the appointment of nearly a score of experienced trial attorneys, employed as the initial step in the Administration's long-promised anti-trust drive and monopoly investigation against all "big business."

Indications are that the Administration's campaign will be conducted simultaneously on two fronts—the Justice Department to initiate a number of prosecutions, and the joint legislative-executive committee conducting investigations out of which it is expected eventually will come a stiffening of the federal anti-trust statutes.

Members of the committee already have entered upon informal conferences, to which a number of industrialists have been invited, while Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold, in charge of anti-trust enforcement and a member of the committee, also has invited businessmen to confer on matters now under review.

This new development of discussing matters with businessmen is seen as a step on the part of the Administration to relieve fears of industry that the projected monopoly investigation is to be a political "witch hunt."

With its new appropriation, including a $200,000 increase over that for the fiscal year 1938, available July 1st, the Department of Justice is understood to be preparing to launch prosecutions against a number of industries. "Beating the gun" by a week, the Government on June 23rd secured an indictment in its case against the milk "trust," one of the proceedings long in the public eye.

Reputedly bulking large among subjects which are being studied is that involving motion pictures. A voluminous report on field agents' studies of the industry has long been on the desk of U. S. Attorney General Homer Cummings, but that official—deliberately, it is believed—has so far refrained from announcing a decision as to the action to be taken.

Definite information as to the issues involved, however, will not be made available by the department until it initiates its proceeding and issues its "explanatory" statement, outlining the situation it is charged exists, the steps to be taken to correct it and the reforms which are sought to be accomplished.

KENT HEADS DISTRIBUTORS' COMMITTEE

cent favorable, with Warner Brothers the only company not committing itself.

The conciliation boards would be the heart of the program. Industry spokesmen made clear that these boards would be just what their name implies, as intended for the conciliation of disputes between distributor and exhibitor and among exhibitors themselves. They would not be arbitration boards (except, possibly, where specifically authorized to sit as such by both parties to the dispute), nor would they have the power to either render a formal decision or effect any order, as did the old Arbitration Boards and the NRA code boards.

The boards would be instructed to handle each dispute without any set formula or under any formal system. "Resourceful persuasiveness" would be their watchword. The theory of their operation was patterned after Secretary Frances Perkins' United States Department of Labor conciliation boards, which, although having no police or other powers, are credited with settling more than 1,000 labor disputes through "resourceful conciliation."

On Voluntary Basis

The proposed system of organized mediation and adjustment of local trade disputes and grievances by local conciliation boards is necessarily on a completely voluntary basis. Compulsory submission of disputes and effective enforcement of any arbitrary decisions are not legally possible or contemplated. In these two important respects the system will be entirely unlike either the old Arbitration Boards or the NRA Blue Eagle Local Grievance and Zoning Boards.

The distributors are convinced that there is nothing fundamentally wrong with the basic methods of distribution. At the same time they are well aware of the abuses and injustices that creep in and the need for machinery for adjusting complaints and grievances of merit, of settling local disputes and controversies, of preventing unfair competitive advantages, and of generally overhauling the system of distribution by modification of certain sales polices.

One new approach to the membership of the boards may be the manner of selecting their personnel. Unlike all previous industry boards, where each side selected their own membership, it is suggested the exchange members of the board be picked by exhibitors and exhibitor members by exchangemen. In this way it is hoped past criticisms would be eliminated. It is pointed out that, while exhibitors have few dealings with other theatre owners, they become well acquainted with all exchange managers by constant dealings with them. Conversely, the exchange manager deals much more with exhibitors than with the other exchange managers.

Without power to render final decisions or enforce rulings, it is not felt that an exact balance of interests in the personnel of the local boards is so important as it was in the industry's arbitration or NRA boards.

Size of the boards will range in accordance with the needs and desires of the territory. A board will be located in each of the 30-odd exchange centers, in its own office, where complaints can be filed, investigations assigned, hearings held, and such.

Cost of the system would be maintained by distributors at an approximate cost of about one-tenth of one per cent of the gross of each exchange. Distributors feel that they should not be saddled with this entire expense, small as they hope it will be, but see no alternative, in view of the fact that no agency now exists for the uniform collection of part of the costs from exhibitors.

The distributors point out that the costs will be more than justified if in the conciliation activities even one anti-trust suit is averted each year, citing an average outlay of $75,000 in counsel fees for defense of trust suits where four or more companies are involved.

Adjustment of Disputes

Upon announcement of the actual program, industry spokesmen will urge the trade not to expect too much from the boards at the outset. They will not be set up as "miracle workers," it will be said, but, in due time, through a mutual trust placed in them, the companies hope that impartial viewing of trade arguments and persuasive approach to their settlement will become general industry practice.

Adjustment of disputes over clearance and overbuying will rest in the hands of the boards, as will the general subject of unfair competition between theatres and unfair non-theatrical competition.

Probably no outward elimination of score charges will be announced, but those who participate in motion picture buying and selling are aware that the practice is quietly being abandoned in the course of trading.

On the subject of a short form of contract, the distributors' spokesmen say there is a willingness to effect a simplification of the present involved document, but that various elaborated clauses, riders and whatnot inserted to meet each different contingency that may arise during the term of any particular contract probably prevent any material shortening of the form.

Adjustment of preferred playing time and elimination of the forced selling of shorts with features are matters to be settled by the distributors.

Nazi Domination of Polish Industry Seen Following That of Austria

by SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT in Warsaw

Poland is the latest of the central European countries within Nazi influence to feel the hand of Hitlerism on its motion pictures. After Germany and Austria comes Poland, each to have its screen turned into a machine for purveying the political propaganda demanded by the Nazis.

Already the Government party in Poland, "OZN," has formed a special society for development of the "Polish film," headed by Colonel Koc, the well-known politician. The results are seen as valueless vehicles of German propaganda.

The state film bureaucracy is not working efficiently. Yet, the Polish film "Duce," Director Gantkowski, wishes further to introduce the Aryan paragraph into the Polish film business. Gantkowski seeks financial support of his film propaganda producing activities from monies to be obtained through the so-called "Film Fund," (*) original source of which would be additional taxes on all foreign films, especially American.

Officials close to the foreign situation, as representing the organized motion picture industry of this country, are speculating over the extent to which the Nazi influence will spread over Poland's film business, if at all. They feel that the Polish industry is in the position where it must occasionally give ground to Nazi propaganda in films, in order to mtaintain "peace," politically. "The Polish situation is always a nervous one," said a U. S. industry spokesman.

Hollywood films represent about 58 per cent of the total exhibited in Poland, with Germany and Austria showing about 22 per cent.

(*) The "Film Fund" project, under consideration since 1936, would tax all imports one zloty (19 cents) per meter, all income therefrom to be "pegged" for "assisting the local industry."

Universal Is Not Moving Home Office to Coast, Says Blumberg

Nate Blumberg, president of Universal, this week completely refuted a report that the company will move its entire home office organization to the west coast in October.

A home office statement said: "Recently the company undertook to suspend the major portion of its publicity and advertising activities in the east in favor of the west coast offices, where it was felt that these particular phases of work could be handled more efficiently. With this setup in operation no further changes are planned."

Loew's Buys Columbia Product for Two Years

Columbia Pictures has consummated a two-year franchise deal with Loew's, Inc. A. Montague, general sales manager of Columbia, said the contracts involve features, shorts and serials, and offer Columbia product representation in 80 situations in the New York Metropolitan area as well as in the following territories: Kansas City, Boston, Atlanta, Buffalo, Indianapolis and New Haven.

The Loew contract is in line with Columbia's policy to take on term franchise agreements instead of one-year product deals with large circuits and independent theatres.

CIO GAINS FOOTHOLD IN FILMS BY NEWSREEL COUP

Labor Relations Board Certifies Exclusive Bargaining Agency for Paramount News Editorial and Traffic Workers

John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization, through its affiliate, the American Newspaper Guild, gained its first foothold in the motion picture business this week when it won a National Labor Relations Board certification as the exclusive bargaining representative for the workers in the editorial and traffic departments of Paramount News, and, at the same time, proceeded to organize the same workers in the four other newsreels—Metro's News of the Day, Universal News, Twentieth Century-Fox's Movietonews and Pathe News.

Thus, for purposes of worker unionization, the motion picture newsreel was placed in the same status as newspapers, in which field the CIO's Guild already represents some 16,500.

CIO's invasion of motion pictures came abruptly, and followed the recent declaration from American Federation of Labor sectors that "anything connected with the making or showing of motion pictures belongs to the IATSE," a pronouncement made by George E. Browne, national president of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes, AFL affiliate, at its convention in Cleveland (Motion Picture Herald, June 11th).

The IATSE is understood to have planned on organizing newsreel editorial workers.

The certification of the Guild does not affect cameramen or newsreel projectionists or any others who are members of or are qualified to become members in the IATSE.

CIO was routed last year in its many attempts to invade Hollywood studio unionization, and it likewise suffered a complete defeat at the hands of the IATSE when it attempted to organize film exchange employees and front-of-the-house workers in exhibition.

Any changes in wages and hours of editorial workers of the newsreels and other demands contemplated would come up in negotiation of individual contracts between the workers and their newsreel employers.

Expanded Campaign Seen

The NLRB order, while affecting only 23 Paramount Newsreel employees, was generally conceded to be the forerunner of a Guild campaign to organize editorial employees in the four other newsreel companies.

March of Time, as part of Time, Inc., already has recognized the Newspaper Guild as the bargaining representative of a majority of its employees without any intervention by the NLRB. Time, Inc., and Guild representatives have been negotiating for several months and expect, within the next few days, to sign a contract providing for minimum basic salaries and for a 40-hour five day week. The contract, however, will not provide for a Guild or a preferential shop.

Newsreel officials declined to be identified openly with any discussions about the movement,—they are excluded from the unionization —but some officials conceded that the move has made progress in the ranks of all of the companies. It also was freely predicted that the eligible members of the other four companies eventually will be signed by the Guild. The matter, however, has not come to a showdown in any newsreel other than Paramount.

"Organized for Year"

In explanation of this point, Milton Kaufman, executive secretary of the New York Guild, declared that the Paramount workers actually have been organized for "more than a year."

"But," he continued, "when we wanted to negotiate, Paramount wouldn't, so we had to go to the NLRB for certification."

Negotiations for improved working conditions will be undertaken immediately, Mr. Kaufman said, though he added that no program of demands has been drafted as yet.

"That part of it," he said, "is up to the members of the Paramount unit."

As for the Others—

As for the other newsreels, Mr. Kaufman sought to be non-committal.

"We're going to seek to organize them," Mr. Kaufman said at first but later amended the remark by pointing out: "Of course we don't send out organizing parties. If the newsreel employees want to organize themselves that's up to them."

Mr. Kaufman declined to say whether, in the impending negotiations with Paramount News, the Guild would strive to obtain a closed or a preferential shop.

Through Editorial Workers

The Guild's claim is basically through the editorial workers of the newsreels most of whom are former newspaper workers. The organization claims a total membership of 16,500 in its 100 chapters throughout the country. While not having contracts with all New York City newspapers, the Guild has members on virtually all of the metropolitan papers.

Heywood Broun, columnist, who the other day spoke publicly for Government operation of newspapers in non-competitive situations, is president of the American Newspaper Guild which, until two years ago, was an affiliate of the American Federation of Labor.

The Guild first entered its claim to jurisdiction over March of Time employees not affiliated with the IATSE about a year ago. At that time, according to Time officials, a delegation of employees informed the management that it represented a majority of the workers under the banner of the Guild.

"As yet there is no Guild contract," Louis de Rochemont, March of Time producer, said, "but we are in complete agreement on wages and working schedules. The contract is about to be signed."

Few Changes

The signing of the contract, however, will not bring about any material changes in working hours or salaries, according to Mr. de Rochemont. With the exception of one or two cases, he said, the pay rates were all above the minimum rates asked by the Guild.

Neither Mr. de Rochemont nor other Time officials would estimate the number of their employees who are Guild members. All pointed out that the number was unimportant and that they never had sought to determine it because any provisions in the Guild contract also will apply to non-members of the Guild. The Guild declined to reveal the number of Time employees holding Guild cards.

Under the Guild's supervision, classifications of film editors, film handlers, apprentices and script writers have been set up at March of Time.

The Representation

In its announcement of the certification at Paramount, the NLRB said that the Guild now represents all employees in the editorial and traffic departments of the News Division, New York, N. Y., excluding executives and employees who are members of or eligible to membership in Locals 52, 644 and 702 of International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and Moving Picture Machine Operators of the United States and Canada (AFL), and including the secretaries to the executives in charge of the laboratory and technical departments of the news division.

The board also pointed out that a check of Guild petition and application cards with a list of names of the employees in the company disclosed that of 23 eligible employees, 21 desired representation by the Guild. It was also explained that the Guild was not seeking to challenge any IATSE jurisdiction.

"Exclusion from the appropriate unit of employees who are members of or eligible to membership in IATSE locals was in accordance with a Guild request, based on the fact that the company has recognized IATSE as the bargaining representative of such employees."

The Board's Announcement

The NLRB announcement continued with this explanation:

"Both the company and the American Federation of Bookkeepers, Stenographers and Accountants, Federal Local No. 20940 (AFL), contended that clerical and office workers should not be excluded from the unit proposed by the Guild. The argument of the intervening federal local was that a unit composed of the clerical and office workers in all three divisions of the company was appropriate. In support of this argument the federal union asserted that it had a substantial membership among the employees of the other two divisions of the company, and intended to organize the news division at a future date. No proof of the claims of substantial membership was offered, however."

URGE RECORDS FOR NEW EMPLOYEES

Employers, including those in motion pictures, hiring workers now because of seasonal business were urged this week by the Social Security Board to obtain the account number of each new employee and enter it in their permanent records. New workers without account numbers should be referred by employers to the nearest Social Security Board office, where numbers will be assigned them, the board said.

The board has offices in 318 cities. Local post offices can give employers the address of the nearest board office.

REDS CRY 'SABOTAGE' BY PRODUCERS, CALL STUDIO STAFFS TO 'MOVEMENT'

Communist Party, Through "Daily Worker," Accuses Producers of Exaggerating Conditions to "Beat Down Salaries"

The Communist Party in this country, affiliated with and backed by Communist International, launched an attack this week against motion picture producers in Hollywood and the large companies, apparently to gain the sympathy and support of studio workers, especially the studio Guilds, for "the dynamic progressive movement that has developed on the West Coast, where great numbers of progressives are currently rousing mass sentiment for aid to Spain and China and organizing all liberals into a solid front against Fascism at home and abroad." They accuse producers of "sabotage" to "beat down" workers.

The attack was made in the Daily Worker, "Central Organ" newspaper of the "Communist Party, U.S.A.," published in New York,, in a series of three articles, appearing last Thursday, Friday and Monday, under the nom de plume, "Manngreen." The city editor at the newspaper, with headquarters at New York's so-called "Red" Union Square, refused to further identify its agent.

"Scare-head" throwaways, captioned: "Who Owns the Movies?—Who Owns You?" were distributed by Daily Worker agents to motion picture employees and others as they left the various film buildings in New York, calling attention to the newspaper's articles.

Accused of "Sit-down Strike"

"There should be a market for another kind of film," other than the kind now produced in Hollywood, the Communists stated, presumably referring to the Communist kind—"the kind that carries the message of international security and peace."

Producers are charged with exaggerating conditions in order to "beat down salaries," and with engaging in a "sit-down strike," along with "big business," in order to "smear Roosevelt and destroy the country's trade unions."

Samuel Goldwyn's recent charges that writers, directors and studio technicians are to blame for "mediocrity" in pictures, and the so-called "knifing" of stars by Harry Brandt and his New York Independent Theater Owners Association—labeling some stars as "box office poison"—"have proved to be vicious attacks on the workers in the film industry in an effort to beat down salaries," the Reds declared.

"The noisy publicity campaign touched off by Goldwyn represented a definite stage in the concerted drive of producers to lower wage scales, destroy Guild agreements, create an atmosphere of fear over Hollywood and generally to demoralize workers."

Called "Scandalous Example"

"For the past seven months," the Communists continued, "Hollywood has been a scandalous example of finance capital's 'sit-down' tactics designed to sabotage a complete industry, thus helping to hasten the natural capitalist cycle of business depression.

"Company by company, Hollywood is dominated by the same vicious banking circles that have collaborated on capital's 'sit-down' strike and sabotage in Steel, Public Utilities, Automobiles, Railroads and in the light and heavy industries."

"Furthermore, the story of the sad financial plight of the studios is an exaggerated tale to forestall a pending Federal investigation into the monopoly practices of the Hollywood magnates," the newspaper continued, citing "announcements" in the nation's press that Hollywood "is in a critical state," that "Hollywood is in a strained financial condition owing to excessive production costs," and so on.

Harry Brandt's "blasts" against stars, inserted as an advertisement in a Hollywood trade publication, have "aided considerably in accenting the atmosphere of fear over Hollywood," it was said by the Daily Worker, which labelled Mr. Brandt "an ambitious maneuverer," who is not "a typical independent little business man," because it was said, "he controls a chain of approximately 70 theatres in Greater New York," and "controls the ITOA" (of which he is president).

"The evil days in Hollywood can in no way be blamed on the stars' 'box-office poison,' nor on the 'mediocrity' of the writers and directors. The fault lies squarely at the door of banker-owner 'mediocrities' who dictate the policies of the industry," it was charged.

"The producers' attack upon the film workers started last December (1937), when efficiency men were shipped into Hollywood to 'plug up the loose holes," the Communists asserted, continuing, "Immediately payrolls were cut and 'fear and worry' stories released to the press—bad box office, too much 'waste,' industry is going to hell."

Points to Earnings

Citing earnings of the large companies, the Daily Worker said: "The total profits for the Hollywood producers for 1937 totaled approximately $40,000,000. It is apparent," they continued, "on the basis of the financial reports of the companies, that there was no reason for the wholesale dismissal of hundreds upon hundreds of film workers from the ranks; or for the disgraceful wage cutting; or for the amazing lull in studio production which was one of the most important phenomenon in Hollywood during the past winter season.

"That phenomenon, which amounts to Hollywood's version of finance capital's acknowledged 'sit-down' strike, caused almost a 40 per cent cessation of picture production on the studio lots, and was one of the major factors in the producer-made panic that is now afflicting the film capital."

Citing "scare-heads" of Hollywood Reporter and Variety about "Famine in pictures," "Major companies behind releases," etc., the Communists again cried "sabotage" by the producers, who were called "economic royalists," a term frequently used by the Daily Worker.

"Holding an Axe"

Producers were said to be "holding an axe" over the heads of studio employees "to demoralize the worker in films and destroy his ability to resist wage cuts," in a "deliberate effort to sabotage the unions in Hollywood."

Apparently extending a friendly hand to studio workers, the Communists added: "The creative men and women on the West Coast are as gifted as any group of people in the world. It is an insult to them and to their audiences to place them in the position of being forced to make stupid, rambling trash, as unreal and sickeningly romantic as the lead story in a five-cent pulp magazine.

"Another Kind of Film"

"Certainly when the course of world events makes the theatre of war and devastation the personal concern of every inhabitant of the civilized world there should be a market for another kind of film—the kind that carries the message of international security and peace. Are the worthwhile film subjects summarily discarded simply because they have something to say and their authors junked because they dared to use their typewriters for something more than trash-vendors?"

Citing the "attempts" of Darryl Zanuck, Twentieth Century-Fox executive, to produce "Siege of Alcazar," called "a definite pro-Fascist film attempting to glorify the Franco forces who are raping and defiling Spanish soil," the Communists said: "Only the violent protests of . . . Associated Film Audiences were able to balk the completion of the vicious film."

Calls upon Guilds

"It is up to the West Coast Guilds," therefore, continues the Daily Worker, "to maintain the fight against the producers and bankers. They must assert the rights of democratic men and women fighting to defend their jobs and to earn a modicum of security. They will find immediate support in the dynamic progressive movement that has developed on the West Coast, where great numbers of progressives are currently rousing mass sentiment for aid to Spain (presumably to Red Spain) and China for organizing all liberals into a solid front against Fascism at home and abroad. The Hollywood Anti-Nazi League, for example, has stirred the imagination of the West Coast progressive," it was said.

In the East, the Communists cite Associated Film Audiences as leading the drive to "organize the move-going public to assert the rights of the consumer."

AFA, the Communists continued, "proposes that mass pressure be brought to bear on all film producers leading to the immediate production of films that honestly deal with the contemporary scene," and "proposes now to organize national showings of all progressive films and to remove any financial misgivings of the producers practicability of releasing films on current topics." In this connection, the Communists said, "At present AFA is organizing mass support for the fine Walter Wanger (United Artists) production of 'Blockade.'"

Associated Film Audiences, considered to represent an "extremely liberal point of view," is a comparatively new organization of individuals and groups intent upon audience classification of films with a view to giving their opinions on such subjects as labor, politics, war and the social and economic schemes in their relation to motion picture subjects and contents.

AMERICAN FILMS WIN IN SWEDEN

American motion pictures won the first five places out of all the foreign pictures shown in Sweden during the past season, The Department of Commerce, Washington, reported this week. The pictures were judged by a committee of Swedish film reviewers, which inspected 16 films.

WRITERS' GUILD SWEEPS STUDIOS IN COLLECTIVE BARGAINING VOTING

Hollywood Election Gives Picture Playwrights 57 Votes to 267 for Guild; Result at Paramount Hinges on Challenges

By vote of approximately 350 writers the Screen Writers' Guild was overwhelmingly favored as the designated collective bargaining agency for screen authors in an election ordered by the National Labor Relations Board, the first such ballot to be ordered by the National Board for studio employees.

The results of the election, tallied late Tuesday night after the balloting had continued all day, showed 267 for the Screen Writers' Guild, 57 for Screen Playwrights and 14 for no affiliation. A total of 12 votes were challenged in three different studios, but only at Paramount, where three of the challenges were entered, was the result close enough to be in doubt. Four absentee ballots were not included until later in the week, but they were in studios where they would not affect the results.

Under the NLRB rules the Guild had to obtain a clear majority in each studio to obtain the collective bargaining agency designation and the right to petition for dissolution of the present operating agreement between producers and Screen Playwrights which would not have expired until 1942. At Paramount where the three challenges threw the 17 to 14 decision in doubt the question may be settled by a runoff election or by decision of Dr. Towne Nylander, Los Angeles Regional Labor Board director.

The vote by studios was as follows:

Studio	For Guild	For Playwrights	No Affiliation
Republic	42	1	0
Universal	11	2	1
Warner	38	2	3
MGM*	63	33	6
20th-Fox	38	5	1
Columbia	17	1	1
Paramount	17	14	2
RKO	30	0	0
Totals	267	57	14

*8 votes challenged.
1 vote challenged.
3 votes challenged.

Although 18 studios were named in the NLRB order Trem Carr, Major, B. P. Schulberg and Grand National were not represented in the voting because of inactivity. Balloting on Tuesday was conducted in three places and the votes were counted in the Roosevelt Hotel, Hollywood, after the polls closed at 11 P.M.

In spite of the election results it is expected that the producers will refuse to negotiate with the Guild, that course having been indicated when the studios refused to supply the Labor Board with copies of their writer payrolls as of June 4th and announced they would fight the Board decision in the courts. Their refusal to supply the payroll lists and the refusal of Screen Playwrights to furnish membership lists necessitated registration of authors for the election.

If the producers refuse to negotiate with the Guild they will be cited in federal court and the court will then decide on the legality of the NLRB ruling that writers are employees in interstate commerce under the terms of the Wagner Act. The producers have indicated they will carry the fight to the supreme court if necessary.

John Lee Mahin, president of the Playwrights. said on Wednesday, "We have just begun to fight." William Walsh, attorney for the Regional Board, said he anticipated the producers would make no moves to treat with the Guild.

The NLRB decision on the Guild-Playwright dispute and the election cleared the way for hearings on almost 100 other labor cases involving the motion picture industry which have been held in abeyance in the Los Angeles Regional Labor Board office pending a decision by the National Board on the status of the industry in interstate commerce.

IATSE and TMAT Jurisdictional Fight Breaks Out on Coast

The jurisdictional dispute long smoldering between the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes and the Theatrical Managers, Assistant and Treasurers, both AFL affiliates, over motion picture theatre front-of-the-house organization, broke out this week in Los Angeles, after Charles P. Skouras, operating head of National Theatres-Fox West Coast Circuit, in addressing his managers, read a letter from Harland Holmden, IATSE vice-president, in which Mr. Holmden declared that entire jurisdiction for the workers involved had been granted his IATSE.

Ludvig Vroom, president of the TMAT, in Los Angeles, directing an organization drive of his group among managers and assistant managers of FWC, defied the IATSE in its claim and declared that the AFL executive council had granted jurisdiction to the IATSE in 1935 only over doormen, ticket takers, ticket sellers and ushers and that his group was organizing managers and assistants.

When the AFL executive council meets in August, Mr. Vroom said he would ask it to grant TMAT the entire theatre field.

William Green, he declared, already has assured him that no infringement on IATSE boundaries is being made as long as TMAT organizes managers and assistants.

Mr. Skouras, in his regular weekly conference of FWC managers, declared the purpose of his talk was to clear up "statements and misrepresentations" being made, and said asserted statements that he or his aide, Harold Buckley, were urging FWC men to join a union were false. Then Skouras cited TMAT claims of "sole jurisdiction" over managers and to dispute this read the letter from Mr. Holmden in which the IATSE official quoted a telegram from Mr. Green to Hal Oliver, of TMAT, declaring the IATSE was given jurisdiction over theatre employes and in which Mr. Green said, "I direct you to refrain from organizing those employed in motion picture theatres in Hollywood."

Mr. Holmden ended his letter to Skouras with the statement that "IATSE will not countenance interference by Oliver or any other one in organization of this class of employes."

Mr. Skouras finished his talk by declaring, "We are advised that some of our managers and assistants have been told by persons purporting to be labor organizers that unless they join a union their positions with this company will be jeopardized. This is not so and no member of our organization need have any fears along this line."

The TMAT president has a complaint filed before the NLRB in Los Angeles charging FWC with failing to bargain collectively and alleging that one manager was discharged for union activity.

Paramount to Cooperate With British Producers

Instead of having a production unit in England, Paramount will cooperate with leading British producers under a budget of £500,000 ($2,500,000), J. C. Graham, managing director of the company in England, said in London this week.

Three films, he said, already are available or are in preparation. They include "Stolen Life," starring Elisabeth Bergner; "Royal Divorce," produced by Herbert Wilcox, and "This Man Is News," produced at Pinebrook. Mr. Graham emphasized that the Paramount British program is essentially elastic in character.

FCC AGAIN EMBROILED IN BROADCASTING ISSUE

Payne and Representative Cox Fling Words While Shepard Warns Against Super-Power

The much-battered Federal Communications Commission in Washington this week was attempting to recover from two new shocks.

While Commissioner George Henry Payne and Representative E. E. Cox (Dem., Ga.), were arguing, John Shepard, 3rd, president of the Yankee Network, told Commissioners Norman S. Case and T. A. M. Craven that approval of general super-power use probably would lead to the formation of a new network which would ruin broadcasting, and Station WTAR, Norfolk, Va., demanded that the commission carry out the duty imposed upon it by the communications act and issue regulations governing the use of stations by political candidates.

The Cox-Payne interchange came when Mr. Fox delivered a parting shot in the Congressional Record, calling for Mr. Payne's separation from the commission and a free hand for Chairman Frank R. McNinch.

Commissioner Payne, Mr. Cox said, is a trouble-maker, with no regard to the reputation of the commission or his duties thereon. A member of the House Rules Committee, the Congressman declared Mr. Payne had failed to substantiate his charges that the commission had been over-reached by radio lobbyists, but still refused to retract those allegations; that he had made numerous speeches attacking his colleagues, and that he had never asked for commission action on the "hundreds" of complaints against programs which he has declared he has received.

Representative Cox, Mr. Payne replied, is trying to befog the issue and is building up a case for radio monopoly.

Presentation of views on proposed new regulations ended Tuesday with a plea by the National Independent Broadcasters Association for retention of the present power maxima. E. C. Page, radio consultant, said far better services could be had with present power limits by reallocation to reduce cross-talk.

Representatives of the National Association of Regional Broadcast stations, opposing super-power, also testified.

The "menace" of a super-power network was raised when Paul D. Spearman, counsel for the association, put Mr. Shepard on the stand to give his views as an experienced broadcaster as to what would happen if the commission provided the 25 500-kilowatt stations contemplated.

Witnesses favoring super-power had contended that the top-power stations would not be able to devote as much time to network programs. Taking that testimony as his text, Mr. Shepard told the commission that the National Broadcasting Company and Columbia might not be willing to use the super-power stations under such limitations.

Cast off by the existing networks, he said, it would be only natural for the super-power broadcasters to form a chain of their own, which, despite the heavier time charges they would have to impose, would attract the most important advertising accounts.

With ten of the best-liked programs taken away, he contended, the regional stations would be seriously affected, while at the same time the super-power chain would be without competition, since it would be impracticable to develop two such networks. This would not be in the public interest, he alleged, since to maintain the present competitive situation it is necessary that no one station in any particular locality should carry all the highest ranking programs.

The situation would be aggravated, he held, by the general disinclination that might be expected from other advertisers to take "second choice" on the air and their abandonment of radio advertising in favor of other media.

Further, Mr. Shepard asserted, there is no national necessity for super-power stations but "it is a national necessity that the present structure of broadcasting be not seriously interfered with."

Denies Unsatisfactory Service

Denying the charge that millions of listeners do not now have good service, the Yankee broadcaster asserted the proposed 25 500-kilowatt stations would not be able to give good country-wide daytime service and there would still be a need for regional and local stations which, however, would have been deprived of their means of existence. "The result," he said, "would be a curtailment of service to millions as an offset to improvement in service to a few thousands."

Their hand forced when Station WTAR made public its petition for the issuance of political rules, members of the commission this week were considering the subject, with indications that the regulation probably will be promulgated before the Congressional campaigns get well underway.

Numerous broadcasters, it was learned, suggested to the commission in the past that it issue such regulations, as required under the Communications Act of 1934, their recommendations being cordially received and carefully laid away in camphor.

Commission Responds

When WTAR went to press with the matter, however, the commission was quick to respond.

The station pointed out that, with no official guide available, it has been necessary for each broadcaster to make his own interpretation of the "equal treatment" requirements of the communications act, fully knowing his liability to severe penalty if his interpretation was wrong. While no broadcaster is "required" to furnish facilities to political candidates, he is required, if he allows time to one, to grant similar treatment to all others.

On the face of it, the rule is easy of application, yet numerous difficulties have arisen as, for instance, where one candidate, offered time, says he does not need it, and then demands it after an opposing candidate has gone on the air, at a time when the station may have no opening available.

With formal rules before them, broadcasters will be relieved of the responsibility of making decisions which usually result in more enemies than friends.

Sustaining Programs Lead

Sustaining programs account for 65.5 per cent of the playing time of the average broadcasting station and only slightly more than one-third of the time is devoted to commercial features, it was disclosed this week in charges prepared by FCC accountants.

Introduced at the hearings on proposed new rules, the charts showed that while unlimited time 50-kilowatt stations (including WLW) devoted a fraction over 53 per cent of their time to commercial programs, the proportion dropped rapidly as power diminished, with local day stations reporting only 24.9 per cent of their time so used.

An analysis of all programs of 633 stations, by types, showed that 52.45 per cent of all time is devoted to music, followed by 11.4 per cent for talks and dialogues and 9.1 per cent for dramatics.

Pact Set for Signing

The American Federation of Radio Artists has virtually closed months of negotiations with the networks and NBC and CBS are expected to sign an agreement with the organization by next week. The agreement will cover wages, hours and other conditions of artist employment.

The pact will cover the key stations of both networks in New York, Chicago and Los Angeles and will afford substantial benefits to the radio performers, according to the provisions contained in the pact.

Nominees Approved

Nominees for national offices in the American Communications' Association have been qualified for the election which will start this Friday. Mervyn Rathbone, incumbent president of the union, was renominated and will be the only candidate for that office on the official ballot.

The nominees for the vice-presidencies are: broadcast division, Louis Goyette and Ernest V. Roberts; marine division, C. H. Jordan and Roy A. Pyle; cable division, Michael Mignon and Harold Taylor; telegraph division, Willard Bliss, Joseph Kehoe, Edward H. Plitt, Joseph P. Selly and Douglas Ward.

Public Hearings Opened

Public hearings opened this week in the New York senate chamber, Albany, on Senator John T. McCall's proposal to put radio and other industries coming within the "furnishing of facilities" purview under jurisdiction of the Public Service Commission.

In effect, adoption of the McCall amendment would mean from $8,000,000 to $9,000,000 annually in franchise taxes, according to the sponsor.

Broad powers of supervision are carried in the McCall amendment which give to the Public Service Commission power to supervise and control services of any kind.

The committee on public utilities is expected to announce its decision on whether the bill will be reported out within the next ten days.

DRIVE-IN THEATRE OPENS IN CLEVELAND

While virtually all independent exhibitors in Cleveland were threatening to curtail exhibition, a new theatre opened a short distance out of the city and is enjoying a "land office" business.

After paying admission to the drive-in theatre, patrons are directed to a space by a uniformed attendant with a flashlight. The front wheels are tilted upward on a ridge, giving a clear view of the screen from either the front or the back seat. The screen is large enough for the scenes and figures to appear in proportion, despite the large spectator area.

Rodgers Joins MPA

William F. Rodgers, general sales manager for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, at the weekly luncheon in New York this week of Motion Picture Associates, where he was the guest of honor, submitted his application for membership and was officially added to the roster. Mr. Rodgers paid tribute to the charitable work of the organization.

GB LOOKS TO WHOLESALE INVASION OF SCHOOL FILMS FIELD IN U. S.

250 Films for Educative Uses Available, Says Victor Cockle; Television Move Would Not Include Projection Equipment

With an educational films library of 250 subjects already in hand, and production geared to the filming of 50 subjects a year, Gaumont British Pictures, largest film company in England, is ready to engage in a wholesale invasion of the school films field in America, a field which the organized U. S. industry has been eyeing for two years without taking any operating action.

Encouraged by the "enthusiasm" voiced by educators who have seen several Gaumont British instructional films, Victor Cockle, GB export manager, arrived in New York this week to plan GB's entrance into the visual education market in the United States.

Mr. Cockle, although primarily surveying the educational field, is also interested in development of television in America. Gaumont British controls the Baird Television Company and has extensive plans for installation of television receiving equipment in its theatres in England "in the immediate future," Mr. Cockle said.

Says 40 Were Called Suitable

Identifying the American groups that have seen some of the GBI pictures as "educators," Mr. Cockle declared that he was agreeably surprised by their reactions. Out of a total of approximately 60 films, Mr. Cockle continued, the educators predicted that 40 would be suitable for educational purposes here.

"I did not think the percentage would be as high as that," Mr. Cockle pointed out.

A definite plan of distribution for the films has not been decided upon, the question being whether G B will handle the distribution itself or will turn the work over to an agency. G B entertainment features are now on the non-theatrical market but distribution is handled by Films, Inc., of New York. The feature films, in this case, are reduced to 16 mm.

GBI produces approximately 50 educational films a year, Mr. Cockle explained, and at present has about 250 on hand. He estimated that of the 250, about 200 would be judged suitable for distribution in the United States.

The films cover such subjects as zoology, physical education, general science and the most recent additions are religious films.

Two Sets of Commentary

Mr. Cockle emphasized the point that the films are made expressly for educational purposes. However, if, after they are produced, they are found to contain suitable theatrical material, the commentary used for educational purposes is dropped and commentary by the regular G B Gazette commentator is substituted.

Although GBI supplies projection equipment in England, the company does not plan to include this phase of the business in its invasion of the American educational market.

"You have companies here that are able to supply the equipment," Mr. Cockle remarked. "And if you haven't you soon will."

Reverting to the subject of television, Mr. Cockle said that G B, through the Baird company, has been planning theatrical reception for some time. The success of the recent televising and receiving of the Epsom Downs Derby and the King's birthday ceremonies created additional interest in television, he said, so that the installations will be on a much larger scale than originally contemplated.

Reports that English exhibitors are alarmed over the advent of television in theatres are unfounded or at least exaggerated, according to Mr. Cockle, who insisted that theatre operators are eagerly awaiting the installations. While the first Baird installations will be in G B theatres, the company does not plan to monopolize the medium, Mr. Cockle said.

"Television," Mr. Cockle declared, "is past the experimental stage in England."

But, he continued, while the quality is good the difficulty comes in quantity. At present the British Broadcasting Company, which operates the only television station in London, broadcasts only three hours a day. Baird, which operates an experimental television station, plans to seek permission to operate a licensed station, and in this way hopes to increase the number of programs sent daily.

A screen measuring eight by six feet is now used and the research department continually is working toward obtaining quality pictures on a larger screen. The pictures are clear, Mr. Cockle said, except on distant shots when reception depends a great deal on weather conditions.

Would Rent Sets

Under the plan to install receiving equipment in theatres, G B would rent the sets rather than sell them. The reason for this, Mr. Cockle said, is that "we do not believe an exhibitor should be forced to pay for equipment that might have to be replaced in a short time for more modern equipment."

Mr. Cockle expressed the opinion that the transmission of news would prove to be one of the chief functions of television in theatres. He pointed out that in newsreel work, no matter how fast the film is produced and exhibited in theatres, the majority of persons seeing the pictures already know the final outcome of the event.

He explained that when the Derby was received in the Tatler Theatre, London, none in the audience know which horse was going to win and for that reason manifested considerably more interest than they would have in a newsreel presentation of the race.

Mr. Cockle said the Baird sets easily could be adapted for use in the United States, but declared that the company has no immediate plans for placing sets on the market here. The cost of television home receiving sets in England ranges from $250 to $500, he said.

Channel Spanned by Television

The advancement being made by television in Europe was illustrated this week when, according to International News Service, the English Channel was spanned by the first international television broadcast. Newell Rogers, INS correspondent, who participated in the experiment, reported:

"In the cellar of a hotel atop a cliff on the south coast of England, near Brighton, a televised program, broadcast from the Eiffel Tower in Paris, was successfully seen and heard. . . .

"With officials of Marconiphone making the first accredited test, this correspondent (Mr. Rogers) and another newspaperman distinctly heard and saw artists of the Folies Bergeres and other concert halls dance, sing and act before a camera 200 miles away.

"The event marked what engineers called the beginning of international television."

The latest development in the United States was the offering to the public this week of 99,500 shares of stock in the American Television Corporation of New York at the par value of $1 a share. The company has a capitalization of 1,000,000 shares.

American Television has acquired all the outstanding common stock of the CSI Development Corporation, which owns all the stock of Communicating Systems, Inc., engaged in the manufacture of various aural appliances and installations and more particularly the development of a television receiving set for home reception.

TELEVISION CAMERA VIEWS FATAL PLUNGE

A National Broadcasting Company television camera, making experimental shots in Rockefeller Plaza, Radio City, last Thursday recorded the death plunge of a young woman who leaped from the 11th story of the Time and Life Building. The television unit was not set for broadcasting and the picture was not transmitted beyond the control rooms on the fifth floor of the RCA Building.

The new mobile unit was being tested in the Plaza. The camera, atop the truck, had just swung over to catch a view of the Time and Life Building when Marion Perloff, 28, a stenographer, leaped to her death.

The studio observer heard the camera operator gasp "My God!" just before the scene was caught on the screen.

Associates of Miss Perloff told police that she had recently suffered a nervous breakdown.

UA Officials Return From Chicago Meeting

United Artists home officials returned to New York from Chicago last Friday after attending the organization's regional sales convention at Drake Hotel.

The Chicago meeting was attended by 80 branch managers, sales managers and salesmen from 11 exchanges besides Chicago.

Among the home office executives at the session were George J. Schaefer, vice-president and general manager of distribution; A. W. Smith, Jr., general sales manager; Harry D. Buckley, vice-president in charge of exchanges; Arthur W. Kelly, vice-president in charge of foreign distribution; Monroe Greenthal, director of advertising and publicity; Jack Schlaifer, western division manager; Lowell Calvert, eastern representative for Selznick International; J. A. Mulvey, eastern representative for Samuel Goldwyn; Emanuel Silverstone, American representative for Alexander Korda; C. M. Steele, N. A. Thompson, Seymour Poe, Paul Lazarus, Ben Washer, Harry Kosiner and Carl Krueger.

DISNEY AND RKO DISCUSS NEW FEATURE CARTOON

Producer Says Work on $3,000,000 "Pinocchio" Has Reached the Animation Stage

Releasing arrangements for Walt Disney's feature length cartoons hinge upon negotiations now underway with RKO-Radio Pictures. Mr. Disney, who has just received honorary degrees at Yale and Harvard, was in New York this week and announced that production activities on his next, "Pinocchio," have now reached the animation stage. He expects to have the picture ready for release next spring.

Production costs for the Disney activities during the next year will run about $3,000,000, Mr. Disney said. He pointed out that the figure would include from $50,000 to $80,000 each for 18 one-reel cartoons that will be released through RKO in the 1938-39 season, and the studio work on all features now under consideration.

"Bambi," Mr. Disney said, is now in production along with "Pinocchio," and two other stories are being prepared, "Alice in Wonderland" and "Cinderella."

Although Mr. Disney declined to estimate any ultimate gross for "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," he said there is a field for both cartoon shorts and features.

New Studio To Be Built

Work on features at the Disney studios, however, has taxed facilities to such an extent, Mr. Disney said, that a new studio, costing between $1,500,000 and $2,000,000, will be built. A site in Hollywood already has been chosen, he said, but he refused to reveal its location, pointing out that "the deal is now being cleared."

Under his three-year contract with RKO, Mr. Disney will release his short subjects through that company for the next two seasons, at least. The contract called for the delivery of only one feature, "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs."

Although Mr. Disney hopes eventually to reach the point where he can produce one feature cartoon a year, at present, he said, each film requires at least a year and a half of work.

"We never work on a schedule," Mr. Disney explained. "In that way if we don't like something we can keep working on it until we do like it."

He illustrated the point further by explaining that this year, for the first time since he has been producing, advance release dates have been set and will be fulfilled for the 18 short subjects.

Cites Paucity of Artists

As for speeding up production immediately, Mr. Disney was emphatic in his assertion that it can not be done. The chief difficulty, he pointed out, lies in the fact that artists capable of doing the work are not available.

"I don't know where these other studios are getting them," Mr. Disney commented. "I know I'm having an awful time getting them."

In connection with this, Mr. Disney recalled that three years ago he conducted a talent contest, seeking artists. Six thousand applications were received, 1,500 of the applicants were interviewed, 30 of them were given jobs and, he concluded, 10 of them are now working at the Disney studios.

"We don't worry about technical development," he explained, "because the only thing needed there is money to experiment. But when it comes to developing something up here (pointing to his head) that's a different story."

All of the employees who worked on "Snow White" will share in the profits of the film. A total of 20 per cent of the profits will be distributed among the workers. Officials of the company said they were unable to estimate the amount due workers because the final gross on the feature is still undetermined.

Mr. Disney said he now employs 800 persons, 750 of whom work at the studio. This compares, he said, with about 250 employees five years ago.

The new studio will be completely modern, Mr. Disney said, hastening to add that he did not mean by that that it would be "streamlined and such."

While saying that in the ordinary course of events, "Bambi" would be his third feature released, Mr. Disney declined to be definite on the point. "You know it takes months to develop a character; it's not like giving a part to a human being and letting him interpret it. You've got to do all the developing yourself."

From the success of the first cartoon feature, "Snow White," Mr. Disney has learned "countless" things about production. "They're hard to put your finger on but we come across them as we work on new pictures."

Solving Human Equation

It was while working on "Snow White" that Mr. Disney's artists ran into difficulty in drawing the human figures. Seeking to overcome what Mr. Disney termed the "jittering" of the figures, a complicated process was worked out.

The production of cartoons differs from the production of regular motion pictures, Mr. Disney said, in one outstanding way—"we do our cutting before we start filming." Approximately 1,000,000 drawings were made for "Snow White" but only 250,000 of them were used, so that only about 500 feet of film were cut when the picture was completed.

The 250,000 drawings used for "Snow White" compare with an average of from 15,000 to 18,000 for short subjects.

Mr. Disney said he has learned that there are some stories that just fit into production as one-reel subjects.

His Short Subjects Releases

Mr. Disney's short subject release schedule for the coming season is as follows: "Brave Little Tailor," September 23; "Farmyard Symphony," October 14; "Donald's Golf Game," November 4; "Ferdinand the Bull," November 23; "Little Mermaids," December 9; "Mother Goose Goes Hollywood," December 23; "Donald's Lucky Day," Jan. 13, 1939; "Society Dog Show," February 3; "The Practical Pig," February 24; "The Hockey Champ," March 17; "The Ugly Duckling," April 7; "Goofy and Wilbur," April 28; "Donald's Cousin Gus," May 19; "The Beach Picnic," June 9; "Sea Scouts," June 30; "The Autograph Hound," July 21; "Donald's Penguin," August 11, and "The Pointer," September 1.

The producer planned to leave New York Friday for the coast, having made the trip east for the presentations of the honorary degrees awarded him last week at Yale and Harvard. Previously he had received an honorary degree from the University of Southern California.

"I feel happy to know that educated people like our pictures too," said Mr. Disney.

Canadian Contract Revision Languishes

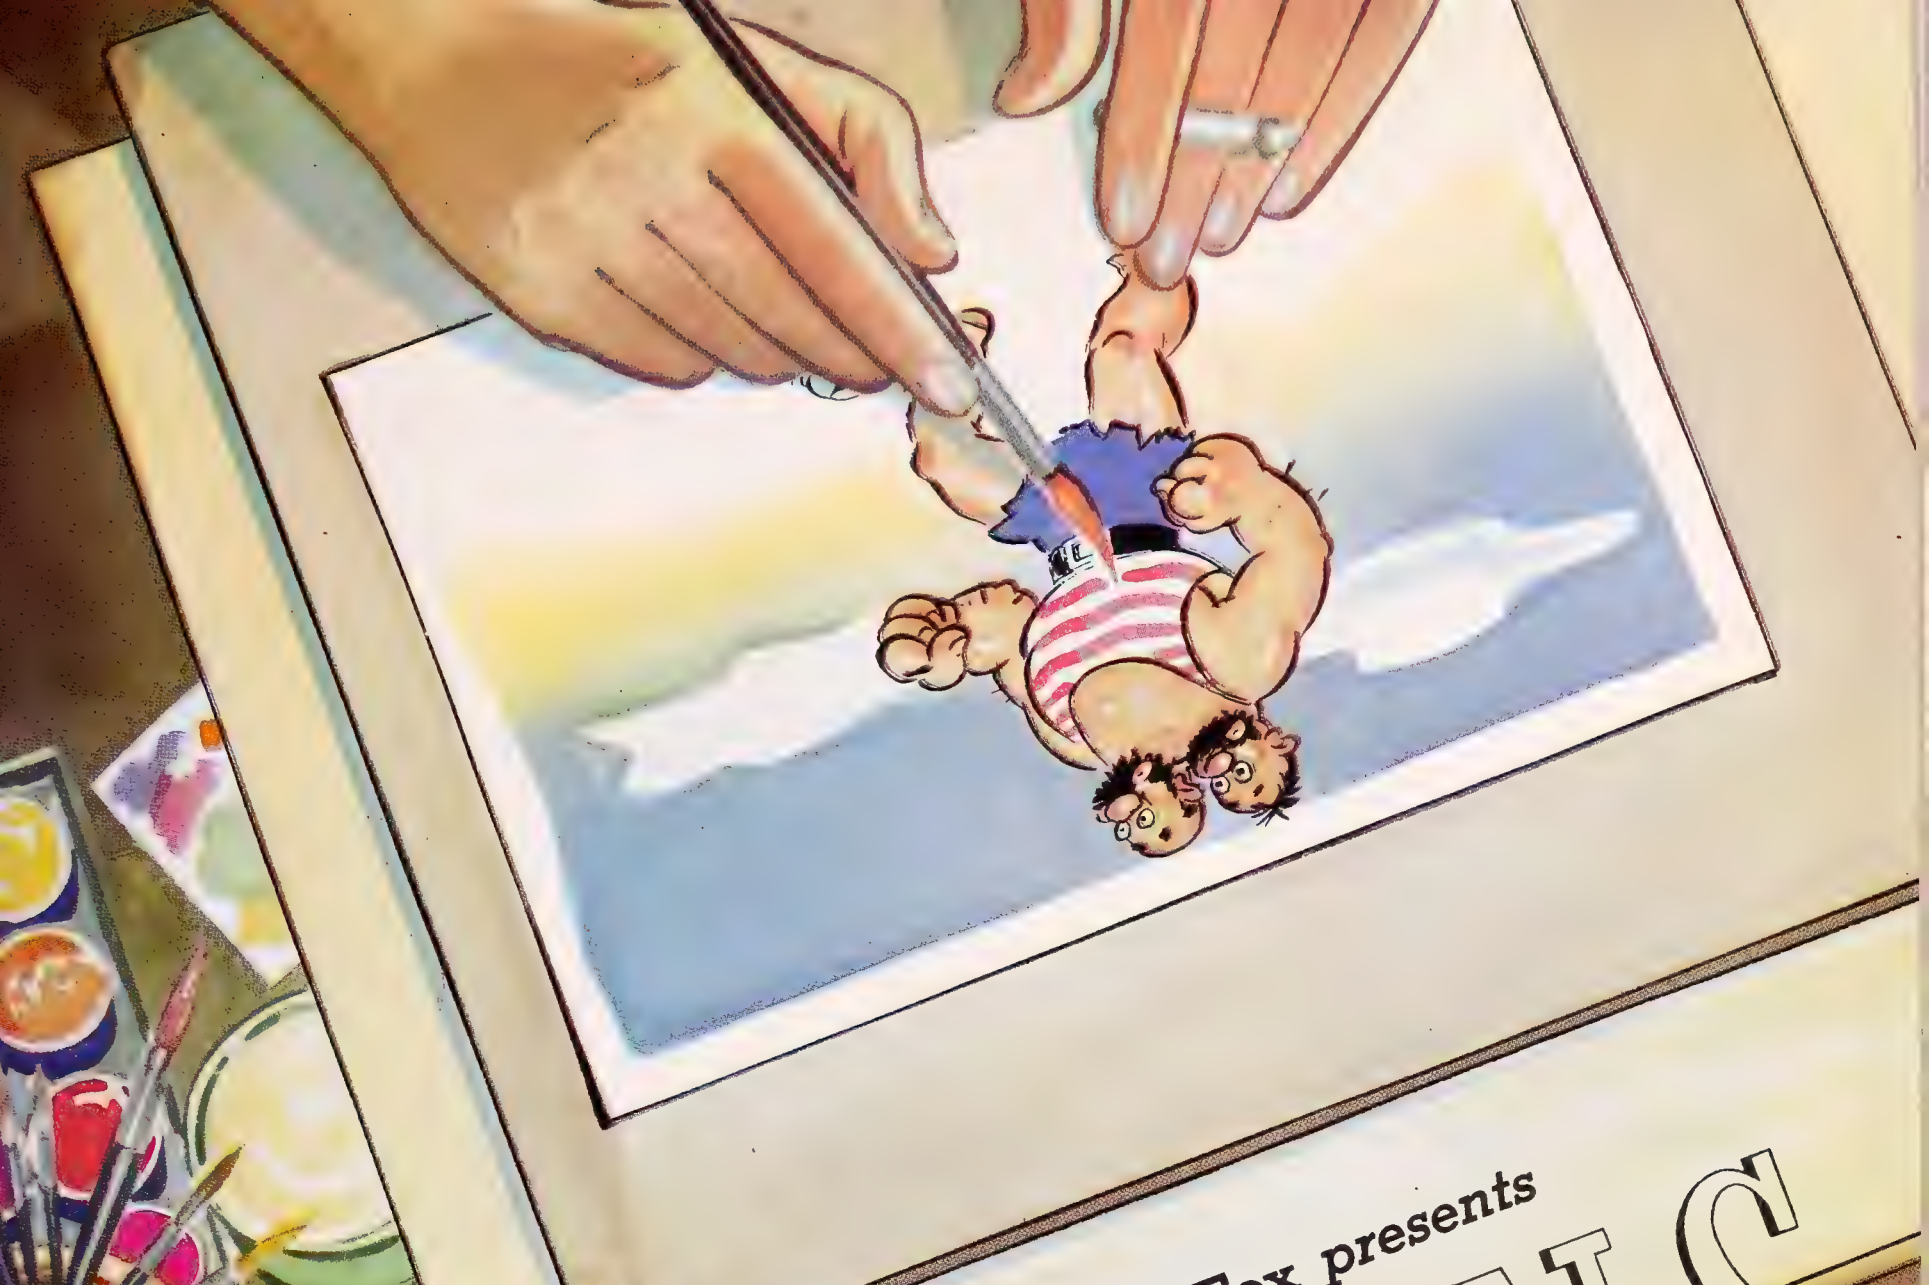
The move to revise the Canadian license agreement for booking contracts has made little progress, according to officers of the Independent Theatres Association of Ontario, who claim that changes in the standard exhibition contract proposed by the Motion Picture Distributors' Association are either not sufficient in scope or work to the disadvantage of independent exhibitors.

One point has been offered as an example. This is in reference to the clause requiring efficient sound reproducing systems in theatres signing a contract for a season's product. The distributors have proposed an additional phrase to provide that a theatre must have a complete sound system of permanent nature to "reproduce recorded sound with adequate volume and high quality." In this instance the exhibitors demand the addition of a clause which provides that the distributors undertake "to furnish prints of an adequate quality to insure proper exhibition." Various other angles are also under dispute.

Fuel has been added to the fire by a resolution which has been received at the Toronto office of the distributor organization from the Quebec Allied Theatrical Industries, representing the independents of the Province of Quebec, in which strong disapproval of the present standard contract is expressed, including a protest against compulsory arbitration "unless the arbitrators are given more discretionary powers."

Theatre Building Drops in Month

The progress of theatre building in the 37 states east of the Rockies was retarded in May. Contract values slid more than $500,000 from the April level.



This is revealed by the Dodge Reports Division of F. W. Dodge Corporation, in its monthly summary, with the comment that "theatre building followed the May trend of non-residential work." An average drop of three per cent was recorded for non-residential construction in May.

Seventy-one theatre projects involving 164,000 square feet were reported by the Dodge news staff of 75 reporters during last month. Contract value totaled $1,514,000. The April report covered 82 projects with 256,000 square feet and contracts amounted to $2,071,000.

To this point, theatre building contracts, as reported by Dodge, are approximately $1,750,000 behind the five month period of 1937. The 1938 figure is $9,205,000, compared with $10,974,000 for the same period in 1937.

Samuels Assumes New Duties

Leo Samuels arrived in New York from the coast this week to take up his duties as assistant to Hal Horne, eastern representative for Walt Disney. Mr. Samuels will be in charge of foreign deals. He was executive assistant to Dr. A. H. Giannini until the latter's resignation as United Artists president.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Quality Stressed

Quality, presaging potential box-office importance, rather than quantity was the main characteristic of production started during the first week of summer. Four pictures that promise to be unique in commercial and entertainment appeal went before the camera. Likewise the lesser three in the total of seven contain a topical football feature, a "Jones Family" adventure and a legal melodrama taken from front page headlines and in which a popular radio favorite, long absent from the screen, returns.

Despite the elimination of Isa Miranda, noted Italian actress from the film, Paramount went ahead with "Zaza." Claudette Colbert is now the heroine and the cast also includes Herbert Marshall, Rex O'Malley, Bert Lahr, Genevieve Tobin, Helen Westley, Constance Collier and Walter Kingsford. The studio's season sport picture, "Touchdown, Army," will feature John Howard, Mary Carlisle and Robert Cummings (the leading trio in last year's "Hold 'Em Navy") with Benny Baker, Minor Watson, Owen Davis, Jr., and squads of football notables from the local colleges. In "Arkansas Traveller," Bob Burns, Jean Parker, Fay Bainter and Dickie Moore presently are the principal personalities.

At RKO-Radio "Gunga Din," based on Rudyard Kipling's famous poem went into work. The cast includes Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Cary Grant, Victor McLaglen, Sam Jaffee, Robert Coote, Joan Fontaine, Montague Love and Lumsden Hare.

"That Certain Age" started at Universal. Deanna Durbin is the star. The supporting company lists Melvyn Douglas, Jackie Cooper, Irene Rich, Juanita Quigley, Addison Richards and Moroni Olsen.

Work began on "Safety in Numbers," a "Jones Family," at 20th Century-Fox. It will present Jed Prouty, Spring Byington, Shirley Deane, Russell Gleason, Ken Howell, June Carlson, George Ernest, Florence Roberts, Billy Mahon and Marvin Stephens as usual and introduce Joan Valerie and Henry Kolker to the series.

Columbia started "Lady Lawyer," in which Gloria Stuart will be featured with Lanny Ross and in which Robert Paige, Arthur Loft and Phillip Smalley will also be seen.

Ten Finished

While the seven productions were being started, ten were checked off the active shooting lists. Here again there are four or five films of more than ordinary importance. Paramount was credited with two of the finished pictures. High ranking on the company's future release schedule is "Spawn of the North." George Raft, Henry Fonda, Dorothy Lamour, Akim Tamiroff, John Barrymore, Louise Platt, Lynne Overman, Fuzzy Knight and Vladimir Sokoloff are the principal players. Yet such names as Duncan Rinaldo, Lee Shumway, Wade Boteler, Guy Usher, Egon Brecher, Harvey Clark, Monte Blue, Irving Bacon, Robert Middlemass, Arthur Aylesworth, John Wray and Frank Puglia will also be available. The second picture, "Bulldog Drummond in Africa," will feature John Howard, Heather Angel, H. B. Warner, Reginald Denny, E. E. Clive and J. Carroll Naish.

Republic moved two films from its active list. "Western Justice," last of the present "Three Mesquiteers" series will feature Robert Livingston, Ray Corrigan and Max Terhune with Priscilla Lawson, Leroy Mason, James Eagles, Ray Barcroft, Carlton Young and James Regan. In "As You Are" Ramon Novarro, Marian Marsh, Margaret Tallichet, Erno Verebes and Eric Blore will be seen.

"I'm from the City" was finished at RKO-Radio. Joe Penner is the star. The support includes Lorraine Krueger, Richard Lane, Katherine Sheldon, Kay Sutton, Paul Guilfoyle, Lafe McKee and Ethan Laidlaw.

Warner finished "Valley of the Giants." Produced in color, it will present Wayne Morris, Claire Trevor, Frank McHugh, Jack LaRue, Donald Crisp, Charles Bickford, Alan Hale, John Litel, Cy Kendall in the principal roles.

"Little Tough Guy" was completed at Universal. The cast includes Robert Wilcox, Helen Parrish, Billie Halop, Marjorie Main, Jackie Searl, Peggy Stewart, Hunt Hall, Gabriel Dell.

For Monogram distribution, E. B. Derr finished "The Barefoot Boy," a story of rustic boyhood tinged with gangster melodrama. Names in the cast are Jackie Moran, Marcia Mae Jones, Claire Windsor, Ralph Morgan.

Jed Buell finished another of his action adventure oddities, "The Terror of Tiny Town," which will feature an all-midget cast.

Ed Finney wound up his producing contract with Grand National when he delivered "The Utah Trail." The picture will feature Tex Ritter.

SLUG NUTTY

Like a boxer who has taken too many punches, Hollywood has gone "slug nutty," according to Richard Wallace, presently the director of "The Young in Heart."

"Our heroes and heroines are slugging each other all over the sets," he says. "The idea seems to have taken firm root that unless it's dizzy and daffy, it isn't comedy, or the audiences can't enjoy a laugh."

Mr. Wallace believes, however, that a rest period is in sight which will not only restore the feverish patient to normalcy, but will provide a welcome relief to audiences and will provide more genuine amusement as well. The trend, he thinks, will swing toward comedy-romance and the humorous situations will be based on situations adapted from things that happen to average human beings.

"When you see something you know could have happened to you," the man says, "you are far more interested than if it happened to characters too crazy to be true."

The director gives himself an out, nevertheless, by admitting that there might be exceptions, but even then he maintains there are not many of them.

Signets

The two men whose names were most closely associated with the indefinable talent in screen arts and mechanics described as "touch" have passed from the scene—Irving Thalberg, whose premature death last year shocked the industry, and Ernst Lubitsch, who, it seems, is enjoying a Sabbatical year. But there is no dearth of candidates willing, eager and, in many cases, capable, of carrying the banner which that noted pair so long upheld.

Among the producers there are a half dozen, at least, whose names are synonymous with "touch," men who, although they never appear in a picture, have rarely been seen by any considerable number of theatre goers, but about whom much has been written, have a box office significance. Samuel Goldwyn always has something in his pictures that make them different from those of his contemporaries. His mania is authenticity. He never uses stock shots. He sent a crew to Italy merely to get a realistic, but minor shot, for "These Three," spending, where others might have saved, for realism. Darryl Zanuck has taken the Thalberg technique unto himself.

David O. Selznick has aimed for and attained simple human interest although he embellishes his offerings with a wealth of spectacular story and production detail. Cecil B. DeMille has long been noted for the manner in which he treats vast crowds and in his historical films achieves remarkable mass mob effects. Frank Lloyd, like DeMille, goes for crowds but always spots his pictures with one tense and suspenseful melodramatic incident after the other. Scenic production beauty, in settings, costumes and the arrangement of people in juxtaposition to music is the keynote of Hunt Stromberg's "touch."

The ranks of directors who are continually on the trail of that unusual something that differentiates their work is crowded with men who dare to do things in ways other than routine. Frank Capra has the knack of making ordinary every-day bits of business that are natural to his players and the characters they are portraying seem unusually different and otherwise more interesting. Opposite Capra and his naturalness is Fritz Lang, who when he takes charge of a production, also takes complete charge of the camera to obtain bizarre pictorial effects.

There is another pair of directors who attain "touch" by radically different methods. The simplicity of Henry Koster is contrasted by the vivid and sometimes grim spectacle with which John Ford treats his work. Two others whose names have definite box office importance, Leo McCarey and Gregory LaCava have the ability to balance an emotion stirring story with an aura of homey human humor.

"Ramona," "Lloyds of London," "Seventh Heaven," "In Old Chicago" and "Alexander's Ragtime Band" are exemplifications of Henry King's art of blending sympathetic romantic love stories against stirring picturesque backgrounds. Mitchell Leisen has impressed his name on production in another way. It's not so much the thin stories he uses, the music they contain or the physical beauty they feature as the manner in which he plays around with sumptuous settings and backgrounds that put him in the ranks of those who have "touch." Not the least of Norman Taurog's claim to directorial eminence is the manner in which he handles children.

800 India Houses, Says Pancholi

Rewashaker Pancholi of Calcutta, circuit theatre owner and Indian distributor for RKO Radio Pictures, who has been in New York for home office conferences, left last week for Calcutta. He was accompanied by J. Singh, chief engineer for Mr. Pancholi's company, Empire Talkie Distributors.

Mr. Pancholi said there are 800 motion picture houses throughout India serving a population of 330,000,000. One hundred of these theatres devote their programs exclusively to American and English pictures and the others exhibit Indian made product, he said. Calcutta, Mr. Pancholi added, with a population of 2,000,000, has 50 film theatres. The company recently completed the new Prahabat Cinema there.

Close Hearings On RKO Plan

Final hearings on the proposed amended RKO reorganization plan before Special Master George W. Alger were closed Wednesday by him. He contrasted it favorably with the original reorganization proposal, which he criticized for not adequately providing for fixed charges.

The Special Master adjourned the hearing to July 18th and announced that he would reach a decision on the plan within two weeks, making known that decision on the 18th.

Richard Jones, associate counsel for Atlas Corporation, proponent of the plan, said that 10 briefs had been submitted to Mr. Alger by objectors.

On Saturday Judge Bondy approved the petition of Irving Trust Company, trustee of RKO, granting it an additional six months from July 1st, in which to continue as trustee of RKO for the purpose of affirming or disaffirming leases, contracts and agreements, subject to the supervision of the court.

Judge Bondy also issued an order authorizing the Chemical Bank and Trust Company, as trustee under the collateral note indenture of RKO dated July 1, 1931, to pay to the Irving Trust Company as trustee of RKO, the sum of $127,571 to be used by Irving Trust for administrative expenses and allowances. On May 4, 1936 started to put aside a fund of $15,000 monthly to be used for this purpose.

Kent Drive Meetings Begin on July 14th

The first of a series of branch meetings in the sixth annual S. R. Kent Drive will start in Los Angeles, July 14th, with J. P. O'Loghlin, Canadian district manager and drive leader, presiding. He will leave Toronto, July 4th, for Chicago where he will meet Roger Ferri of the home office, and the two will precede to the coast.

Clearances Discussed at Toronto

The subject of clearances for the Toronto district will be discussed next week at a meeting of the newly formed conciliation committee.

Unit Art Director Found Dead on Set

The body of N. W. Timchenko, unit art director at Universal, was found June 28th, hanging from the inside of a set on the back lot at the Universal studios in Hollywood. Mr. Timchenko had been associated with Universal for two and a half years. He is survived by his widow, Elsie.

CBS, "Teatro al Dia" Broadcast to South America

A short wave radio broadcast from New York to South America was sponsored Tuesday evening by Columbia Broadcasting System and Teatro al Dia, Spanish language Quigley Publication, on the occasion of the forthcoming anniversary of Argentina's independence, on July 9th.

Marking a new all-time high in short wave presentation to South America, the Teatro al Dia-Columbia broadcast relayed over W2XE, then via Radio Belgrado, in Argentina, a program of native music and messages lasting nearly an hour, starting at 9:30 P.M. E.D.S.T. The broadcast, beamed toward Argentina's foremost radio station, was picked up throughout neighboring countries.

It was the first time that a major network conducted an international short wave broadcast from a radio theatre in New York with an audience in attendance, approximately 1,100 crowding CBS "Radio Playhouse No. 3," in the old Hammerstein theatre on Broadway.

Hon. Conrado Traverso, Consul-General of Argentina in the United States, opened the program and entertainment interspersing messages from Colonel Frederick L. Herron, chief of the foreign department of the MPPDA, representing the organized industry in the United States; Roberto Socas, New York correspondent of La Nacion, of Buenos Aires; Terry Ramsaye, editor of Motion Picture Herald; Horacio Alban-Mestanza, editor of Teatro al Dia; and a message, read by Mr. Socas, from Dr. L. S. Rowe, director of the Pan-American Union in Washington.

While newspaper cameras flashed and Paramount and MGM newsreels recorded the presentation, a cast of noted Spanish entertainers gave a specially selected program for their South American listeners. Music was provided by Eddie Le Baron and his tango and rhumba band from the Rainbow at Rockefeller Center, playing for Chela and Freddy, Argentina radio stars now in New York; Maria Bruni, operatic soprano; Migue Caceres and his Trio Pamperos; Enriqueta Castillo, soprano; Adelita Varela, coloratura soprano, and Eliseo Grenet, Cuban composer.

Congratulatory telegrams were received at the broadcast from Arthur Loew, in charge of foreign activities for Loew's, Inc., and N. Bruski, Quigley Publications correspondent in Buenos Aires.

Elizabeth Ann Tucker, Columbia executive in charge of short wave broadcasts, was in charge, with Joseph Hill directing and Gene Heit handling production.

New Haven Bans All Chance Games

New Haven, Conn., authorities have placed an unconditional ban on Bingo, Lucky, Honey, Screeno and all other money games as operated by churches, organizations and other groups as well as theatres, ruling that even card parties where cash prizes are offered to induce playing will be considered illegal gambling.

Temporary relief from a circuit court order banning Bank Night in the Tampa and Victory theatres, Tampa, Fla., was given the two theatres this week by the state supreme court. The county solicitor, however, warned the theatre managers against conducting the drawings.

Florida Marine Studio Opened to Public

The Marine Studios, new motion picture production studio in Marineland, Fla., which had its formal opening last week, was opened to the public over the weekend. Motion pictures of marine life among others will be made at the studio which is located 18 miles south of St. Augustine.

Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney is chairman of the directorate of the studio.

Republic Pictures Signs Ten-Year RCA Sound Pact

Republic Pictures, which has been using RCA Photophone sound recording facilities on a rental basis for many years, has signed a ten-year sound recording license agreement with the same organization, which entails the installation of new "High Fidelity" sound recording, re-recording and reproduction facilities on its own production lot.

Harry L. Sommerer, RCA Photophone head, said that his engineers are installing four mobile ultra-violet light recording systems in as many new trucks. Each will be equipped to record sound for both studio and outside locations without connection to external power supply.

UA Showmanship Drive

Monroe W. Greenthal, advertising and publicity director of United Artists, said this week that all entrants in the company's National Showmanship Week must submit their exploitation campaign before July 15th in order to be eligible for the $1,000 in prizes. The competition was held in connection with the national release of Walter Wanger's "Blockade." Seven prizes will be awarded. First, $500; second, $250; third, $100; fourth and fifth, $50; sixth and eventh, $25. Judges are Mr. Wanger, George J. Schaefer, vice-president and genera manager; A. W. Smith, Jr., general sales manager; Mr. Greenthal, A-Mike Vogel of Motion Picture Herald; Charles Lewis, publisher of Showmen's Trade Review; Ben Shylen, publisher of Boxffice; Jack Harrower of Film Daily and Epes Sargent of Variety.

Mr. Wanger has received a special citation from the National Peace Conference, comprised of 40 national groups, for "Blockade."

Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board of directors of Twentieth Century-Fox, is due to arrive in New York from the coast late this week. He plans to sail on the Queen Mary next Wednesday.

IN THE CUTTING ROOM

The Sisters

(Warner)

Romance

Following the acclaim accorded Bette Davis for her work in "Jezebel" and that which accrued to Errol Flynn and was climaxed by public approval of his work in "The Adventures of Robin Hood," it was but logical that Warner Brothers would co-star its top flight name personalities in a picture. For this appearance the studio has chosen a story that deals with the experiences, adventures, romances, loves, disappointments, triumphs and tragedies of three sisters.

Based on Myron Brinig's novel of the same title, the screen play was completed by Milton Krims whose earlier credits include "Green Light" and collaboration on "Secrets of an Actress," "The Great O'Malley" and "Anthony Adverse." Direction was entrusted to Anatole Litvak of "Mayerling" note.

With Miss Davis and Flynn leading the name parade, the other two sisters are Anita Louise and Jane Bryan while their parents are Beulah Bondi and Henry Travers. Important in the train of events that make the lives of the sisters unusual and interesting are Alan Hale, Dick Foran, Ian Hunter, Harry Davenport, Donald Crisp, Janet Shaw, Lee Patrick and Ruth Garland.

Although there is considerable dialogue in the story there will be no lack of quality production effects with a reproduction of the San Francisco earthquake and fire and a ball celebrating the election of Theodore Roosevelt to the presidency expected to be the pictorial highlights.

Release date: To be determined.

The Utah Trail

(Grand National)

Action-Adventure

While all those fundamentals which are common to the outdoor action adventure picture which has a western background, the material is being given a novel and different twist. As was the case in all Tex Ritter's previous films, music will play a prominent part, but the theme's romance and melodrama, intrigue and good old fashioned down to earth dirty work is being approached from an unusual angle.

The Border States Railroad is being harassed by a mysterious gang of criminals who are ruining the line's business. In desperation, the railroad's president hires the Pecos Kid, a notorious gun fighter, to ferret out the bandits but he is killed before the Kid can go into action.

Ritter is the hero and the girl is Adele Pearce. Supporting players are Horace Murphy, Peewee Pollard, Karl Hackett, Charles King, Ed Cassidy, David O'Brien, Bud Osborne, Lynton Brent, Rudy Sooter and Tex Ritter's musical Tornadoes.

Production is based on an original story written by Lindsley Parsons and Edmund Kelso, for which Kelso did the screen play. Music and lyrics were composed by Frank Harford, Bob Palmer and Rudy Sooter. Direction is in the hands of Al Herman, long experienced in the making of action adventure pictures of character similar to this Ed Finney production.

Release date: July 12, 1938.

Artists and Models Abroad

(Paramount)

Musical Comedy

Comedy, music, specialties, dancing and spectacle will be the principal elements of "Artists and Models Abroad." A series picture, such as are the "Golddiggers," "Broadway Melodies" and Paramount's own musical Collegiates, it will have only a slim story structure and its bid for commercial and entertainment value will be grounded on name worth, elaborate production features, solo and chorus singing and dancing and the various bits of improvising and departures from the written script which entertainers of the caliber of Jack Benny and the Yacht Club Boys may be expected to indulge in.

While there has been but one previous "Artists and Models," the title has definite value. Yet where that may be impotent, the personalities to be featured seem to be of the caliber necessary to bear any exploitation load. Benny, because of his radio programs, is one of the best known names in the business today. His appearances in "Big Broadcast of 1937," "College Holiday" and "Artists and Models" for Paramount have made him known to picture followers. Joan Bennett, last in "I Met My Love Again" and "Vogues of 1938" is soon to be seen in "The Texans." The Yacht Club Boys have contributed to the comedy importance of many films. The other principals, Mary Boland and Charles Grapewin, are widely known. There will be a dozen featured beauties and a regiment of singing-dancing chorus girls.

Mitchell Leisen, who made the last two "Big Broadcasts," and "Swing High, Swing Low," is directing.

Release date: August 12, 1938 (tentative).

Ellis Island

(20th Century-Fox)

Complex Romance

Ellis Island, in New York harbor, is the door way through which millions of foreigners have come to America. The story to be told in the production will be the composite saga of hosts of immigrants and deportees; their romances and adventures, their joys and tragedies, high hopes and bitter disappointments.

While the material is believed to be that which will incite the interest of mass minds, there is little question as to the importance of screen names. The two persons who are principally involved in the panorama are Don Ameche whose recent appearances in "In Old Chicago," "Josette" and "Alexander's Ragtime Band" have added to his army of followers and Arleen Whelan who was first featured in "Kidnapped." Other important featured roles have been entrusted to an unusually capable aggregation of artists which includes Lyle Talbot, Gregory Ratoff, Binnie Barnes, currently creating a new vogue for herself in "Tropic Holiday" and "Always Goodbye"; Gilbert Roland, Raymond Walburn, Marjorie Gateson, George Barbier, Sidney Blackmer, Maurice Moskovitch, Harry Carey and E. E. Clive.

The picture is being directed by Alfred T. Werker whose last production was "Kidnapped."

Release date: August 20, 1938 (tentative).

Breaking The Ice

(RKO Radio)

An Entertainment Olio

Comedy, melodrama, heart interest and adventure that assumes a Tom Sawyer character, interpersed with a spectacular ice skating ballet and musical numbers composed by Frank Churchill who was responsible for the "Snow White and Seven Dwarfs" melodies, are the elements being combined in this new Bobby Breen picture which Sol Lesser is producing. Simply it is the story of a ten-year-old boy who lives with his mother and irascible dogmatic uncle in the religious environment of a small Pennsylvania town, an antique peddler, a missing twenty dollar bill and a chase over many states for a chair. The theme is interluded by music and artistic spectacle and the story of mother-son love that does not follow the rags to riches theme.

As Bobby Breen is already an established screen personality, the film will introduce little Miss Dare, a marvel on skates. The principal supports are Charles Ruggles, the peddler; Dolores Costello as the boy's mother and Robert Barrat as his uncle. Various character roles will be played by Dorothy Peterson, John King, Billy Gilbert, Margaret Hamilton, Jonathan Hale, Spencer Charters and Charlie Murray.

With Edward F. Cline directing, the story is an original written by Jack Grundy which was adapted by Mary McCall, Jr., Manny Seff and Bernard Schubert, well known as the authors of many successful screen plays.

Release date: To be determined.

Unlawful

(Warner)

Melodrama

"Unlawful" is being planned by Warner Brothers as the most melodramatic and action packed vehicle ever given Kay Francis. In the vernacular, it might be described as a hair raising thriller. Significant of the prospective tone and quality of the forthcoming picture is the selection of Lewis Seiler, maker of the current "Crime School," to serve as director and the inclusion of Humphrey Bogart of "Dead End" and "Crime School" fame to play a bandit role in which there are many of the qualities which made his performances in the stage and screen versions of "Petrified Forest" memorable.

In the story, Miss Francis and her husband, John Eldredge are surgeons. Performing a difficult operation on a mobster they come to the attention of Bogart who decides to add Eldredge to his "staff."

As James Stephenson is a principal together with those names, the supporting cast will feature Penny Singleton, Arthur Aylesworth, Charles Foy, Pierre Watkin, Frank Reickey and Fran Faylen among many others.

The story told in the production is based on a piece of topically inspired fiction written by W. R. Burnett whose screen contributions include "Some Blondes Are Dangerous," and novels which were the basis of "36 Hours to Kill," "Dr. Socrates" and "Dark Hazards" as well as collaboration on "Scarface." The adaptation was made by George Bricker and Vincent Sherman.

Release date: To be determined.

INDUSTRY TO SEEK MAINTENANCE OF PROTECTION IN COPYRIGHT MEETINGS

Varied Interests Represented at Series of Conferences at Columbia University; Kilroe Sees Threat to Film Properties

The motion picture industry's participation in a series of conferences designed to draft a new copyright act for the United States will be confined principally to two aims—maintenance of the protection afforded under the present act and demands for protective measures that would not be superseded by a treaty pledging this country to adherence to the international copyright law.

Film copyrights in general, music-film copyrights, authors rights, title copyrights and damages for copyright violations are specific matters coming up.

As a whole the motion picture industry is not adversely affected by the present copyright law, according to Edwin P. Kilroe, chairman of the copyright committee of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America.

Mr. Kilroe is a member of the MPPDA committee of three that will attend the conferences, the first of which will be held next Thursday in the trustees' room of the Low Memorial Library at Columbia University, New York, under the sponsorship of the committee for the study of copyright of the American National Committee on International Intellectual Cooperation. MPPDA directors appointed the committee on the invitation of the sponsoring ANC.

The committee, through the series of conferences, hopes to unite the various interests affected by copyright legislation. It is because of a lack of unit that Congress has failed to enact any copyright legislation despite the fact the matter has been before the lawmakers every session since 1932, according to Edith E. Ware, executive secretary of the committee.

Miss Ware expressed this opinion in an invitation to the MPPDA to send representatives to the conferences. The MPPDA committee of three is composed of Robert W. Perkins of Warner Brothers, chairman; Gabriel L. Hess, general attorney for the MPPDA, and Mr. Kilroe, who is associated with Twentieth Century-Fox.

Proposed in Every Congress

In her letter to the board, Miss Ware pointed out:

"The preliminary findings of the committee for the study of copyright reveal that copyright laws have been proposed to every Congress since 1922. Yet no progress has been made. The Berne Convention (international copyright) has been submitted to the Senate since 1930 by both Republican and Democratic administrations. But it is still on the Senate calendar. The Duffy bill, prepared by an interdepartmental committee in 1934, in revised form, has been before the Committee on Patents of both houses throughout the 75th Congress.

"In retrospect, it is quite possible to see why all legislative efforts have failed. For example, one important measure was known as the authors' bill, another as the radio interests', a third as Mr. Solberg's bill designed to get the United States into the copyright union. So long as any measure was sponsored by any one group, there were other groups which found reason to oppose it.

Asks Joint Action

"The committee for the study of copyright, from its conversations with all interests concerned, has come to the conclusion that a new bill is necessary, and that such a bill should be drawn by representatives of all the interested groups. It believes that if the differences between the groups can be worked out in the spirit of mutual accommodation it should be possible to devise a measure which could be enacted into law without the tedious, expensive and destructive procedures which have been the fate of all copyright legislation for the past decade. The committee has adopted this belief because of the desire of all groups for action and because of the display on their part of willingness to cooperate."

Mr. Kilroe said that the film industry's position in regard to copyright was defined when he spoke in April, 1937, at hearings before a Senate subcommittee of the Committee on Foreign Relations.

"I should like to put in the record very briefly, first, our opposition to adherence to the convention (the Berne Convention) before the enactment of copyright legislation," Mr. Kilroe told the committee.

Senator Duffy then queried:

"That is, you do not want any action taken by the Senate on the convention prior to the enactment of the copyright bill containing enabling legislation?"

"No," Mr. Kilroe replied. "We believe that to do so would throw the law of copyright into confusion and great chaos, if our theory is correct that the treaty would supersede existing law."

Sees Threat to Protection

Mr. Kilroe amplified this point this week when he explained that without the adoption of enabling legislation, he is of the opinion that adherence to the Berne Convention would mean that thousands of properties owned by film companies would no longer be protected.

Reporting on a survey abroad which he made for the MPPDA Mr. Kilroe told the Senate committee: "There is a strong sentiment among the creators and users of copyright in Europe that the Berne Convention is not as effective as it should be and that the convention should be revised so that the rights and obligations are fully and clearly defined in the document and nothing left to the national laws of each country. The rights should be concisely set forth in the convention and these rights should be enforcible in every country of the convention; under the present convention, certain rights and remedies are left to the national laws of the countries in which these rights and remedies are claimed."

Although the subject of minimum award in a copyright action is not expected to be discussed at the initial session of the committee on copyright next Thursday, Mr. Kilroe said the industry will be vitally interested in the drafting of legislation on that subject. Under the present law the minimum award is $250 but, Mr. Kilroe explained, it is felt by some in the film industry that the setting of a sum in small cases should be left to the discretion of a court. In some cases, Mr. Kilroe continued, a $250 award is far too high.

TRAINING BY FILMS APPROVED BY BOARD

The Georgia state board of education this week approvad a plan for agricultural vocational training by films in schools throughout the state.

The board acted after viewing a sound film showing modern methods of hog raising. The picture, prepared by Dr. John T. Wheeler, director of vocational eduction in the state school department, is to be shown in schools throughout the rural sections of the state.

List Speakers for Film Festival

A program of speakers for the "International Film Festival" at the Fifth Avenue Playhouse, New York, to supplement the schedule of 44 sound films from 16 countries beginning July 1st and extending through August 31st, has been arranged by the management. The films to be shown were listed on page 54 of the June 25th issue, MOTION PICTURE HERALD. Martin J. Lewis, managing director of the Playhouse, is sponsoring the project.

The speakers, comprising critics, writers, editors, government officials, film executives and stage and screen stars, will appear for the respective countries on the first day when each country enters the "Festival" schedule. Their general topic will be the contribution the various countries have made to the "world-wide art of the sound film and particularly its significance for motion picture audiences in America."

The speakers' list is complete for all nations entered in the "Festival" with the exception of the English speaking countries, England, Ireland and the United States, who will be announced shortly.

The speakers are Paul Charles Bivers, managing director of France-Amerique Films of Paris, who will speak July 1st; Dr. Curt Pinthus, former theatre and motion picture editor of 8 Uhr Abendblatt of Berlin, July 8th; Albert Van Sand, editor and publisher of Nordlyset, Danish newspaper in the United States, July 13th; Louis Lipsky, chairman of the administrative committee of the United Palestine Appeal, July 14th; Martha Troyanova, Czechoslovakian screen and stage star now in this country, July 15th.

Also Ernest Mattsson, official representative of Swedish films in America, July 29th; Walt Anderson, chairman of the American Friends of the Mexican People, August 1st; David McKelvy White, national chairman of the Abraham Lincoln Brigade, representing Spain, August 2nd; Dr. Peter P. Yolles, editor-in-chief of Nowy Swiat, Polish newspaper in the United States, August 3rd; Alexander Karolyi, of the Hungarian consulate in New York, August 22nd; Dr. Franz Hoellering, Austrian critic, August 23rd; Oliver M. Sayler, author of "The Russian Theatre," August 25th, and Mrs. Hettie Dyrenfurth, official representative of the Swiss motion picture industry in America and holder of the world's mountain climbing record for women, August 31st.

Section of NEA's Convention Program Allotted to Screen Topic, "Learning Through Seeing," with Students' Discussion

Use of motion pictures in educational work was one of the chief topics this week when 20,000 educators gathered in New York City for the 76th annual convention of the National Education Association.

In addition to the showing of educational short subjects at the close of several sessions, "Section B" of the program on Thursday morning was allotted entirely to films under the title "Learning Through Seeing." Films shown included: "Service of the People." on Monday; "Romance of Robert Burns," on Tuesday, and "Give Me Liberty or Give Me Death," Wednesday. Warners screened "Robin Hood" on Monday night.

The organized industry as such did not participate this year in the films panel of the convention, because of its own educational films activities in formulating a plan for placing the industry in the school films field, on which progress is reported.

The popular arts "have helped destroy narrow sectionalism in America and may do the same for international unity," Thomas Munroe of the Cleveland Museum of Art, told the educators. He said that "self-interest, often forces the producers of art, such as motion pictures, to develop an international viewpoint" with the result often "insipid" but sometimes producing "art of universal appeal."

Thursday's program was under the direction of Helen Wilson, president of the Pittsburgh Teachers Association. Speakers included Ely Dale of Ohio University, on "The Place of Sound Pictures in Education"; Dr. Alice V. Keliher, chairman of the Commission on Human Relations of the Progressive Education Association, who conducted a demonstration of the experimental work of her organization, and Jay B. Nash of New York University, who talked on "Selecting Motion Pictures for School Use."

In her demonstration, Dr. Keliher presented a discussion among high school students. It is to evoke such discussions that the Progressive Education Association edits portions of films produced for entertainment purposes by large film companies.

A grant of $69,000 to carry on the work was made recently by the General Education Board, which is part of the Rockefeller Foundation. The work was begun in July, 1936, on the basis of a two year grant of $75,000. Up to May 1st of this year, 36 classroom short subjects had been completed with Joseph Losey, production director; Helen Van Donegen, film editor, and Margaret Kneerim and Irving Lerner, assistants.

In the coming year, starting July 1st, the commission expects to prepare 40 more films for classroom presentation. The pictures are obtained through an arrangement with Paramount, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Warner Brothers, Twentieth Century-Fox, March of Time, Fox Movietone News and French Motion Picture Corporation. One year after general release, those sections deemed to have educational value in human relations are edited "to bring out the social implications clearly and forcefully."

INDUSTRY MAY USE $250,000 FOR FAIR

An expenditure of $250,000 may be made by the organized industry in connection with three proposals for participation of the motion picture industry in the New York World's Fair of 1939 which are being discussed by executives and members of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America. They include production of a feature length film to be called "A Cavalcade of America," depicting the development of America; the construction of a studio on the Fair Grounds where motion picture production would be demonstrated, and building of a theatre on the grounds.

"We have had splendid cooperation from the industry and from education," Dr. Keliher said. "The motion picture producers have displayed an unusual spirit of cooperation in giving us their films for experimental use in this project."

The association's films have been used by 20 schools and educational groups. These are: Benjamin Franklin and Washington Irving high schools, New York City; Bronxville High School, Bronxville, N. Y.; Cheltenham Township High School, Elkins Park, Pa.; Friends Central School, Overbrook, Pa.; Oak Lane Country Day School, Oak Lane, Pa.; George School, George School, Pa.; New Brunswick Public Schools, N. J.; Freehold High School, Freehold, N. J.; Cambridge School, Kendal Green, Mass.; Van Hornesville Central School, Van Hornesville, N. Y.; Francis W. Parker School, Chicago; North Shore Country Day School, Winnetka, Ill.; Western Military Academy, Alton, Ill.; Stephens College, Columbia, Mo.; Denver Public Schools, Denver, Col.; University High School, Oakland, Cal., and parent groups in Vermont.

The features from which those short subjects already completed were made and the points brought out are as follows:

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BIG HOUSE, conditions in overcrowded jails.
CEILING ZERO, flyer, lacking courage, loses job.
CEILING ZERO, irresponsibility toward job and associates.

Film Presentation of "Cavalcade of America" Considered Among Proposals for Part in Next Year's Event

Although the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America last week announced that no decision had been made as to the film industry's participation in the New York World's Fair in 1939, the department of education of the World's Fair this week said it is "cooperating with the Federal Government and the motion picture industry in the preparation of a feature film on the history of the United States." The MPPDA announcement came after adjournment until September of its board of directors.

It was stated that a film presentation of a "Cavalcade of America" was one of many plans given consideration. Although the World's Fair release did not elaborate upon its statement, it was generally understood, when the matter was discussed by the MPPDA board, that the production would be in three parts, each part covering 50 of the last 150 years in the history of this country.

"A striking feature of the education program," Dr. Harry Woodburn Chase, chairman of the World's Fair education committee, said, "will be a series of demonstrations of the place the motion picture is making for itself in the teaching profession. Films will be grouped according to special interests and will be drawn from every possible production source.

"In addition to pictures made solely for educational use, there will be edited versions of Hollywood and other commercial productions approved by a nationwide committee of educators."

It was generally assumed that Dr. Chase, who is chancellor of New York University, was referring in part to the short subjects selected by an MPPDA educators' committee last Summer as the basis for material for the organized industry's entrance into the school films field.

Those on the committee with Dr. Chase are Dr. James R. Angell, educational counselor, National Broadcasting Company; Dr. Stephen Bayne, associate superintendent of schools, New York City; Professor Lyman Bryson, Teachers College, Columbia University; Professor Marston Taylor Bogert, department of chemistry, Columbia University; Dr. Harold N. Davis, president, Stevens Institute of Technology, Hoboken, N. J.; Arthur De Bra, MPPDA; Dr. Stephen A. Duggan, director of the Institute of International Education, New York City; Dr. Edward C. Elliott, president, Purdue University. Lafayette, Ind.; Lawrence Frank, Josiah Macy, Jr., Foundations, New York City; Reverend Robert I. Gannon, president of Fordham University; Virginia Gildersleeve, dean, Barnard College, Columbia University; Dr. Paul Klapper, president, Queens College, Flushing, New York; Dr. Mark May, Yale University; Dr. Howard W. Odum, director of research in social science, University of North Carolina; Dr. Carson Ryan, Carnegie Foundation, New York City, and Professor James T. Shotwell, department of history, Columbia University.

LA MATERNELLE, child deprived of mother love.

One of the features of the National Education Association convention in New York, the first held in that city for more than 20 years, was the presentation by the National Broadcasting Company of "Radio—A Civilizing Force" at the Center Theatre, Tuesday morning. The production was presented in three parts. The introduction was a portrayal of the birth of radio from the first SOS signal through Marconi's development of the wireless; the second part showed how radio brings the world to the listener, and the third illustrated "radio's part in bringing the listener to an understanding of the world."

The remainder of the program was in seven divisions: history, children, health, psychology, science, drama and music.

Ohio Buying Unit to Start

Milton A. Mooney, said in Cleveland this week, that his newly organized Co-Operative Theatres of Ohio, formed to offer a buying and booking service for theatres in the northern Ohio territory will be functioning within two weeks. Forty-six theatres have contracted for the service, Mr. Mooney said. Co-Operative Theatres of Ohio will maintain headquarters at 815 Film Exchange Building, Cleveland.

Dave Flam, publicity man and theatrical executive, has joined Filmack Trailer Company of Chicago.

Oliver Levy has joined J. S. Tapernoux in the operation of French Motion Picture Corporation, importers.

Laemmle To Study French Production

Carl Laemmle, Sr., sailed Wednesday on the Normandie on a vacation but while abroad he will look into the French production field with a view to setting up an independent organization here for foreign film distribution. This would indicate that Mr. Laemmle is planning a return to active participation in the motion picture industry. His return, if any, he said, will be in distribution, not production.

His trip is chiefly for pleasure, however, and he plans to stay three or four weeks at the Vichy baths and also visit Switzerland, returning here late in August. The refugee situation in Germany and Austria has occupied much of Mr. Laemmle's time lately.

He said that Carl Laemmle, Jr., is still reading scripts and preparing for production, but that no definite plans have been formed.

While in New York Mr. Laemmle conferred with Paul Maerker Branden on a series of original scripts on gold mining, based on a Laemmle idea, and which will be finished on his return for newspaper syndication and possible screen sale.

612 Films in Oregon Library

The department of visual education of the Oregon educational system has a total of 612 motion picture films and 793 glass and film slide sets, according to U. S. Burt, head of the department.

A silent film of life on the campus of the University of South Carolina has been completed by Charles E. Hewing of Hollywood. The film will be distributed by the university's extension department to alumni groups, high schools and clubs.

Samuel Weiss, president and manager of the Stamford Theatre Corporation, has purchased a site on Bedford St., Brooklyn, and plans to erect a theatre at a cost of approximately $100,000. The purchase price of the property was reported to be $20,000. It is expected that work on the theatre will start about the middle of July and be completed for opening about October 15th. It will seat 600, all on the orchestra floor.

New Circuit in South Africa Plans 40 Houses

Competition for the Schlesinger interests in South Africa, which have dominated the film aind theatre field there for years, is in the making, with a circuit of 40 theatres projected. The total capital involved is reported as $4,000,000.

Twentieth Century-Fox will be the Schlesinger's chief competitor, having made arrangements for distribution through its own organization, headed by Otto Bolle. United Artists, which also released through the Schlesinger organization, is setting up its own offices. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer handles its own distribution and is the chief theatre operator in Johannesburg in opposition to the Schlesingers.

N. Lurie of Johannesburg is now in New York to conclude a deal with Twentieth Century-Fox whereby the company will invest $200,000 in a first run house which will be an outlet for the company's films. The Katz and Lurie group, with Twentieth Century-Fox, is forming a company to build the theatre.

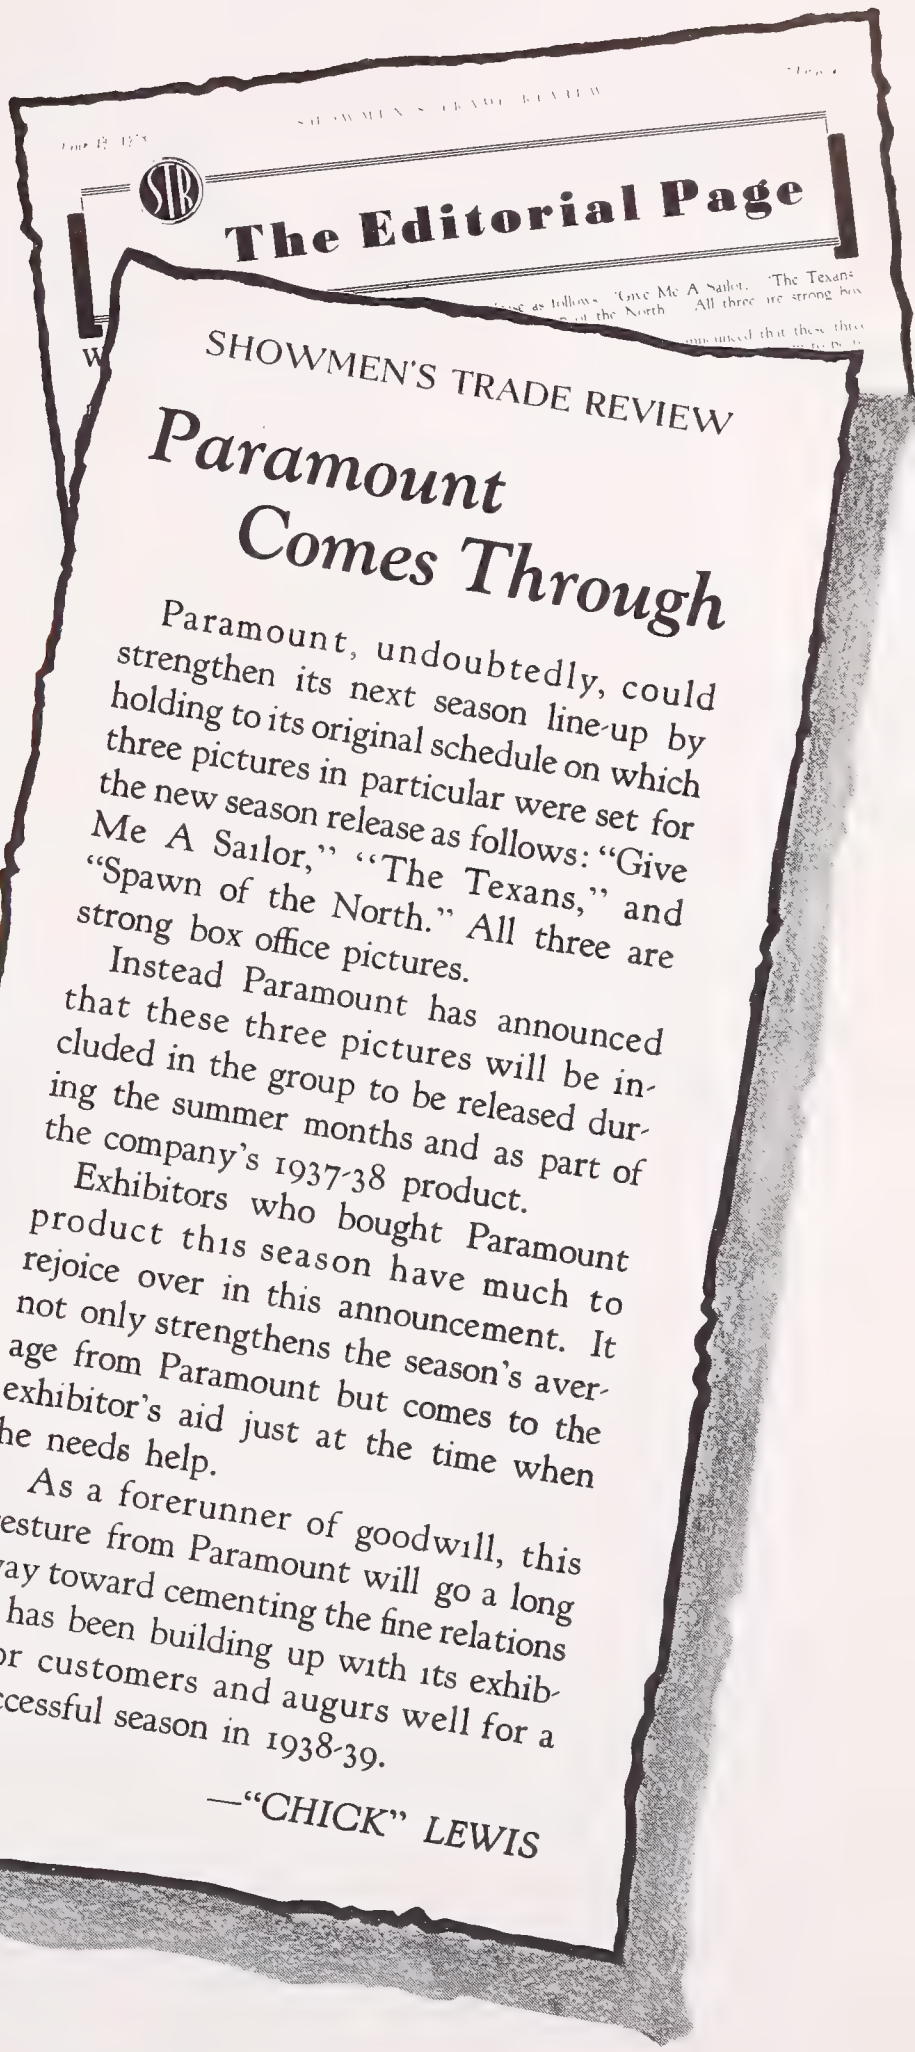
In addition, the film company is sponsoring the construction of other houses on the continent, which will be owned chiefly by independents. In all instances 15 year film franchises will be given by Twentieth Century-Fox, it is understood.

In addition to Johannesburg, major houses will be in Cape Town, Durban, Port Elizabeth, Pretoria, East London and other cities. First and second run houses are under construction in Durban and two theatres will go up in Bloemfontein. Contracts have been let for small theatres in Petersburg, Ermelo and Vrygeid.

Republic Closes Franchise Deals

"Agreements have been reached with practically all important franchise owners with whom Republic has decided to continue to do business," James R. Grainger, president, declared this week.

Dallas, Oklahoma City and Little Rock are among the first offices in the country to sign new franchise agreements, Mr. Grainger said, explaining that the new deals are for five years and go into effect this Friday. The agreements provide more advantageous terms to the film company than heretofore.



The new franchise agreements, according to Mr. Grainger, put Republic in the position of now being able to concentrate on star and story talent.

William G. Underwood and Claude E. Ezell of Dallas signed the new agreement for Republic Pictures Corporation of Texas. Sol Davis and Morris Loewenstein of Oklahoma City closed for that territory and B. F. Busby of Little Rock for the Arkansas area.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Eleanor Roosevelt, writing about a private exhibition of the Disney feature at the White House, said, "We had 'Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs' after dinner. One of our guests had not seen it, nor had John and I. My husband had seen it, but he insisted on remaining for this second showing. . . . Late at night I found myself thinking of the little Princess at the well with her doves and the funny little men being kissed on the tops of their heads."

Paramount has "Tropic Holiday" coming up on July 1st. This is the picture in which Adolph Zukor's studio forces practically forced Martha Raye to make her debut as a female matador. As the comedienne hadn't had any training in this branch of film work, Paramount looked long for a fierce-looking but highly contented bull. They finally got one, from Mexico, and all went well, until Martha entered the arena with overlong fingernails lacquered a bright red. When the bull saw those ten irritating nails he put extra activity into his work, finishing his part by dragging Martha about the arena on the seat of her matador pants.

Spyros Skouras might carry the idea a little further and run a fleet of steamers up and down the Pacific for his California circuit.

Spirit of Four Horsemen Will Ride Again

REVIVAL-AND-REMAKE MINDED Edward Small announces the production of "The Life of Valentino," for United Artists release, placing Jack Dunn, an ice skater, in the title role to reenact the life of the late Argentian who rose from the obscurity of a waiter to be the "world's greatest lover" on the screen.

Rudolph Valentino's screen beginning was literally on a gamble, with Richard A. Rowland throwing the dice.

Back in '19, right after the World War, when war pictures and the influenza epidemic had well near spelled ruin for Metro Pictures—sending its weekly income from $108,000 down to $6,000—"Dick" Rowland, then Metro president, followed with a fatal fascination the weekly book advertisements of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," by Vincente Blasco Ibanez. The weekly figures in the Literary Section of the New York Times—"40th printing," "41st printing," "42nd printing," were enamoring and compelling. But, curiously typical of the world of motion pictures, Rowland curiosity did not lead him to investigate the book, to read that rapid, cloying tale of horrendous glamours for himself.

An agent, a Broadway sharpshooter, vending motion picture rights, found his way into Mr. Rowland's office in his rounds. He said he was peddling "The Four Horsemen," and Rowland took him on.

Then Jack Meador, Metro press agent, offered Rowland a bona fide Ibanez representative. So, Metro bought off the sharpshooter who could not deliver the story, and signed with Ibanez's representative for $20,000 against 10 per cent commission. The story was Metro's.

"Read 'The Four Horsemen,'" Rowland wired Metro's west coast studio.

"Do not buy 'Four Horsemen,' it's a war story and will not film," the studio replied.

"Have bought 'Horsemen,'" answered Rowland.

June Mathis was assigned to make a continuity. "You've got to make it good," Rowland told her. "Everybody in the world think's I'm crazy."

"Now about a director?" he asked.

"There's a young man out there in Hollywood who is more likely to see this than anyone else—Rex Ingram."

Rowland now was taking chances all along the line on this wild war picture.

"O. K." he ruled. "And how about Carlyle Blackwell for this Julio part?"

"There is an Argentian dancer out there, named Valentino, he is the part," Miss Mathis suggested.

"Hire anybody you like," gambled Rowland.

The picture was made, and before long so were Rowland, Metro and Valentino (*).

In the meantime, there was that ten per cent cut-in for Ibanez. Somewhere between the first and second millions in grosses, Mr. Rowland managed to make a trip over to Mentone, by the blue sea, where Ibanez, in his best Spanish style, was building an expensive home. He possibly could use some cash. Conditions looked auspicious for a deal. They were. Over a dining table at Monte Carlo, Mr. Rowland got Mr. Ibanez to agree to $190,000 for a complete sell-out of his share. The gross earnings on the picture, as of the last record, in 1925, were $4,500,000. Ten per cent of that amount is $400,000.

(*) "The Four Horsemen" opened at the old Lyric theatre on 42nd Street, off Times Square. Marquee lights gave credits by the dozens—to author, to producer, to Rex Ingram as director, to the "all-star" cast and whatnot. Three days after the first receipts were counted and newspapers raved above the "new" Valentino, the marquee was rewritten: "Rudolph Valentino, in 'The Four Horsemen.'"

First complaints against "The Four Horsemen" to reach Mr. Rowland and Metro were from exhibitors out in the country. They had booked "Four Horsemen" as a western, they said, and there was not enough ridin'.

M. P. COUNCIL RENEWS PLEDGE AGAINST FILMS

Dr. Wilbur Says Fight Against "Compulsory" Block Booking Will Be Continued

The Motion Picture Research Council, long an avowed enemy of the organized motion picture industry and its practices, emerged this week from virtual dormancy to renew its pledge of social and legislative action against films and the industry as it is constituted.

In a statement from the organization's present headquarters, at 111 Sutter Street, San Francisco, Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, national president, disclosed that four national organizations had formally endorsed a long-range program created by the Council "for development of motion pictures as a constructive force in American life." The organization named as "recruits" the National Women's Trade Union League, Editorial Council of the Religious Press, National Board of the Young Women's Christian Associations and the Catholic Central Verein.

The Motion Picture Research Council some few years ago, while under the sponsorship of the late Dr. William Harrison Short, threw its lot with Allied States Association of Exhibitors, at the beginning of Allied's campaign in Congress for the elimination of socalled "compulsory" block booking through federal legislation. The Council, however, has been silent of late on the subject.

Announced Aims

This week's statement from the Council's California headquarters said:

"The aims of the Research Council include grading of pictures according to audience suitability by the producers, exclusion of unaccompanied children from pictures too mature or too exciting for youngsters, freedom of the local community to select the films it desires and research on the motion picture in relation to youth."

"Other organizations had unofficially expressed approval of the program," Dr. Wilbur said, "but were prevented from taking official action because endorsements of other organizational programs were contrary to their policy."

"Public interest in the entertainment motion picture as a powerful educative medium is constantly growing," said Dr. Wilbur. "Parents are becoming increasingly aware of the good or harm that can be done their children by films they view. As a first step toward wholesome programs for children, a study group organized by the Motion Picture Research Council recently recommended that neighborhood theaters be asked voluntarily to show only films of 'family' audience suitability over weekends." The plan was formulated as a basis for action by local "better films" groups in all communities after it was found that 87 per cent of grade school children attend the movies over the weekend period, it was asserted.

"It has been encouraging," said the educator, "to find that we are no longer misunderstood and that people do not think we are advocating that all films be scaled down to juvenile needs. While we want regularly good average movie programs for all ages in all communities, we should provide wholesome film entertainment for children. The ideal would be to have special programs for them. If we cannot do that, we should provide bills suitable for the entire family over weekends. There are films like that."

The next program of research to be sponsored by the Research Council will deal with the formulation of standards for gauging the suitability of films for children of various age groups. The Payne Fund Studies, initiated by the organization some years ago, investigated the effect of motion pictures on children and adolescents.

The Council also has engaged in a campaign for the enactment of legislation to prohibit compulsory block booking and blind selling in the distribution of films. Dr. Wilbur said that the Research Council would continue its fight to outlaw the trade practices involved, "as they paralyzed community influence in the control of neighborhood screens."

Theatre Court Action on Zoning

Legal action against distributors threatens in Chicago and Philadelphia.

Wholesale protests by Chicago independents, representing more than 100 theatres, have been filed in writing at the home offices of the large distributing companies, against "unfair" clearance and zoning, which, it is charged, favors Balaban and Katz to the detriment of subsequents.

Joseph Rosenberg, of the Chicago law firm of Rosenberg, Stein and Rosenberg, is acting for the independents, who demand that the distributors and B. & K. reduce the present ten-week clearance accorded Loop theatres to five weeks.

The present system, as originally set up, was for single features, but with doubles now the vogue a faster method of releasing product is needed, claim the independents.

The formal protest to the distributors in New York advises that the matter be settled either by "cooperation or litigation."

Aaron Saperstein, independent leader, said that in addressing the protests direct to presidents of the companies and calling their attention to conditions it is hoped the distributors will confer with the owners.

Rosenberg, Stein and Rosenberg said legal action would be taken within the next few days unless letters are answered, and to date none have been received.

Luke Gringer, manager of the Erlen and Renel houses in Philadelphia, declared that the owners of the theatres, Erny and Nolen, are preparing to institute action against Paramount, Twentieth Century-Fox and RKO on the contention that they are being treated unfairly by the pushing back of clearance for next season to benefit a Warner Brothers house, the Lane, which is now under construction.

When the Renel was opened a year and a half ago, Mr. Gringer claimed, it was formed to play films subsequent to their run at the Ogontz, a Warner house, which is in the same zone. Now, he continued, Erny and Nolen want the Lane to follow the same procedure that the Renel was forced to adopt. The Lane, he explained, is in the same zone as the Erlen.

Mr. Gringer said he felt sure that the matter would be worked out satisfactorily but, in case no negotiations are undertaken by the film companies, everything will be in preparation for the filing of the trust action.

Largest Group of Delegates Attend Carolina Meeting

The largest group of delegates in its history, numbering about 150, attended the summer convention of the Theatre Owners of North and South Carolina which was held this week in Myrtle Beach, S. C.

Speakers included Edward Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America and Honorable W. P. Horton, lieutenant governor of North Carolina. The address of welcome was delivered by Colonel Holmes B. Spring of Myrtle Beach.

At a closed meeting on Monday, which was limited to exhibitors, opposition to the Neely bill was expressed, the delegates holding that had the measure become law it would undoubtedly have failed to achieve its purpose.

Mrs. Pauline Griffith, secretary of the organization, said that discussion of conciliation was not included on the program because the organization already endorsed that in the national program.

S. S. Stevenson, president of the organization, and Governor Olin D. Johnston of South Carolina, welcomed the delegates.

The fight waged in Seattle by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Washington to prevent leasing of the Civic Stadium for nightly midget auto races has been successful. Mayor Arthur B. Langlie has vetoed an ordinance previously passed five to four by the city council, permitting use of the field for these races.

Meanwhile other exhibitor activities included that of Allied of New Jersey which set next Wednesday at the Berkeley-Carteret Hotel in Asbury Park, for its next meeting and the Independent Theatre Owners Association which scheduled July 26th as its annual outing day at Indian Point on the Hudson River.

Group Insurance for Consolidated

Group life insurance of more than $1,500,000 covering employees of the Consolidated Film Industries, Inc., has been written by the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Company of Boston. More than 1,000 employees in the New York City headquarters and in plants at Fort Lee, N. J., Scranton, Pa., Bridgeport, Conn. and Los Angeles are insured for amounts ranging from $1,000 to $10,000.

GERMANY, ITALY, JAPAN STRENGTHEN FILM PACT BY EXCHANGE AGREEMENT

"Cultural" Pictures To Be Distributed Free by Each Country; Reich and French Renew Treaty Despite French Trade Protest

Tripartite trade agreements among Germany, Japan and Italy, in force for more than a year and including motion picture clauses among their provisions, were strengthened further this week with the consummation of a film exchange agreement between Japan and Italy and indications that a similar agreement will soon be ratified by Japan and Germany.

A motion picture trade agreement between Germany and France also was renewed for one year from its expiration date, June 15th, in spite of protests from the French press and trade leaders that the treaty in the past has worked almost solely to the benefit of the Reich with little or no advantage accruing to the industry in France.

With the return to Rome from Tokyo of Marquis Paurich, president of an Italian film combine, the Japanese foreign office announced that in cooperation with the Society for the Promotion of International Culture an exchange agreement had been concluded with Italy and that a similar one was being negotiated with Germany. The agreements were classified as an extension of the anti-Comintern pact entered into by the three powers as "a defence against the influx of communistic ideas."

The first film to be sent to Italy will be "Five Patrols," a Nikkatso production which the Educational office recently recommended as one of the outstanding Japanese films of the year.

The Foreign Office said that the agreement between Japan and Germany is making steady progress and will be concluded as soon as detailed provisions and conditions can be worked out.

A further exchange agreement has been concluded between Italy and Manchukuo, also negotiated by Marquis Paurich. Details of the agreement, believed similar to those in the other treaties, include:

The pictures to be exchanged are dupe-positives of newsreels and cultural of 500 to 1,000 feet in length.

The exchange shall be made mutually each month.

The selection of pictures shall be freely made by each country.

The exchange shall be free of charge except that transportation costs shall be paid by each country.

The Manchukuo Motion Picture Association shall distribute the pictures provided by Italy over the entire territory of Manchukuo and the north and central parts of China and the pictures sent to Italy shall be distributed all over that country and in Ethiopia.

Franco-German Pact Renewed

The Franco-German agreement originally went into effect June 1, 1936, and was renewed for one year on June 15, 1937. Under the terms of the present renewal either party has the privilege of withdrawing on December 31, 1938.

Under last year's agrement German authorities agreed to assist in the importation of French films into Germany and in their sale and distribution. Such importation had been extremely poor during the previous year. Despite these promises, however, the importation and exhibition of French product in the Reich showed no improvement during 1937, it was claimed in the trade press. Not more than a dozen French films were shown in Germany during the year and some of those considered among the best productions of the year, such as "The Grand Illusion," were banned by the German censor board.

The French press has instituted a protest on the new renewal, pointing out that whereas the spirit of the original agreement was one of reciprocity, actually the result has always been to the advantage of Germany.

The newspapers said emphatically that while France is an excellent customer for Germany's screen product the Reich buys practically nothing from France. Not only do French interests buy German equipment but the German producers make films in French versions which are distributed by their French subsidiaries, it was charged.

French technicians complain that French language films produced in Germany give work only to French players and writers but take work from French studio technicians who would gain if the films were produced in France.

Germany To Produce in Chile

Twelve full length features for world distribution and descriptive short films of national landscapes and life will be produced in Chile, S. A., by Dr. Arnold Fank, German producer, with a staff of 15 German technicians and actors under the terms of an agreement recently concluded with the government of the South American republic.

SCREEN CREDITS CUT BY NAZIS

New laws governing the production and distribution of films in Germany provide for shortening the credits on lead titles. These, under the new regime, are restricted to the names of producers, directors, chief cameraman, art directors, the players who have principal roles in the production and, if necessary, the sound recording system.

Controversy Over 'Birth' Continues

The controversy over "The Birth of a Baby" continued unabated this week with Mayor Dan B. Butler of Omaha accepting the city welfare board's approval of the film after a revote, the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae campaign in Los Angeles to prevent the film from being exhibited in neighborhood and suburban houses and the taking under advisement in a Boston court of the appeal of a newsdealer from a conviction and $500 fine for selling copies of Life containing stills from the film.

In New York, the State Board of Regents prohibited public exhibition of two films concerning illegal traffic in narcotics. "Assassin of Youth," depicting the evils of marijuana, was rejected on appeal from a previous ban by Irwin Esmond, director of the Motion Picture Division of the state. The other film, "Pace That Kills," was banned twice previously. Both were held to be "indecent and immoral."

The Omaha board approved "Birth of a Baby" on a revote, provided the birth scene is dimmed and no person under 18 years old be permitted to see the film. The first approval of the board was rejected by Mayor Butler, who banned the film.

The IFCA's action to prevent the showing of the film in neighborhood and suburban houses in Los Angeles followed frustration of its attempts to prevent its exhibition at the Paramount theatre there.

Mrs. Thomas Hearn, president of the IFCA, said that a campaign of letters and protests is under way throughout California and other coastal states urging police officials and civic organizations to take action against the film's exhibition.

The conviction in municipal court in Boston of a Cambridge newsdealer for selling copies of Life containing stills from the film was taken under advisement by Judge John P. Higgins, of Suffolk superior court.

Time, Inc., is defending the charge. Judge Higgins declined to hear a number of nationally known profession and civic leaders, holding their testimony "irrelevant." If the conviction is upheld, Time, Inc., plans an appeal to the supreme court.

Howard C. Underwood of Atlantic City has been fined $200 and costs by Vice-Chancellor W. Frank Sooy for violating an injunction against misleading advertising for use of the phrase "a birth of a baby."

Supreme Court Justice Gilbert V. Schenck of New York has reserved decision after listening to arguments on behalf of Jewel Productions, Inc., and Samuel Cummins on application for an injunction against Mr. Esmond, for recent revocation of a permit to exhibit a Government-made film, "Animated Diagrams of the Human Body."

Counsel Henry Pearlman, attorney for Jewel Productions, distributors, argued that the two-reel film was Government-made and licensed in August, 1921. He also contended that the picture, as well as "Some Wild Oats," of which it was a part, had been displayed prior to legislative creation of the old Motion Picture Commission.

Citing the statute, Charles A. Brind, Jr., director of the Law Division, Department of Education, stated that the power of the Motion Picture Director to revoke permits is clearly given. Mr. Brind further contended that "Some Wild Oats" was revoked in 1924.

The Broadway, Tampa, Fla., only independent theatre, this week was showing another sex picture, titled "Modern Motherhood." The Broadway is located in the Latin section of Tampa but the theatre is using much space in the local papers to advertise the "Motherhood" showing and in the ads "The Birth of a Baby" is played up with a line promising patrons will see "The Truth About the Much Discussed Subject."

Algiers

(United Artists - Walter Wanger)

Melodramatic Romance

Only established, tested and proved fundamentals which have entertainment and commercial value are used in "Algiers." Nevertheless, although it may seem a paradox, the manner in which these elements have been treated in acting, writing, direction and quality of sustaining production detail cause "Algiers," which is a melodramatic romance that concludes tragically, to appear fresh and new and a picture that has no parallel either on the recent or present day screen. Its story is weird. It has a hypnotic quality. Nevertheless it is logical and believable. It simply adapts the formula of having interesting people doing interesting things in a strange place.

The story is simple yet powerful. It combines a story of adventure with romance. Both are blended so that the best qualities of each are brought out. And as the picture is an adult attraction, it has an unique appeal for both men and women. As it places responsibility for telling its story in the capable hands of Charles Boyer, Hedy Lamarr and Sigrid Gurie, it embellishes the basic theme with a wealth of substantiating action in which Joseph Calleia, Gene Lockhart, Alan Hale, Stanley Fields and Johnnie Downs are the most prominent participants. These names, while not box office leaders are, however, established values suitable for marquee display. Yet many exhibitors may choose to exploit the picture from the standpoint of story content rather than that of personalities. If so, there is ample opportunity to indulge in much showmanship ingenuity.

"Pepe Le Moko," a romantic fugitive from justice, has exiled himself to Casbah, a criminals' sanctuary in Algiers, from which the only escape is death. He is loved by a native girl, "Ines," an affection returned only when she happens to do him a favor. "Pepe"s" compatriots, "Grand Pere," a fence; tough but cowardly "Carlos"; young and fiery "Pierrot" and "Regis," an informer, who in a powerfully melodramatic sequence meets the fate which all underworlds reserve for traitors, are a suavely desperate band of cut-throats. The only friend whom "Pepe" trusts is "Slimane," a provincial detective, who "Pepe" knows plans to lure him beyond the deadline one day.

Into this strange and dangerous locale comes "Gaby," an alluring Parisienne. "Pepe" sees her and immediately all the long dormant and pent-up passions within him flame into the white heat of love. Eager for the girl, yet knowing he cannot possess her, "Pepe," despite the pleas of "Ines" and the warnings of his henchman is careless of his safety. Only the ever present menace of "Slimane" and the police outside the sanctuary keep him within bounds. Finally, unable to restrain himself longer, aware that "Gaby" has been made an innocent figure in a plot to lure him beyond the deadline, he steps over in pursuit of her. His time of freedom from self-imposed imprisonment is only long enough for "Slimane" to catch up with him and pull a pistol's trigger.

While there is a definite sensationalism about "Algiers," there is no question of its moral tone. A man wanted a woman. Though she feared him, but was not afraid, the woman wanted him too. Neither could have the other. The woman went away. The man died when he realized that even though he was king in his own domain, he could not have that which he most desired. Thus it is realistic fiction.

Previewed in the Wilshire theatre, Los Angeles. It took a little time for the audience to get the swing of the story. In the opening scenes, evidences of restlessness were displayed by the spectators. But once they grasped the spirit of the thing, they watched attentively and were particularly appreciative of the sequence in which the informer was first terrorized then slain. It is likely that a similar situation will prevail among the general public. But it may be expected that "Algiers" will be talked about very much. The word of mouth advertising should become a valuable supplement to regular publicity and expoitation.—Gus McCarthy.

Always Goodbye

(20th Century-Fox)

Mother-Son Monograph

The widespread approval of Barbara Stanwyck's last previous casting as a mother sacrificing her own happiness for that of her offspring suggests that showmen notify their clients of her similar occupation in this not otherwise precisely similar appearance. Billing which achieves this end and adds the names of Herbert Marshall, Ian Hunter, Cesar Romero, Binnie Barnes and the other exploitable personalities listed below is quite plainly indicated. To completely state the case for the customers, this or any type of billing will include mention that the story is primarily for the mature and develops from a basic situation which kiddies who believe babies are found under cabbage leaves wouldn't comprehend.

"Margo Weston," played by Miss Stanwyck, is waiting at the marriage license bureau for her fiance as the picture opens. He is killed in an accident on his way to join her. Because she is in what de Maupassant liked to define as "an interesting condition," she goes down to the river to jump in but is dissuaded by "Jim Howard," a vagabond doctor, who talks her out of the suicide idea, befriends her through her dark hour, arranges for the adoption of her fatherless son by millionaire friends of his and gets her a job in a modiste's shop.

Five years later "Jim" returns from far places, finds "Margot" successful in her work and they discover they are in love. Meanwhile, the lady who adopted the baby has died and her husband, devoted to the boy, is about to be married again, this time to a girl who isn't. "Margot" exposes the girl as unworthy and the boy's foster-father proposes marriage to her instead. "Jim" and "Margot" talk it over and decide to sacrifice their romantic interests to the boy's welfare, so she promises to marry the foster-father so that she can administer motherly attentions to the boy without confessing the genuineness of the relationship.

The screen play by Kathryn Scola and Edith Skouras, from a story by Gilbert Emery and Douglas Doty, presents the material in serious, straightforward manner without excessive use of the tremolo stop. Raymond Griffith, associate producer, and Sidney Lanfield, director, gave the work handsome mounting and modern handling.

Comedy Melodrama

Showmen whose customers complain that it's a long time between "Thin Man" pictures have in this not too similar nor dissimilar offering an appropriate palliative. Herein Melvyn Douglas and Florence Rice portray a married couple who look at life about as William Powell and Myrna Loy do in the Dashiell Hammet stories and have about as much fun in the course of solving a murder mystery. They are accompanied in the enterprise by Louis Calhern, Claire Dodd, Nat Pendleton and the other listed below.

Mr. Douglas plays "Joel Sloane," a dealer in rare books who has been rather more successful as a tracer of stolen volumes, and Miss Rice plays "Garda," his wife and secretary. Another dealer in books is murdered under circumstances which suggest any one of half a dozen persons may have killed him and "Joel" sets out to solve the mystery in order to absolve the chief suspect. The complications which ensue are too involved for crisp synopsis.

As written by Marco Page and Harold Tarshis, from a book by Mr. Page, and directed by Edward Buzzell, the picture is lively, comic and melodramatic by turn, modern in every particular and consistently swift. Competent dialogue gives way periodically to forthright gun play, assault, etc., with the emphasis always swinging back to goodhumored characterization.

Meridian 7-1212

Mystery Melodrama

Twentieth Century-Fox starts its new chain of series pictures, labelled the "Roving Reporters," off with a mystery melodrama. Including all the elements common to that type of picture in which a newspaper reporter turns crime sleuth and, with the aid of a girl, solves a baffling murder case, it also introduces a few new angles which have considerable exploitation value.

Framed up circumstantial evidence, principally the use of telephone number Meridian 7-1212 which New Yorkers dial to get the correct time, and which in this case is presumed to be a fool-proof alibi, lands "Johnny Martin" in the perilous position of being accused of a murder which he did not commit. A sympathetic emotion stirring quality is injected into the situation as the girl who gives the time, "Helen," is "Johnny's" sweetheart. As the police are sure "Johnny" is their man, lackadaisical reporter "Barney" takes a hand in the proceedings to make a baffling thing of a case that looked air tight. He runs into troubles of his own, however, when bill-collector "Margie" camps on his trail. He quickly makes her his ally though and as the pair, accompanied by a comic news-photographer, "Snapper," wade through a complicated maze of clues and alibis, the police are made to appear as a pretty stupid aggregation of detectives while the picture moves to its exciting and suspenseful action climax which is followed by a romantic fade out.

There's a lot of talk in the production, yet there is also a lot of action. The comedy is pretty funny even though much of the gagging is repeated over and over again. As far as audiences guessing who the killer is, such a correct anticipation is hardly possible inasmuch as the real killer's identity is well concealed until the final few minutes.

Previewed June 24 in the Uptown theatre, Los Angeles. A second run neighborhood house, the crowd which patronizes it regularly when a preview is offered has often been used as the guinea-pigs who are given the final opportunity to exercise their abilities as crime sleuths. Experienced as they are, none of the folks sitting close to the writer in the gallery came close to guessing who the killer was. The same state of affairs is very likely to prevail when the film is out in the field. Thus while talking about other things, exhibitors have an ideal opportunity to challenge even the most astute to put their finger on the culprit. —G.M.

Passport Husband

Comedy

One of the minor contributions to the American scene during the last few years was the introduction of devices commonly known as the pin and marble games, into which a player would put a nickel to be permitted to pull a plunger, knocking into a glass enclosed playing field one or more balls. If a certain score is obtained by the gyrating pellets, a certain amount is paid the player, either in cash or trade, by the merchant in whose emporium the machine is placed.

With the campaigns against these devices being waged by anti-gambling groups in various communities in mind, Sol M. Wurtzel has produced "Passport Husband," the main point for exploitation purposes of which is the fight between two rival gangs for the control of the gambling concesssions connected with these games of "science and skill." Tangled up in the scheme of things is a South American dancer who marries an American to prevent her deportation.

Cast as the respectable American citizen is Stuart Erwin in his typical cahracterization of a dimwitted youth. Supporting him are Pauline Moore, Douglas Fowley, Joan Woodbury, Robert Lowery, Harold Huber, Edward S. Brophy, Paul McVey, Lon Chaney, Jr., and Joseph Sawyer. James Tinling directed from the screenplay of Karen De Wolf and Robert Chapin, based on the original story of Hilda Stone.

"Henry Cabot," busboy in a cafe in which "Conchita" is the featured dancer, is madly in love with her, although rivals to her affections are heads of two opposing gangs. Duped into marrying her, "Henry" finds that both gangs are anxious to make the woman a widow so that she could legally take over his inheritance of the pin and marble game factory willed him by his uncle, who was unaware that gambling was being practiced on the machines.

Danger on the Air

(Universal - Crime Club)

Crime Melodrama

"Danger on the Air," last of the four Crime Club productions for Universal release on the 1937-38 program, offers as its primary showmanship campaign incentive a solid background of the behind the scenes activities of radio broadcasting, for which the American entertainment seeking public has evinced a lively interest. Virtually all of the action takes place in a radio center, and the chief figures are persons connected with radio—from sponsors to sound engineers.

It is timely, too, in that part of the action concerns the current warfare between newspapers and radio stations over advertising, the recent dropping of radio publicity from many newspapers being brought into the situations.

A sponsor, hated by everyone, is murdered mysteriously during a broadcast, and Donald Woods, in the role of a young sound engineer, sets out to solve the mystery. The denouement comes, as in the other Crime Club pictures, in the final reel, at a general gathering of all the suspects.

Supporting Woods are Nan Grey, Jed Prouty, Berton Churchill, William Lundigan, Skeets Gallagher, Edward Van Sloan, George Meeker, Frank Milan, Lee J. Cobb, Johnny Arthur, Lind Hayes, Louise Stanley, Eloise Rawitzer and Joseph Downing. Betty Laidlaw and Robert Lively wrote the screenplay from the novel, "Death Catches Up With Mr. Kluck," which came from the pen of the widely read Xantippe.

Trailing the Jaguar

(J. H. Hoffberg)

Interesting

What chiefly distinguishes this hunting reel from the usual run of sporting category is the novel way the kill is made. Instead of the customary rifle, the huntsmen, Dan B. Brennan and Tex Stone, were armed with nothing more formidable than a trusty bow and a quiver of sharply pointed arrows. The prey was the vicious killer, the jaguar, and the reason for the quest was to win the award offered by the Texas Stockmen's Association for the capture of the dangerous and destroying animal which had been attacking and killing rangers, cattlemen and stock in the Rio Grande country. The trail leads the hunters into the northern Mexican district. The expedition's trek is fully detailed with maps, a running sequence of explanatory narrative on geographical matters and wild animal life, and an appropriate musical background. Along with some intriguing shots of old looking four-footed creatures indigenous to the district, the jaguar killer finally is bagged through the remarkable skill and daring of the bow and arrow sportsmen. Although the technical standards of camera work and editing are not always of the best grade, the novelty of the hunt and the method used in tracking down the beast should hold the attentive interest of the more sportive of the audience, particularly the masculine element. The short, which because of its length could be worked into filling out a single feature programme as an added extra attraction, was seen at the Criterion Theatre, one of Broadway's first run houses, where a midafternoon and predominantly male gathering followed the hunt with evident appreciation and enjoyment. Running time, 28 minutes.

The Story of Dr. Carver
(MGM)
Exceptional

The life story of the negro scientist, Dr. Carver, is material of an inspiring nature worthy of fuller treatment than ten minutes of running time can cover. Tracing the strange and exemplary history of the doctor from his early slave days through his first stages of research and experiment in the problems of soil cultivation up to investigation of the curative powers of peanut oil for the treatment of infantile paralysis, the miniature is just about the criterion of short subject production. The effectiveness of its moving message of sacrifice and human betterment is treated with respectful appreciation in Mr. Pete Smith's commentary. The material should be given wide screening throughout the length and breadth of the land. The miniature biography is ideal for school audiences and better film groups.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Happy Scouts
Passable

Close on the trail blazed by Donald Duck's gay troop of "Good Scouts" come Scoutmaster Oswald, the Rabbit, and a corps of camping ducks. Without the enhancing value of color and the amusing personality of the inimitable Donald, Oswald's hiking expedition is passably good fun on its own activities. The usual camp trials of opening a can of beans and building a fire are humorously caricatured. The finale of the black duckling scout with an alligator is a bit far fetched but still good for a laugh or two. The kids will find the whole affair much to their liking.—Running time, seven minutes.

International Rhythm
(RKO Radio)
Variety

Presenting an array of talent from such antipodal points as a Russian gypsy orchestra and an Hawaiian string ensemble, the bill in addition offers an exotic Slavic singer and a petite Oriental miss who gives a whirling exhibition of an Occidental buck and wing dance number. The highlight is the expert harmonizing of a Negro choral group. Ray Smeck and his Aloha Islanders, Ada Brown and the Cecil Mack Choir, Princess Chiyo, Mara and Mogiloff's Balalaika Orchestra are the entertainers.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Cartoon

This animated cartoon concerns itself with the adventures of mice in the hours of the night when man is supposed to sleep. Six mice go window shopping and as suspected linger longest at the delicatessen window and finally enter the store to feast and make merry. The six mice have multiplied a hundred fold by this time and when dawn comes a-creeping over the rooftops the army of mice hurry helter-skelter towards the manholes and home with an assortment of food, clothing and anything else they manage to acquire. Running time, 7½ minutes.

The Cheese Nappers
Amusing

An amusing cartoon takeoff on crime activities and police methods of grilling suspects is pictured in this latest drawing from the Oswald group. Public Rat Number 1 accompanied by the innocent Baby Face Rat raid a kitchen and when the dishes come to life, the elder rodent skips the scene and leaves his younger companion to take the "rap." Follows a third degree scene and the escape of the unfortunate animal. Finally, the two rats meet face to face and through the instructive means of a good beating, the real criminal is apprehended and justice is served. A little too mature for the youngsters, the fable will appeal chiefly to the adults in the audience and the more worldly wise of the adolescent group.—Running time, seven minutes.

Hide and Shriek
(MGM)
Spooky, Our Gang

In playing detective, Alfalfa and his pals track two suspected candy chiselers and find themselves in an amusement park "haunted house." The rest of the Our Gang business can be readily imagined. The juveniles make believe of sleuthing is amusingly and cleverly portrayed. The sequences with the kids involved with the strange setup of the "haunted house" is particularly hilarious. The younger element in the audience will relish the subject with complete childish enjoyment and the adults will be patronizingly amused.—Running time, 11 minutes.

Stranger Than Fiction, No. 52
(Universal)
Oddity

Comprising a well balanced collection of novel items, this newest issue is generally in keeping with the usual high standard of entertainment and appeal. Showing the latest in inventions and in piano prodigies, the material offers an introduction to a sister team of Philadelphia butchers together with a demonstration by a trick canine from Atlanta, Ga. For the June newlyweds planning to build a love nest, an inspection of two architectural oddities, a circular house and a home built from newspaper, should be of interest.—Running time, nine minutes.

Voyage to Cebu
(De La Varre - Devlin)
Travelogue

In this travelogue subject Andre de LaVarre presents the interesting city of Cebu in the Philippines, an archipelago of some 7,000 islands stretching for nearly 1,000 miles between the Pacific Ocean and the China Sea. It was at Cebu that Magellan was killed while attempting to pacify natives. A shipping center Cebu was under Spanish rule until the Spanish-American war in 1898. Now a thriving American-Filipino city as depicted by the camera Cebu still has the same appearance as it had under the Spanish in the houses, churches and buildings that make up the city. Running time, 9 minutes.

You Leave Me Breathless
(Paramount)
Screen Song

When a first rate orchestra plays second fiddle to a running line of goofy gags and cartoon drawings, that is news. Not that Jimmy Dorsey and his tunesmiths do not give the title song of this subject a smoothly set rendition, but Max Fleischer and his penmen have embroidered the reel with clever and crazy illustrations that may draw from the audience a more pronounced response in laughs than the bouncing ball will stir up in community singing. The jokes and the sketches visualize what a television set of 1945 will portray, and with the problem of televised entertainment fresh before the public through air and press notice, this silly spoofing of the scientific project should prove to be lots of fun and frivolity for audiences.—Running time, eight minutes.

Stars in Stripes
Mentone Musical

Ed East and Ralph Dumke, known to radio listeners as the "Sisters of the Skillet," are jailed for playing swing music. While behind the bars the players are entertained by a visiting variety show, with a quartet of girl roller skaters, a colored "blues" singer, a harmonica group and a dance team. The general quality of the talent presented is enough to make one believe the offenders were sentenced to capital punishment rather than penal servitude. The subject may hold some interest with audiences which like to see air personalities become visual realities. Running time, 17½ minutes.

Czechoslovakia on Parade
Timely

Concerned with the tiny country considered the tinderbox of the European political situation, this FitzPatrick travel excursion carries more than its customary "pretty picture" entertainment in view of the pointed timeliness of the material presented. Instead of the military review, which continental dictionaries believe to be exclusively synonymous with the word "parade," the show given by the people of this democratic land is, as is noted in the spoken commentary, one in which musical instruments and not martial armament are carried. Running time, nine minutes.

New York Quota Bill Languishing

The proposal introduced in the New York City Council early this spring designed to require producers whose pictures are to be shown within the city to make 10 per cent of their total product in New York will be permitted to die in committee, it was learned this week.

The measure was introduced by Councilman Hugh Quinn of Queens and had the backing of eastern studio unions. It proposed the licensing by the city of producers and distributors whose pictures were to be shown in city theatres. In order to obtain the license, the producers and distributors would be required to certify that 10 per cent of their product had been or would be produced within the city limits.

Court Dismisses Two Warner Actions

Two stockholders' actions against Warner Brothers, instituted in 1935, were dismissed by Peter Schmuck, New York Supreme Court justice, Tuesday on the ground that the plaintiffs had failed to prosecute.

The first suit, brought by Jacob Weintraub, as a stockholder, named as defendant besides the company and its directors, Renraw, Inc., and the second brought by Adolph Greenberg, another stockholder, included McClure, Jones and Company, and Goldman, Sachs and Company, as defendants, in addition to those named in the first suit.

Both actions charged the defendants with "waste and mismanagement" in conducting the affairs of the company.

Varied Settings

The variegated nature of the settings for the new Will Hay comedy, "Hey, Hey, U. S. A.!" in which the screen comedian is assisted by the maestro of the "slow-burn" Edgar Kennedy, can be gleaned from the fact that they include an ocean liner in dock, a Chicago office, a furnace room in a disused distillery, sections of a chimney, a barber's shop, and beer parlors and basement houses, these have been set up in the Gainsborough Studios, Islington, by art director Vetchinsky.

Like most of the Will Hay comedies "Hey, Hey, U. S. A.!" is being made under an approximate budget of £40,000.

In addition to "Rob Roy," "A Girl Must Live" and "The Blue Lagoon," already announced, Gainsborough have also scheduled several costly productions which will take their activities well into 1939. Foremost of these will be "Cavalcade of the English Music Hall," canvass of English vaudeville history, which although it will have as a personal pivot a well-known star, will trace the birth of variety up to the present time with the aid of past and present luminaries of the music-hall stage. The story will be based upon one submitted by Walter Hackett.

"Little Savage" Scheduled

Also scheduled for production is the Captain Marriott story, "Little Savage," in which the Scottish comedian, Will Fyffe, will have the leading role.

The story traces the adventures of an old man shipwrecked on a desert island with a young boy, and goes on to show how the embittered veteran bullies the lad into an unhappy life, until, stricken blind, he is compelled to rely upon the boy's kindness for his salvation.

The script is in the hands of Rodney Ackland, who was responsible with Hans Wilhelm for the story and screenplay of "Bank Holiday."

The next Will Hay opus due for production at Gainsborough will be "Old Bones of the River," in which Will Hay will have the role of "Lieutenant Bones," an Edgar Wallace West African hero. Moore Marriott and Graham Moffatt, comedy teamsters most recently seen in "Convict 99," will again appear with Will Hal in the production, and will be directed by Marcel Varnel.

Nine Completed

Of a programme of twenty-five films scheduled during the twelve months period ending Januarl, 1939, Associated British Pictures have already completed nine. The figure is that achieved by mid-June.

Among those completed are "The Housemaster," "Just Like a Woman," "Oh Boy," "Star of the Circus," "The Terror," "Jane Steps Out," "Black Limelight," "Queer Cargo" and "Yellow Sands."

On the verge of completion are "Hold My Hand" and "Yes, Madam," two musical comedies. In "Hold My Hand" Stanley Lupino, British musical comedy star, has the lead, and in "Yes, Madam" Bobby Howes is the pivot of the fun.

Scheduled to start production immediately is the screen version of "Marigold," Scottish period romance, in which Sophie Stewart, stage actress recently recruited to the screen and who played the part for nearly 1,000 performances on the stage, is to play the title role.

Corinne Luchaire, French film star who is playing her first English role in London Films' "Prison Without Bars," now in production under the direction of Maxwell Wray.

Once again into the cast of a British film goes another Queen Victoria who, in the person of Pamela Stanley, leading actress of the Houseman play, "Victoria Regina," plays a similar character in the new film. Patrick Barr, Phyllis Dare, Jean Clyde and Clifford Evans are also in the cast. A unit has already been sent to Scotland for location shots in and around Edinburgh.

Theatrical Story

Due to take the floor immediately, or at least soon after "Marigold," is "Premiere," a story of theatrical life.

Others on the Associated British roster include a screen version of Arnold Bennett's "The Card," a Russian opus "Black Eyes," two A. E. W. Mason stories, "At the Villa Rose" and "The House of the Arrow," another "Bulldog Drummond" drama, "First Episode," the story of a young girl's escapade, and a nautical story entitled "Luck of the Navy."

Shorts Started

A series of twelve shorts is to bring the Riverside Studios, Hammersmith, back into an activity they have not experienced for many months. These are to be produced by Scotia Films and will be directed by Leslie Hiscott, producer, director and chief of the studios.

First of these is to be a farce with an A. R. P. (Air Raid Precautions) background and in which Jerry Verno will be principal comedian.

"Mikado" Set

Casting has now been completed for "The Mikado," the first G. & S. film produced by Geoffrey Toye, directed by Victor Schertzinger, and for relase by General Film Distributors.

Most of those selected to appear in the film, though known on the films, are already established on the operatic stage. The role of the Mikado has been handed to John Barclay, and that of Katisha to Constance Willis, known at Covent Garden, Sadlers Wells and Glyndebourne. The role of Yum-Yum has fallen to the lot of Jean Colin, musical and film star, and Kenny Baker has been chosen for the role of Nanki-Poo.

Itemized

Lucan and McShane, comedy vaudeville team who recently appeared in "Old Mother Riley," have revived their screen partnership and are appearing in another roduction, "Old Mother Riley in Paris," which is being directed by Oswald Mitchell at Walton-on-Thames for release by Butcher's Film Service.

Montague Marks, for some time associated with London Film Productions and Denham Laboratories, but now resigned, has formed his own production company, Albion Film Corporation, and plans production of a number of ambitious British features.

Six of the earlier Herbert Wilcox productions, "Limelight," "The Three Maxims," "London Melody," "This'll Make You Whistle," "Fame" and "Millions," are being re-issued to English exhibitors. Previously handled by General Film Distributors, they will be out now under the auspices of Butcher's Film Service.

Back from Khartum, where he has been conducting research for "Four Feathers," is Alec Waugh—London Film personality. A unit will leave England shortly to start work on what Korda claims will be one of the most ambitious films yet undertaken at Denham.

Edna Best has started work at Denham as the superintendent in the reformatory in "Prison Without Bars," a London Film Production.

John Paddy Carstairs, leader of the younger school of English directors, has taken the floor with a new picture, "If You Had a Million," which he is directing for British National, whose "Lassie From Lancashire" he recently concluded. Production is at the Welwyn Studios and the cast will include Derrick de Marney and Kay Walsh.

City Adopts Engineering Book

The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences Research Council's new book, "Motion Picture Sound Engineering," has been adopted by the Los Angeles City Board of Education as an official text book for use in the city high schools and approved for purchase by the city and branch libraries.

EXHIBITOR AND RENTER NEGOTIATIONS HAVE ATMOSPHERE OF ARMED TRUCE

Determination to Press Plan for Rental Concessions Seen Beneath "Friendly" Discussions of Problem in Britain

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Though the outer trappings may be essentially pacific, though the arms and the armour be covered in white flags and ornamented with doves of peace, he who looks below the surface, can well see that the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association, marching forth to meet the Kinematograph Renters' Society on the gentle but crucial matter of the "small exhibitor," have not yet laid aside the accoutrements of war, so determinedly and so effectively arrayed about their persons on the vexed matter of grading.

The phraseology is that of peace, the gestures those of an enemy turned friend but whatever be the superficialities and formalities of the discussions, there remains, for those who can probe beneath the surface of things, the flavor of gunpowder and the glint of cold steel.

The CEA, in spite of the refusal of the KRS to consider it as a collective policy, have been very loath to let the question of "small exhibitor terms" drop merely because of renter disinterest. They will not, in fact, take "no" as an answer. Flushed with victory they feel their power and are unwilling not to use it.

The KRS as already forecast in MOTION PICTURE HERALD have, sending the grading boomerang ringing back into the CEA ranks, said that they cannot make a collective policy of what is, in their opinion, a matter of individual trading between renter and exhibitor, though they have stated that individual renters would be quite ready to consider the case of individual exhibitors.

No small blow this, a case of being hoist effectively with their own petard, the CEA, loath to give in, to show even any small sign of embarrassment, have tactically taken the KRS at their word. They have accepted as sincere their promise that individual rentesr would treat with individual exhibitors on the lines suggested by the CEA and, to some extent, loaded the dice in their own favor by offering, as aid to the KRS data and statistics on exhibitor trade, secured in a survey instituted—under guard of the strictest secrecy (safeguard against victimization)—by Panton Street.

Carrying the controversy back into the renter ranks they challenge the boomerang of collective policy by contending that there is a profound difference between a collective policy instituted without consultation of those most directly affected by the policy, and a collective policy agreed upon by both sides of the bargain. It may not be a challenge. It is very definitely a controversial wriggle.

So we have reached a stage of either covert war, or grudging peace. Either the recent armistice between KRS and CEA—result of the merciless and embittered war on grading—is prelude to a permanent peace, or it is but a tactical move to permit the solidification of the lines of defence and the rearmament of the exhibitors' front line.

In the former regard one must take toll of the General Council's appeal to its CEA members for tolerance, for a ratification and wholehearted support of their policy of continued joint talks. Realizing that embarrassment is the worst possible enemy to conciliation, the General Council in the report they presented to their members at Folkestone pleaded for tolerance, asked that full approval be accorded them for their conciliatory and friendly attitude to the KRS in the current talks, argued that the way of peace was not only fair but fruitful.

Against this might be recorded that the propaganda leaflet which went to CEA members on the very eve of the annual conference bore a startling material and ideological resemblance to those which had gone forth to arm the troops in battle against the KRS during the grading dispute. It may be mere typographical coincidence, but the immediate impression created among the rank and file was that the battle against KRS was still on. . . . And that, despite the pacific gesticulations and pronunciamentoes of the leadership, is what most people have concluded.

BRITISH RECIPROCAL TREATY DELAYED

Reports that a reciprocal trade treaty between the United States and Great Britain, of which a motion picture arrangement would be a definite part, will be indefinitely delayed, were strengthened by a statement made by Joseph P. Kennedy, ambassador to the Court of St. James's, that "the present is a difficult time to reach any agreement because trade is at a low ebb."

Interviewed in Boston where he attended the graduation of his son from Harvard, Mr. Kennedy said that, while trade negotiations thus far had been conducted entirely in Washington and he had had no share in them, he was certain "that no agreement will be reached which will be a diplomatic success that will violate the dictates of common sense."

Delegates from England are working continuously with representatives of the State Department in Washington.

Films Council Inaugurated

Government control of British film legislation, and to some extent, the development and progress of its film industry, took a step forward this week when the recently formed Films Council, provided for in the new British film pact and the personnel of which was announced by Mr. Oliver Stanley on June 14th, held its initial meeting.

The agenda for the inaugural meeting was not announced beforehand and the initial session was almost certain to be formal rather than practical. There are, none the less, plenty of problems which are likely to be brought to the early notice of the Council, the terms of whose constitution, and the powers of which, are sufficiently wide to permit the consideration of numerous questions of catholic trade significance.

The terms of the Act provide for the new Council to keep under review the progress of the industry with particular reference to production; to advise the Board upon any matters of which its views is sought; and to report upon its annual proceedings.

There are scarcely any limits which will debar branches or members of the industry from offering their views and pleas to the Council, though it is inevitable that further weight will be lent to the pleas and suggestions if made through official trade organizations such as the KRS, CEA, FBI and the Labour groups.

The formation of the Films Council, a process to which no inconsiderable amount of skill has been lent, has so far met with little objection or criticism from the industry here. It is generally conceded that the Council is a fair compromise on an extremely difficult problem. Sir Frederick Whyte, K.C.S.I., who will have the difficult task of presiding over the Council's proceedings, is an experienced legislator and was chairman of the first advisory committee.

The non-trade members, who need not necessarily be assumed to be anti-trade, are Mr. H. C. Bischoff; Sir Walter Citrine, K.B.E., Secretary of the Trades Union Congress—who can be depended upon to safeguard labor interests; Sir Philip Guedalla, historian and author and a member of the Advisory Committee set up under the 1927 Act. Mr. W. E. Jones, financial expert and member of the Midland Bank Limited; Professor Arnold Plant, economist and academician; Miss F. Horsbrugh, M.B.I., M.P.; Mr. W. Leonard, M.P.; The Hon. E. Plumer, woman magistrate and for long past a student of the film industry and its relation to civics; Mr. F. Wilkinson, a schoolmaster and Sir Hugh Seely, Bart. M.P.

On the trade side, production is represented by two Britishers, Captain Richard Norton, managing director of Pinewood Studios—most intensive centre of British production currently—and Mr. John Grierson, radical intellectual and advocate of the documentary film.

Distributors include two Britishers, Mr. D. E. Griffiths, President of the KRS and chief of the American distributing company, First National, and Mr. F. W. Baker, smaller independent renter and veteran of British distribution.

Exhibitors who hold a majority of seats on the Council include Mr. A. W. Jarratt, representing the vast G-B circuit; Mr. A. H. King, C.B.E., voicing the views of Scotland; Mr. Theodore Fligelstone, independent, with houses in the London district and Mr. C. P. Metcalfe, ex-President and mouthpiece of the provincial picture house operator.

Labour interests are officially represented by Mr. G. Elwin, Jr., Secretary of the Association of Cine Technicians, and Captain A. M. Crickett.

On the secretarial side Mr. W. H. Patterson, of the Board of Trade—one of the men behind the scenes of the recent Quota Act—and Mr. L. T. Moorby, will act as secretary and assistant secretary respectively.

Exports Down, Imports Up

Exports of exposed positive film for May this year were 1,346,405 feet compared with 1,967,015 feet (1937) and 1,666,114 feet (1936). Values were £8,857 ($44,285) in 1938, £10,426 ($52,130) in 1937, £8,474 ($42,370) in 1936.

Re-exports of cinematograph films during May showed an increase at 689,580 feet compared with 473,278 feet in 1937. Values of re-exports of films for May stand at:—£5,522 ($27,610) in 1938. £4,176 ($20,880) in 1937. Five months' figures also register an increase at 3,777,380 in 1938 compared with 2,596,930 feet in 1937. Values were for re-exported film in the first five months:—£26,655 ($133,275) in 1938, £18,618 ($93,090) in 1937.

During May the cinematograph trade imported 5,741,409 feet of blank film and 1,911,222 feet of exposed films. This compares with 4,366,925 feet and 1,802,264 feet for May, 1937 and 5,395,880 and 2,533,367 feet for 1936. Values of imports of films for May were:—(Blank) £20,454 ($102,270) in 1938, £$18,243 ($91,215) in 1937; £24,487 ($122,435) in 1936; (exposed) £16,037 ($80,185) in 1938, £11,724 ($58,620) in 1937, £20,995 ($104,975) in 1936.

For the five months ended May 31, 1938 a total of 31,708,893 feet of blank film and 8,644,454 feet of exposed film were imported. For the corresponding period in 1937 the figures were respectively 24,415,122 feet and 8,861,225 feet. For the five months ended May 31, values were:—(Blank) £95,103 ($475,515) in 1938, £95,780 ($478,900) in 1937, £98,990 ($494,950) in 1936; (exposed) £67,820 ($339,100) in 1938, £71,183 ($355,915) in 1937, £80,077 ($400,385) in 1936.

Other description of films imported were valued at:—£56,342 ($281,710) in 1938, £67,382 ($336,910) in 1937, £74,180 ($370,900) in 1936.

Five months totals were:—£317,982 ($1,589,910) in 1938, £283,339 ($1,416,695) in 1937, £269,302 ($1,346,510) in 1936.

Singles in Philippines Aid Holdovers, Says Core

Elimination of the double bill in all first-run situations in the Philippine Islands with a consequent opportunity for holdovers of as much as 60 weeks has resulted from the novel way films are sold in Manila, Charles H. Core, United Artists manager in the Philippine Islands, said this week in Hollywood.

"We sell a program of 9,500 feet," he said. "If a feature picture runs that length or more it receives all the revenue from that spot. If it is a short feature and we have to add short subjects to it to make up the required footage, the short subjects cut in for their share of the income."

Mr. Core said that the longest run in the islands' history was that of "The Prisoner of Zenda," 60 weeks in Manila as a single feature.

Shearer, Gable to Star in "Wind" for MGM Release

Ending what had grown to be a country-wide guessing game, Norma Shearer this week was signed by Selznick International for the part of Scarlett O'Hara in the filming of the Margaret Mitchell novel "Gone with the Wind," and Clark Gable was engaged for the role of Rhett Butler. The picture will be released by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer as part of the deal under which the stars are loaned to the Selznick organization.

Zukor and Kent List Releases For the Summer

Last week's charges by Harry M. Warner that unnamed Hollywood producers are withholding important films until after the summer, causing a "product famine" for Grade-A entertainment echoed this week in additional denials by major companies.

Reversing an earlier decision to let the accusation of "hoarding" go unanswered, Adolph Zukor, Paramount production chief, issued the following statement: "Our release schedule speaks for itself. As theatre operators with interests surpassing those of all other producer-circuit operators combined, it behooves us to continue to provide exhibitors and public alike with top entertainment. There has not been, and will not be any withholding of fine screen entertainment during the summer."

Mr. Zukor's statement was amplified with mention of "Spawn of the North," "Professor Beware," "Give Me a Sailor" and "Tropic Holiday," as typical releases set by the company for release during the warm months.

Sidney R. Kent, president of Twentieth Century-Fox Film, likewise cited his company's releases: "Josette," "Three Blind Mice," "Always Goodbye," "I'll Give a Million" and "Little Miss Broadway," to follow five released in May.

With but a single exception, he added, "not one of these cost less than $600,000," adding: "Every one of them had been promised." He said that the company is delivering "two or more A pictures every month during June, July and August."

Meanwhile, the following statement was issued by Warner Brothers:

"The vigorously expressed opposition of H. M. Warner, president of Warner Brothers Pictures, to the 'hoarding' of important completed productions is reflected in an announcement from the Warner studios in California that the biggest box office attractions already completed will be released as quickly as they can be edited and cut, and that five of the outstanding films announced for the coming year's product will go before the cameras and microphones almost immediately, and months ahead of their previously scheduled shooting dates.

"The five pictures which are now being rushed into production are 'Angels With Dirty Faces,' 'Brother Rat,' 'Dodge City,' 'Wings of the Navy,' and 'Heart of the North,' to be filmed in color."

In a second statement, the Warner home office added:

"Following recent announcement by Harry M. Warner that his company plans to augment its summer releasing schedule to help kill the theatre recession, plans are being made by the Burbank studio to immediately preview at least six completed productions. In addition to 'The Amazing Dr. Clitterhouse,' Warners will preview the following films during the next three weeks: 'Boy Meets Girl,' 'Garden of the Moon,' 'Women Courageous,' 'Valley of the Giants,' 'Racket Busters,' and 'Four's a Crowd'."

New Proposal to Reorganize GN Reported Ready

A proposal by which an eastern financial group would take control of Grand National and reorganize it with its present structure as a base was announced this week by Herman B. Freedman, representing the group, in New York. Mr. Freedman said the plan would be submitted to federal court in Los Angeles in the near future. Edward Alperson, co-trustee with Loyd Wright, and president of the company, pointed out, however, that the approval of the trustees was necessary before the plan could be submitted to the court. He said the proposal had been discussed with Mr. Freedman but that no formal action had been requested.

The group is making available $600,000 in cash for the reorganization, and $1,000,000 will be forthcoming later if needed, Mr. Freedman said. What makes the company attractive to the investors is that it has an exchange system in operation and that it was able to obtain profitable grosses for some pictures, he said. Mr. Freedman said he spent eight weeks investigating Grand National's books and possibilities.

The difficulty of obtaining a two-thirds assent from the company's 5,800 stockholders, who are spread throughout the country, is seen by Mr. Freedman as the only major hurdle in his plan to reorganize the company.

The same group has organized Film Corporation of America to produce 26 low-budget films for Grand National. Officers of the company are Frank J. Hale, president of the National Grain Yeast Company; George Brown, described by Mr. Freedman as a wealthy and socially prominent New Yorker, and Mr. Freedman.

Mr. Freedman said the court has approved the production program, which calls for 24 westerns at a cost of $17,500 each and two outdoor films to cost a maximum of $75,000 each. Options have been taken on playing talent, and cameras are scheduled to start August 15th, either at the Grand National studio or another if it can be obtained at a lower rate, he said.

E. W. Hammons, president of Educational, who owns the Grand National studio, will not figure in the reorganization except that an arrangement may be worked out for release of Educational short subjects, Mr. Freedman said. Mr. Hammons is also working on a plan with Nat Levine and others. Phil Goldstone is also interested in the company's reorganization.

Mr. Freedman and Mr. Hale left New York for Los Angeles this week to ask the court for ratification of the plan.

Ann Rosenthal, Grand National home office attorney, who will sever her connection with the company on Friday, will engage in private practice and will continue to handle Grand National's legal affairs on an independent basis, in addition to representing independent producers and talent in the east on a general management basis. Miss Rosenthal will leave for the coast Friday by car with Dorothy Hechtlinger, assistant to Darryl F. Zanuck, who has been in New York on a vacation.

Leo McCarey has formed Leo McCarey Productions, Inc., to produce for RKO release, with RKO financing production. His first picture will be "Love Affair," starring Irene Dunne, in a story by Mr. McCarey and Dore Schary. Under the terms of the deal Mr. McCarey will produce many of RKO's pictures and direct others, as well as guiding his own product.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

I'LL TAKE ROMANCE: Grace Moore, Melvyn Douglas—Just like all the Grace Moore's. She never was box office and as for me I'll never play another one of her pictures. Her type of pictures just don't click here. Running time, 85 minutes. Played May 7.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town patronage.

IT'S ALL YOURS: Francis Lederer, Madeleine Carroll—This was doubled with "Saleslady," Monogram, and of the two, "Saleslady" more than held its own.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

LITTLE MISS ROUGHNECK: Edith Fellows, Leo Carillo—Another one of those low budget pictures for which Columbia has become quite famous this last season. How they expect us to stay in business playing this kind of picture on a single bill is beyond me. Running time, 64 minutes. Played June 18-19.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town patronage.

LONE WOLF IN PARIS: Francis Lederer, Frances Drake—A good picture that sunk to a very low box office level. Consequently, a liability with us. Played June 7.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MAKING THE HEADLINES: Jack Holt, Beverly Roberts—Okay but not especially suitable for Jack Holt. Played May 10.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

OVERLAND EXPRESS, THE: Buck Jones—Jones has always proven box office value to us. We wonder how many of the stars will last as long and be as consistent. Thanks, Buck.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

PENITENTIARY: Walter Connolly, Jean Parker—This had all the makings of a good show. The acting of Connelly was outstanding and, in my opinion, the best he has ever done but it did not do so well at the box office. Running time, 80 minutes. Played June 4-5—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town patronage.

THERE'S ALWAYS A WOMAN: Joan Blondell, Melvyn Douglas—If you bought this one right you stand to make some money on it, but if not it is purely a gamble. It has everything a picture should have but the title fails to click and thereby hangs the tale. Running time, 81 minutes. Played June 12-13.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

TRAPPED BY G-MEN: Jack Holt—A very fine action picture that did us very nice business on a dual bill. Columbia have the happy faculty of delivering consistent program pictures.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

WHEN G-MEN STEP IN: Don Terry, Jacqueline Wells—Usual Columbia fare. Okay in its class. Played May 31.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

First National

ADVENTUROUS BLONDE, THE: Glenda Farrell, Barton MacLane—These Torchy Blane series are really going places. Keep them as good as they are now and make them better and what a series they will turn out to be. Running time, 61 minutes. Played June 8-9—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

ALCATRAZ ISLAND: John Litel, Ann Sheridan—A good filler for a double bill. Has plenty of action. Running time, 64 minutes. Played June 3-4.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

GOLD IS WHERE YOU FIND IT: George Brent, Olivia de Havilland, Claude Rains, Margaret Lindsay, Tim Holt—A good story in good color and well played by a fine cast. Certainly one ought not to have to complain of a setup such as that and yet we regret to advise business was not equal to expectation. Tim Holt is very promising. Played May 6-7.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacock, N. H. General patronage.

SHE LOVED A FIREMAN: Dick Foran, Ann Sheridan—This is a swell little comedy action picture. It will fit in nicely on a single bill if built up right with Warners good short features or can be used as a filler for a double feature. Running time, 57 minutes. Played June 1-2.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

SLIGHT CASE OF MURDER, A: Edward G. Robinson, Jane Bryan, Allen Jenkins, Ruth Donnelly—Delightful, clever entertainment every minute. Perhaps a little too clever for some who like the more obvious type of humor. Sorry to say we can never do any business with a Robinson picture. He is very unpopular here, splendid actor that he is. This picture was no exception. Recording not very good. Running time, 85 minutes. Played June 9-11.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town, rural and C. C. C. patronage.

SLIGHT CASE OF MURDER, A: Edward G. Robinson, Jane Bryan, Allen Jenkins, Ruth Donnelly—Gang life burlesque that fell flat in this town. Too much offhand killing and too much talk of beer, even if "all in fun." Bet Robinson was ashamed of this one. Recording on our print was not so good.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

GB Pictures

GIRL WAS YOUNG, THE: Nova Pilbeam, Derrick de Marney—I don't like to say this because I never saw an unsatisfactory Hitchcock picture, but I have to report that I spent a lot of time edging around in the shadows of the great oaks on our terrace here while people dribbled out, nor did I light any cigarets to disclose my position. Not so much because of my own opinion of the film, but because of the obvious disapproval on the faces of a great percentage of the patrons, was I loathe to face the half a house that turned out to see another "Thirty-Nine Steps." Personally, I think "The Girl Was Young" a neat, clean cut, unpretentious little film. Its main assets: charming little Nova Pilbeam, excellent photography and sound effects and Hitchcock's eye for detail. But, I'm afraid we will have to have a Robert Donat or so and a stronger story next time. Played June 12-13.—C. T. Cooney, Jr., Waldo Theatre Corporation, Waldoboro, Maine. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

FIREFLY, THE: Jeanette MacDonald, Allan Jones, Warren William—These operatic pictures always fail to make film rental and no good for small town. Personally, I enjoyed it.—Ben Brinck, West Point Theatre, West Point, Iowa. General patronage.

FIRST HUNDRED YEARS, THE: Robert Montgomery, Virginia Bruce—Very nice domestic comedy drama which pleased all who saw it, but not many saw it. Running time, 75 minutes. Played June 12-13.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

FLORAL JAPAN: FitzPatrick Travel Talk—Very fine, as much as we are against Japan.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

FRAMING YOUTH: Our Gang—Our Gang has entertainment of its own.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

GIRL OF THE GOLDEN WEST, THE: Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy, Walter Pidgeon—First class production. Played May 15-16.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD
Rockefeller Center, New York

JUDGE HARDY'S CHILDREN: Lewis Stone, Mickey Rooney, Cecilia Parker—Excellent. This series is very worthwhile, although we're not busting any precedents at the B. O. Mickey Rooney is a star of great naturalness. Folks like him. Played May 20-21.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MERRILY WE LIVE: Constance Bennett, Brian Aherne, Billie Burke, Patsy Kelly—This certainly didn't warrant so high an allocation. Box office receipts failed to see the value of this one. A good picture that couldn't better business in spite of anything. Played May 22-23.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

NAVY, BLUE AND GOLD: Robert Young, James Stewart, Lionel Barrymore, Florence Rice—Just made film rental. A very fine picture, but we can't eat on these.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

OF HUMAN HEARTS: Walter Huston, James Stewart, Beulah Bondi—This is dramatic tops. A welcome change from all the frothy frivolity of recent picture plays. Our dates included Mother's Day and for once we had a timely subject. We think the author's title would have been more suitable. Played May 8-9.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacock, N. H. General patronage.

SWISS MISS: Laurel and Hardy, Della Lind, Walter Woolf King—A good "B" class picture that was not too weak. Could stand one day by itself or two or three as a co-feature on a double feature program. My advice to the producers is to keep the length of the Laurel and Hardy pictures 30 to 45 minutes so that their actions will not get too tiresome. Running time, 73 minutes. Played June 14.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

THOROUGHBREDS DON'T CRY: Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland, Ronald Sinclair, Sophie Tucker—An honest to goodness small town picture. 100% satisfaction to the patrons and likewise at box office. Metro billboard advertising certainly brings them in and is a big aid to exhibitors. Thanks; keep up this good publicity.—Ben Brinck, West Point Theatre, West Point, Iowa. General patronage.

THREE COMRADES: Robert Taylor, Robert Young, Franchot Tone, Margaret Sullavan—Excellent. By all means book this one or your opposition will. This picture will undoubtedly win the award for the best picture of the month. Personally, I rate it as one of the best pictures of the year. Written by the author of "All Quiet on the Western Front" (Erich Remarque), it deals with the post-war days in Europe. However, the main plot to the story is based on the fateful love of Robert Taylor and Margaret Sullavan. After seeing this picture, a person is liable to feel the same sensation that one feels after seeing a well done play, and consequently have the urge to stand up in the aisle and applaud. This picture should do splendid business anywhere and every exhibitor should make his bookings on this picture at once. This means real box office and big money. Played June 17-18.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

YANK AT OXFORD, A: Robert Taylor, Lionel Barrymore, Maureen O'Sullivan—Metro certainly sold Robert Taylor down the river in this one. We dust bowl dwellers do not appreciate English conversation and that is all there is to this one. Almost impossible to understand, not a very good story and does not end—it just stops. The only really good things in this are Lionel Barrymore's excellent acting and the chimes. These are wonderful. A very disappointing production and advertised as a special. Running time, 105 minutes. Played June 17-19.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

YANK AT OXFORD, A: Robert Taylor, Maureen O'Sullivan, Lionel Barrymore—Just as good as we anticipated. Not too much business though, as it's going to take some time to get the Taylor fans back. Running time, 103 minutes. Played June 5-6.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

Monogram

BOY OF THE STREETS: Jackie Cooper, Maureen O'Connor—Good story that will please. Has drawing power at box office.—Ben Brinck, West Point Theatre, West Point, Iowa. General patronage.

SALESLADY: Anne Nagel, Weldon Heyburn—This

was better than I had expected. A nice little story of the rich girl marrying the poor boy and finally working out their problems to complete understanding. This was more enjoyable than many socalled specials. This was doubled with "It's All Yours." Business on this program was naturally off, with playdates May 31-June 1 directly after the Decoration day holiday.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

TELEPHONE OPERATOR: Judith Allen, Grant Withers—Good picture for Bargain Night and that's when I played it. OK program.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

THIRTEENTH GUEST (Reissue): Ginger Rogers—Good program reissue. New print.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

Paramount

BARRIER, THE: Leo Carrillo, Jean Parker—Not so hot. Story very weak and absolutely no box office. Running time, 90 minutes. Played April 16-17.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town patronage.

BLUEBEARD'S EIGHTH WIFE: Claudette Colbert, Gary Cooper, Edward Everett Horton, David Niven—Good comedy that is best appreciated by your class trade. The musical score is very expressive of the story's motivation. Mediocre box office strength, nevertheless. Played June 5-6.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

BULLDOG DRUMMOND'S REVENGE: John Barrymore, Louise Campbell, John Howard—Pretty fair. Do not care for this series.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

BULLDOG DRUMMOND'S REVENGE: John Barrymore, John Howard, Louise Campbell—This extra length short subject, made primarily for double bills, was a better picture than "Bulldog Drummond Comes Back" but didn't do any more business. We're off of them for good. Running time, 57 minutes. Played June 8-9.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

COLLEGE SWING: Martha Raye, Burns & Allen, Bob Hope, Edward Everett Horton, Betty Grable, Jackie Coogan—This hit my house just at the right time. It went over with a bang and when a picture does that these days, you have got something. Business better than average.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

EVERY DAY'S A HOLIDAY: Mae West—This was our first West and I hope it's the last. Just how this gal got the money she used to pull at the box office will always remain a mystery to me. Running time, 78 minutes. Played May 28-29.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town patronage.

FAREWELL TO ARMS, A.: (Reissue) Gary Cooper Helen Hayes—As it was when released and still is, a marvelous production. More care taken with musical cuing than with most pictures being made today. Very satisfactory business with a Sunday opening.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

HER JUNGLE LOVE: Dorothy Lamour, Ray Milland, Lynne Overman, Dorothy Howe—This one cheers up the depression-tired box office. It's a good attraction and will please generally. And yet we think the next jungle epic of this team should have a new story to tell, not just a rehash of previous jungle stuff. Played May 27-28.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MOUNTAIN MUSIC: Bob Burns, Martha Raye—It's a honey for the sick box office. We played this old but it did twice as much business as most of the late releases. Bob Burns has quite a large following and the customers like his type of pictures. Running time, 77 minutes. Played May 21-22.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town patronage.

ROMANCE IN THE DARK: Gladys Swarthout, John Boles, John Barrymore—Excellent singing but of the sort that drives them outside to report more opera. And that's enough tip-off to keep everyone at home in this town. No click. Played May 11-12.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SCANDAL STREET: Lew Ayres, Louise Campbell—Very nice little program. Paramount, why not use Virginia Weidler more? We like her.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

TEXAS TRAIL: William Boyd, George Hayes—Very fine western.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

THRILL OF A LIFETIME: Eleanore Whitney, Johnny Downs—Went over better than expected. Paramount didn't let me down this year. Judy Canova very good in above picture.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

TIP-OFF GIRLS: Lloyd Nolan, Mary Carlisle—A good action play to low average returns. Played May 17.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

TRUE CONFESSION: Carole Lombard, Fred MacMurray—Terrible. It's pictures like this that makes us join the WPA and they had the nerve to compare this with "The Awful Truth." We had to fumigate the theatre after playing "True Confession." Running time, 84 minutes. Played April 30.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town patronage.

WELLS FARGO: Joel McCrea, Frances Dee—This can be classed as the best from Paramount this season and will surely get the money if there is any. Even as hard up as we are here, we thought the recession was over when we played it. Running time, 115 minutes. Played April 2-3.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town patronage.

YOU AND ME: Sylvia Sidney, George Raft, Harry Carey, Barton MacLane—A good picture but not by any means Raft or Sidney's best. It can be classed as a different type of picture and while there's nothing to rave about, it should stand up fairly well on any small town for a couple of days. Ran a bargain night on the second day of the picture to induce those who had missed it to be sure to see it the final night. Running time, 90 minutes. Played June 15-16.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

Republic

BOOTS AND SADDLES: Gene Autry, Judith Allen, Smiley Burnette—The best Autry we have played this season. A picture enjoyed by all who saw Hollywood's most popular actor in his best picture to date. Running time, 59 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

MANHATTAN MERRY-GO-ROUND: Phil Regan, Ann Dvorak—Somehow or other this don't quite jell. Perhaps there are too many ingredients and too many ingredients will spoil a cake just as quick as too few. But at that it is passable entertainment but with all the talent and all the money spent, one would expect more from this. This was doubled with a Buck Jones. Business on this a fair average considering conditions and time of the year.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

RKO Radio

BRINGING UP BABY: Katharine Hepburn, Cary Grant, May Robson, Charles Ruggles—A fine show but one on which opinion was divided. Many liked; many didn't. It didn't pull above average program business. Played May 25-26.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

GO CHASE YOURSELF: Joe Penner, Lucille Ball—It is hard to comment on a picture like this. At the best, it is kiddie entertainment. Played June 10-11.—Rudolph Covi, Covi Theatre, Herminie, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

HAWAII CALLS: Bobby Breen, Ned Sparks—Not as good as "Rainbow on the River." Not the right kind of story for Bobby.—Ben Brinck, West Point Theatre, West Point, Iowa. General patronage.

JOY OF LIVING: Irene Dunne, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Alice Brady, Guy Gibbee, Lucille Ball—A very clever little comedy that is not clicking at the box office. Fairbanks, Jr., is excellent and Miss Dunne is fair, but for some reason it does not hit for us. Too bad, as it is a clever show. Miss Ball, to whom I looked for bigger things, is a decided flop in this picture. A big comedown from "Stage Door." Running time, 90 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

LIFE OF THE PARTY, THE: Joe Penner, Gene Raymond, Parkyakarkus, Harriet Hilliard—A picture that is not classed as great, yet it is one that is built for small exhibitors like me. Received many favorable comments and can say I done more business than I do on the socalled supers. Gene Raymond goes over very well with my audiences. Running time, 77 minutes. Played June 12-15.—Walter Currell, Gem Theatre, Logan, Utah. General patronage.

MAID'S NIGHT OUT: Joan Fontaine, Allan Lane—Rated only as a program, this little comedy drama pleased a larger per cent than some of the socalled specials. Old plot, too, masquerading milkman and rich girl also masquerading, but was well done.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

SNOW WHITE AND THE SEVEN DWARFS: Walt Disney—Credit surely must be given to Walt Disney for his creative genius in the making of "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs." And credit must also be given to the inventive mind who was able to conceive the 50% category on film rentals. These two combinations here helped to establish a house record, but when the final analysis was made Walt Disney and RKO had the best part of it, myself and others a lot of hard work. I do not recommend the passing up of this picture, it's the type of production that you cannot afford to let your opposition get the jump on you if you can help it, but do not expect to make any money for yourself on it even on a record run or you will be disappointed. Preferred time which is compulsory, plus cost of advertising, plus overhead costs and the 50% and score, will leave less in the clear than a good run on a satisfactory western feature. Played June 12-13-14.—Charles C. Cassinelli, Wyoming Theatre, Mullens, W. Va. Small town patronage.

SNOW WHITE AND THE SEVEN DWARFS: Walt Disney—A brilliantly conceived and produced full length cartoon comedy which had the appeal almost of real people acting the parts. Perfect in all ways. Did not, however, do the business we expected, due in part to raised admission and having had big business in city 30 miles away. Running time, 86 minutes. Played 3 days.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

STAGE DOOR: Katharine Hepburn, Ginger Rogers, Adolphe Menjou—A great picture that was received very well by the audience. This is a picture that RKO can be justly proud of from every respect. It not only is headed by a big cast of stars, but it gives some newcomers a chance, among them the dancing star by the name of Ann Miller who is another Eleanor Powell. Running time, 92 minutes. Played June 5-8.—Walter Currell, Gem Theatre, Logan, Utah. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

CHANGE OF HEART: Gloria Stuart, Michael Whalen—A very good program picture with the principals doing excellent and a young chap named Delmar Watson stealing the show. Who could resist this kid? Running time, 66 minutes. Played June 1-2.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN AT MONTE CARLO: Warner Oland—Not nearly as good as most of these Chan pictures. Played June 27-28.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

CHECKERS: Jane Withers, Stuart Erwin—Just another Jane Withers, which always means extra business. Jane has a nice following in our town. Played June 10-11.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

CHECKERS: Jane Withers, Stuart Erwin, Una Merkel—An glad Fox has at last decided to give that popular little lady, Jane Withers, a break. Good story and Stuart Erwin and Una Merkel make a combination that is sure to please. Marvin Stephens is also very good, and Andrew Tombes' singing brought down the house. This is Jane's best feature. Running time, 78 minutes. Played June 15-16.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. General patronage.

CITY GIRL: Phyllis Brooks, Ricardo Cortez—A very entertaining programmer, much better than the average. The cast did very well and the treatment as a whole much superior to most pictures of this type. Pleased and did a satisfactory midweek business. Recording very good. Played May 24-25.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town, rural and C.C.C. patronage.

45 FATHERS: Jane Withers, Thomas Beck—Satisfactory as Jane Withers' plots go. But gol darn it, why don't they find this star a real story and not just a series of gags? Played May 13-14.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

HAPPY LANDING: Sonja Henie, Don Ameche—It's a honey. That chile sure has something. Believe that her next picture would please even more if there was not quite so much skating. Sonja doesn't need skates to put over her pictures. Running time, 101 minutes. Played June 3-4.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

ISLAND IN THE SKY: Gloria Stuart, Michael Whalen, Paul Kelly, June Storey—A very good detective yarn. Will please any spot, we believe. Played May 13-14.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

REBECCA OF SUNNYBROOK FARM: Shirley Temple, Gloria Stuart, Jack Haley, Randolph Scott—Not the oldtime "Rebecca," as you may know by now, but it's a darn good new one as played by Shirley. A very satisfactory picture. Played May 29-30.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SALLY, IRENE AND MARY: Alice Faye, Fred Allen, Tony Martin, Jimmy Durante, Joan Davis, Marjorie Weaver—After seeing this, most everyone expressed disappointment. It didn't do very well, either. Played May 18-19.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SALLY, IRENE AND MARY: Alice Faye, Tony Martin, Fred Allen, Joan Davis, Marjorie Weaver—Enjoyed very much by the majority of our patrons. Joan Davis always delivers and the rest of the cast was very good. When are they going to give Marjorie Weaver a break? Running time, 85 minutes. Played May 29-30.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

United Artists

ADVENTURES OF MARCO POLO, THE: Gary Cooper, Sigrid Gurie, Basil Rathbone, Binnie Barnes—We thought this splendid entertainment but it flopped badly. We expected this would draw quite well but were very much disappointed. Cooper was in top form in this. Miss Gurie was liked by those who were here. Played June 10-11.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

ADVENTURES OF MARCO POLO, THE: Gary Cooper, Sigrid Gurie—This proved a box office disappointment to us. We really took it on the chin. A fair picture that did not draw.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

ADVENTURES OF TOM SAWYER, THE: Tommy Kelly, May Robson, Walter Brennan, Jackie Moran, Ann Gillis—Better than most all the others of its sort to date due to the color and increased box office value thereby. Played June 3-4.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

ADVENTURES OF TOM SAWYER, THE: Tommy Kelly, May Robson, Jackie Moran—I could not refrain from commenting on Mr. Cooney's report on Tom Sawyer. Personally, I think he is all wet. It's perfect entertainment for any situation. I can't understand a fellow exhibitor making such comments which are ridiculous. If he never plays a picture any worse than "Tom Sawyer" he'll be lucky.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

DARK JOURNEY: Vivien Leigh, Conrad Veidt—This English made picture is a real good spy drama with fine production values and is worth playing on a double bill. Good sound, fine sets, a pleasing cast and good suspense. What more could one ask for the low rental asked for this?—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

DIVORCE OF LADY X, THE: Merle Oberon, Laurence Olivier, Binnie Barnes, Ralph Richardson—Not Hollywood type cinema but not too bad for English product. Business away down, though, making any rental too much rental. Played June 1-2.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

52ND STREET: All-star cast—This is just another musical and what a musical. Their pencil must have slipped when they allocated this one; it is not near as good as all the ballyhoo they have had for it. Running time, 82 minutes. Played June 5-6-7.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash.

52ND STREET: Ian Hunter, Pat Paterson—While there is considerable in this to entertain, it was not worth the high allocation given this. Business in this was just fair. This was doubled with "Border Wolves," a Bob Baker western from Universal which adequately filled the action part of the program.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

I MET MY LOVE AGAIN: Henry Fonda, Joan Bennett, Dame May Whitty, Alan Marshal—We didn't expect much from this one and were very pleasantly surprised. Too bad the title was changed to this insipid one when the original was "Summer Lightning." It was one of the most satisfactory pictures we have played for some time. Well liked by all who saw it. Even pleased the action lovers. Fonda and Bennett splendid. A nice production, well photographed and recorded. You need not apologize for this one. Running time, 80 minutes. Played June 5-6.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town, rural and C.C.C. patronage.

NOTHING SACRED: Carole Lombard, Fredric March, Charles Winninger, Walter Connelly—By far the cleverest picture we have seen in the "nutty" cycle. A beautiful production in every way. Well written script, good dialogue, expert direction, good cast, beautiful color and excellent recording. Seemed to be enjoyed by everyone who saw it. No raves, however. This type of exaggerated comedy, bordering on satire, just doesn't have general appeal regardless of how well done it is. Running time, 75 minutes. Played May 29-31.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town, rural and C.C.C. patronage.

NOTHING SACRED: Carole Lombard, Fredric March—This one was sure a knockout. Everyone enjoyed it. Running time, 75 minutes. Played June 10-11.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

NOTHING SACRED: Carole Lombard, Fredric March—A good comedy drama enhanced by color. The punches that are exchanged between Carole Lombard and Fredric March give them something to talk about, but business on this was nothing to write home about. Color to a picture may make it more attractive to the eye but does not seem to add anything to the drawing power. Business the second day was below second day average, so evidently did not get much word of praise.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

Universal

BORDER WOLVES: Bob Baker—This was doubled with "52nd Street." Bob Baker, if given the right kind of material, will make a welcome addition to the list of western stars. Business on this was just fair.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

"CRIME" OF DR. HALLET, THE: Ralph Bellamy, Josephine Hutchinson, John King—An excellent picture, even though few saw it. We don't know why they passed this one by. Played June 8-9.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MIDNIGHT INTRUDER: Louis Hayward, Barbara Read—This answers anyone's question as to what's a good show. Enough different to make it really interesting. Of course you can't expect much draw with it, but if you get them in they'll go out well satisfied. Played May 24.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SINGING OUTLAW, THE: Bob Baker, Joan Barclay—Received many favorable comments on this picture. He has a very pleasing voice, and rates second only to Gene Autry. I hope his next releases are as good as his first. Running time, 58 minutes. Played June 9-11.—Walter Currell, Gem Theatre, Logan, Utah. General patronage.

HELPS HIM, SO HE WANTS TO HELP

"I am reading the comments on 'What the Picture Did for Me.' They help me in selecting pictures.

"I want to do my bit in encouraging this column."—BEN BRINCK, West Point Theatre, West Point, Iowa. General patronage.

STATE POLICE: John King, Constance Moore—Okay action fare. Played May 27-28.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Warner Brothers

HE COULDN'T SAY NO: Frank McHugh, Jane Wyman, Cora Witherspoon—We should have said no when they booked this. They didn't even like this on a bargain night. McHugh not strong enough to carry a picture but he deserves better material than this. Poorest midweek business we have had since I can remember. A 57 minute quickie, badly thrown together and poorly recorded. Running time, 57 minutes. Played June 15-16. Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town, rural and C.C.C. patronage.

IT'S LOVE I'M AFTER: Leslie Howard, Bette Davis—Pretty good comedy. Not worth what I paid for it, as is case of most Warner pictures.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

JEZEBEL: Bette Davis, Henry Fonda, George Brent, Margaret Lindsay—A very fine picture in most respects but it missed having the element necessary for general audience appeal. The cast and direction exceptionally good but the bad recording detracted greatly from the merits of the picture. A feigned accent is a handicap in a picture and when it is as badly recorded as "Jezebel" was it is hopeless. The same happened when they made "Tovarich." Running time, 104 minutes. Played May 26-28.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town, rural and C.C.C. patronage.

JEZEBEL: Bette Davis, Henry Fonda, George Brent, Margaret Lindsay—One of the finest pictures we have ever played that was entirely lost to our small town audience. The invariable comment was "It's a good picture but we did not like the ending." I do not imagine our audience is different from other small towns and so the only obvious conclusion we can give you is not to expect too much at the box office. Running time, 104 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

JEZEBEL: Bette Davis, Henry Fonda—I cannot say enough about this picture, neither could my patrons. This is by far the best picture that Bette Davis has made to date. Let's have some more like them, Bette. Running time, 104 minutes. Played May 29-30-31.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

KID COMES BACK, THE: Wayne Morris, June Travis, Barton MacLane, Maxie Rosenbloom—A fairly pleasing program picture that seemed to mean little at the box office. It is acceptable entertainment if too much isn't expected. Recording passable. Running time, 61 minutes. Played June 3-4.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town, rural and C.C.C. patronage.

KID COMES BACK, THE: Wayne Morris, June Travis, Barton MacLane, Maxie Rosenbloom—So-so. Could have been better. Played May 20-21.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

LOVE, HONOR AND BEHAVE: Wayne Morris, Priscilla Lane, Dick Foran, John Litel—They went for this one. It did well on a midweek date and was enthusiastically received. The team of Morris and Lane a distinct hit. Human, down-to-earth comedies of this type seem to be what most audiences want. Running time, 65 minutes. Played June 7-8.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town, rural and C.C.C. patronage.

PENROD AND HIS TWIN BROTHER: Billy and Bobby Mauch—Very nice family picture which I believe any audience will enjoy. Plenty of human interest comedy. Played June 14-15.—Rudolph Covi, Covi Theatre, Herminie, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

AUTO CLINIC, THE: Krazy Kat Cartoon—This cartoon was done in black and white and was very good. Running time, 9 minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash.

COMMUNITY SING, NO. 7: We don't like the song leaders substituting for Donald Grayson. The audience reaction is bad for us since he left the reel.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

DRUG STORE FOLLIES: Broadway Follies—Very good musical short. Running time, 10 minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

HORSE ON THE MERRY-GO-ROUND, THE: Color Rhapsody—A very good color reel. Running time, 9 minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash.

JUMP, CHUMP, JUMP: Andy Clyde—These Andy Clydes are always good. Running time, 20 minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

TASSELS IN THE AIR: 3 Stooges—They get better all the while. Running time, 20 minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

TIME OUT FOR TROUBLE: Charley Chase—Poor. We think suicide a devilish poor subject to make a comedy out of. It just isn't funny. Charley should know better.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Educational

AIR PARADE: Two-Reel Comedies—Okay.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

DOG AND THE BONE, THE: Terry-Toons—Okay.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

GREY OWL'S LITTLE BROTHER: Treasure Chest—One of the nicest singles we have played this year. Should be enjoyed by any type of audience. A charming, natural tale of beavers in other native haunts. Running time, 10 minutes.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town, rural and C.C.C. patronage.

HIS OFF DAY: Terry-Toons—Good.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

HURRAY FOR HOOLIGAN: Buster West, Tom Patricola—So-so comedy. Dances okay.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

KOO-KOO CORRESPONDENCE SKOOL, THE: Jefferson Machamer—A little different idea in a short musical comedy with the works of the famous "Gags and Gals" artist thrown in for good measure. A fairly good short that should be pleasing to all.—Running time, 18 minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

LOVE GOES WEST: Song and Comedy Hits—Fine subject. Louise Massey and her Westerners are featured.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MISS THEY MISSED, THE: Two-Reel Comedies—Fair.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

NOT SO DUMB: Treasure Chest—A fine animal reel.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

TIMID RABBIT, THE: Terry-Toons—Very good.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

WANNA BE A MODEL? Jefferson Machamer—Audience thought this mixture of offhand sketching, comedy and vaudeville fairly good. Running time, two reels.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

DECATHLON CHAMPIONS: Pete Smith Specialties—A very interesting short on the life of a champion.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

FACE BEHIND THE MASK, THE: Historical Mysteries—Excellent. Our audience goes for these in a big way and we are sorry that MGM does not keep them up for next season. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

JIMMY FIDLER'S PERSONALITY PARADE: Special—Very interesting. It was good to see some of the old stars who have either retired or passed on. By the way, Mr. Fidler, didn't John Gilbert deserve a niche in that reel?—Rudolph Covi, Covi Theatre, Herminie, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

JUNGLE JUVENILES: Pete Smith Specialties—Splendid entertainment for old or young. Animals are always thrilling to the kiddies in a small town and this is clever enough to interest grownups too. Hope we get more like them. Running time, 10 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

MAN IN THE BARN, THE: Historical Mysteries—A good subject and concerns John Wilkes Booth, Lincoln's assassin.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

NEW AUDIOSCOPIKS, THE: Special—Rather than drawing in a few extra admissions, this failed to hold even our regular Tuesday bunch. Definitely not worth the extra expense.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

STROKE OF GENIUS: M-G-M Miniatures—A good short. Collegiate background featuring the land boat crew who win a water boat race much to the surprise of the coach. Acting well done and everyone well satisfied. Running time, 11 minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

AQUABATS: Grantland Rice Sportlights—Excellent. —L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

COPS AND ROBBERS: Grantland Rice Sportlight, Ted Husing—Again this Husing man scores with this interesting reel on the punishment of depredatory animals. You are still tops with us, Husing; keep up the good work. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

COPS AND ROBBERS: Grantland Rice Sportlights —Good.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

HALL'S HOLIDAY: Headliners — A fair short, nothing to rave about. At the same time you won't have to duck in at the side door when your first show breaks for fear your patrons will squawk to you. Running time, 10 minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

HALL'S HOLIDAY: George Hall and His Orchestra —Average band act.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

HOUSE BUILDER-UPPER, THE: Popeye the Sailor—One of the poorest Popeyes we have played. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

JUNGLE GLIMPSES: Paragraphics—In color this is pretty fair entertainment.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

LEARN POLIKENESS: Popeye the Sailor—Usual Popeye.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

LET'S CELEBRAKE: Popeye the Sailor—About like all the others. A new year's attraction that we present in May! Nice timing, eh? They ought to let us in on these dated shorts if we are to use them before the idea rusts in the can.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SWING SCHOOL: Betty Boop Cartoons—A dandy cartoon. Clever animation.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

TEARS OF AN ONION: Color Classics—Fine cartoon in color.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

UNUSUAL OCCUPATIONS, NO. 5: A very good short but a trifle too long. This series is very interesting. We highly recommend it. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

ZULA HULA: Betty Boop Cartoons—Very funny. It'll satisfy.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

RKO Radio

BOAT BUILDERS: Walt Disney Cartoons—These cartoons are getting shorter and shorter and the only thing we can recommend on this is color, as the subject matter and action was very mediocre. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

LATIN RHYTHM: Nu-Atlas Productions—Our audiences do not care for "Latin Rhythm." Running time, 1 reel.—H. G. Crawford, Palace Theatre, Plano, Tex. Small town and rural patronage.

MARCH OF TIME: March of Time Series No. 8—A very interesting reel of subject matter that is so condensed that one does not have to guess at what the main issue is. They grow better every issue. Running time, 21 minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash.

NO SALE: Nu-Atlas Productions—As near worthless as any vaudeville reel received so far. Recording on our print far from good. Running time, one reel.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

NO SALE: Nu-Atlas Productions — No sale here either. Pay for it and lay it on the shelf. Just no good. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

PINEHURST: RKO Pathe Sportscope—An excellent reel but RKO makes a mistake in their sport reels by making the entire reel of only one subject. Other companies diversify their sport reels so that they cover a more cosmopolitan audience. Running time, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

WYNKEN, BLYNKEN, AND NOD: Silly Symphony—Very good. Pleased the kids but bored the the adults. Running time, 10 minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

FILMING MODERN YOUTH: Adventures of the Newsreel Cameraman—Good. — L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

FILMING NATURE'S WONDERS: Adventures of the Newsreel Cameraman—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

LAND OF THE MAPLE LEAF: Magic Carpet Series—Very good travel. Color would make these second to none.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Universal

DOWN ON THE BARN: Mentone Musical Comedies —Fair vaudeville act.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MAN HUNT: Oswald Cartoons—Amusing cartoon number.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Vitaphone

AT THE RACES: "Charlie McCarthy," Edgar Bergen—Quite amusing reissue. McCarthy is good for a good laugh any time.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

DOCTOR CUPID: Ken Murray, Oswald—After reading bad reports on this one, we set it out a couple of times, then finally played it. We and our patrons considered it very good. Ken and Oswald always get the laughs and this one was quite clever. Running time, 20 minutes.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town, rural and C.C.C. patronage.

FORGET-ME-KNOTS: Bernice Claire—This is not worth running. It is dull and has very little entertainment value. We think Bernice Claire has great possibilities but she doesn't have a chance in this. Poorly recorded. Running time, 20 minutes.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town, rural and C.C.C. patronage.

GOT A MATCH: Broadway Brevities—Okay musical.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

HENRY KING AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—This is not the best Melody Master we have had but it is quite entertaining. No cause for complaint except that the recording is not the best.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town, rural and C.C.C. patronage.

HOLD THAT BALL: Broadway Brevities—Just fair. —L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

JOE PALOOKA IN "CALLING ALL KIDS": Broadway Brevities—A very satisfactory comedy. Not the best but much better than most of them. This series is usually good for a number of laughs. Running time, 19 minutes.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town, rural and C.C.C. patronage.

MILT BRITTON AND ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—Very good. Running time, 11 minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

MR. AND MRS. JESSE CRAWFORD: Vitaphone Varieties—An excellent musical reel that is outstanding in all respects. Highly recommended. Running time, 10 minutes. — A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

MR. AND MRS. JESSE CRAWFORD: Vitaphone Varieties—When we only have ten minutes to a reel why clutter it up with stuff that cuts down the time we can enjoy the real stars of a reel. In this case it is the Crawfords and they're good enough for any 10 minute subject and we'd like the whole footage devoted to them. It's interesting to get closeups of their artistry.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MY LITTLE BUCKAROO: Merrie Melodies—We think all Merrie Melodies are good and this is no exception. Running time, 10 minutes.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town, rural and C.C.C. patronage.

PEARL OF THE EAST: Colortour Adventure—One of the best this company has given us on this year's contract. Enjoyed by all. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

PORKY'S HARE HUNT: Looney Tunes—One of the poorest this company has given us this season. Running time, 7 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

PUPPET LOVE: Vitaphone Varieties—Opinion was divided on this short but personally I think that they are novel and cleverly made up. Running time, 11 minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

ROMANCE OF LOUISIANA: Broadway Brevities—Slow pace and lack of action cut down the entertainment value of this.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

ROPING 'EM ALIVE: Vitaphone Varieties—This was a very interesting reel and every one who saw it claimed that it was not near long enough, and I agreed with them. Running time, 10 minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash.

RUSS MORGAN AND ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—First class entertainment. Running time, 1 reel.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Rural patronage.

SCRIPT GIRL: Cross and Dun—A mediocre comedy and not very well received. Running time, 20 minutes. —R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash.

SEPTEMBER IN THE RAIN: Merrie Melodies—One of the cleverest cartoons we have played. We consider the Merry Melody series the best cartoons on the market. They are all very well received. Running time, 10 minutes.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town, rural and C.C.C. patronage.

TOOT SWEET: Fifi Dorsey, Rufe Davis—Very good. Running time, 20 minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash.

UNREAL NEWSREELS: Vitaphone Varieties—Boy, this one was unreal and how; was enjoyed by all. Running time, 11 minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

WEDDING YELLS: Ken Murray and Oswald—The usual slapstick patter and as usual they always go over big. Running time, 20 minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash.

Serial

Columbia

MYSTERIOUS PILOT, THE: Capt. Frank Hawks—This serial held up remarkably well up to the 10th chapter, but now it seems the story has come to the end and they still have five chapters to go, and it looks like it's going to be agony to watch from now on. I hope I am mistaken but the 11th chapter was getting awful weak. Running time, 20 minutes.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town patronage.

RKO To Distribute "60 Glorious Years"

RKO has acquired the world-wide distribution rights to the Herbert Wilcox production, "Sixty Glorious Years." Production of the picture, which will be in color, started recently at Denham, England. The production was described as a companion piece to "Victoria the Great."

Circuits Sign with RKO

Jules Levy, general sales manager of RKO, has closed for the playing of the company's new season product in two more Midwest circuits. They are Publix-Friedl and the Miner Circuit. L. C. Goldhammer, Minneapolis branch manager, represented RKO in the negotiations.

Duffy Signs Writing Contract

Al Duffy, a member of Columbia's home office exploitation staff for the last three years, has signed a writing contract with the same company. He will leave for the coast on a special assignment shortly.

ANSWER TO QUESTION NO. 117

Question No. 117 was: (A) Summarize those various items in connection with generator commutators that require watching and possible attention. (B) Why do brushes sometimes stick in their holders? How may such faults be remedied? (C) What troubles will be set up by commutator bars worn too thin? (D) Are hard and soft commutator bars occasionally found in the same machine?

The following made acceptable answers: S. Evans and C. Rau; J. R. Prater; G. E. Doe; L. Cimikoski; H. Edwards; J. A. Zachritz; T. F. Bochert; E. H. Toedte; W. E. Limmroth; O. H. Schmidt; C. Champney; R. W. Groton; C. A. Whitlock; R. Feasel; J. J. Petersen; W. Schoneman; G. H. Payne; G. Burdis; L. and F. L. Savlor; D. and W. Porter; L. Johnson; S. Hewitt; C. H. Lowrie; E. and F. Wentworth; S. True; B. and H. Walker; F. H., S. and P. Dalbey; J. K. Robinson and R. E. Bullard; M. F. Robinson and L. A. Beachwood; F. W. Brandenburg; K. Irwin; D. N. Logman; F. E. Dorp and H. A. Ames; L. F. and G. Brown; G. L. Goss; T. A. and G. Johnson; R. Davis and F. M. Brown; H. J. Benjamin; E. Lomax; P. and L. Felt; K. L. Brant; L. E. Dodson and H. H. Todd; W. R. Allen; B. B. Hornstein and R. R. Jacobs; L. Day; L. W. Whitmore; W. B. Hunter; S. T. Logan; A. C. Greene; T. S. Anderson; E. Exline; M. D. McGuire; T. and W. Turk; B. L. Bunt and W. R. Davis; S. L. Maxwell; H. Bunker; G. T. Vieller; C. A. Whitlock; B. L. Kent; E. Davis; L. N. Schofield; D. A. Shea and H. T. Plum; T. W. Redhouse; P. Slobodny; T. W. Williams; A. D. Lonby; G. T. Jones and A. Leonard; L. B. Daniels, M. A. Cordell and S. U. Lamont; B. L. Morris, H. M. Jackson and W. V. Henderson; J. M. Kelner and A. W. Baxter; H. T. Randolph; L. D. Tomlinson; B. L. Odeon and R. Smith; L. M. Richardson; H. T. Watkins and N. S. Reid; J. R. Davidson and W. R. Matthews; D. R. Spencer; C. Umphrey; T. L. Ward and W. Jones; M. Samuels and P. L. Goldstein; W. Winkler and R. R. Robbins; R. M. Schnider.

(A) There were many excellent answers, but that of J. R. Prater is the most complete. He says, "Items in connection with generator commutators demanding attention at more or less frequent intervals are:

"(1) Accumulations of dust, dirt or foreign particles on surface or around the commutator. Commutator surface and slots between bars must be kept scrupulously clean, with no bits of current-conducting material connecting one bar with another.

"(2) Dirty brushes and holders. See to it that all these parts be kept scrupulously clean; particularly that they be free from gummy deposits. Heat of operation may force from certain type brushes sufficient lubricant to form a deposit on commutator surface which will collect deposits from the air, which may easily build up a surface of considerable thickness, offering more or less insulation effect. As to dirty holders, they may best be cleaned with a solvent such as carbon tetrachloride or kerosene, though these solvents must not contact the brushes. Wipe holders dry after cleaning. Wrap a cloth around a stick, moisten it with one of the solvents for cleaning inside of holders.

"(3) Float. All horizontal sets except those having ball bearings should have at least 3-16 inch end movement of armature. This is termed 'float.' It tends to prevent brushes from cutting grooves in the commutator surface. Float will only occur in sets in which the armature is in a perfectly level position. If it be absent, test the machine for out-of-level.

"(4) Undercut. Mica insulation between commutator bars must be examined frequently. The slots should be kept clean by daily endwise brushing, and the depth of slots be maintained by careful scraping of the insulation occasionally as the copper wears down. Depth of undercut should be measured when a new machine is installed and that depth be maintained.

"(5) Yoke setting. See that mark on brush yoke coincides exactly with mark on main frame. If the set be very old, such marks may not be present. In that event, set yoke at exact point of least sparking under normal load conditions and make proper marks. No variation for manufacturers' yoke marks is permissible except under constant overload conditions, then a very cautious change may be advisable. However, before doing that it is best to present exact amount of constant overload to manufacturer of the set, asking his advice.

"(6) Temperature. While it is difficult to ascertain exact temperature of the commutator itself, the temperature of the whole machine may be considerably affected by commutator condition. Dirty, badly worn bars or brushes or both may cause operating temperature to rise. Whenever bearings show no temperature rise, but the machine itself does, check commutator and brushes for possible overload."

(C) T. F. Bocher says, "Commutator bars wear down gradually from brush friction. They may finally become so thin that they no longer have sufficient stiffness to hold their ends in firm contact with the underlay, their locking clamp being located in the center. This condition causes the bars to 'chatter' and sets up sparking."

(D) W. E. Limmroth says, "Yes, occasionally it will be found that some commutator bars on the same machine will be softer than others, which sets up uneven wear, resulting in sparking and roughened surface. Resurfacing is the only remedy."

To which R. and K. Wells add, "We once had exactly that condition on a generator and were able to keep it in pretty satisfactory operation by careful use of a commutator stone on the first day of each month."

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 123

(A) If any part of a motor or generator feels warm to the touch, does that fact necessarily indicate anything wrong?

(B) What is the maximum permissible temperature of such machines or any part thereof?

(C) Describe accepted method of obtaining temperature of any part of a motor or generator except those in rotation.

(D) How might a close approximation of the temperature of even rotation parts be secured?

(Note: Remember, this is a Bluebook school and the answer to all save possibly some special questions can be found in that book.)

SMPE Fall Convention Plans Are Completed

Arrangements have been completed for the Fall Convention of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, which will be held in Detroit, October 31st to November 3rd. General convention facilities at the Statler Hotel, which will be SMPE headquarters, have been arranged by W. C. Kunzman, convention vice-president. J. E. Crabtree, editorial vice-president, and G. E. Matthews, chairman of the papers committee, are arranging the program of papers and presentation. Earl Brenkert, of Detroit, is chairman of the local arrangements and reception committee. Mrs. J. F. Strickler will be the convention hostess.

Theatre Race On

A race for construction of two theatres has been started in Disney, Okla., a new town on the site of the $20,000,000 Grand River dam project, with the possibility that a third will be begun shortly. On one end of Main Street, M. R. Parks of Ponca City is building a 450 seat air-conditioned house and on the other end R. L. Barton, who is mayor of Stroud, Okla., has signed a five year lease on an air-conditioned theatre being built by the Disney Lumber Company. Between the two locations, C. J. Howard, Noel, Okla., has announced plans for a third theatre.

A series of lectures on cinematography will be given at the University of Southern California by Gregg Toland, cameraman. He will use as his illustrative material Samuel Goldwyn's "The Lady and the Cowboy," which he photographed.

IN COURTS

Adler Files Patent Suit Against Wagner

The Adler Sign Letter Company of Chicago, and its associated firm, Ben Adler Signs, Inc., has filed suit against Wagner Sign Service, Inc., also of Chicago, charging infringement of an Adler patent referring to certain characteristics of the Adler attraction boards and changeable sign letters. The suit, accordingto Ben Adler, president of both complaining companies, was filed in the U. S. Federal District Court in Chicago on June 6.

"This suit," stated Mr. Adler, "is directed primarily against the Wagner 'three-in-one' construction, whether there is a single or multiple line of letters in one opening or whether one or several sizes of letters are used in the same sign, and also against the Wagner straight side, beveled and cove-edged letters used with such sign construction."

This suit, which follows court action also charging infringement brought last March against the Adler company by Wagner, cites U. S. Patent No. 2,038,978 issued to Adler, according to the plaintiff, on April 28, 1936.

Baynes Again Sues Over Atlantic Pact

George McLeod Baynes this week filed a second suit against Atlantic Film Products, Ltd., asking for damages of $30,000 and at the same time applied for a warrant of attachment against the sum of $30,000 belonging to Atlantic, and claimed to be held by Columbia Pictures Corporation. Services of the summons and a writ of attachment in a previous suit was vacated on technical grounds, April 29th.

The plaintiff claimed that Atlantic breached a contract whereby Mr. Baynes was made the agent for the distribution and exhibition of Atlantic Film's "Thunder in the City" in the United States and Canada, at an alleged compensation of 10 per cent of the gross receipts. Mr. Baynes contended that he secured Columbia to distribute the picture, which later grossed $300,000, but that he received no compensation for his services.

Burgess Sues Knickerbocker

C. F. Burgess Laboratories, Inc., filed suit in United States district court in New York this week against Knickerbocker Broadcasting Company, Inc., and Jacobson and Company, Inc., charging patent infringement of a sound deadening construction device. The plaintiff claimed that it is the owner of the patent and that Jacobson and Company sold the device to Knickerbocker without authority.

Sues on Use of Photograph

Suit was filed in the United State district court in New York against Paramount Productions, Inc., Paramount Pictures, Inc., Paramount Distribution Corporation, Paramount Publix Corporation, Publix Theatres Corporation and the Macon Amusement Company, operators of the Criterion theatre, by Edward Poland, charging infringement of an alleged copyrighted photograph entitled "Birdseye view of U. S. Capitol and Congressional Library." Mr. Poland claimed that Paramount produced and the Criterion exhibited in March of this year a picture called "Dangerous to Know," in which the plaintiff's photograph was used.

Loew's Asks Stay on Suit

Application was made to the New York supreme court this week by Loew's, Inc., to stay Edward M. Grossman from proceeding with his stockholder's suit against Loew's and its directors until final determination of eight similar suits against Loew's which have been previously consolidated.

FROM READERS

UNEMPLOYMENT AND ATTENDANCE

To the Editor of the Herald:

As a theatrical press agent who has fallen victim to the appalling decline in theatre attendance, I should like to give my views briefly anent the situation.

To my mind, the bad business which has been prevalent the latter part of the season just ending cannot be ascribed to a "strike" on the part of the screen-going public, or poor product.

As I view the situation, it seems to me that the explanation lies in the fact that we have more than 12,000,000 unemployed in the country—mostly in those classes from which the screen draws its biggest audiences —and many other persons on a two, three, or four day working basis. Naturally, the necessities of life come first, and by the time the rent, gas, light and food are paid for there is little left for anything else, movies included.

There is little the Industry can do about it. We will simply have to wait until the Government starts its spending program in the fall, or until private industry sees its way clear to rehire the millions of unemployed.

To me, "B," "C," "D," or "X," "Y," and "Z" pictures have very little to do with the problem. During prosperity there were just as many, if not more, poor pictures produced, yet they were plentifully patronized. That was because money was plentiful and people went to the movies several times a week, instead of the present basis of once a week—when they can afford it.—Joseph G. Ehrlich, Dorchester, Mass.

Seek to Dissolve Meridian

New York Supreme Court Justice Peter Schmuck this week appointed Edward J. McDonald, New York, as referee and receiver of the assets of Meridian Pictures Corporation, in response to a petition filed by Walter J. Hughes, president, and David Stewart Craven, director, for the dissolution of Meridian. Justice Schmuck directed that Referee McDonough conduct a hearing August 3rd at which time stockholders and creditors would have an opportunity to show cause why the petition should not be granted.

Delf Suit Discontinued

The $100,000 damage suit of Harry Delf in the United States district court in New York against Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, General Foods Corporation, Maxwell House Products, Ltd., Benton and Bowles, Inc., National Broadcasting Company and others was discontinued this week was claimed due to the fact that Maxwell House is a Canadian corporation not subject to the jurisdiction of the court. Mr. Delf's suit claimed plagiarism of his sketch, "The Joker," on the MGM-Maxwell House radio hour.

Skouras Report Approved

The long drawn out federal court bankruptcy proceedings of Skouras Brothers Enterprises, Inc., St. Louis, was ended last week when Referee in Bankruptcy Pearcy approved the final report of Nelson H. Cunliff, federal trustee. The dividends paid to the general creditors amounted to $274,871, which were applied by the bondholders protective committees for the purchase of the theatre properties, while dividends paid in cash totaled $28,607.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

"GIVERS" AND "TAKERS"

Not too infrequently comes a letter from the field in which the writer, admitting neglect in keeping this department informed of his activities, sends along a detailed report of current campaigns in a praiseworthy endeavor to "pay his dues". Such a communication arriving now reads as follows:

"I have been neglecting the Round Table shamefully of late, haven't I? Will you accept my apologies? And the excuse that I have really been busy preparing for the summer season. To square myself and do my part as a member who earnestly desires to remain in good standing, here is some dope on what I have been doing lately."

Well, naturally, it isn't to be expected that a theatreman with a million and one things on his mind will drop everything to report to the Round Table. But it is warming to note that members have their obligations in mind and discharge them at the first opportunity. That's one kind of member — and, praise be, that species is far from rare. You know what the lad is up against, and that's that.

But the other fellow is the bird who gives us the creepin' jeepers in trying to figure him out. The lad we have in mind is the one who can't wait until the weekly HERALD comes in, so he can study the Round Table, but never lifts a finger to send in so much as a postcard on what he has been doing to keep the wolf from his door.

Just what does your Round Table aim to do? Nothing more than to establish one place in the industry that the man in the field can call his own; to function as a clearing house for boxoffice ideas that have worked. And how is this accomplished? Purely by the support of the theatreman himself. That support is far from onerous. There is no money involved. No one concerned pledges himself to anything outside of an obligation to cooperate in reporting his activities for the benefit of the membership in exchange for what he gets from the other man's campaigns.

The job that your Round Table does in this direction depends, then, upon how adequately the members support these aims. For the best part, the men who take these obligations seriously are holding up their end. But, unfortunately, the same cannot be said of too many erring brothers.

It all simmers down to two classifications—the "givers" and the "takers", with the former carrying most of the load. The theatreman who capitalizes upon the other fellow's Round Table ideas and is in a position to do his share, but doesn't, is a "taker".

And that's not to be considered exactly as the highest form of praise.

JONES PROVES IT AGAIN

Theatremen have about exhausted every boxoffice possibility in staging competitions for the shag dancers and jitter-bugs. But that doesn't mean the square-dance is without dividends, as was discovered recently by John D. Jones, Robb & Rowley city manager, in San Angelo, Texas. For his date on "Swing Your Lady" Jones conceived the idea of an old-fashioned square-dance contest for folks over 50. That there were still a lot of eligible dancers was indicated by entries of over 30 couples who participated in a stage show that tripled normal business.

By his handling of the stunt Jones takes a bow for accomplishing much more than putting over a single date. He has added to the theatre's goodwill among the older folks by centering the spotlight upon them. But, more important, the Texan has proven again that what might be regarded as an old-time and dated idea can be smartened up to emerge as brand-new to the advantage of the boxoffice.

JUST TWO WEEKS REMAIN

From date of this issue, the deadline for the Second Quarter of 1938 Quigley Awards is 14 days away. Midnight of July 16 marks the time when the final gong sounds, which means, as usual, that all entries to be eligible, must be received no later than that time. Theatremen with campaigns to enter are therefore advised to get goin' and to see that these entries get to the postoffice without delay.

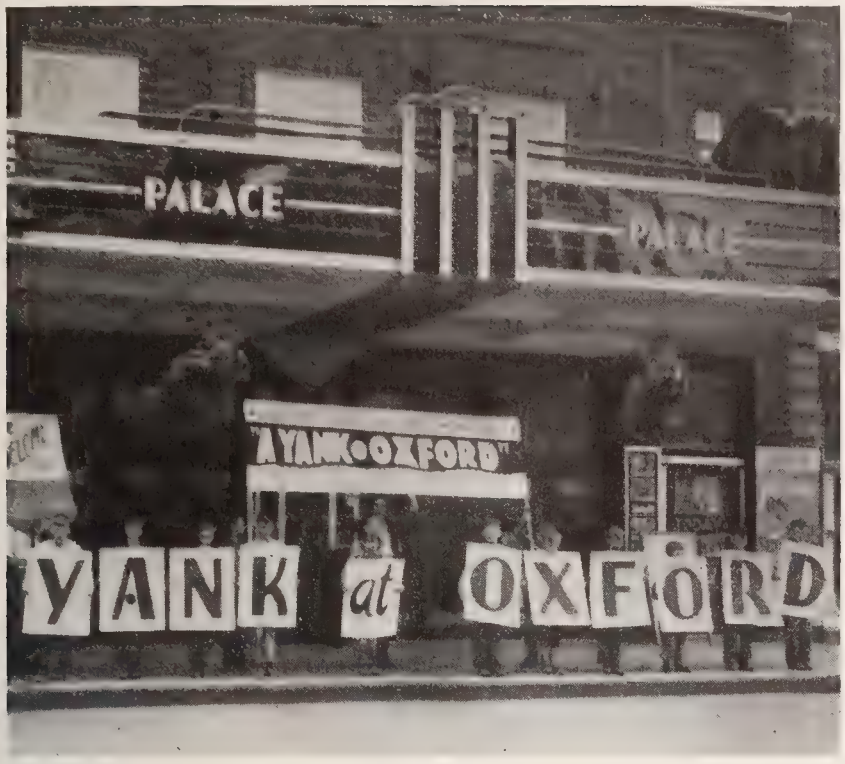
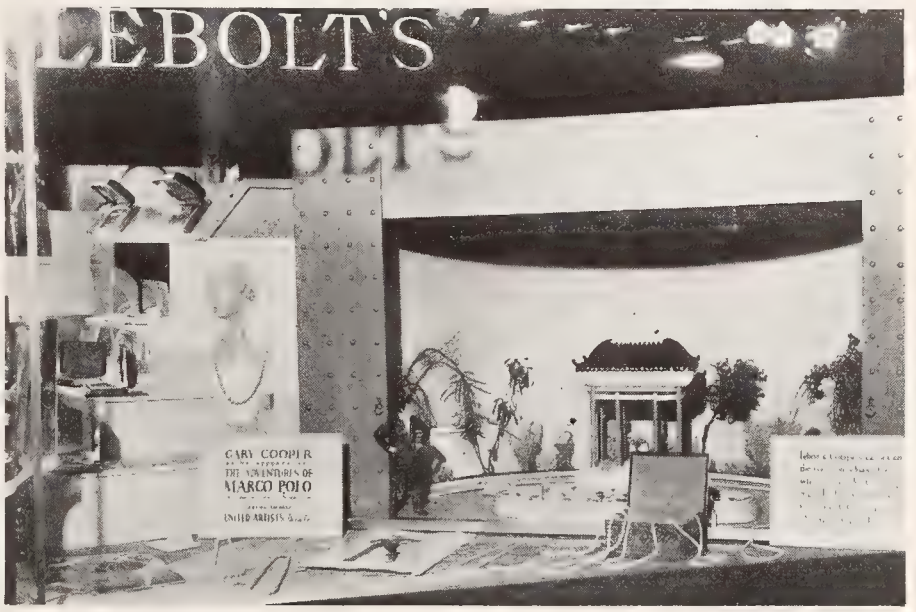
With the Shriners' convention in Los Angeles, the ad men of Lou Halper's Pacific Coast zone of Warner Brothers took advantage of the convention by having the Minneapolis contingent put together a 24-sheet jigsaw on the date for "Gold Diggers in Paris." What caused the whole town to talk about it was the fact that the conventioneers picked the busiest corner in the city to put on the stunt.



Round Table In Pictures

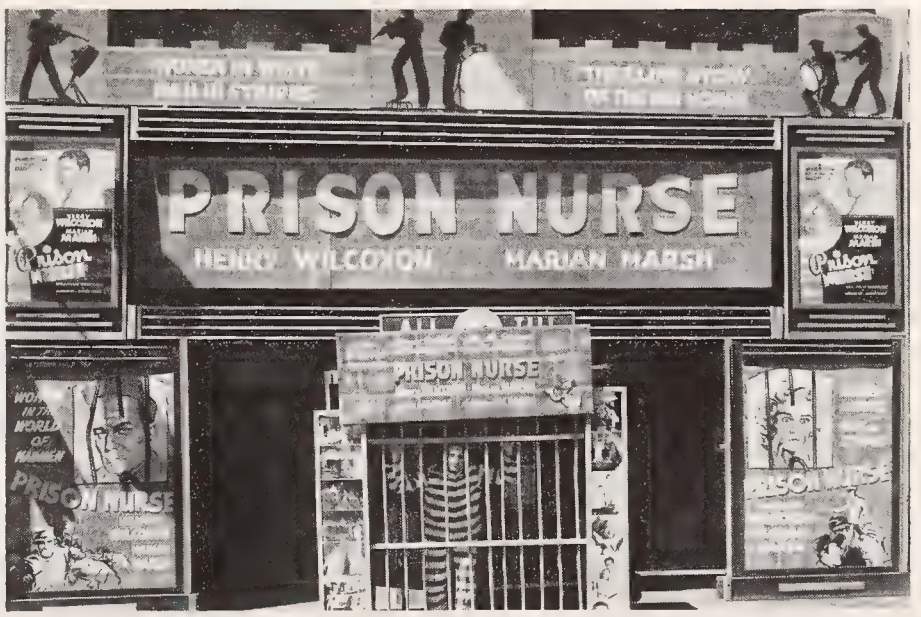
Huge book shown below was created by Basil Lowery, Art Director of Standard Theatres, Oklahoma City, Okla., and planted on grounds of library for playdate of "The Buccaneer" at the Criterion Theatre there.

Eye-arresting indeed was the "Girl of the Golden West" front designed and constructed by Tom Cleary for that opening at the Palace Theatre, Montreal. Large art heads of Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy were planted at either side of box-office, directly above which was tremendous scene still.



To the left is shown street bally used by assistant manager Phil Arbeit, Marcy Theatre, Brooklyn, for "Old Chicago." Fire wagon was pulled along streets during day and was stationed in front of theatre at nights with appropriate copy. The smiling gentleman shown at left in photo is Phil.

Harold Simons, assistant manager Palace Theatre, Antigo, Wis., arranged for local kids to carry letters spelling out title of "Yank at Oxford." Parading about town ahead of opening, large banner with playdates, etc., was also featured.



Float shown above won second prize for Monogram in the Shriners' Motion Picture Electrical Pageant recently at Los Angeles, Cal. Fashioned like a gondola, 2,000 electric light bulbs were used, color scheme rose, gold and silver.

Main window of jewelry store in Chicago was promoted by Art Catlin for the "Marco Polo" date at the United Artists Theatre. Miniature of replica scene from picture was constructed, with credit cards on either side.

Effective attention-getter was the kiss-analyzer used recently at Loew's State Theatre, New York City. Taking their cue from the kissing sequence in "Marco Polo," machine tests the emotional reaction to a kiss. Device is controlled by an operator and is fitted with lights, meters and wires to give authentic appearance.

Front of the Capitol Theatre, Dallas, Texas, was converted into a prison effect by Louie Charninsky for his "Prison Nurse" date. Bally man in costume was placed in cell, with appropriate picture copy at either side.

CITYWIDE TIEIN AIDS "CARNIVAL" CAMPAIGN

Thirty Merchants Cooperate With Montanan to Put Over Successful Business Drive

by PAUL B. McADAM

Manager, Park, Livingston, Mont.

Entertainment demands something new—what shall we give them now? Haven't you thought that very same thing any number of times, and just wished, yes almost prayed someone would give you an idea? Well I have, and being an interested reader of the Herald, and its "idea" departments for stimulating attendance with exploitation, I thought it might help to write in about a little stunt we used here in Livingston, Montana that really brought excellent results. Would you be interested —well here it is:—

PAUL McADAM

Carnivals, fairs and celebrations all have an immense drawing power for crowds with money to spend, so we decided to use that angle in connection with the theatre. So into being came "Livingston's Spring Carnival," Saturday May 7th. Considering that most people look for something for nothing at all times, we incorporated a giant giveaway, with $1,000.00 in prizes (costing about $719.00 wholesale) given free. Then, to have as many people boosting the stunt as possible, we enlisted thirty merchants in town to put on the "Spring Carnival," helping pay for the prizes, and giving out lucky tickets with each purchase of 50 cents or over.

Float Ballys Carnival

Having gone this far, we must let the people know of our plans so we rang the bell with plenty of advertising. We used window cards of two different designs, four different types of heralds, special posters for the stores, cooperating, bumper strips for cars, windshield stickers, and of course the lucky tickets given with merchandise purchases and theatre admissions. During the last week a paneled sound truck visited all towns within a radius of seventy miles and a special free circulation "Carnival" edition of the newspaper covered every home four days previous to the final windup. A float of the prizes to be given was on display in the business section for a four-day period.

Old time showmen gags were used on the build-up for the "Carnival" and these included a "window guessing contest" with displays in each store window and the person coming closest to the total number of all articles in all windows being declared the winner. Another favorite that pleased was the "Great Turkey Fly" with three live turkeys flying off the roof and belonging to the one who catches their dinner.

In obtaining the prizes, each store put up $30.00 and then paid for the number of lucky tickets they used. Novel prizes with wide appeal to every age and class of people were used, and these consisted of a large cash prize, radio, mangle, refrigerator, novelty bedroom suite, set of tires and a "cow and calf" to give them something to josh about.

Now—here's where the theatre comes in. They reap the harvest! For the drawing we used a huge Civic Center building in conjunction with the theatre, and installed rented portable equipment to run a show for the occasion. Then the telephone on the stage of the theatre was connected directly to a public address system in the Civic auditorium through the regular telephone circuit and announcements on the theatre stage were distinctly heard in the large auditorium. In other words, any number of auditoriums could be connected, and in our case 3,800 people of the town's 6,400 population attended the event, between the two places. The show at the Civic auditorium was followed by a dance with a Big Apple exhibition as an attraction, and the floor was packed. Sell them entertainment in any form! They want something new!

Highlights of Campaign

In conclusion, while a stunt of this kind means a lot of work, it is surprising how easy it can be put over, and the theatre gains in many ways besides the financial return. These may be summarized as follows:

1. Thirty stores and employees boosting for the theatre create enormous good will and institutional advertisement.
2. Everyone comes to theatre lobby to deposit ticket stubs.
3. The theatre name as being the place for the drawing and awarding of prizes as well as handling the events comes in for invaluable word of mouth advertising and attention.
4. Real financial gain as follows: admissions to the theatre and any other auditorium connected by phone for the drawing, gives unlimited seating and admission revenue.
5. Interest focused on the theatre previous to carnival increases attendance at regular performances.
6. Satisfaction of a job well done.

Classified Ad Tieup Helps Sell "Gold"

Want ad column of local daily carried a contest in connection with Lew Williams' "Gold is Where You Find It" date at the Fox Theatre, Sidney, Nebraska. Streamer across top of page read "There's gold in these ads, look for the word "gold" and the first ten returning the ads will receive guest tickets." Story was run concerning the cooperative page ad and contest.

Display in local store windows consisted of guessing the weight of bags of gold for which tickets were also awarded.

PRIZES OFFERED FOR "SON OF SHEIK"

As announced by Bob Sidman, Artcinema Associates, Inc., are offering four cash prizes of $100, $75, $50 and $25 for the four best exploitation jobs done on "Son of the Sheik" play dates during July and August.

Awards will be given on the basis of advance advertising and exploitation campaigns as well as current campaigns and actual presentation.

Quad-City Theatres Sponsor Fight Prize

Originated by Al Dumont and Dale McFarland, managers in Joe Kinsky's, Tri-States, Davenport, Ia., district, is a contest angle inaugurated on the Louis-Schmeling fight and to be used also, reports Kinsky, for other popular sports events which make keen theatre opposition.

The idea is a guessing contest and on the Louis-Schmeling fight was worked as follows in the 16 theatres in the Quad-City district, comprising houses at Davenport, Rock Island, Moline and East Moline. Cards were given to all adults purchasing admission tickets in any of the theatres on the day of the fight, each card bearing space for the individual's choice of winner and his guess on when the fight would end, exactly in rounds, minutes and seconds. A prize of $500 was awarded by the Quad-City Theatres Managers Association to the patron predicting most accurately the number of rounds, minutes and seconds the bout lasted.

Space was left on each card for name and address of contestants, who were required to deposit their card in any of the theatres before eight p. m. on the day of the fight.

As a further endeavor to get people into the theatre in opposition to the NBC broadcast of the fight, each of the houses participating broadcast the proceedings direct from the stage.

Ties "Test Pilot" To Local Air Show

Abundant was the newspaper publicity garnered by H. H. Maloney, aided by Hal Winston for the "Test Pilot" date at Loew's Poli, Worcester, Mass. Tying in with local air show, which was attended by Mayor Bennett and other local prominents, stories and art work were run in papers, together with mention of the trophies to be awarded.

Rush flight was made from the North Grafton Airport to East Boston and return with film was part of the elaborate program for National Want Ad Week being observed by more than 500 leading papers throughout the country. Photo of the return of the plane with Mayor Bennett and Mason Jennings, pilot, was planted in the Post, as was picture of Legion Drum Corps playing in front of theatre opening night.

Opening day, nine planes flew over city with the Mayor in lead, bannered truck from which announcements were made circulated streets, large airplane propeller was planted atop box office and miniature airplanes were hung from roof to lobby.

Holds Relay Race To Sell "Oxford"

Through the cooperation of the 17 fraternities of the University of Georgia, Moon Corker, Palace Theatre, Athens, Ga., for "Yank at Oxford," held a relay race between the fraternities made possible through aid of University officials.

Each fraternity entered three men, a total of 51, no member of varsity or freshman track was eligible to compete. The course of the race was around an entire city block, starting and finishing in front of the theatre. Each entrant was numbered and bore the fraternity insignia of which he represented. A card was placed on the backs of each bearing the title, theatre and playdate. Head coach of track and "Spec" Towns, world's record holder and Olympic champion in 120-yard high hurdler, officiated at the race.

City police cooperated by keeping the the streets clear of traffic, and a motorcycle policeman escorted each team around the block. Winning fraternity was given a theatre party and all contestants entered were given guest ticket to see the picture. Athen's Banner-Herald came through with several feature stories and pictures.

For "College Swing," Moon effected a tieup with local dealer of Rhythm Step Shoes which brought an essay contest among co-eds in university in papers on "Why I would like to wear a pair of," etc., etc. Winner was presented with pair of shoes, runners-up receiving guest tickets. Cooperating merchant plugged the contest over his radio program and newspaper ads.

Well Known Test Pilot Helps Sell That Date

When Kenneth Kress, world's champion test pilot recently arrived in Altoona to try out a new plane to be used at the local airport, Doug Mellott, Blair Theatre, Hollidaysbury, Pa. promoted the flyer for a personal appearance in connection with his showing of "Test Pilot" at the Blair. Papers carried stories together with art work.

Reported as proving successful are the old fashioned country store nights held every Tuesday by Doug. Merchandise prizes are promoted for giveaway in connection with the distribution of lucky number heralds, cooperating merchants plugging the nights in their stores and ads.

"Have You Contributed Lately?"

Junior Leaguers Enact "Snow White"

Highlight of Matt Saunders' "Snow White" date at Loew's Poli, Bridgeport, Conn., was cooperation of members of the Junior League, who dramatized the story on stage. Papers picked up the event, covering it with stories and abundant art work.

Large three-column scene from the opus was printed in the classified page of the Sunday Herald, guest tickets going to those best coloring the photo. Local artist and other prominents acted as judges. Mammoth street parade was held opening day, headed by local school Fife and Drum corps, boys carrying huge banners, "We're on our way," etc., etc.

JULY COMPETITION NOW UNDER WAY

All-Expense Trips to New York Offered By Distributors for Campaigns On July Dates Brings Quick Approval

by A-MIKE VOGEL

Right now, a lot of folks may still be discussing the result of the Louis-Schmeling fight, but many a Round Tabler is excited over something much more important to his own fortunes. That has to do with the free all-expense one-week vacation trips to New York offered by six picture companies for top campaigns on July playdates.

Yes, sir, friends, six distributors are inviting theatremen to have the time-of-a-lifetime in the Big City, and it might be a smart idea to hold off on contemplated vacations in exchange for an opportunity to win one of these sweet prizes, which takes in round-trip railroad transportation, hotels, meals, and entertainment. It's a honey, folks, and we wouldn't miss it, if we were you, no sir.

PRIZE TRIPS TO BE GIVEN ON PICTURES SELECTED BY PARTICIPATING COMPANIES

Paramount, Twentieth Century-Fox, Warner Brothers, United Artists. RKO Radio and Monogram are the hosts. Each of these companies is giving one trip for the best campaign or campaigns on that company's pictures selected by them for the contest. Here they are:

Paramount: "Tropic Holiday" and "Professor Beware."
Twentieth Century-Fox: "I'd Give a Million" and "Always Goodbye."
Warner Brothers: "Racket Busters."
United Artists: "Algiers."
RKO Radio: "Having Wonderful Time."
Monogram: "Romance of the Limberlost."

There they are. Eight big boxoffice pictures to play right smack in July, and theatremen who have any of these dates booked in during the month are eligible to compete.

NEW YORK CALLED PREMIER RESORT CITY IN THE GOOD OLD, SWEET SUMMER TIME

Theatremen who have been to New York know what a grand place it is to visit and those who haven't have heard all about it. Especially is the Big Burg attractive in the summer time. Millions of folks pour in to enjoy themselves with New York's summer attractions, such as will be wide open for the theatremen who take down the Big Winnings.

The rulings are simple. If you play any of the above-noted pictures between the first and last days of July, you are eligible to compete. Campaigns may be entered on one or as many of these you will play during the month. As usual, all "evidence" of exploitations, displays, ads and publicity must accompany each entry. Deadline has been set for midnight of August 13, which means that entries to be eligible must be received no later than that time. Entries should be forwarded to July Contest Editor, Managers' Round Table.

That's all there is to it. Are you in? Then let's go!

Verne's Kid Club Active Locally

Members of Verne Trembley's kiddie club at the Rialto in Detroit recently conducted a benefit show, funds collected were turned over to the committee in charge of finance for the city recreational program to be conducted during the summer. Each member donated five cents and in return was entertained with a monster stage and screen show arranged by "Uncle Vernie." Novel door prizes were promoted as gifts and local papers picked up the goodwill gesture on the part of the theatre carrying stories on the youngsters contribution to the fund.

Another stunt in connection with Trembley's club was a coronation which was held to determine the king and queen of kiddieland. Contestants paraded across stage dressed in their Sunday best, ballots were cast to choose the winners and on Coronation Day, Commissioner Reed, representing the mayor, presented the tots with the gold key to the city. Further surprise for the winners was presentation of personally autographed photos of Walt Disney, forwarded from Hollywood, as a token of appreciation for the honor accorded Mickey Mouse in placing him on the club's official coat-of-arms. Stories and photo on the event were run in paper and Vern reports the coronation as one of the most successful stunts put on in connection with his club.

Personal Appearance Exploits "Gold Diggers"

Well executed advance exploitation campaigns for "Gold Diggers in Paris" featuring the personal appearance of Ethelreda Leopold, glamor girl, caught plenty of space in the Albany papers three days ahead of the opening at Warners' Strand.

Appearing at department store several times during day Miss Leopold plugged the picture, while an interview with Lt. Gov. Bray, in Governor Lehman's absence, and George Williams, managing editor of the Hearst Times-Union also caught on well. Charles Smakwitz, district manager and Andy Roy, manager of the Strand arranged the tieups.

Smith Promotes Glider For "Test Pilot" Display

Bill Smith, before leaving Consolidated's Texas Theatre in Denton, Texas, for the Capitol in Amarillo, lined up with some of the town's aeronautic enthusiasts for his date on "Test Pilot." Bill promoted a glider that had crashed recently, planted it atop his marquee and to give it real effect, trees were placed with the canvas of the torn wing spread over them.

A turntable was set up in the booth to play sound recordings of an airplane taking off, diving and landing and a dummy pilot was used. Bill lined up with the Senior High School Band to play a concert on the afternoon of the opening for a few passes. To top off the stunt theatreman reports two cars crashed in front of the theatre. The persons driving the cars were looking out the window at the display.

SHOWMEN'S LOBBY LAFFS

Collins Holds Baby Popularity Contest

Through aid of cooperating merchants, ballots were made available for Louis Collins' baby popularity contest at the De Sota Theatre, De Sota, Mo. Each day votes were counted and posted on lobby easel so that contestants could tell at a glance how they stood. Since votes could only be secured through sales made at the ten cooperating stores, Collins reports the merchants as being well pleased with the results of the contest. Promoted cash and merchandise prizes were awarded winners.

Another feature which Collins recommends for small towns is the local movies. Once a week he takes pictures of folks, various activities, etc., and advertises through his screens, heralds, etc., that the pictures may be seen at his house. Louie says he never fails to pack them in the nights he shows these home made movies.

"BLOCKADE" DEADLINE SET FOR JULY 15TH

All entrants in United Artists' National Showmanship Week must submit their campaigns no later than July 15th in order to be eligible for the $1,000 in prizes, it was announced by Monroe Greenthal, advertising and publicity director.

The competition was held in connection with the national release of Walter Wanger's "Blockade" and was open to any theatre manager who played the picture during the week of June 17th through the 24th.

Seven prizes will be awarded: First, $500; second, $250; third, $100; fourth and fifth, $50; sixth and seventh, $25.

Archery Contest Helps Exploit "Robin Hood"

The Cleveland Archery Club cooperated with manager Ed Miller and publicity director Manny Pearlstein for their "Robin Hood" opening at Warners' Hippodrome. Competitions to which public was invited began two weeks in advance, making the third and final meet fall on the first Sunday picture was to play. Only cost to theatre for all publicity received in papers was cost of cup, ribbons and pins presented to winners.

Cleveland Hiking Club consented to designate two hikes they were conducting Sunday ahead of opening, as "Robin Hood Hikes." Notices of these were sent to all spots receiving hiking news, notices were planted on bulletin board of club, etc.

Coinciding with the engagement of the picture, Olivia De Havilland stopped off in Cleveland for the evening on her return to the coast. Much was made of the personal with papers carrying stories, photos, etc. Essay contest was conducted among all junior high schools for the best theme on "Robin Hood" with autographed scripts from the coast going to the winners. Leading book shops featured counter displays, toy shop devoted window to "Robin Hood" toys and book marks were distributed in all branch libraries.

Ties Straw Vote to Election

Since Gallup, New Mexico, was in the throes of its city election when Johnny Sanders, Chief Theatre, was playing "County Chairman," he staged a straw vote at his house. Banners were placed over entrance doors, left door having "Democrats enter here" and right door, "Non-Partisans Enter Here." Toothpicks were handed to each patron by the cashier with instructions to drop them in their respective boxes. For street bally boys carried banner reading, "Will Rogers for County Chairman."

They Advertise the City As Well As the Theatres

Walter Reade Organization Works With Municipal Publicity Bureau to Sell Asbury Park

by HERMAN M. ADDISON, JR.
Manager, Paramount, Asbury Park, N. J.

Asbury Park, N. J., is one of "America's Finest Resort Cities" and annually attracts some twelve million visitors from the Eastern United States, who make the pilgrimage to this seashore resort not only for the bathing, but for the many other excellent vacation facilities which it offers.

Exploitation, advertising and publicity on our activities here are carried out jointly by the Walter Reade Organization, under the personal direction of Walter Reade, and the city's own municipal publicity bureau. The Walter Reade Organization operates all of the city's theatres and controls the amusement policies of Reade's Casino and the Convention Hall. The city publicity department under the able guidance of George Zuckerman, handles all the general angles of publicity and advertising in their successful efforts to bring visitors and vacationists to the 200-odd hotels, the famous boardwalk, bathing beaches, amusements and sports attractions which are rated among the best in the nation.

Practically every known form of tie-up is used by the Reade Organization to exploit the unusual features of the resort. Trailers are used, as well as radio time, newspapers in all the Reade Theatres in other cities. There are mailing lists, etc. Reade Theatre managers in other towns are big boosters for Asbury Park. They are carefully given all details of the advantages to be found here by vacationists, and help plant the publicity stunts, stories, etc., with their local papers.

One of the most unusual stunts in recent years was the deliberate opening of the Casino for dancing by Mr. Reade, a direct opposition to his own theatres here. Showmen will say "Why?" The answer is simple. There are thousands of people who carefully check every angle of a resort before deciding to spend their vacations there. A large majority of these people are radio or dance fans. Why not something that would sell them on their amusements other than theatres, because after all they can always see a picture show at home? But how many of them can see, hear and dance to Benny Goodman, Jimmy Dorsey, Kay Kyser, Guy Lombardo, Rudy Vallee, Isham Jones, Horace Heidt, Tommy Dorsey, Henry Busse and others, in person? And these at popular prices. Surely it would be an inducement to come to Asbury Park. Once here, our super modern theatres, start their own individual exploitation activities. The business people of the city of Asbury Park are all agreed that the opening of the Casino, was one of the smartest moves ever made on behalf of the town, and the policy at the Casino has been a definite asset to the city. Thus we have here an exploitation stunt that not only does not cost us money, but actually makes money for us.

SUMMER BUSINESS, AND HOW TO GET IT

Theatremen situated in popular resort centers are naturally concerned with the problem of competing with many forms of next-door opposition in getting a slice of the extra business. What the boys do to round up their share of this added patronage is obviously of interest to the entire membership, and on this page is set down how the Walter Reade Organization does it in Asbury Park.

We are actually operating an opposition business which definitely helps our theatres, because it has been instrumental in bringing many thousands of visitors and vacationists here who would otherwise never have come.

Unlike most theatre operations throughout the country, we do not object to or look unfavorably at outside events such as the Easter Orchid Promenade, the Annual Ricksha Race, the Marine Pageant, Tulip Week, the Annual Bridge Tournament and others too numerous to mention. Rather do we encourage these activities, taking part in all of them, and actually handling, staging and promoting most of them with the cooperation of the Asbury Park municipal publicity department. In the majority of these events we arrange to hold the finals at either the Casino, Convention Hall or one of our theatres. It has never failed to prove profitable to us. Another reason for our encouragement of such activities is because these events tend to bring visitors to the city, and make it more interesting for the vacationer already here.

Theatremen Sell Copy

Whilst the greater part of our summer patronage is transient, we do not regard it as such. Every member of the Reade Organization is carefully trained to explain to visitors the various points of interest in and about Asbury Park. The theory we work on is that once a vacationist arrives our work is only partly done. It is then that we really start to sell our theatres, beaches, parks, boardwalks, fishing, bathing, boating and golfing to the people of the United States. To us everyone who is spending a few hours or a few weeks here is a good potential return customer. Not only do we go out of our way to make his stay a pleasant one, but we endeavor to instill an enthusiastic interest in Asbury in each and every one, in the expectations that on his return to his native city he will talk about what a grand time he had here. It is the "good will" angle all over again. And even though our average patron only comes to our theatres once or twice during an entire year, we feel that his good will is important to us. Therefore strange as it seems, "good will" is playing a part in operation.

Every car on the highways within a radius of seventy miles of Asbury Park carries potential customers for our merchants and the Walter Reade Theatres. One hundred twenty-four sheets, four hundred three sheets, five hundred one sheets, and four thousand window cards are part of the huge advertising campaign each week during the season. These shots all carry our city slogan and many of them advertise the town as well as the theatres.

Upon his arrival the visitor finds institutional and current attraction copy wherever he turns. Boards (our own) in all hotels give him an exact knowledge of what is going on at each individual theatre, the Casino and Convention Hall. A staff of three men do nothing but change these boards. If he is a "term" visitor (two weeks or more) he is immediately placed on the summer mailing list. During the day and early part of the evenings a public address system operated by us provides bathers and boardwalk strollers within a radius of a mile of the Paramount Theatre and Convention Hall with music, news events, and of course, the usual plugs on our current attractions.

Much Exploitation Used

Another of our pet stunts here is the use of a large sailboat equipped with a public address system which sails up and down the beach-front with our attractions on the sails. Cards in all bathhouses, blotters in all hotel rooms, napkins in all restaurants are other favorite methods of advertising. Newspaper publicity and ads in 50 daily and weekly papers in the smaller resort and residential towns in the immediate vicinity are all part of the schedule. Ballyhoos are used exclusively on the boardwalk (when we can get it by the police). Fronts, lobby displays, elaborate mechanical set pieces and all other art work are designed and built right in our own art shop in the Paramount Theatre. The art shop is manned by three artists, two carpenters and an electrician, and they turn out the work for the Paramount, Mayfair, St. James, Casino, Convention Hall, Lyric, Savoy and Ocean Theatres. Institutional trailers, "welcome visitors" trailers, and "What's playing at the other Walter Reade Houses" trailers are all an important part of our advertising efforts.

Theatremen Sell City's Attractions

The attractions at our theatres include first run pictures, stage shows, exploitation pictures, legitimate road shows, Broadway tryouts, grand opera, symphony concerts, indoor circuses, ice carnivals, big "name" dance bands, beauty contests, pageants, and almost every other type of theatrical attraction.

Our summer business, however, is not all that we concentrate on. We could not survive on that alone. We depend on our local merchants, tradesmen and workers for business during the other nine months of the year. This also requires considerable planning and advertising. We have no doubt that even without such an intensive effort to attract visitors during the summer season, we would do fairly well, but it would not be enough to carry us through the fall, winter and early spring. Therefore we find it expedient to do everything in our power to attract the vacationist and visitor to Asbury not just for the purpose of securing his patronage, but so he will spend his money with our local merchants, tradesmen and workers who make their homes here all year round. A bad summer here for our merchants, tradesmen and workers would hurt us far more in January and February than in July and August, for the simple reason that our merchants, workers and residents depend on their summer profits and earnings to carry them all year.

In summing it up we find that the beaches, boardwalk, bathing, fishing, golfing and boating are a boon to us rather than a detriment. They make Asbury Park "One Of America's Finest Resort Cities" and we not only sell that idea and slogan, but are sold on it ourselves.

Shall I make reservations for you?

JACK SCOTT
has been appointed manager of the Dickinson Theatre at Osage City, Kan. ERNEST C. LEEVES, JR., will manage the Macon, Macon, Mo.

is managing the Rustic, George Baker's resort theatre in West Yellowstone, Wyo., for the summer.

for seven years general manager of the Notopoulos and Altoona Publix Theatres, in Western Pennsylvania and Cumberland, Md., has resigned. Plans for his future have not yet been announced.

of Theatrical Managers Circuit, Muncie, Ind., paid Round Table headquarters a long anticipated visit with his wife and daughter.

GEORGE H. STEVENS
has been appointed manager of the new Drive-In Theatre, Akron, Ohio.

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parentheses after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1937-38 season.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

J. C. JENKINS—HIS COLYUM

Norfolk, Nebraska

Dear Herald:

We put a dime in a slot machine and that's gambling, but if we put ten bucks on the sorrel mare, that's speculating.

We don't like to be termed a gambler, and so when we cast a plug into an open spot in the splatterdock we speculate that we'll get a bass. A young couple get married; they don't gamble, they speculate. He speculates that he has drawn an American Beauty rose when it is not unlikely that he drew a Canadian thistle. She speculates that she has drawn a permanent meal ticket with huckleberry pie and chocolate ice cream for dessert, and it might be that her dessert will consist of beans and sowbelly with dill pickles. But at that they have the best of the rest of us for they have Reno to fall back on, while we have to fall back on the county.

There is one sure thing, however, that we can speculate on to a certainty, and that's taxes. We know, for we recently returned from the treasurer's office with a pocketbook as flat as a sow's ear.

M. Bemond operates the Ord Theatre at Ord, Nebraska, and Ord is in the midst of the best popcorn district in the state, and many a theatre boy is furnishing his patrons with Ord popcorn. Our guess is that Mr. Bemond had something to do with that too.

Jevver hear of Joe Lucas? Joe owns the State theatre at Central City, Neb., and the State theatre at Idaho Springs, Col., and Joe asked us to have the HERALD sent to both theatres. No further evidence of his excellent judgment is necessary. The jury is dismissed.

Henry Youngman observes that "when we are broke we are sure to have no friends, but when we are rich we have no friends we are sure of." How true that is. When we were poor we didn't have a friend on earth, but now —well, we haven't any yet that we know of.

South Sioux City, Neb., is just across the Missouri river from Sioux City, Iowa, and you run out of one right smack dab into the other, that is, provided you have the price of the toll.

South Soo is in the "White Spot" and that may be why Sioux City, Iowa, is afflicted with the jim jams. A. E. Thacker owns and operates two theatres in South Soo, both good ones, and his new one is a honey, good enough for anybody. A. E. writes us that he wants the HERALD. Sure he does.

The people of the Goodall Electric theatre equipment company of Ogallala, Neb., have been constant readers of the HERALD ever since Heck had pups that time, and they ask us to keep them in the Herald family. We know of no more laudable ambition than to have our name listed with the Herald folks. It's a sign of intelligent progress.

Steve Farrar of the Orpheum theatre at Harrisburg, Ill., evidently hasn't forgotten us, for he sent us his check to have the HERALD sent to the Orpheum and to Charley Farrar of the Grand at Vienna. Steve was very nice to us when we called on him several years ago.

We have been trying to forget Joe Hewitt of the two theatres at Robinson because he beat us playing golf once, but that's not so surprising when we remember that he handled the score card. How we'd love to see Joe and Mrs. Joe and our good friends who operate the theatre at Oblong.

Abbotts Return from Paris Film Exhibition

John E. Abbott, director of the Museum of Modern Art Film Library, and Mrs. Abbott (Iris Barry), curator of the Library, returned to New York this week after a trip to Paris, Berlin and London. Mr. and Mrs. Abbott went abroad six weeks ago to supervise the installation of the motion picture section of the exhibition of American Art in the Jeu de Paume Museum, Paris.

The exhibition includes a step-by-step record of the making of a film and the showing of three 55 minute film programs several times daily. The programs trace, in brief highlights, the history of the American motion picture from 1894 to 1937.

Zeidman Joins Browne As Production Head

Bennie Zeidman has been appointed executive vice-president in charge of production, of Malcolm Browne Pictures Corporation, with headquarters in Hollywood. Mr. Zeidman is now preparing the scripts and cast for the first of the 20 productions to be distributed by Malcolm Browne.

Mr. Browne returned to New York this week from an extended trip to the middle west, where he arranged states rights distribution for the company's product, and in Cincinnati signed a contract with Lee Goldberg of Big Feature Rights Exchange for western Ohio, Kentucky and Indiana, and with Anne V. O'Donnell of Monarch Pictures Company, of Detroit, for Michigan territory.

"MONOPOLY"

WHEN Ringling's big top was folded and shipped off to Sarasota the other day in mid-season, as culmination of a labor dispute, it was a signal of something that has happened in this America, something that is still in the process of happening—all made pointed, poignant and particular to the world of showmanship.

If one may pause the moment between larger concerns and the lesser and personal, mayhap the passing of the eternally ebullient and optimistic Mr. Dexter Fellows before this dark hour was less a tragedy than survival might have been, for him.

It seems just possible, even unpleasantly probable, that the last stand of larger showmanship is the motion picture, as the art and industry that it is today.

The stage has become a WPA project, a "nationalized" institution in the hands of entrepreneurs of the undeclared revolution. The Radio, war born, has grown up under Federal surveillance, and has been building the while a heritage of precedence and rules for Television, destined also never to have a free day.

There has been enough in the public prints of the last five years to indicate that the public press, most conspicuously the newspapers, have seen and continue to face a problem of the survival of what we would like to call a "free press."

Ample indeed is the evidence that there are forces that would seek and hold possession of all of the media of address to the multitudes.

Enthusiasm for that program might be had if indications could be seen of the special nature of the salvation of the masses to be so promulgated.

The motion picture, important among the technological industries, must be concerned with all that pertains to industry. The motion picture is integrated with the whole of the national and international fabric, not alone in the terms of its end-product of entertainment, but in every step of the process by which it is created. The motion picture is silver, cotton, and all manner of metallurgical things. It is labor and inspiration and zeal and genius. It includes the shimmers of the rainbows and the whimsy of madmen and the ditherings of glorious fools, the memories of minnesingers, along with as much from the savants and sages as the audience can take.

And all industry now must view with immediate concern such acute promises of special attention as the current emphasis of address under the White House project of "study of monopoly."

THE very phraseology of the program is pungent with presumption. "Monopoly" is taken over from the vocabulary of description to be made a term of indictment. It is made a word of hate, even as in a somewhat earlier day "trust" was shouted to incite distrust.

The motion picture was born of a monopoly. It was the monopoly of inventive intelligence centered in a train-butcher-telegrapher-experimenter by the name of Edison, "under privileged" likely as not. It achieved practicality through another monopoly, which consisted of the intelligence of an attic dark-room experimenter, the bank clerk son of a widowed Rochester boarding house keeper by the name of Eastman. He probably was "under privileged," too. Neither, to be sure, while we dally with phrases, was a "forgotten man" because neither had previously been heard from. These men were ruthless monopolists, seizing as they did these golden opportunities, right in the faces of several million others who had the same rights and privileges of invention and creation.

The dream hungry masses buying the wares of the screen created and empowered an industry. In that industry neither capital nor patent control nor any device of monopoly privilege prevailed. The last Edison picture was made in 1916, and that was some years after the name had become all but unknown on the screen. A new dynasty of masters of the movies had arisen on the authority, the "mandate" if you like the word, of the masses who cast votes at the box office in their free choice of getting their money's worth.

No one has ever really ruled the box office but the customer.

THE customer has always encouraged success. That has inevitably led to various, but diverse, concentrations of skill and capital. The demand for the superior product has empowered the superior producer. The demand for the best in presentation and exhibition has created the mechanisms and concentrations of that service. In so far as the larger institution has been able to render larger service it has come into being. When the institution has become too big it has disintegrated by natural, inevitable processes. An example is afforded, if you chance to remember, in a certain outgiving on this page a few years ago under the title of "Too Dam Big," which was a discussion of certain analogies between the dinosaur and the ponderous Publix, which presently broke up into entities small enough to function. There is a larger law that no Congress or dictator will ever put on the books, that rules.

A neat, compact and explicit demonstration of the creative force of the automatic processes of demand from the masses is afforded in the current spec-

THE constructively minded majority will view with interested anticipations the formation of the Distributors' Committee to deal with a recasting of relations between Distribution and Exhibition—in official words: "for the solution of such trade problems as are still matters of contention." ¶ The procedure has the normal, reasonable aspects of operation in an industry which has so long, and on the whole so successfully, tended to its own business by interior regulations and disciplines. ¶ It is inevitable, in an industry so filled with competitions and complexities of function and mechanism as this, that there must be from time to time interludes of both adjustment and readjustment. Meanwhile the whole fabric of American industry, from steel to shoe-laces, is in varying steps of like processes. Inevitably the motion picture, the most intimately and yet broadly merchandised of products, must, for reasons quite as much external as internal, share in the reactions of the day. ¶ The selection of Mr. Sidney R. Kent as chairman of the committee of adjustment is at once both a recognition of his high status in that difficult mid-region between distribution and exhibition, and an earnest of sincere purpose in the project.

This Week

Free Show Protest

Exhibitor protests against free shows sponsored by merchants in the south and middle west have attracted the attention of the Motion Picture Copyright Protection Bureau, maintained by distributors to police copyrights and prosecute in cases of bicycling. It is claimed that in many cases the free shows make use of feature picture prints which are bootlegged from exchanges or illegally duplicated. Jack Levin, head of the Bureau, suggests that exhibitors suspecting the use of illegal prints communicate with Bureau headquarters in New York.

Postponed Fireworks

Although the Folkestone summer conference of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association passed without untoward incident it was not for lack of reason for disagreement and high dispute but rather because controversial issues were firmly subdued and their discussion postponed to a later and more propitious moment. The press, watching the conference anxiously, had reason to believe that the unity and solidarity exhibited in the fight on grading is not too strong and that future internal harmony will result only from extensive effort by the leaders.

Aubrey Flanagan analyzes the conference on page 34.

"Action Without Talk"

A distributors' trade practice committee, considering plans for a self-regulation program for distributor-exhibitor relations continued its work this week under a policy of "action without talk." The committee was represented as being determined to proceed in the face of any conservative attitude which may be displayed by the legal representatives of the film companies. Tryree Dillard, a member of Loew's legal staff, declared that so far no formula has been found which, in the opinion of attorneys, will protect the company against lawsuits by aggrieved exhibitors.

Details are on page 16.

Wages and Hours

Application of the Labor Standards Act, the wages and hours bill passed by Congress in its closing moments, to the motion picture industry is as yet uncertain. Washington observers believed that the distribution branch would certainly come under its provisions, that independent exhibitors operating purely locally would be exempted, that the status of large circuits was uncertain. The case of production likely will be settled by a supreme court decision on whether or not it is in interstate commerce, growing out of the producers' protest that the recent National Labor Board ruling was invalid.

The bill is discussed on page 14.

tacular success of "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs." Mr. Walt Disney came out of the Nowhere-much hardly more than ten years ago and today is acclaimed an international, well near cosmic, success. He did not build a better mouse trap, but instead a better mouse. No one knew Mickey was the better mouse except the customers. "Snow White" is a monopoly product consisting of Mr. Disney's "know how" and about a million dollars of manpower and materials. Someway it would seem difficult to anticipate that a WPA picture industry might give us a "Snow White," or even a "Snow Pink."

There are conspicuous opportunities as wide as the amusement map of the United States, and some of the rest of the world, for successes as great as Mr. Disney's. He enjoyed no special opportunity, found no special encouragement. He will afford a nice case study for inquiry into "monopoly."

THE motion picture is less susceptible than the product of any other of our great industries to final control. It has repeatedly and almost continuously broken through every commercial cordon. In 1910 all competent, and some incompetent, producers were allied, every exchange and every projection machine was under license. By 1914 that picture was demolished, by "Independents" who did a better job for the public. About 1917 it was charged that Mr. Adolph Zukor with his Famous Players-Lasky corporation had control of 80 percent of the industry's creative talent. Mr. Samuel Goldwyn escaped. Mr. Louis J. Selznick was never corralled. Mr. J. D. Williams proved elusive. In 1928 it was said that, empowered by sound and its machines, the "big electrics" would rule the industry, inexorably and forever. Since then the "electrics" have been mainly concerned with how to let go of what they got ahold of. Then the cry was "the bankers are the bosses." Lady Hollywood and all the customers, too, were to be under the heel of Wall Street. Money was king.

Then the biggest of the banking partners of the industry wrote off about forty million dollars worth of mishaps or misjudgments. And presently, demonstrating once again the degree of free opportunity, appeared Mr. Joseph Schenck, equipped with some "know how" and a slender wisp of a man, Mr. Darryl Zanuck, whose capital consisted of ideas, to salvage what had promised to be one of the industry's biggest corporate debacles.

It would seem that not only is gold where you find it but it is made of what it is.

The indications are that the monopoly hunters, the regulators and the bureaucrats will likely have no more luck doing things about the motion picture industry than others have had. But it may be easy enough for them to make quite a mess while they are trying.—TERRY RAMSAYE

Threats from Chicago

A delegation said to represent 100 independent Chicago exhibitors and circuits was in New York this week to present to distributors demands for alleviation of what was described as an impossible clearance and zoning situation in Chicago, second largest motion picture market in the country. The aggrieved delegation, headed by Aaron Saperstein, president of Allied States Association of Illinois, claimed that the Balaban and Katz circuit, dominating the exhibition field in the Chicago territory, receives unreasonable and unfair concessions on clearance and zoning because of its buying power. The situation, they said, has been aggravated in the last 12 months by B & K's use of double features, doubling the number of feature pictures which receive clearance protection. Threats of a comprehensive anti-trust suit were heard.

The committee is quoted on page 13.

Monogram Studio

George W. Weeks, Monogram director of sales, this week announced that his company will construct its own studio in Hollywood. However, he did not disclose the location or other details concerning the project. In making the announcement, Mr. Weeks declared: "Exhibitor reaction to such of our pictures as 'Boy of the Streets' and 'Girl of the Limberlost,' recently released, makes this move necessary. We have aimed to reach the man in the street. It has been proved that the man who rides the street car must be served. Our policy is to please him." Mr. Weeks also referred to double bills by saying: "It has often been demonstrated that the second picture is the dessert of the dinner. When the first course is indigestible the dessert frequently makes the whole meal enjoyable."

Hollywood's Role

Pointing up the industry's progress in developing its motion pictures to a higher standard, the Government's National Resources Committee, constituted chiefly of Cabinet officers, reported to President Roosevelt this week that films will play an important part in the cultural improvement of the nation as it approaches its peak of population.

The committee told the President that the trend in film content is running away from the "vulgar," and toward a higher quality. The report is detailed on page 21.

German Rules

As was generally expected, it was officially announced in Berlin this week that all regulations covering the German film industry and the importation of foreign films have been extended by official decree to Austria.

To Increase Holdings

Atlas Corporation expects to increase its holdings of RKO stock and debentures this month by acquiring an additional one-twelfth of the RCA's interest. The move will be made in order to comply with the requirements for obtaining a six months extension of Atlas' option to purchase the balance of the RCA holdings. Under the provisions of the option Atlas was privileged to acquire the remaining 555,254 shares of RKO common stock and $4,485,550 fact amount of debentures held by RCA for $5,500,000 up to July 1st. With no action being taken by that date, Atlas may obtain an extension by acquiring one-twelfth of the remaining holdings for $500,000 during July. This action would increase the Atlas investment in RKO to more than $6,000,000 and would increase its holdings of RKO securities to approximately 700,000 shares of common and $5,700,000 face amount of debentures.

Stock Appreciation

Gaining in value more than $50,427,000, motion picture stocks on the New York Stock Exchange kept pace with industrial leaders in the upswing that sent all prices of securities soaring, the film group rising from $618,200,875 to $688,627,875 in a few days.

The movement is outlined on page 15.

Increased Business

Increased business for the Columbia Broadcasting System during the first six months of 1938 as compared to the same period in 1937 was estimated this week and, at the same time, the Mutual network reported a 15 per cent increase for the same six months. The cumulative billings for Mutual during the first half of this year aggregated $1,342,182 as compared to $1,165,620 in 1937. Other developments in the fields of radio this week included the announcement of the results of two surveys. One was conducted by the Bureau of Advertising of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, and the second, by the bureau of home economics of the Department of Agriculture.

The survey results are included in a story on page 26.

Federal Theatre

The Federal Theatre Project has widened its activities in Chicago, where there has long been a dearth of legitimate theatre shows. Officials of the government-sponsored project said this week that they had undertaken to operate the Selwyn theatre in the Loop in cooperation with the Shubert interests.

The first Federal Theatre play at the Selwyn is "Master Jim," a production with which the theatre will compete with the professional and commercial theatre at standard box office rates.

Italian Independence

A "five-year-plan," designed to increase Italian film production from its present level to approximately 250 pictures annually, has been inaugurated by Italy, Joseph D. Ravotto, MOTION PICTURE HERALD correspondent, reported from Rome this week. The plan, according to Mr. Ravotto, is to reverse, within five years, the film figures of last year when 38 films were purchased in Italy and 235 were imported, 75 per cent of which were of American origin.

Mr. Ravotto's article explaining the situation in detail is on page 17.

Investigation Asked

Abram F. Myers, general counsel of Allied States Association, in a letter to a member of the joint Congressional committee which is beginning its big business investigation, this week asked that a study be made of the "organization, financing policies and practices" of the motion picture industry, charging that the producer-distributors' present practices not only drive independents out of business but regulate those who remain in business.

The letter is reported on page 13.

Supporting him will be Frances Dee, Basil Rathbone, Ellen Drew and many competent players. Frank Lloyd as producer and director has laid out and followed one of the most intensive production programs ever attempted at the studio.

British Exhibitors Meet at Folkstone

FRESH from their unified and vigorous attack on the Kinematograph Renters' Society in the matter of grading and looking forward to the settlement of other long rankling grievances through the machinery for negotiation which was set up following that fight, British exhibitors, members of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association, met in summer conference at Folkestone to discuss the state of the industry and ponder future plans. CHICAGO INDEPENDENTS MARCH ON NEW YORK DEMANDING DEAL

Monogram Leads Independent Distributors' Uprising Against Attempts to Settle Chicago Clearance Dispute: No Duals

A group of independent exhibitors, said to number about one hundred, up in arms for a year over socalled "aggressions" of major interests in Chicago, second largest film market in the country, sent a secret delegation to New York on Wednesday to make "final" demands that the "unfair" Chicago clearance-and-zoning situation be corrected without further ado.

Settlement, either by "cooperation or correction," is the independents' ultimatum, and by "correction," the independents have let it be known, is meant an anti-trust suit in the federal courts, possibly instituted by 100 owners, against Balaban & Katz and the large distributors, because of the present clearance accorded B & K to, the independents say, the detriment of the city's subsequent-run theatres. Talk of a "war chest" has been heard.

Balaban and Katz is the predominating circuit in Chicago, controlling some 50 houses in the city alone. The circuit is about 97 per cent controlled by Paramount, of which Barney Balaban, one of the B & K circuit founders, is the president.

The basis of the argument is that there are 300 subsequent-runs in the Chicago district, that nearly every one of them is affected, more or less, by the clearance protection afforded Balaban and Katz through its buying power, and that B & K uses twice as many features on a double-bill policy under the existing clearance as the circuit did when it ran single features under the same protection. A speed-up of availability of product is demanded.

Chicago's "secret" delegation—comprised of Aaron Saperstein, president of the local Allied exhibitors' organization; Eddie Silverman, head of the independent Chicago circuit known as Essaness, and one of the independents most affected, and Joe Rosenberg, legal chief in the fight—left Illinois Tuesday afternoon aboard the Twentieth Century, Ltd., arriving in New York early Wednesday. They set up a base of operations at the St. Regis hotel, in Fifth Avenue. Mr. Rosenberg, besides guiding the legal procedure in the present argument, also represents Mr. Silverman and Essaness, through the law firm of Rosenberg, Stein and Rosenberg.

After letters were sent last week to all distributors Mr. Rosenebrg said legal action would be taken within a few days unless they were answered, threats of a suit echoing similar threats expressed from the same quarters over a period of months. Papers in a suit in the present controversy are understood to have been drawn and await filing.

Not known generally is the probability that the independents are willing to forego their legal attack if B & K abandons its dual bill policies for singles, which would release more product to the independents.

Spokesmen for the organized industry said Wednesday that any open fight between the independents and majors over trade practices would be most unfortunate at this time, in view of last week's declaration by the majors for self-regulation and their appointment of a committee headed by Sidney R. Kent, president of Twentieth Century-Fox, to formulate such a program, and in view of the visit of executives to President Roosevelt, during which they told Mr. Roosevelt about the "encouraging picture . . . of the continued progress in self-regulation by the motion picture industry." This comment presumably relates to federal investigation of trade practices on numerous complaints of distributors' "aggressions" as filed with the Department of Justice in the past year by independents.

Nor would controversy end with B & K's restoration of single feature policies, if they should.

"If the independents' representatives are in New York for relief from clearance, that is a matter between buyer and seller, and we will play no part in that picture," declared Edward A. Golden, vice-president of Monogram Pictures, and generally accredited spokesman of independent distributors for furtherance of double bills. "But if they are here to foster any conspiracy for the elimination of double bills we are very much interested."

Elsewhere, however, it was learned that Mr. Rosenberg as counsel for the independents spoke with Mr. Keough at the Paramount home office and officially presented the exhibitors' demands for elimination of double bills in Chicago.

That the independents will fight for singles is the conclusion of those on the "inside" in Chicago, this being based on Attorney Rosenberg's assertion that the present clearance setup with double bills "throws everything to Balaban and Katz." He is understood also to hold that this is in violation of the consent decree entered into in 1932 in federal court in Chicago in a previous fight against B & K and distributors over local distribution-exhibition practices.

Some of the independents in Chicago feel that Mr. Balaban himself eventually will serve as the representative of the distributors in the situation, which developed two years ago, immediately after B & K "bolted" the voluntarily established citywide prohibition against dual bills.

B & K's abandonment of doubles, if they did agree to such action as a compromise settlement of the independents' demands, probably would have to be effected in an agreement drawn up among the city's exhibitors.

The status of the rights of any Chicago independents, other than those lined up in the current controversy in any concerted exhibitor move to abolish duals was questioned in New York on Wednesday by Mr. Golden for the independent distributors. He pointed out that the entire issue might be boiled down to the point where independents, charging "conspiracy" by the major interests in Chicago clearance-and-zoning, are proposing to the majors that they overlook any conspiracy in production if the majors will agree to act with them in outlawing duals.

Mr. Keough, the Paramount counsel, was not available for discussion of the matter.

Mr. Saperstein, reached at the St. Regis hotel, said, "We're in the middle of this thing." He refused to confirm or deny existence of the independents' ambition to eliminate double bills, nor would he discuss the story that Paramount invited his delegation to New York.

Chicago's independents claim that they bought films according to a clearance and release setup which had been accepted as standard by their local industry, and that the distributors gave them the films at an inferior playing time. This refers specifically to the independents' complaint that B & K has filled-in the previously "dead" weeks between the Loop and the general release week at 25 cents.

Allied Asks Monopoly Committee For Investigation of Industry

In sequel to, if not in consequence of, the call of the executives of the dominant film corporations at the White House, June 25th, Abram F. Myers, general counsel of the Allied States Association, this week asked an investigation of the "billion dollar" film trust by the Administration's joint legislative-executive Monopoly Committee.

Learning of the appointment between the industry leaders and the President, Abram F. Myers, general counsel of Allied, telegraphed to Allied leaders in the field to send wires to the White House urging the President not to allow the companies' executives to influence him.

Writing to Representative Edward Eicher (Dem.) of Iowa, a member of the committee, Mr. Myers asked that a study be made of the "organization, financing, policies and practices" of the motion picture industry.

"Certainly," he wrote, "the degree of regimentation imposed by the motion picture trust on the theatres and the effects, both actual and potential, on the theatre-going public are a challenge to government itself."

Allied's petition to the committee came as Department of Justice officials turned their attention anew to the report which for some months has been resting on Attorney-General Homer Cummings' desk, covering an intensive investigation of conditions in the motion picture industry.

Criticism has been voiced by independent interests over the failure of the Government to move and there is now a desire in Washington to head off further attacks.

Congressional and Administration members of the Monopoly Committee met Thursday to work out further details of their program,

STATUS OF CIRCUITS AND PRODUCERS UNDER LABOR ACT IS STILL IN DOUBT

But Distributors Definitely Are Subject to Wages-and-Hours Law; Individual Exhibitors Are Not Involved, It Seems

by FRANCIS L. BURT
in Washington

With a court challenge of its constitutionality admittedly inevitable, the new U. S. Labor Standards Act—the wages-and-hours law—passed at the last session of Congress is now law, and will go into effect on or about November 1st.

The possible effect of the new law upon the motion picture industry is still a matter of conjecture, the only certainty being that it will apply to distributors, regarding the interstate character of whose operations there has been no question, and will not apply to the owners of single theatres, who will come under the classification of retailers engaged in purely local business.

In all probability, the act will apply to producers, since their operations are said by the U. S. to have an effect upon interstate commerce. While the producers have consistently claimed to be engaged in purely intrastate operations, and have cited court decisions in support of their contention, the National Labor Relations Board only recently held them to come under the Wagner Labor Relations Act, in passing on the petition of the screen writers for an election to determine what labor organization should represent them for collective bargaining purposes.

Whether the only remaining group, the large theatre circuit, may also be brought within the purview of the legislation as being engaged in interstate commerce, has not been determined, but it is probable that the status of all groups in the industry will be officially fixed by orders issued by the Administrator of the act, not yet named by President Roosevelt.

The Child Labor Phase

While the new law specifically bars child labor, an exemption was incorporated nullifying that provision insofar as it applies to the only branch of the film industry in which child labor appears—the production branch—in the realization that child labor in the picture industry is a different proposition from child labor in any other activity.

On the whole, even if the act is held to apply to the motion picture industry's various groups, the concensus is that it will not be a serious matter, because of the industry's existing comparatively higher standards of wages and hours.

Initially, the act provides for a minimum wage of 25 cents per hour and a maximum working week of 44 hours—$11 per week—with time and one-half for overtime. After a year, the wage goes up to 30 cents per hour and the working week drops to 42 hours—$12.60 per week—and eventually the standards will be 40 cents per hour for a 40-hour week—$16 per week.

Radio's Wages

The radio broadcasting industry pays the highest wages in the industrial field, according to a survey by the Bureau of Labor Statistics made public here by Broadcasting Magazine. With an average weekly compensation of $45.12 for its 17,000 full-time station employes, the magazine reported, the industry ranks ahead of motion picture production with a $41.33 average and the stock brokerage business with an average of $34.47.

Before the maximum is achieved, however, permanent minimum wage rates will be worked out for each classification in each industry by special committees to be appointed by the Administrator—one for each industry—on which employers, labor and the public will be equally represented. These committees will have the responsibility of determining the highest minimum wage which each industry can pay without bringing about a reduction in employment—but a ceiling of 40 cents per hour is fixed.

Constitutionality Issue

Constitutionality of the legislation will be challenged on the ground that the act attempts to bring under federal control establishments whose activities are such as to be regulated only by the states. This is the same ground that wrecked the NRA, which attempted to control activities which the court held were not in interstate commerce.

The swift succession of events preceding passage of the Wages and Hours Bill in Congress left organized labor somewhat breathless, but nevertheless there was considerable speculation in Washington as to the possibility of making changes in the act as soon as possible.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, is expected to work out some suggestions as soon as he hears from those who may be affected by various provisions in the bill. He fought against the creation of one or more wage boards to administer the act and he also opposed flexible provisions to permit wage differentials to be made under certain conditions.

Whether Mr. Green will go to the next Congress and ask for the repeal of these sections will be determined later. If the building trade unions were to have their way Mr. Green would oppose the entire measure.

The building crafts are still against minimum wages for men.

There was some speculation also as to whether the A. F. of L. would fight to take responsibility for the administration of the act from the Department of Labor. The Federation leaders opposed permitting Secretary Perkins to have any hand in the bill's administration but the new wage and hour division is set up in the Labor Department.

PARAMOUNT STUDIO FAVORED GUILD

The Screen Writers Guild has received added strength in its fight to be named the collective bargaining agency for writers generally. With the clearing of challenged votes in the National Labor Relations Board poll of writers it is seen that the majority of ballots cast at the Paramount studio favored the Guild over Screen Playwrights.

The hearing on the challenged votes, which was held in the office of Dr. Towne Nylander, regional director of the NLRB, was not attended by John Lee Mahin, president of the Playwrights. By wire to Dr. Nylander he waived the right to make challenges.

June Holdovers Total 650 Weeks

A total of 24 leading features of major companies have played approximately 650 weeks of holdovers in the first run theatres of 23 key cities scattered about the country for June.

The large totals are seen as indicative that important product is being offered by the major distributors during the summer months, despite allegations to the contrary.

Among the leading films currently enjoying long runs and holdover time are "The Adventures of Marco Polo," "Crime School," "Cocoanut Grove," "Dr. Rhythm," "Holiday," "Kentucky Moonshine," "Vivacious Lady" and "Yellow Jack."

July releases of the eight major companies are:

Columbia — "City Streets," "Pioneer Trail," "Reformatory," "South of Arizona."

Mero-Goldwyn-Mayer—"Shopworn Angel," "Fast Company," "Crowd Roars," "Love Finds Andy Hardy," "The Chaser."

Paramount—"Pride of the West," "Tropic Holiday," "Boo Loo," "Professor Beware."

RKO Radio—"Having Wonderful Time," "Crime King," "Little Women" (reissue), "Mother Carey's Chickens," "I'm From the City," "Sky Giant."

Twentieth Century-Fox—"Always Goodbye," "We're Going to Be Rich," "Panamint's Bad Man," "Passport Husband," "I'll Give a Million," "Little Miss Broadway."

Universal—"Rage of Paris," "Danger in the Air," "Letter of Introduction."

United Artists—"South Riding," "Algiers."

Warner Brothers—"Men Are Such Fools," "My Bill," "Racket Busters," "Penrod's Double Trouble," "The Amazing Dr. Clitterhouse."

Educators Have First Look at Television

Most of the 15,000 delegates to the National Education Association convention, held in New York last week, had their first look at television equipment when the American Television Corporation accepted the invitation of the city's Board of Education to place its receiving sets on display in conjunction with the exhibit of the public schools' vocational work.

Captain A. D. G. West, Baird Television expert, in speaking of the prospect, in London this week, of special regulations to control the use of television in British cinemas, declared that the television manufacturers did not anticipate any difficulty at all. He said it was a proper engineering job.

FILM STOCKS GAIN FIFTY MILLIONS IN NEW UPSWING

Market Value Reaches $668,627,875 in Abrupt Revival in Security Markets; Gains Vary from $1 to $10 a Share

The spectacular revival in security markets has boosted the market value of motion picture shares listed on the New York Stock Exchange to $668,627,875, a gain of $50,427,000 over the valuation of $618,200,875 shown at the end of 1937.

Before the rally, picture stocks had slumped in dull trading. They followed the course of the general market, which, during the first half of the year dipped to the lowest levels since 1935. Ten months of business recession had dulled trading interest to such an extent that in one session, on June 18, the exchange's total turnover was the smallest since August 17, 1918.

Then the Upturn

Only two days later, on June 20, the turn came. The recovery movement was as broad as it was abrupt. Prices rose swiftly as a new spirit of optimism, engendered by signs of business recovery, swept through financial circles. All the fanfare of a bull market in stocks reappeared. Brokers' board rooms, long deserted became filled again with traders. Orders that poured in from all sections of the country indicated that the "little fellow" was in the market again and there were signs of investment buying by big financial institutions—banks, insurance companies and investment trusts. The ticker tape showed sales of stocks in 2,000, 5,000 and 10,000 share blocks for the first time in many months. The tickers were unable to keep pace with the market's new swift tempo and often fell behind actual transactions on the floor of the exchange.

Film stocks, like the other issues, met new demand and spurted sharply. The following table, showing some of the leading picture stocks listed on the New York Stock Exchange at their lowest prices for 1938 and at the close on July 1, illustrates the scope of their participation in the June rally:

Stock	1938 Low	Close July 1	Rise From Year's Low
Columbia Pictures vtc	$ 9.00	$ 14.00	$ 5.00
Eastman Kodak	$121.50	$169.50	$48.00
Loew's	$ 33.00	$ 50.75	$17.75
Paramount	$ 5.75	$ 11.00	$ 5.25
20th Century-Fox	$ 16.12	$ 23.00	$ 6.88
Warner Brothers	$ 3.75	$ 6.50	$ 2.75

For the period from January 1 to July 1, all but three of the twenty film common and preferred stocks listed on the "Big Board" showed net gains as a result of the market's reversal of form. These gains ranged from $1 to $10 a share, as compared with quotations at the end of 1937.

Kodak Most Active

Most prominent of the active film issues was Eastman Kodak, the market value of which rose from $364,014,000 at the end of 1937 to $384,426,000 at the close on July 1, representing a gain of $9 a share on its 2,268,000 shares listed. Eastman Kodak preferred showed a net appreciation of $10 for the first half, as did Universal Pictures preferred, an inactive issue.

Loew's common stock gained $5.75 a share from January 1 to July 1, its market valuation rising from $71,955,000 to $81,149,250. Columbia Pictures rose from $12 to $14 a share and its preferred from $27 to $33 a share, representing market value gains of $682,000 and $456,000, respectively. Paramount Pictures showed an increase of $3,372,875 for the first half, its 2,453,000 listed shares rising from $9.62 to $11 a share. Twentieth Century-Fox common and preferred appreciated $5,440,625 and $6,740,250 in market value, respectively. Value of Warner Brothers common jumped from $22,806,000 to $24,706,500.

In addition to the inspiration that spurred the general market—expectation of early business revival—a factor that made many film issues attractive to the stock market's new following was the progress made by leading units in scaling down costs, which offset generally first-quarter earnings, caused in most instances by the necessity of amortizing high production costs, against smaller box office income. Indicative of this progress was a report made to Paramount stockholders at their annual meeting on June 21 by President Balaban, who said that the company, despite unfavorable conditions, had added $1,500,000 to its cash balance since the end of 1937.

Meanwhile, rising security and commodity markets and definite signs of improvement in general business were expected to show their effect at the box office.

Causes Conjectured

The abruptness of the upswing in security prices and the change in trade and financial sentiment perplexed most financial observers, who, however, arrived at a consensus that showed several causes.

First on the concrete side was the launching of a new recovery drive by the Government to prime the pump of private industry.

Industrial indices began to show advances late in June. They were slight in most instances but, coming after months of steady recession, were interpreted as marking a turn.

Consumer industries, which were expected to show the quickest benefits from the Government recovery program, perked up.

Retail trade improved late in June, department stores showing the best sales since the Easter period.

Security markets also were spurred by a break in the log jam of new financing, indicating a reopening of capital markets as financial confidence returned.

On the psychological side of the abrupt upswing in stocks were the adjournment of Congress and evidences of better future cooperation between business leaders and the Administration. The appointment of an entirely new set of officials of the New York Stock Exchange, headed by 31-year-old William McChesney Martin, Jr., the exchange's first paid president, was heralded in many quarters as an indication that Washington had resumed diplomatic relations with Wall Street.

Meanwhile, it became known that in recent weeks meetings have been held in Washington between leaders of some of the country's biggest corporations and prominent New Dealers in an effort to further cooperation.

DISTRIBUTORS ARE MOVING ALONG ON THEIR PLAN FOR SELF REGULATION

Trade Practice Committee Reported Prepared to Proceed Despite Any Conservative Attitude of Companies' Counsel

Adopting a policy of "action without talk," a distributors' trade practice committee was at work this week on its plan of a self-regulation program for distributor-exhibitor relations, reputedly determined to proceed in the face of any conservative attitude which may be displayed by the legal representatives of the film companies.

The conservative attitude of attorneys, based on the contention that such plans as are expected to be given consideration may subject the companies to charges of violating the federal anti-trust regulations, is expected to be encountered, but it is generally believed that with the exhibitor interests cooperating there will be little danger of such a construction being placed upon the distributors' action.

It also is believed that, in view of the accepted fact that the conciliation plans underway are in the interest of betterment of the entire industry, there will be no question of violations of statutes.

The position of distributors was explained by Tryree Dillard, who was counsel for the NRA film code administration, and since invalidation of the NRA, has been a member of Loew's legal staff, in charge of adjudicating exhibitor contractual matters.

Sees Danger of Lawsuits

Metro - Goldwyn - Mayer executives are ready and willing to adopt a conciliation program, Mr. Dillard said, but so far no formula has been found which, in the opinion of attorneys, will protect the company against lawsuits by aggrieved exhibitors.

The danger, he continued, arises from the fact that if company representatives serving on a board act concertedly in any matter, the complainant, if he feels the decision has injured him, may go to court with a conspiracy suit.

"Since the NRA was held unconstitutional by the supreme court three years ago, the industry has been seeking a formula which would solve many of the problems which constantly need adjudication," Mr. Dillard declared.

Most from Small Theatres

The majority of the complaints come from small theatres whose business means comparatively little to a major company but who, collectively, may influence the course of legislation through their local Congressmen, Mr. Dillard added. It is this type of grievance which the industry seeks to avoid, he declared.

He also pointed out that the two major causes of complaints are not within the distributors' power to remedy. These are overbuying and unfair clearance, which, Mr. Dillard said, are both exhibition practices and can be remedied by the exhibitors concerned.

Concerning clearance and zoning, Mr. Dillard said he believed that if a board should set up a plan which in its operation imposed a hardship on any exhibitor, the exhibitor might attempt to find a solution through a lawsuit with possible conspiracy implications.

The first step in the distributors' move will be to study the entire question of distributor-exhibitor relations and determine what should be undertaken and the procedure by which a program may be effectuated. Then the proposal will be placed before the industry for exhibitor consideration. The next move will be to reconcile the distributors' recommendations with what the exhibitors think should be accomplished.

Small Committee Preferred

The fact that the distributors' committee is made up of representatives of only four companies was explained to mean merely that it was believed a small committee would be able to function with greater rapidity and efficiency than a larger one.

The six distributor spokesmen, Sidney R. Kent, president of Twentieth-Century-Fox; Nicholas M. Schenck and William F. Rodgers of MGM; Leo Spitz and Ned E. Depinet of RKO; and Abe Montague of Columbia, will act for the other companies.

W. Ray Johnston, president of Monogram, was the only independent distributor to comment publicly on the proposed trade practice program.

"Monogram does not plan to participate in any conferences with exhibitors' representatives which are intended to solve problems that certain companies are confronted with," Mr. Johnston said. "Despite the so-called recession and slackening of business generally, this company finds itself in an entirely satisfactory position.

Cites Increased Collections

"There has been a steady increase in our collections, which indicates growing support on the part of exhibitors throughout the country. The reason for this is obvious. Many showmen are eager to give preference to one of the smaller companies like Monogram which, through modest rentals, make it possible for the theatre to realize a profit on its engagement.

"Unlike many of the socalled major companies, Monogram is not burdened by the vast overhead which must be necessarily apportioned to individual pictures. Although our production budgets are continually being augmented, the increase in cost is reflected in bigger box office personalities and first rate story material."

Mr. Kent, chairman of the distributors' committee, left last weekend for a vacation in Maine. He is expected to be away for at least four weeks, but his absence will not hold up discussions, it was explained, since Mr. Schenck and Mr. Spitz will act as chairmen while Mr. Kent is away.

NO FILMS FOR SIOUX CENTER

Sioux Center, Iowa, polled the largest vote in the history of the city this week when the question "Shall the town license a theatre or a motion picture house?" was submitted to the voters. The vote was 429 opposed to 343 for, so Sioux Center will remain a town without films.

Garret Wanscheer had proposed to build a $15,000 film house if the question had carried. The proposition was voted down two years ago. The city claims to be the largest in the state without a film house. It has a population of 1,650.

Jesse Goldburg Has New Plans for Own Production

Jesse J. Goldburg, a pioneer in independent motion picture production, is now in Hollywood formulating plans for the production of six features for the new season, "such subjects," he advises, "to be on subjects of current national and international production."

Upon Mr. Goldberg's recent return to New York from London, where he negotiated a contract for the distribution of the first three pictures to be produced by Benjamin Judell, Mr. Goldburg discontinued his association with Mr. Judell's new Progress Pictures. He had closed with Associated British Pictures in London for the British distribution of the Judell features. He said this week that he will be announcing his new plans shortly from Hollywood.

Loew's Wins Delay Of Stockholder Suit

Peter Schmuck, New York supreme court justice, on Wednesday granted the application of Loew's, Inc., to restrain Edward M. Grossman from prosecuting his stockholder's suit against the Bank of America, the National Trust and Savings Association, Loew's and 32 directors and officers of Loew's, pending final determination of eight similar consolidated suits previously instituted.

Justice Schmuck agreed with the contention of Loew's that the multiplicity of suits was a "great and unnecessary burden and expense" and ruled that "the rights of the plaintiffs are adequately protected by actions now pending."

CAPA, theatrical club of Chicago, unanimously elected Irving Mack of Filmack Trailer Company president for the coming year at the annual election of officers this week. Other officers elected were Hank Porter, vice-president; Ralph Smitha, secretary; Moe Wells, treasurer, and Sidney Stern, sergeant-at-arms.

Loew's directors on Wednesday declared a regular $1.62½ quarterly dividend on the $6½ cumulative preferred stock, payable August 15th to stockholders of record July 29th.

ITALY ACTS OFFICIALLY TO FREEZE-OUT HOLLYWOOD

"Five-Year Plan" to Eliminate Dependence Upon Foreign Product Is Put at Work; 300 Films Are Needed

by JOSEPH D. RAVOTTO in Rome

Consistent with the Fascists' autarchial program, the Italian film industry has adopted a "five-year plan" designed to free Italy from dependence on foreign films, particularly those of Hollywood.

The new policy, which went in to effect this film year without any fanfare, follows in line with Vittorio Mussolini's recent prediction that within a few years Italy will become one of the world's leading film producers. (MOTION PICTURE HERALD, February 26th.)

Although he did not mention the "five-year plan," Il Duce's son did point out at that time: "Even if for the time being we are at the tail of the world's production, 1938, at least, is happily initiated. . .

"I am sure that in a few years' time (don't become frightened by the few years) when this period of trial is over, when the last smoke of a cinematographic Utopia has vanished, when work will be done with more seriousness, we will pass the others and we will be in first place."

The revelation that the new policy already has gone into effect was made by an important Italian film director and unofficially corroborated by an official in the cinema section of the Ministry of Popular Culture.

From the Italian point of view the goal of complete independence from foreign films is described as "self-sufficiency in our most recent of big industries."

The Italian market requires roughly 300 films annually. Of this number only 38 were produced by local studios during 1937. During the same period, 245 foreign films were imported, 75 per cent of which were of American origin.

Spaced Over Five Years

During the five-year period the Italians hope to reverse the figures, having Italy produce 250 films and importing only about 50 pictures.

While encouragement will be given to the investment of foreign capital in the Italian industry, the goal, strictly speaking, is Italian studios, Italian talent, Italian genius and Italian direction.

Italy's feelings toward Hollywood product were disclosed in MOTION PICTURE HERALD on February 26th, when it was pointed out by this correspondent that negotiations were underway between four countries, Italy, France, Germany, and England for a pact to "freeze out" Hollywood.

The new "plan" has been spaced over five years to give the local industry sufficient time to expand. The process is to be gradual so as to permit the Italian propaganda machine to prepare the Italian public for more Italian films and less foreign productions.

Another and more logical reason is that the local industry could not hope to eliminate foreign films in any shorter time and it is doubtful whether five years will be long enough to reverse the present totals.

Even if badly needed capital were provided for Italian productions, it is doubtful whether the studios could double last year's total of 38 completed films. This is due simply to the lack of accomplished film actors and directors.

Any observer can notice that with few exceptions the same actors are engaged for the principal films and that accomplished directors already have their hands full

Hope for Recruits

As Italy becomes more film conscious, the industry hopes that recruits will be engaged. Already the actors school at Cinecitta is working overtime. Film magazines are running contests for attractive faces that register well on the screen. In this way the industry may be able to find enough youngsters in the ranks to keep pace with the planned expansion.

The current year, however, gives every promise of supplying the first positive step ni the "five-year-plan." Italian film fathers predict that 60 films will be turned out of local studios by the end of the season. Some of these films are being made by foreign companies using Italian settings and others are using Italian studios because they are less expensive than elsewhere. Others are international combines in which Italy invariably is one of the partners.

Revelation of the autarchial drive coincides with the celebration of the first anniversary of the inauguration of Cinè Citta by Mussolini "Italy's greatest movie fan." The first anniversary was observed by completing several studios —making those in use ten in all—a new projection room, a synchronization studio, a school for makeup. Also inaugurated were a post office, a telegraph office, a branch of the Banca del Lavoro and an open air swimming pool. Thirty of the 38 films produced last year were made in Cinè Citta.

After a period of uncertainty caused by Minister Dino Alfieri's speech to the Chamber (MOTION PICTURE HERALD, May 7th) in which he warned the industry that it could no longer count on government subsidies and loans and in which he criticized "mastodonic capitalistic undertakings" and "monopolies," the local industry has regained confidence and returned to the task with renewed vim.

Ten Films on the Lot

At the present time there are ten films on the lot, three of which are undergoing finishing touches. Ten others are in the cutting room, four are ready for release and two have been released. There are 15 films due to start work within the next two months while 24 others have been named to go on the lot during the current year. With two full length films and three short colored films already released, this brings the total planned production to 70, up to the present time. With others about to be announced and some of those already named obviously dropped it can be safely assumed that this year's production will average around 60 films.

It was pointed out that under the new rules of the Venice show, Italy, as a nation producing less than 40 films up to the present time, will be permitted to show two films, one of which must be world premiered. All Italian producers hope to have their films selected for the show and as a result are holding them back from release.

This explains why the Italian public has seen only four of the eight films finished and why the rest are buried in the cutting room.

The list of films released, ready for release, in the cutting room, undergoing their finishing touches, on the lot, planned to begin shortly and those scheduled to go on the lot sometime during the year follow:

DECISION DELAYED ON JURISDICTION

Dr. Towne Nylander, chairman of the Los Angeles Regional Labor Board, on Wednesday agreed to postpone to July 18th action on the application of Studio Utility Employees Local 724 for certification as the exclusive bargaining agent at Republic Studios where, the Local's complaint claimed, workers had been notified they must join the IATSE by July 2nd.

The decision followed a conference attended by L. C. Helm, signer of the petition; Harland Holmden, IATSE vice-president, and Harold Smith, IATSE business representative, who said, "The idea of the IATSE trying to take over all studio workers has been greatly exaggerated in press reports."

Mr. Holmden said only eight of the 75 studio utility employees at Republic had been referred to in the IATSE manifesto and only because they had occasionally performed services properly in the province of the IATSE men on the lot.

Goodman Sails to Arrange European Distribution Deal

European distribution deals for the next year will be set up in London by Morris Goodman, Republic vice-president in charge of foreign sales, who sailed Wednesday on the Queen Mary. He expects to return in seven weeks.

A majority of the existing distribution arrangements will continue, including that with British Lion in the United Kingdom, which is on a long-term basis, but new distributors will be named for Belgium and Norway, Mr. Goodman said.

Spanish Film Premiere

The Film Division of the Theatre Arts Committee will sponsor the world premiere of "Return to Life," produced recently in Spain, in the grand ballroom of the Waldorf-Astoria, New York, the night of July 20th. The Frontier Films Production was directed by Henri Cartier in collaboration with Herbert Kline, and depicts the work done by the International Medical Aid for refugee children and wounded soldiers.

Silverstone Will Negotiate for New UA-Selznick Pact

Although negotiations for David O. Selznick continuing as a United Artists producer have been carried on by Maurice Silverstone, UA general manager, from London, no decision on Mr. Selznick's future affiliation with the company will be reached until after the arrival in New York next week of Mr. Silverstone.

Negotiations are in progress for the release of a number of Selznick films through UA during the 1938-'39 season, George J. Schaefer, general distribution head for the company said. It also was pointed out that the probability that "Gone With the Wind" will be released by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will have no bearing on the renewal of the releasing agreement with United Artists.

The contract for the one picture has not been signed with MGM as yet, Mr. Schaefer said.

A United Artists board of directors meeting was scheduled to be held last Monday but was postponed until next week so that Mr. Silverstone, who will arrive in New York from London Monday, may attend. Several important matters, including a new long term contract for Mr. Schaefer as head of distribution in the United States and Canada, are expected to be settled at the forthcoming board meeting.

With the transfer of the company's executive headquarters to New York, the coast directors either have resigned or will do so shortly. In the absence of the owner principals, New York directors have been designated to represent them at board meetings.

James Mulvey will speak for Samuel Goldwyn; Dennis F. O'Brien for Mary Pickford; Ed Raftery for Douglas Fairbanks, and Charles Schwartz for Charles Chaplin. These four, with Mr. Schaefer, constitute the eastern board members. Emanuel Silverstone, American representative for Alexander Korda, will act for the latter, but is not a board member.

Miss Pickford is due to arrive in New York about August 1st but, it was understood, her trip may not have much to do with United Artists affairs since she is interested in the development of a cosmetics company and the Film Treatizor Corporation which is marketing a device to prevent projector fires.

Morris Helprin, advertising and publicity representative of Mr. Korda's company, London Films, also is due in New York about August 1st, from conferences at the Denham studios.

Premier Opening Offices

Premier Trading Corporation, American distributors of Irish and Polish films, will shortly open offices on the ninth floor of 723 Seventh Ave., New York. "The Rose of Tralee," produced by Dublin Films, will be released by the company.

McGrady, RCA Vice-President

Edward F. McGrady was elected a vice-president of Radio Corporation of America at the regular meeting of the board of directors held last week.

U.S. LOOKS TO HOLLYWOOD FOR AID IN NATION'S CULTURAL DEVELOPMENT

National Resources Committee, in Population Survey, Finds Films Often Hailed as "Medium of Cultural Advance"

Asserting that the trend in motion picture content is running away from the "vulgar," and toward a higher quality, the United States Government this week observed through the National Resources Committee that motion pictures will play an important part in the cultural development of the Nation as it approaches its peak of population, expected to be reached with an eventual maximum of 158,000,0000. The Committee reached this conclusion in a report Tuesday to President Roosevelt on the problems of a changing population.

"The cultural significance of the new instruments of mass communication, notably the movies and radio, and the influence of mass production on personal tastes, remain obscure," the committee commented. "There appears to be a strong trend toward standardization, more or less at a dead level of artistic production, but there is also clear evidence of important movements in the direction of experimentation and diversity."

The National Resources Committee, of which Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes is chairman (the other members are Secretary of War Harry R. Woodring, Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace, Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper, Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, Works Progress Administrator Harry L. Hopkins, Frederic A. Delano of the Board of Regents of the Smithsonian Institution, and Charles E. Merriam of Chicago), was set up by President Roosevelt to study the situation with respect to national resources and outline a program for handling their problems in the future.

"At first, the motion picture was widely regarded as making for standardization at a vulgar level; now it is often hailed as a medium of cultural advance," the report said in discussing films. "Perhaps the truth lies between these extremes.

"It is easy to see from even a cursory glance that the major thread in the history of the cinema is the development of technique.

"It is difficult to characterize trends in film content with any accuracy. The trend away from the merely vulgar is easy to see; the public agitation leading up to it is still fairly recent. Another obvious tendency is to film favorite novels of the past, and successful plays and novels of the moment.

"One thing that the commercial cinema has almost never done is to experiment in the realm of ideas. The path established as successful is the one the industry seeks to follow. It is perhaps better that the major emphasis in filmmaking should continue to be the purveying of entertainment, rather than that a conscious effort should be made to mold public opinion.

"In the main, movies are designed to amuse everybody and offend nobody.

The cultural significance of radio is in many ways more complex than that of motion pictures, the committee held.

"The cinema is much more clearly a force tending toward cultural standardization.

Free Shows Spreading, Exhibitors Warn; Copyright Violations Hunted

Exhibitors' complaints regarding non-theatrical exhibitions, legal and otherwise, as put on by merchants in the midwest and south, are increasing this summer and the distributors are on the lookout for copyright violations, Jack Levin, head of the Copyright Protection Bureau, said this week.

Exhibitors regard free shows sponsored by merchants in halls or outdoors as stiff competition, particularly since they are put on in or near small towns with a limited population draw, according to Mr. Levin, who, with Gabriel L. Hess, Hays organization counsel, conducts the Bureau in behalf of distributors.

The distributors have received a number of complaints from exhibitors in the Northwest and from the Independent Theatres Protective Association of Wisconsin and Upper Michigan. While the distributors are blamed for permitting the spread of the practice, the home offices say that as a general policy the exchanges are not permitted to service non-theatrical accounts in competition with established exhibitors.

Mr. Levin said he had made a survey of the situation and has found that 90 per cent of the films involved in itinerant exhibitions are from independent exchanges. Many of the others use 16 mm. films. There are instances, he said, where pictures from the major distributors make their way illegally into these channels and prompt steps are taken upon their discovery.

Mr. Levin said that the legitimate distributors are doing everything possible to prevent the spread of illegal exhibitions and the cooperation of exhibitors would go a long way to prevent them. He suggests that where any case of illegality is suspected or known, that exhibitors communicate immediately with the Copyright Protection Bureau, which will put an agent on the case. The bureau is located in the RKO Building, Rockefeller Center, New York.

Investigation has proved, Mr. Levin said, that films may disappear without explanation from exchanges, being stolen or "lost." They come into the possession of "bootleg" distributors who have a ready market among the itinerant circuit operators. A usual practice is to strip the titles in order to prevent identification and it is difficult in such instances for the agents of the Copyright Protection Bureau to spot the contraband, he said.

The free show situation has been aggravated in the last two years by the economy and mobility of 16 mm. projection equipment. A large number of films are available from 16 mm. libraries which, though quite old, are suitable for showing in outlying communities.

Itinerant exhibitors using illegal methods are reported to be on the increase in South Carolina, Indiana and Kentucky.

In Tucson, Arizona, copyright infringement actions have been filed by seven distributors against Louis F. Long and the managers of 13 of the Louis F. Long Circuit of Theatres, in the United States District Court for that state.

Bills of complaint in the seven infringement actions charge that prints of about 50 copyrighted feature motion pictures booked for certain specified theatres in the Long circuit were used at other theatres in the circuit without license from the distributors. The defendant has until July 11th to file his answers. The violations charged in the complaints are known in the trade as "bicycling."

Among the plaintiffs are Twentieth Century-Fox Film, Vitagraph, Universal Film, United Artists, Columbia, Paramount and RKO Radio. Unlicensed exhibitions are alleged to have been given in the towns of Benson, Willcox, Eloy, Florence, Sonora, Solomonsville, Pima, Duncan, Ray, Hayden, Bowie, Superior and Coolidge, Ariz.

Exhibitor complaints to Los Angeles branch offices of the distributors resulted in investigations by the Copyright Protection Bureau which disclosed the copyright violations upon which the actions are based, according to the Copyright Protection Bureau.

Griffin Closes Deals

Herbert Griffin, vice-president of International Projector, and George Friedl, Jr., director of sound engineering, who left for the coast three weeks ago, have returned to New York, reporting a number of installations of E-7 and Simplex sound systems. They reported there is an interest in the campaign to have sound in small theatres as well as large ones more closely approximate the original Hollywood recording.

Gutenberg Changes Policy

As a result of his controversy with the Milwaukee projectionists' union, A. C. Gutenberg is running his Grand theatre only four nights a week. Mr. Gutenberg continues to operate his own machine. Mr. Gutenberg refused to pay Class 4 wages, claiming he is entitled to Class 5 rating because of his seating capacity, which is on a par or less than that of 17 houses recognized by the union as Class 5 houses.

Kennedy Appeals For Collaboration of U. S., Britain

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Joseph P. Kennedy, American Ambassador to Great Britain, made an unexpected and dramatic appearance at the farewell testimonial luncheon for Murray Silverstone in London Tuesday to appeal for collaboration between the motion picture interests of Great Britain and the United States.

Mr. Silverstone, recently appointed executive head of United Artists, was honored at a luncheon sponsored by the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association and the Cinematograph Renters Society on the occasion of his leaving England to establish permanent headquarters in New York.

The American Ambassador, once concerned in, and always considered a friend of the motion picture business, made his appearance when the luncheon was almost over, accompanied by Fayette Allport of the London office of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, and Jack Kennedy, RKO.

The Ambassador declared emphatically that just as Great Britain's film industry could not exist without pictures from the United States, so also the American industry could not exist without the British market.

He asked that American film interests encourage British producers in return for the money taken from Britain by the American industry.

He made the forecast that the industry in the United States would face a very difficult period in which everybody would suffer by the crisis if the present control failed. If that happened, somebody else would take charge, he said, but did not elaborate on that thought.

Collaboration by the United States interests with those of Great Britain is an American obligation, he declared. He also requested the American producers, press and exhibitors to bear in mind the importance of the British market to the American industry. The Ambassador expressed his appreciation for the reception accorded him at the luncheon.

Sir Frederick Whyte, chairman of the new Films Council, presided at the luncheon at the Hotel Mayfair in his first public apppearance in that capacity, and declared that the council is a corporate body with a mind of its own.

Edward J. Hinge, vice-president of the CEA, described Mr. Silverstone as 50 per cent an Englishman in more ways than one. Sam Eckman of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Arthur Jarrett paid tribute to Mr. Silverstone, and Sir Frederick read a telegram from Will Hays, which declared that Mr. Silverstone had strengthened the bonds between America and Britain.

Mr. Silverstone, in his address of thanks, pleaded that the United States producers would not survive without the English market, and that without American pictures the English exhibitor would not be able to exist.

Mr. Silverstone was honored also at a banquet tendered by United Artists at the Savoy on Sunday night. British and Continental U. A. salesmen attended, as did Alexander Korda, Oscar Deutsch and Herbert Wilcox, who is reported negotiating to rejoin U. A. Mr. Silverstone was presented a traveling bag.

Tarkington Files Suit Over "Penrod" Name

An injunction to restrain the exhibition of "Penrod and His Twin Brother" is being sought by Booth Tarkington in an action instituted against Warner Brothers this week in New York supreme court. Mr. Tarkington based his suit on an alleged contract made with the Warner company on March 6, 1931, in which he granted exclusive talking picture rights on 28 stories, including "Penrod" and "Penrod and Sam."

Mr. Tarkington further charged that he did not write "Penrod and His Twin Brother" and, in filming it, Warner Brothers violated the contract and infringed upon his exclusive right to use the literary figure and name of "Penrod." Mr. Tarkington also asserted that the defendant company had advertised the picture as based on his story, although it was "widely divergent" from his work. This, he charged, had caused "irreparable injury" to his reputation.

FitzPatrick to Negotiate New Production Deal

Cheap quota "quickies" are a thing of the past so far as British production by American companies is concerned, James A. FitzPatrick, head of FitzPatrick Production, Ltd., commented this week when he arrived in New York from London.

Mr. Fitzpatrick said he went to London with the intention of liquidating his company which formerly made quota films for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Shortly after his arrival there, however, he was asked by a major company to defer liquidation pending the discussion of a production deal, he explained. He returned to the United States to negotiate the deal which provides for four double quota films, two of which may be made in color.

Mr. Fitzpatrick's studio is at Sound City.

Rose in New York to Discuss Paramount Plans

David Rose, recently appointed head of Paramount production activities in England, arrived in New York from the coast Wednesday to confer with Barney Balaban, Paramount president, and John W. Hicks, vice-president and foreign department head, on final arrangements for the company's producing plans abroad.

After the conference Mr. Rose will sail for England to complete his organization of Paramount's British production company. It is expected that Paramount's production in England will be handled by outside producers this season.

Schellhorn Transferred

Edward Schellhorn, who was formerly with the Paramount home office foreign publicity department, arrived in Hollywood last week to take up new duties at the Paramount studio there. Mr. Shellhorn will work under the guidance of Luigi Luraschi in the foreign department. Bob Powers succeeds him in the foreign publicity department at the home office.

Monogram Contract Closed

A two-year contract has been closed on Monogram product for release in Chile and Bolivia, according to Norton V. Ritchey, foreign export manager.

Equity Refuses Newsreel Bid to Film Members

The council of Actors Equity on Tuesday voted a refusal to a request by Pathe News for authorization to photograph Equity members at work without paying the actors. The newsreel's request was made in anticipation of including in its future news productions, shots from several plays whose authorship and casts might make news events of their presentation.

The established Equity rate for photographing members at work is one week's pay for every day or part of a day the members work.

Joseph Vitale and Hugh Rennie were named temporary delegates to the Associated Actors and Artistes of America in the absence of Philip Loeb and E. J. Blunkall.

Robert T. Haines, Ruth Richmond and John Lorenz were named to serve on Equity's committee for New York World's Fair participation in the absence of Burgess Meredith and other committee members.

Consideration of regulations to end ticket speculation on Broadway plays was made a special order of business for the council's next meeting, July 19th.

District Court Overrules Interstate Motions

W. H. Atwell, Federal district court judge in Dallas, this week overruled all defense motions to modify findings of fact and conclusions at law in the Interstate Circuit anti-trust case which was recently sent back from the United States supreme court. He gave his findings and conclusions on the case, as requested by the high court.

In his rulings, Mr. Atwell held, as before, that in fixing prices on subsequent runs and the time to elapse before re-running Interstate and several distributors acted in violation of the monopoly laws.

On Wednesday Judge Atwell signed the motion for appeal presented by George S. Wright, attorney for Interstate. The case will be heard by the higher court in November.

"Life" Sponsors Broadcast Series

A new series of the "March of Time" broadcasts was to be inaugurated this Friday night under the sponsorship of Life magazine. The new series will be broadcast over a coast-to-coast network of Blue and Red stations of the National Broadcasting Company at 9:30 (EDST) Friday nights.

Trilling Named Talent Executive

Steve Trilling, studio casting director for Warner Brothers, this week was promoted to temporarily fill the talent executive post, succeeding Max Arnow, resigned.

Prager with Feist

Bernard Prager has been named vice-president and general manager of Leo Feist, Inc., Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer music subsidiary, succeeding Jack Bregman, resigned. Len Mooney has been placed in charge of the professional department filling the post vacated by Chester Cohn.

CIVIL LIBERTIES UNION SAYS FILMS ENJOY FREEDOM FROM CENSORSHIP

Only Three of Seven Official Boards in U. S. Raise Issues Contested in Courts; Radio Field Also Reviewed

Comparative freedom from censorship was enjoyed in the past year by motion pictures, the radio and the theatre in this country, the American Civil Liberties Union reports Friday in its annual survey of the status of civil liberties in the United States. The report is in the form of a 96-page pamphlet entitled "Eternal Vigilance!" The Union's general survey, said to be the only one of its kind compiled in this country, is in turn based on reports from committees and correspondents in 36 states, and analyzes conditions all over the country for the year ending June 1st.

Of the seven official motion picture boards in the states, only New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio raised issues which were contested in the courts, it was said. In New York, the Board banned "The Birth of a Baby" and the French film, "Remous." Pennsylvania barred several pro-Loyalist Spanish films, a Soviet film, "Baltic Deputy," and a pro-labor film, "Millions of Us" Ordered released by the courts or through "pressure" by the Governor were Spanish Earth," "Spain in Flames," "Millions of Us" and the "Baltic Deputy."

In Ohio, where "Spain in Flames" was also banned, the Union went into the courts for a mandamus order, which was denied. Appeal was taken to the Supreme Court which held on technical grounds that it could not review. The Union also sued for a writ of mandamus when the film "Millions of Us" was barred. The proceeding is still pending.

Pro-Loyalist Spanish films were also banned in Hartford and Waterbury (Conn.), Fall River, Brockton and Worcester (Mass.), Detroit, and Providence (R. I.). Several cities halted showings of the March of Time film "Inside Nazi Germany." The Paramount film of the Chicago strike riot and massacre was at first suppressed and then released generally, except in Chicago.

Except for the March of Time "Inside Nazi Germany" and the Paramount Chicago strike films, none of the aforementioned subjects were the product of the organized industry, and in no case was a freature film of a large company involved, both the March of Time and the Paramount strike films being newsreels. All of the pictures which were attacked in one form of censoring or another were either so-called "political propaganda" or sex films.

In radio, "while censorship by station managers continues as a part of the accepted set-up," the Union notes that the Federal Communications Commission for the first time assumed such powers in criticizing the Mae West-Charlie McCarthy sketch.

Regarding Post Office censorship, the report states that "despite the Post Office Department's wide powers of control over the mails, only a few trivial actions were taken excluding matter from the mails on the ground of their character."

In the legitimate theatre, the Union points out that "New York, as the greatest theatre town of the country, enjoys comparative freedom of the stage, although the system of granting and renewing theatre licenses remains as a constant threat of censorship.

Interference with the distribution of only one book was reported during the year—Ernest Hemingway's "To Have and To Have Not," barred in libraries of Queens, (New York) and Detroit. The issue of Life containing pictures from the film "Birth of a Baby" was suppressed in scores of cities.

None of the anti-censorship bills promoted by the Union in Congress moved at all.

Arguments for and Against Contents Further Involve Wanger's "Blockade"

Walter Wanger's "Blockade" became further embroiled in a sea of controversy this week as some organizations pledged their active support to the success of the film and others bluntly condemned it and protested against it being shown.

Associated Film Audiences, in a special release, declared that the recent statement of Catholic organizations that the picture is "Marxist propaganda" and "will stir up prejudice, bad feeling, and contention among many groups of people" was a "palpable attempt by a select group to render a verdict regarding this film, before the jury of American film audiences has seen or heard the evidence."

"Fortunately," the AFA release continued, "the statement of a few Catholic organizations is not predicated on the feelings and beliefs of over 75 per cent of Americans of all faiths and creeds who by the Gallup poll and the poll of the Interstate Research Association have shown their sympathies to the Loyalists in such overwhelming numbers. The great mass of Catholics must have indicated their preference in such a widespread vote."

In conclusion the AFA appealed for support of the film with the declaration that: "The success of 'Blockade' is important for if it suceeds it will be the forerunner of a great many other progressive films. It is the duty, therefore, of film audiences to support this picture fully."

Another Review

The National Council for Prevention of War also issued a review on the film, declaring that "whatever doubt some members of the industry might have felt about the screen's ability to fashion an entertaining motion picture based on the subject of world peace are dispelled" by Mr. Wanger's production.

"Mr. Wanger," the council's review continued, "has dared to break the industry's accepted tradition of 'hands off' such topics, and a large amount of credit is due him. . . .

"Upon the financial success of 'Blockade' depends whether there will be other filmplays which deal with vital problems of the day. By all means see it. Tell your friends about it."

On the opposite side of the controversy were the Knights of Columbus in Hamilton County, Ohio, and in Houma, La., 65 miles west of New Orleans. The Houma council protested against the showing of the picture in the New Orleans area and forwarded a copy of the protest to Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America.

"Insult to Intelligence"

The Hamilton protest declared: "When a government such as that in Spain today, consisting of real Communists, Anarchists and even Atheists, is held up as a champion of democracy through such a picture as 'Blockade' it becomes an insult to the intelligence of democratic peoples.

" 'Blockade' has been accepted by motion picture critics as a plea for sympathy and support for the so-called Loyalist faction engaged in the civil war in Spain and disclaimers contained in the film itself do not alter the fact of that acceptance.

"It is historically false and intellectually dishonest in its portrayal of the struggle in Spain and its complete suppression of the facts of the Communist-inspired reign of terror that preceded and precipitated armed resistance by the Spanish Nationalists."

Loew's Circuit, in an advertisement in the Catholic publication, The Tablet, which recently criticized "Blockade" for being pro-Loyalist propaganda, voiced its opposition to using the screen for propaganda films. The ad continued by pointing out that executives of the circuit did not believe the Wanger film to be "out of harmony with our policy of presenting only sheer, non-propaganda entertainment."

IN THE CUTTING ROOM

Head Over Heels

(Warner)

Comedy-Romance

The bull's-eye on the target at which this production is aiming is labelled comedy. The amusement plan which it is following is not that of the punch-'em-around variety. Rather it is that which results from cleverly concocted situations.

The story premise is simple. It follows the idea that things are bound to happen when a rich and willful young lady decides to get revenge upon a poor but personable young man.

Five screen playwrights put their heads together to create the original story. All, Joseph Schrank, Wally Klein, Jerry Wald, Richard Macauley and Maurice Leo, have had much experience in the preparation of comic stories. Whether "Too many cooks spoil the broth" or "Two heads (five here) are better than one" remains to be seen. Nevertheless, Ray Enright, skilled in the technique of comedy direction via many Joe E. Brown pictures, several of which featured Joan Blondell and Glenda Farrell and the recent "Gold Diggers in Paris" is at the helm. Music and lyrics are credited to Harry Warren and Johnny Mercer.

Powell comes to "Head Over Heels" fresh from "Cowboy From Brooklyn," a picture which critics agreed, with varying degrees of enthusiasm was comedy and Olivia de Havilland who last was in "The Adventures of Robin Hood." The marquee value of these names is not very debatable. For a supporting company the leads will have the benefit of the talents of Charles Winninger, Allen Jenkins, Melville Cooper, Grady Sutton, Isabel Jeans, Bonita Granville, Thurston Hall, Anthony Averill, John Ridgeley, Chester Clute, Nella Walker and Penny Singleton.

Release date: September, 1938.

Smashing The Rackets

(RKO-Radio)

Topical Melodrama

This picture will show, vividly and realistically, according to present anticipations, how a fearless prosecutor works with a determined grand jury to break the hold which a band of racketeers have on a great city. Although the story will be told in melodramatic fictional style, it is based on actual occurrences during the recent racket clean-up in New York. Along with its disclosures and crises, a romantic love story has been woven into the theme and action.

The parentage of the screen story is a series of articles published in Saturday Evening Post last fall and winter which were written by Forrest Davis. The reports were consolidated into a picture theme by Lionel Houser, experienced in the treatment of this sort of material via "Condemned Women," "Blind Alibi," "I Promise to Pay" and "Public Menace." The film is being directed by Lew Landers who made the first two pictures mentioned, "Law of the Underworld," and many similarly premised productions.

"Smashing the Rackets" will feature Chester Morris who, from "The Big House," has progressed through a series of gangster-racketeer films such as "Law of the Underworld," "Counterfeit" and "I Promise to Pay" as well as other melodramatic films to his present position as one of the screen's foremost interpreters of thrill action stories and Frances Mercer, seen in "Vivacious Lady" and featured in "Blind Alibi" and "Crime Ring." Also important in the narration of the theme and the detailing of its action are Bruce Cabot, Lee Bowman, Ben Welden, Edward Pawley, Walter Miller, Frank M. Thomas, Kay Sutter, George Irving and Theodore VonEltz.

Release date: August 19, 1938.

Birthday of a Stooge

(RKO Radio)

Comedy-Melodrama

In Hollywood, and this is to be an imaginative piece of fiction concerned with some of the things that might happen while Hollywood goes about its business of making a motion picture, the "stooge" is an important character in real life. "Stooges" here are handy-men and all around aides-de-camp.

The story to be told in "Birthday of a Stooge" deals with the unique experiences of one of the gentry and how he becomes involved in and points the way to the solution of a weird murder plot which is the result of studio politics and petty personal jealousies. A thread of romance will bind the two themes together. The yarn is a product of the imagination of Richard Wormser earlier credited with "Let Them Live" and "The Frame-up." It was adapted by Dalton Trumbo who did "Devil's Playground" and "Love Begins at Twenty." Leslie Goodwins who directed scores of two-reel comedies for RKO as well as "Crime Ring," "Headline Crasher" and "Anything For a Thrill" is the man entrusted with transcribing the screen play to screen realism.

Frank Albertson, seen in "Mother Carey's Chickens," "Navy Blue and Gold" and "Hold That Kiss," is the "stooge" who hopes one day to be a star. His girl is Eleanor Lynn, recently on Broadway, but seen in "The First 100 Years" and "Shopworn Angel." Bradley Page is the actor employing the stooge. Allan Lane and Adrianne Ames are other screen notables. Included among the others who have prominent roles in the story are Russell Hicks, Richard Lane, Jonathan Hale, Robert Gleckler and Cecil Kellaway.

Release date: August 26, 1938 (tentative).

The Great Waltz

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

Musical Romance

Just a few days ago, 20th Century-Fox previewed "Alexander's Ragtime Band" which is a pageant of Irving Berlin's music. Presently MGM is busy with the production of "The Great Waltz," which with due respect to all other elements will be a pageant of Johann Strauss' music. Although they lived and worked nearly a century apart, Strauss and Berlin were music revolutionists. Strauss' waltzes, "The Blue Danube," "Tales Of The Vienna Woods," "Polka" and "Wine, Women And Song," were equally as revolutionary as Berlin's latter day ragtimes.

But where for theme, "Alexander's Ragtime Band" told the story of Berlin's music, "The Great Waltz" will tell the romantic, music embellished, love story of Strauss, his wife and that of Carla Donner, the reigning operatic star of Vienna in the 1840's when romantic Austria of the Emperor Franz Josef era was its most romantic. It is being produced on a scale and in detail that befits a pageant. Also MGM is producing it with a keen eye steadfast on commercial and entertainment values.

To bring this story of Johann Strauss to the screen in the full flower of its artistic and entertainment appeal, the studio has selected Fernand Gravet, known in this country especially for "The King And The Chorus Girl" to play the composer's role and Luise Rainer, "The Great Ziegfeld," "The Emperor's Candlesticks," "The Good Earth" and presently in "The Toy Wife" to be his wife. It has imported Miliza Korjus, noted diva from Vienna, credited with possessing the world's finest coloratura voice to reenact the role of Carla Donner. As a featured supporting cast, "The Great Waltz" will also present Bert Roach, Greta Meyer, Henry Hull, Sig Rumann, Hugh Herbert, Minna Gombell, George Houston, Lionel Atwill, Alma Kruger and Herman Bing. Also there will be a 100 piece symphonic orchestra, a chorus of eighty and a ballet which Albertina Rasch is directing.

As MGM imported Mlle. Korjus, so it also imported French director Julien Duvivier to direct the picture. Among his pictures familiar to American audiences are "The Golem" and "Pepe Le Moko," the American version of which has just been made by Walter Wanger under the title "Algiers." Bernard Hyman, producer of "Conquest" is in charge of production which has Dmitri Tiomkin, adapting the original Strauss music and Dr. Arthur Guttemann, first conductor of the Johann Strauss Theatre in Vienna, conducting the orchestra.

Prison Break

Melodrama

The title hints at some of the thematic content of this forthcoming picture. It does not divulge it all. Neither should showmen, who prefer that their audiences be expectant as they watch the film, divulge the whole story. On paper, the idea looks as though it has exceptional melodramatic entertainment possibilities.

The screen play utilized is an original by Norton S. Parker and Dorothy Reid. A Trem Carr production, "Prison Break" is being directed by Arthur Lubin who made "Midnight Intruder" for Universal and "The Beloved Brat" for Warner recently.

Barton MacLane and Glenda Farrell, long before the screen public, lately co-starred in the "Torchy Blane" series, are the leading players. One of Universal's most recent discoveries, Constance Moore, gets her first big chance in this picture. It will also mark the reappearance of Edmund MacDonald on the screen. Busy with radio broadcasting lately he has been on such programs as "Gang Busters," "March Of Time," Kate Smith's "Dramatic Moments" and the Phillip Morris "Charles Martin's Thrills." The supporting cast which has been hand-picked for individual suitability to the respective roles includes Ward Bond, Edward Pawley, little John Russell, Paul Hurst, Frank Davian and Victor Killian.

RADIO CHAINS REPORT INCREASES IN BILLINGS

Columbia Broadcasting's Estimated Business Five Per Cent Above First Half of Last Year

Increased cumulative billings for the first six months of this year as compared to the first half of 1937 were reported this week by the Columbia Broadcasting System, the National Broadcasting Company and the Mutual Broadcasting System.

The percentage gains over the first six months of last year were: CBS, 5.3 per cent; NBC, 5.4 per cent, and Mutual, 15.1 per cent.

CBS scored the achievement of recording the greatest amount of business for a six-month period by any single network in radio history, with gross billings amounting to $15,581,295. The cumulative total for the period last year was $14,803,265.

The NBC total for Blue and Red networks to the end of June was $21,023,674, an increase of 5.4 per cent over 1937, the highest for any similar period in NBC history.

Cumulative billings for the Mutual this year totaled $1,342,182, as compared to $1,165,620 in 1937.

Despite the increased business, the Bureau of Advertising of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association this week reported that an analysis covering 422 advertisers and their expenditures in 1937 showed the total advertising expenditures of the accounts was $299,058,674, of which chain radio stations received $55,804,564, or 18.6 per cent, as against $158,695,000 or 53.1 per cent for newspapers. The remaining $84,559,110, or 28.3 per cent, went to magazines.

76 to 93 Per Cent Have Receiving Sets

The week also brought the results of a survey conducted by the bureau of home economics of the Department of Agriculture. The study showed that radio receiving sets are owned by 76 to 93 per cent of families living in various sections of the United States.

A total of 7,459 white, native-born American families not on relief was canvassed.

Ownership of radio sets, phonographs and pianos was highest in New England. The study showed that of 743 families in 14 villages 93.4 per cent had radios; 42.4 per cent pianos and 22.3 per cent phonographs. The lowest percentage was in the southeastern states, where of 2,100 families in 33 villages, 76.1 per cent owned receivers; 27.4 per cent, pianos, and 13.3 per cent phonographs.

FCC's Authority Challenged

In 46 villages in the north central and middle Atlantic states, 89 per cent of 3,042 families interviewed owned radios; 40.2 per cent had pianos and 20.9 per cent, phonographs while of 1,103 families in 22 villages in the mountain and plain states, 85.2 per cent owned receivers; 36 per cent, pianos, and 17.1 per cent, phonographs. On the Pacific Coast, however, of 1,471 families in 24 villages in California, Oregon and Washington, 92.4 per cent reported radio sets, 39 per cent, pianos and 17.1 per cent, phonographs.

A special study, made among 972 negro families in 34 villages in North and South Carolina, Georgia and Mississippi, disclosed that 20.1 per cent had phonographs, 17.9 per cent radios and 9.7 per cent pianos.

Mrs. Mabel Willebrandt, representing Station WHDH at the conclusion of hearings on proposed new rules for broadcasting stations, last week challenged the Federal Communication Commission's authority to close the clear channels to all but one station on each frequency.

Mrs. Willebrandt's strictures were directed at the proposed new rule that only one station shall operate at night on the high-power clear channels. Her client, she said, has had pending for more than two years an application for experimental operation on the 830-kilocycle frequency, and the proposed rule will "prejudge" that application adversely.

The rule would be legislation rather than regulation, she charged, challenging the commission's right to usurp the privilege of Congress contrary to the provisions of the Communications Act instructing the FCC to encourage experimentation.

Statistics prepared by commission experts also were presented at the concluding session of the hearings. They showed that approximately 10,000,000 persons, about 1,500,000 of whom are in the urban population, are outside the primary range of any station during the day and that over 21,000,000, including less than 4,000,000 in urban centers, are outside the primary service at night.

The dominant clear channel stations serve all but 30,000,000 of the 122,775,000 population on which the figures were based, during the day, and all but 32,000,000 at night, it was shown. All other stations serve all but 16,650,000 of the population during the day, but at night cannot give primary service to over 50,000,000.

The primary service of all American stations fails to cover 8.1 per cent of the population during the day and 17.4 per cent during the night.

20th Century-Fox Forms Another Family Group

Twentieth Century-Fox already sponsoring the serio-comic adventures of the "Jones Family" in a series of pictures, has decided to make the family group headed by Henry Armetta in "Speed to Burn," a feature of the World of Sport series, of which that picture was the first.

Tom Beck, Joan Valerie, Bill Robinson, Edward Marr, Harold Goodwin and Murray Alper have featured roles in addition to the "Gabini Family." The family group consists of Armetta, Inez Palanage, Johnny Pirrone, Betty Greco and Eleanor Virzie. Otto Brower will direct the second picture in the series which is as yet untitled.

To Renew Fabian Deal

The deal under which Si Fabian operates the Brooklyn Paramount will be renewed for two years on its expiration at the end of August, Y. Frank Freeman, Paramount theatre executive said this week. Three previous deals were negotiated on a 12 month basis.

Margaret Waite, eastern story scout for Republic, arrived on the coast this week to join the studio story department.

Milton A. Mooney said in Cleveland this week that he has completed all details of his newly organized Cooperative Theatres of Ohio and will open offices soon.

ASTOR DISPLAY FOR "MARIE ANTOINETTE"

Starting July 14th (Bastille Day) the Astor theatre in New York, will be open to the public as a museum dealing with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's production of "Marie Antoinette."

Historically accurate antiques, costumes, jewelry and pieces of furniture have been sent from the coast studios, where they were used in the film, to be placed on public display. The display will remain until early August, when the picture with Norma Shearer in the title role, has its Broadway premiere.

While the seats at the Astor have been covered over with platforms for the display, several rows have been left intact for audiences to hear brief lectures on the technique of this historical picture.

The idea was planned by Howard Dietz and his MGM promotion staff.

20th-Fox Ad Unit To Move

The advertising and publicity department of Twentieth Century-Fox will be housed in a building of its own adjoining the home office building on West 56th Street, New York, according to present plans. The structure, which formerly housed a Catholic boy's club, will be altered and is expected to be ready for occupancy in August. The steel framework on the annex to the Movietone building at 54th St. and 10th Ave. is near completion and is expected to be opened in September. The three story structure will be used for short subject production.

French Films Edited

Herman G. Weinberg, in New York, has completed editing and titling of two new French films for fall release. They are "La Citadal du Silence," with Annabella and Pierre Renoir, and "Mister Flow," starring Fernand Gravet, Louis Jouvet and Edwige Feuillere. Mr. Weinberg is currently editing Anatole Litvak's "L'Equipage" (tentative title), with Annabella.

Reviving "King of Kings"

The American Film Exchange re-enters the distribution field with the revival of Cecil B. DeMille's production, "The King of Kings." A new sound track with orchestration and choral singing has been added with the orchestra under the direction of Erno Rapee of Radio City Music Hall. Other releases will be announced shortly.

Gradwell L. Sears, vice-president in charge of distribution for Warner Brothers, has signed the Publix Circuit of Martin Mullin and Sam Pinanski for the showing of the company's 1938-39 product.

Garrison Films will distribute Frontier Films' production, "Return to Life," a feature film about the women and children of Spain, on both 35 mm. and 16 mm.

John A. Bachman has been named manager of the Warner office in Charlotte, succeeding Ralph McCoy, who recently was made branch manager of the Atlanta office.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Contrary

Hollywood is a contrary place. Just when everybody else is getting ready to go on a vacation, Hollywood decides to go to work. Ergo as June, 1938, passed into history thirteen productions were started and a like number finished.

Columbia contributed three films to the starting list. "West Of Sante Fe," the character of which is identified by the title, will present Charles Starrett, Iris Meredity, Ed Le Saint, Dick Curtis, Pat Brady, Eddie Cobb and Al Bridge. The studio joins the crowd making aviation pictures with "Wings Of Doom." Charles Farrell and Jacqueline Wells are the stars. The supporting troupe includes Frederick Benton, Alexander D'Arcy, Hugh Sothern, Addison Richards and Charles D. Brown. The third picture, "Juvenile Court," a romance which has a melodramatic background, will present Paul Kelly, Rita Hayworth, Frankie Darro, Leo Gorcey, Dick Selzer, Allan Ramsey and Hally Chester.

Three pictures also got under way at 20th Century-Fox. The rush towards activity there was so intense that one that bears no title other than "Sport Series, Number 2," and which Jerry Hoffman who made "Speed to Burn" is producing was given the starting gun. Its personnel will include Henry Arthur, Joan Valerie, Tom Beck, Bill Robinson, Henry Armetta, Inez Pelange, Murray Alper and Lon Chaney, Jr. The "Five Of A Kind" expedition returned from the land of the Dionne Quintuplets to the studio to engage itself in making the balance of the footage that will complete the 2,000 feet which will feature the Quints. Jean Hersholt, Claire Trevor, Cesar Romero, Slim Summerville, Inez Courtney, Inex Pelange, Henry Wilcoxson and John T. Qualen are the Hollywoodites to be seen in the third Dionne picture. "Splinter Fleet" also sailed. It will present Richard Green, Nancy Kelly, Preston Foster, George Bancroft, Slim Summerville, Douglas Fowley and Joan Valerie.

MGM started two pictures. "It's Now Or Never," which was the stage play "White Collars" a decade and a half ago, will present Robert Young, Ruth Hussey, Lew Ayers, Guy Kibbee, Lana Turner, Virginia Grey, Sarah Haden, Rita Johnson and Gordon Jones. Janet Gaynor and Robert Montgomery will be the stars of "Three Loves Has Nancy."

Start Cagney Film

Two pictures went before the cameras at Warner Brothers. The line-up for "Angels With Dirty Faces" will offer James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, Humphrey Bogart, Billy Halop, Bobby Jordan, Leo Gorcey, Bernard Punsley, Gabriel Dell and Huntz Hall. In "Devil's Island" Boris Karloff, Leonard Mudie, Pedro de Cordoba, James Stephenson, Frank Reicher and Stuart Holmes will be seen.

Paramount joined with MGM and Warners in starting two productions. William Thomas makes his bow as an associate producer with "Campus Confessions" in which Stanford University basketball hero, Hank Lusetti, Betty Grable, Elenore Whitney, Patricia Perry and Fritz Feld are the headliners. Name values in "Sons Of The Legion" will be represented by Evelyn Keyes, Tim Holt, Lynne Overman, Donald O'Connor, William Frawley, Elizabeth Patterson, Billie Lee and Edward Pawley.

WANGER ABANDONS "PERSONAL HISTORY"

Walter Wanger has anounced that plans for production of Vincent Sheean's "Personal History" have been temporarily abandoned. It was reported that United Artists officials had opposed the production and that Mr. Wanger himself had been reluctant to produce another controversial film to follow immediately on "Blockade."

Commenting on the widespread pressure against "Blockade," Mr. Wanger said, "A meaning has been read (into the picture) which is at complete variance with the facts."

Henry Fonda who was to have starred in "Personal History" has been borrowed by RKO for the leading role opposite Barbara Stanwyck in "The Mad Miss Manton."

After some delay, Republic started "The Man From Music Mountain" in which Gene Autry, Carole Hughes, Smiley Burnette and Sally Payne will be the featured players.

Eight Complete Thirteen

Credit for the thirteen completed productions was distributed over eight studios. Five of them each finished two pictures. RKO-Radio checked "Smashing The Rackets" off the active list. Chester Morris, Francis Mercer, Bruce Cabot, Rita Johnson, Lee Bowman, Ben Welden, Edward Pawley, Walter Miller, Frank M. Thomas, George Irving, Kay Sutton, Theodore von Eltz, Louise Beavers and Edith Craig are the cast. Work also wound up on "Painted Desert" which will star George O'Brien with Laraine Johnson, Ray Whitley, Stanley Fields, Fred Kohler, Max Wagner, Harry Cording, Maude Allen and William V. Mong.

Columbia finished "You Can't Take It With You" in which Jean Arthur, James Stewart, Lionel Barrymore, Ann Miller, Spring Byington, Edward Arnold, Samuel Hinds, Mischa Auer, Halliwell Hobbes, Mary Forbes and Donold Meek are the principals. For this company's program, David Loew Productions turned in "The Gladiator." Joe E. Brown is starred with Man Mountain Dean, June Travis, Dickie Moor, Lucien Littlefield and Robert Kent.

Another "Mr. Moto"

"Meet The Girls" and "Mr. Moto in Egypt" were finished at 20th-Century-Fox. June Lang, Dick Baldwin, Lynn Bari, Wally Vernon, Gene Lockhart, Erick Rhodes and Ruth Donnelly are the principals in the first. Peter Lorre, Virginia Field, George Sanders, Joan Carol, Ricardo Cortez and Margaret Irving will be seen in the latest adventures of the Oriental detective.

One of the two finished at Universal is "Red Barry," a serial, in which Larry Crabbe, Frances Robinson and Edna Sedgwick are the name players. The other, "The Missing Guest," will present Paul Kelly, Constance Moore, William Lundigan, Edward Stanley, Patrick J. Kelly, Selmer Jackson, Florence Wix, George Cooper, William Wayne and Guy Usher.

First of the Warner pair to reach the finish line was "Broadway Mesquiteers," formerly titled "Three Girls On Broadway," in which Ann Sheridan, Margaret Lindsay, Marie Wilson, Ian Hunter, Janet Chapman, Richard Bond, Anthony Averill, Larry Williams, Dick Purcell and Jan Holm will be seen. Kay Francis is the star of "Unlawful" in which she will be supported by Humphrey Bogart, John Eldredge, James Stephenson, Penny Singleton, Ed Stanley, Arthur Aylesworth, Charles Foy, Richard Bond, Frank Reicher, Pierre Watkins, Murray Alper and Paul Panzer.

MGM completed "Love Finds Andy Hardy." A series show, it will present Lewis Stone, Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland, Cecilia Parker, Fay Holden, Ann Rutherford, Betty Ross Clarke, Lena Turner, Marie Blake, Douglas McPhail, Gene Reynolds, Mary Haward, George Breakstone and Raymond Hatton.

"Come On, Leathernecks," was marked off the lists at Republic. The cast includes Richard Cromwell, Marsha Hunt, Bruce MacFarlane, Leon Ames, Edward Brophy, Robert Warwick, Howard Hickman and Harry Strange.

Selznick International finished "The Young In Heart" in which Janet Gaynor, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Paulette Goddard, Roland Young, Billie Burke, Richard Carlson and Minnie Dupree are the principals.

Stay at Home

During the past year pictures made by 20th Century-Fox have called for world-wide settings and backgrounds, but the films were made without ever a person leaving the lot. The Chicago of "In Old Chicago" was built, existed and destroyed on what formerly had been a public golf links, located immediately to the east of the studio proper, between busy Pico and Santa Monica Boulevards. The Suez Canal has been built, not dug, exactly on the same spot.

Stock shots went to sea for the background of "Kidnapped," but the boats on which Warner Baxter, Arleen Whelan and Freddie Bartholomew shipped never left the dock to which the seafarers of "Lloyds Of London" and "Slave Ship" were permanently moored. Mr. Moto went to Egypt. Shirley Temple to New England and New York, Sonja Heine to Norway, Simon Simone et al to New Orleans, the Ritz Brothers to the Ozark Mountains, the troupe that was in "Four Men And A Prayer," half way around the world, but none of the people ever left the real estate on which the corporation pays taxes.

While other companies pry into the four corners of the world for realistic locations, 20th Century-Fox stays home. The last real location trip the company indulged its employees in, save the periodic excursion to the Dionne homestead, was to the sand dunes between Calexico and Yuma where much of "Under Two Flags" was made.

Every other studio in town has "borrowed" the 20th Century-Fox lot at times. Sometimes they run into unlooked-for happenings. One company was over there recently photographing "Texas" as it was in 1870 and everything was perfect until the rushes were inspected wherein it was revealed dozens of streamlined autos, electric cars and buses were rushing across the distant backgrounds.

Shirley Temple Rides Again

To the Editor:

Your Pacific slope observer took himself out to Glendale on Friday evening last to observe the reactions of the plain people who populate this snug little California town when exposed to Miss Shirley Temple's exercises presented under the above caption. Your observer long ago abandoned the practice of observing Miss Temple's pictures with his own confessedly prejudiced eyes and ears, which find them never less than perfect, and adopted the theoretically infallible device of coming at an estimate of their calibre through observation of their observers in the act of observing them. This time he went a step further and took along his 11-year-old daughter, a young lady of distinctly brunette personality loud in leadership of a campus group outspokenly allergic to the blonde heroine of this film, and he felt pretty thoroughly insulated against the Temple charm this time. He sits morosely down to typewriter, now, to report that Miss Temple is allergic in insulation.

The plain people of Glendale, unaware that the film to be tried on them was Miss Temple's latest, shrieked their glee when the title was flashed on the screen and proceeded to give a perfect demonstration of the perfect cinema audience having a perfectly swell time for the next 70 minutes. It is, as you know, customary for the studio bloc present at these unveilings to stimulate the unsuspecting payees, when necessary, by laughing audibly in the appointed places and, if need be, applauding briskly. They doubtlessly laughed and applauded this film, as usual, for such is the effect of habit, but the payees beat them to it. Even your reporter caught himself at it once. That was for more of a Rogers-Astairish dance by Miss Temple and George Murphy.

The Glendale citizenry could have been wrong, of course, since the place is practically a Hollywood annex, and so could your coastal correspondent, a notorious follower of crowds, but his 11-year-old confrere could not be mistaken. This cynical expert had enlivened the journey to Glendale by painstaking enumeration of Miss Temple's shortcomings. It seemed she was too good to be true, too sweet, too pretty, too clever, too grownup, too altogether perfect to be good company in a spirited game of jacks or hopscotch and, therefore, a muchly overtouted cinema institution. It is with some parental concern, therefore, that your reporter reports this contrary young woman's reaction to Miss Temple's cavortings as precisely of a piece with those of the Glendale natives.

So much for what Miss Temple's latest fable in film does to people. It did, in Glendale, what her others have done everywhere. It contains a little of everything that all her others have contained. Doubtlessly showmen will make the same use of these contents as they have made of them before. This time they have a number of different names to link with Miss Temple's in their billing.

This time George Murphy dances with Shirley, replacing Bill Robinson. Mr. Murphy's dancing is more nearly akin to Fred Astaire's. Possibly it was felt Miss Temple should be allowed to display her versatility. She does so, admirably, and Mr. Murphy is a most gifted artist in his line. It will be all right with your reporter, though, if the young lady is reunited with Mr. Robinson her next time out.

This time the crochety old lady who makes life miserable for the child is Edna May Oliver, who plays it without humor, and Phyllis Brooks plays the nice lady who marries the nice man. Jimmy Durante, El Brendel, Donald Meek and George Barbier supply most of the comedy, aside from the star's major portion, and the cast is long and nameful.

The story, an original screen play by Harry Tugend and Jack Yellen, is composed entirely of materials congenial to Miss Temple's talent. She enters the picture as an orphan. She is adopted by an uncle who operates a theatrical hotel in New York, which places her in atmosphere and company reminiscent of "Little Miss Marker." The hotel is owned by a wealthy old woman with a heart of stone against which Miss Temple's charm is unavailing. Later on she has better luck with a judge, who permits the staging of a vaudeville show in his court room. Meanwhile she has been returned to the orphanage and escaped. Her ups and downs are of the kind she's been having since she took hold on the top rung of the ladder of Fame three years ago and she negotiates them with practiced and ripened skill.

Irving Cummings, wise in his veterancy, directed the production with like fidelity to precedent. He has kept the adults severely in their places and the star in uncontested command of consumer attention. He has treated the film frankly as a personality picture, disregarding plot, plausibility and other stodgy considerations in favor of stellar opportunity at any and all times. David Hempstead, associate producer, has gone along in the same devotion to the little lady with the big name, fitting up a court room such as never was, an orphanage wherein the kiddies sing swing music in close harmony, and performing geographical miracles without blinking.

The six songs delivered during the proceedings are by Walter Bullock and Harold Spina. Of these "Be Optimistic" seemed to hit the preview customers hardest, "Little Miss Broadway" running it a close second. The dances by Miss Temple and Mr. Murphy were staged by Nick Castle and Geneva Sawyer. Two of them were so loudly applauded that dialogue following them was sacrificed.

It was a changed young lady who rode back with your reporter from Glendale, and a thoughtful one. No doubt the campus group allergic to Shirley Temple is going to have a resignation to deal with. Halfway to Hollywood comment began to issue. George Murphy was swell. The comedy in the picture was swell. Shirley certainly could dance. Her new hair-do was more becoming to her than any she ever had. But she'd better stop singing for a while. Her voice was beginning to show strain. She'd ruin it if she wasn't careful. That would be too bad. And the story, when you come to think it over, was "fakey." That was, things like that couldn't happen. It would be nice if they could. Oh, well, it was a good picture, anyway, the best Shirley Temple ever made.

Your California agent thinks that about covers the matter.—William R. Weaver.

Produced and distributed by Twentieth Century-Fox. Associate producer, David Hempstead. Directed by Irving Cummings. Screen play by Harry Tugend and Jack Yellen. Music and lyrics by Walter Bullock and Harold Spina. Dances staged by Nick Castle and Geneva Sawyer. Photography, Arthur Miller. Film editor, Walter Thompson. P. C. A. certificate 4217. Release date, July 28, 1938. Running time, when seen in Glendale, 70 minutes. General audience classification.

Wartime Comedy Melodrama

Showmen who were around when pictures started talking will remember the above as the title of a Gary Cooper-Nancy Carroll-Paul Lukas film which broke its silence toward the end and many a susceptible audience heart with its simple tragic story of a gawky doughboy who got a Broadway butterfly to marry him just before his boat sailed. That was 1929. They were saying, even then, that war pictures were poison at the box office, but this one drew like honey. This is recalled here for the benefit of contemporary showmen who might be inclined to play down in their exploitation the fact that the hero is a soldier.

This vision offers James Stewart as the simple Texan played before by Mr. Cooper, Margaret Sullavan as the gilded lady previously portrayed by Miss Carroll, and Walter Pidgeon as her sophisticated sponsor instead of Mr. Lukas. The story is identical save that the Dana Burnet's story, produced this time by Joseph Mankiewicz and directed by H. C. Potter from a screen play by Waldo Salt, brings "Bill Pettigrew" to New York in khaki en route to France. A street incident brings him into contact with "Daisy Heath," jaded actress, whom he idolizes and who humors him in spite of the objections of "Stan Bailey," her backer. The effect of the simulated romance is to awaken in "Daisy" and "Stan" a realization of their own sincere love, but circumstances impel her to marry "Bill" on the eve of his sailing. He is killed in action, leaving "Daisy" and "Stan" to each other.

The material, powerful as produced in the limited techniques of 1929, is beneficiary of the technological and artistic progress of a ripening decade. Stewart's performance is better than his memorable previous best. Miss Sullavan makes the Broadway butterfly an intensely alive and comprehensible personality. Pidgeon again demonstrates his right to newly re-won prominence. Hattie McDaniel portrays a colored maid in matchless and frequently mirthful manner. H. C. Potter's direction is forceful, effective and impressively realistic.

St. Martin's Lane

(Mayflower - Associated British)

Character Drama

Like any Laughton film this latest creation of the Mayflower team is built and stands—or falls—almost entirely upon the personal ability and equally personal appeal of its star. His performance in this studied and zealous essay in London lowlife is superb, so human and sympathetic that at times the pathos of this lumbering busker's love is so poignant as to blind one to the architectural care with which it has been designed. Clemence Dane's story, however, is hardly big enough, and Laughton is constantly faced with the problem of making a personal mountain out of a dramatic molehill, a problem to which, alas, there is no satisfactory solution.

Woven around the lives of London's theatre queue entertainers, "St. Martin's Lane" takes in its stride a fanciful and occasionally convincing canvas of London lowlife, glimpses the sidewalk existence of the busker and faithfully mirrors noted landmarks on the nocturnal map of the metropolis. Once again Tim Whelan, American born Irishman, has deftly succeeded in achieving a really English film, and his direction at times reaches heights of artistry which lift the film to no unworthy eminence.

Laughton's role is that of an immaturely minded but down to earth kerbstone entertainer who befriends a waif and who developes her to a talent which is soon snatched from him for the stage and for stardom. Poignantly and with no small drama, the narrative traces the disillusion of Charles, the decay and downfall, the lingering dog-like devotion, and the ultimate renaissance—a renaissance without his inamorata, but with a newly born belief that life must go on. It is a sensitively conceived and skilfully etched cameo of character, set off with whimsy and tragedy and rounded to a nicely proportioned form—but with all too few flashes of the light which makes the shade tolerable.

Laughton is teamed by Vivien Leigh, a young lady who looks and behaves attractively, but whose Cockney characterization will not deceive the Cockney.

For the Laughton fans "St. Martin's Lane" will surely prove a generous meal, and suggests exploitation of those lines. It would have been a different story with any other actor.

Previewed at the C.E.A. Conference at Folkestone to a mixed audience it provided two reactions, the one from the paying section, and the more cordial from the guests. Provincial exhibitors found much food for discussion in its problem of saleability.—AUBREY FLANAGAN.

A Mayflower picture. Pommer-Laughton production. Distributed by Associated British. Produced by Erich Pommer. Directed by Tim Whelan. From a story by Clemence Dane. Photography, Jules Kruger. Production manager, Roland Gillett. Music, Arthur Johnston. Edited by Hugh Stewart and Robert Hamer. Settings, Tom Morahan. Running time, 85 minutes. General audience classification.

Hollywood Handicap

Equine Musical

Combining effective harmonizing by colored singers with shots of racetrack background and several glimpses of screen folk anxiously scanning the racing entries, this musical miniature, lightweight entertainment, is amusing and different. The Negro vocalizers have an equine representative in the race, hence the reason for the bangtail setup. The singing sequences are nicely introduced and capably handled.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Swing Cat's Jamboree

(Vitaphone)

Swing Stuff

For the "alligator" addicts, this "swing style" concert by Maestro Louis Prima and his orchestra will have the "jitterbug" younger set dancing in aisles. For the more sedate, who prefer Gounod to Goodman, the musical frenzy of "hot and low down" tunes will bring a search for the nearest exits. The exhibitor with his showmanship finger on his audience pulse will book the subject accordingly.—Running time, eight minutes.

Tupapaoo

(MGM)

Absorbing

The odd sounding title for this newest number from the quizzical series of "What Do You Think" category is the label for an evil imprecation put upon their enemies by the peaceful native of the lovely South Sea isles. The excursion into the supernatural covers the superstitions connected with falling astral bodies, primitive beliefs and exotic backgrounds. When a greedy white trader despoils a Polynesian paradise by introducing such advanced western cultural practices as money grabbing and whiskey swigging, the terrible curse is laid upon him. Excellent attention to creation of mood tailors the subject into an extremely effective piece of outstanding entertainment.—Running time, 11 minutes.

Find What's Wrong

Different

Taking cognizance of the balcony sport, that of spotting mistakes in motion pictures, Paramount in a three-minute office drama purposely manufactures ten "boners," with an invitation to audiences to find them. It seems to be timed most appropriately in view of the number of I.Q. games currently so popular on the air and featured in periodicals. A commentator explains the idea, the office drama is run off and then is re-run without dialogue, while the commentator points out the ten mistakes and for good measure points out an eleventh error that is calculated to escape all but the most meticulously careful "boner" player. The subject readily lends itself to exploitation and audience participation. Running time, 10 min.

North Sea

(G.P.O. Film Unit)

British Documentary

Made by the Government-sponsored G.P.O. Film Unit, and aimed at chronicling and dramatizing the work of Britain's far flung coastal radio stations, last material link between mainland and distant fishing fleets, this vivid and blood stirring three-reel subject is an immediate candidate for credit as the finest documentary turned out in Great Britain this year. As an example of technical and aesthetic deftness it is arresting. As a compact essay in realist drama it is irresistible. Its camerawork and cutting have achieved one of the most soaking and hair-raising storms on documentary record. Its types, for the most part real life characters, have a stereoscopic vividness and its message is the more telling for being less obtrusive. A marked achievement in its field, the picture reflects credit on the G.P.O. Unit, and on Producer Cavalcanti, the director, Harry Watt, and R. G. McNaughton, editor.

Voodoo in Harlem

Cartoon

Reviving the effective cartoon technique of pouring drawings out of an inkwell and arranging them in their animated business against realistic backgrounds, this pen product produces some imaginative and entertaining moments. The miniature fantasy occurs when a bottle of indigo ink becomes upset and a crew of colored figures take form and growing atavistic indulge in a set of lively trucking steps. Comes the dawn and the charm is broken. A combination of a good musical background and some atmospheric shots of wind and cloud effects create a suitable eerie mood for the ingenious cartooning.—Running time, seven minutes.

Porky's Spring Planting

(Vitaphone)

Cute

Seasonally late by several months but agreeably humorous is this cartoon picturization of Porky's agricultural activities. With the assistance of his helpful hound, Streamlined, Porky sets out to plant his garden, but the neighbor's chickens enter for a field day.—Running time, seven minutes.

Pictorial No. 12, Series 7

(Paramount)

Interesting

Another in the "Pictorial" series, this treats of farming, on a big scale, in America's northwest, from the time of planting through harvesting; the famous geysers and hotsprings of Yellowstone Park, photographed in color by Robert C. Bruce and described by David Ross, and a day in the life of a homeless dog along London's waterfront. Narrated by Ward Wilson. Running time, 10 minutes.

UNIONS WEIGH REQUEST FOR WAGE CONCESSIONS

Proposal Advanced After Circuits Reveal Plan to Close Several Theatres for Summer

Union projectionists of the IATSE, predominating labor organization in exhibition, have in hand numerous requests from independents and circuits for relief from wage scales stipulated in contracts during the summer when box office receipts usually are at low ebb. Cuts have already been granted in some places. One of the largest groups involved are the projectionists in New York, where action is awaited. Chicago theatres this week were granted, by the operators, a ten per cent cut in projectionists' salaries for July and August, the reduction being indicative of efforts being made by circuits and exhibitors generally in the larger cities to obtain concessions. In Flint, Mich., operators also agreed to wage concessions.

In the New York territory Major L. E. Thompson, labor relations executive for RKO, in behalf of major circuits, including RKO, Loew's Paramount, Warner Brothers and Skouras, asked unions to give serious consideration to possible reductions.

Major Thompson addressed his letter to the stagehands' unions in Manhattan and Brooklyn and the Motion Picture Operators Local 306, pointing out that it would be to their advantage, as well as the theatres, to accept cuts.

Local 1, stagehands' union in Manhattan, discussed the matter at a recent membership meeting, but referred the request back to the executive board for action.

Local 306 was scheduled to consider the proposal at a membership meeting this week and Local 4, Brooklyn stagehands, will take up the matter at a meeting next Monday.

In the meantime, the circuits are going ahead with their plans for closing theatres, regardless of wage concessions. If the unions refuse to accept cuts, an attempt will be made to negotiate concessions for the fall, it was understood.

Operators Returned to Jobs

An agreement was reached this week under which six operators who went on a sitdown strike in five theatres of the United Long Island Theatres Corporation and barricaded themselves in the booths will be reinstated. In addition the circuit will sign an agreement with Local 306, calling for an increase of 50 per cent over the wages the operators received at the time they left the circuit's employ.

The agreement brings to a close a fight which started last August and was carried through various stages in the State Labor Relations Board. A stipulation of settlement has been filed and the circuit's appeal in the appellate division of the state supreme court will be dismissed.

Although the appellate division ordered the circuit to pay the total amount of back salaries, amounting to $4,000, this was compromised at $2,000 to be paid in 40 weekly installments of $10 per projectionist, starting October 1st.

On June 6th, the circuit asked for a stay of the enforcement decree given by S. E. Rosenman, judge. The labor board agreed to a stay provided the circuit would post a $10,000 bond, but this was refused and the settlement thereupon was negotiated.

Members of the Empire State Union were employed in the five theatres while the other union projectionists were on strike.

Dispute Goes to NLRB

A jurisdictional dispute between Studio Utility Employes, Local 724, and the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes, which started as an aftermath of last year's studio strike, reached the National Labor Relations Board offices today when Local 724 filed a petition to be certified as the collective bargaining agency for laborers at the Republic studios.

Included in the petition was the statement that Victor Clarke, producer labor contact man, had told members of Local 724 to join the IATSE in order to get studio work.

Local 724, whose international is the General Building and Construction Laborers of America, claims a majority of the 75 laborers working at Republic at the present time.

CIO Guild and IATSE Agree

The American Newspaper Guild, affiliate of the Committee for Industrial Organization, and Local 702, Motion Picture Laboratory Technicians, American Federation of Labor Group, have reached an agreement not to invade each other's jurisdiction in the newsreel field. The agreement was made as a result of the NLRB last week certifying the guild as the representative of newsreel editorial and office workers.

Increased French Production Noted

A deeper interest in the production of films than that held by American audiences is shown by the French, John E. Abbott, director of the Museum of Modern Art Film Library, said this week following his return to the United States from a six weeks' trip to Paris, Berlin and London.

Mr. Abbott, with Mrs. Abbott (Iris Barry), curator of the film library, supervised the installation of the motion picture section of the large exhibition of American art in the Jeu de Paume Museum, Paris, and attended the opening of the exhibition on May 24th.

Although American pictures are still the mainstay of French exhibition, there is a definite speeding up of production there, Mr. Abbott said. He attributed the increased production to the fact that several French productions have attained a fair degree of success in the United States.

However, Mr. Abbott pointed out that because of the comparatively small number of persons that speak French the market for French production is limited as compared to films with English dialogue.

"Alexander" Premiere August 5

"Alexander's Ragtime Band" is scheduled to start an extended run at the Roxy theatre, New York, August 5th. Twentieth Century-Fox has taken over the Hollywood Restaurant for the night of July 19th and will invite the press and radio people for a screening.

Warners Dissolve Personal Companies

Moving to simplify their involved personal financial structures, the three Warner Brothers in May completed dissolution of their personal holding companies, each of the three taking into personal ownership the last 500 shares of Warner Brothers preferred stock held by his respective company, it is disclosed by the Securities and Exchange Commission in its semi-monthly report.

The only remaining holding company is Albert Warner's "B" corporation, which held 5.460 optional debentures.

Aside from the dissolution transfers, the only activities of the Warners in the securities of their company during May was the disposition by Albert Warner of 20,000 optional debentures.

The only other transaction by an officer or director of the company was the acquisition of 200 shares of common by Morris Wolf of Philadelphia, a director, who held 950 shares direct and 167 shares through a trust at the close of the month.

Holdings of the three Warners at the close of the month included 14,884 shares of preferred, 59,648 shares of common and 1,739,000 optional debentures by Albert Warner, in addition to the 5,460 debentures held by his holding company; 14,884 shares of preferred, 62,860 shares of common and 1,379,000 debentures by H. M. Warner, and 14,884 shares of preferred, 88,060 shares of common and 1,183,000 debentures by Jack L. Warner.

No important transactions in the securities of other film companies were shown in the report. Loews, Inc., continued its acquisition of Loews Boston Theatres common stock, securing 57 shares during the month to bring its total to 99,563 shares. Duncan C. Harris of New York, Paramount director, disposed of 200 shares of that company's second preferred and acquired 200 shares of its common stock, holding 200 shares of each at the end of the month.

Acquiring 500 common voting trust certificates of Universal Corporation, William Freiday of New York, a director, brought his holdings to 1,500, all carried through a holding company; Daniel M. Sheaffer of Philadelphia, also a director, acquired 200 certificates and at the close of the month held 12,800 direct and 26,500 through Standard Capital Company, through which he also held 111,283 common voting trust certificate warrants.

Yale Film Completed

Yale University's Department of Drama has completed the first film in the country to record behind-the-scenes procedure in dramatic production. "It's Not All Play," a feature length film, is the first in a contemplated series and will be released to theatre workers in churches, schools and colleges.

RKO Radio announced this week that it would produce a series of feature pictures revolving around the character "The Saint," and that it had exercised its long held option on the detective fiction of Leslie Charteris, who created the character. The decision to make the series followed the warm reception of "The Saint in New York."

Arguments Heard On 'Lynton' Award

Contending that the infringement of the play, "Dishonored Lady," in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture, "Letty Lynton," was unintentional. John W. Davis, attorney for the firm company, this week argued in Federal Court, New York, that the referee's award of $587,000 should be cut to not more than $30,000. Decision was reserved.

The award which is opposed by the defendant companies and the plaintiffs, Mrs. Margaret Ayer Barnes and Edward Sheldon, was made by Gordon Auchincloss, referee. The plaintiffs contend the award should be greater.

In referring to the claim of the plaintiffs that the law provided for a judgment from the profits of the picture, Vincent Leibell, federal judge, remarked that "it does seem a harsh doctrine, but I can't see where the court has much latitude in this matter under the law."

"In response to a statement made by Mr. Davis that the award should be limited to $30,000 damages and the profits should be excluded, Mr. Leibell declared: "As a matter of justice, I agree with your decision, but I am afraid the law is pretty well established on this."

The defendants sought to justify their stand on the assertion that the plagiarism was not deliberate and cited the prior opinion of Learned Hand, circuit court judge, as substantiating their claim. They argued that under the copyright law it was discretionary with the court to determine whether damages for profits should be assessed.

Eastern Service Studios Reports Stages Active

Eastern film stages will again be active with feature production this season as a result of contracts signed by Harold Orlob, president of Triple-A Productions, Inc., producers of Sylvia Sidney's new picture for Paramount release, and Frank K. Speidell, president of Audio Productions, Inc., and Eastern Service Studios, the largest film making plant in New York. Eastern Service Studios is a division of Audio.

"Not since the season of 1935-36 has there been such a positive indication of sustained eastern production as is promised by this new activity of sustained eastern production as is promised by this new activity," Mr. Speidell said.

The Sylvia Sidney picture is ". . . one third of a nation . . .," which is being adapted by Oliver H. P. Garrett from the Federal Theatre play of the same name.

Alexander Officials Meet

Officials and salesmen of the Alexander Film Company held a five day "master salesman's roundup" in Colorado Springs this week. All phases of short length commercial film advertising were covered at the business sessions.

Allied Convention Set for October

Allied Theatre Owners of New Jersey and eastern regional Allied units will hold an annual convention at the Ritz Carlton Hotel, Atlantic City, October 19th, 20th, and 21st.

NAZI INSTITUTE BEGINS TRAINING OF PERSONNEL

Film Students Study Artistic, Technical and Commercial Aspects in Two-Year Course

The National German Film Academy is now functioning, with completion of arrangements for the training of talent, technicians and business personnel in the new structure at Ufastadt-Babelsberg, suburb of Berlin and the site of the UFA studios. Dr. Joseph Goebbels, minister of propaganda, laid the cornerstone of the building.

The Institute's two-year course divides into three main sections: artistic, technical, and commercial, with numerous subsections covering the theoretical and practical studies of the vast field to be covered.

According to a report to the U. S. Department of Commerce at Washington, by the office of the American Commercial Attache at Berlin, actors, dancers, singers, composers, stage managers, fashion artists, and others will be trained in the artistic faculty.

In the technical faculty the students will be trained in camera and sound technic and in modern reproduction methods, "trick" photography, studio technique, and construction.

Legal and economic aspects will be taught in the economic section.

Tie-up with Universities

A commissioned teacher will be appointed for each school, and the other members of the staff, who will lecture, will be selected from the film industry.

The Academy will maintain close cooperation on scientific and technical matters with the institutes for film technique at the universities of Berlin, Dresden, and Munich, the Kaiser-Wilhelm Institute and others as well as the laboratories of the leading chemical and technical concerns.

During the two years' course, students will not be allowed to follow other professions.

The Institute, according to the Government prospectus, will insure that the coming personnel in German films will start out firmly grounded in current dogma. Prominent in the curriculum will be lectures on the political and spiritual changes since January 30, 1933; on Nazism as the parent of the new German screen art; on the effects of modern race research with regard to the art of the film, and on the development and significance of Nazi administration.

Aryan Law Enforced

One item on the questionnaire submitted to prospective students requests the applicant's conformity to the Aryan Law, the provision applying even to foreigners. The student will not be eligible if a single one of his four grandparents has Jewish blood.

An integral part of the academy is to be the Institute for Cultural Films, now supplied chiefly by that branch of UFA which has been making biological educational short subjects. Aside from laboratories and studios this department also contains a valuable historical collection of apparatus together with an exhaustive film library.

The new building will not only house lecture halls, studios, laboratories, projection rooms and libraries, but also will include dormitory facilities for 100 students. The tuition for the two years, covering four terms, will amount to $1,000 with an extra $50 to be levied for the final diploma. Single rooms for one term will cost $60, double $95. The dormitories will include facilities for indoor and outdoor physical training and recreation.

Everything connected with film production and exhibition will be taught, from acting to animation, from writing to salesmanship, and including engineering and chemistry. The entire curriculum includes 32 courses and because of the close proximity of the UFA studios every possibility for practical experience will be offered.

'37 Award Winner Will Join Roach

Jules Seltzer, winner of the Quigley grand award for premier showmanship displayed during 1937, will leave Philadelphia for Hollywood late this month to join the Hal Roach studio as advertising manager.

Negotiations culminating in Mr. Seltzer's termination of his long connection with the Warner Brothers circuit in the Philadelphia area, where his exploitation campaign for "The Life of Emile Zola" at the Boyd Theatre won him the Quigley accolade, were begun during the showman's visit to the production center in May as a guest of Quigley Publications.

Mr. Roach and Milton Bren, Roach production chief, first met Mr. Seltzer at the Quigley awards dinner given May 10th at the Victor Hugo Cafe. The dinner was presided over by Darryl Zanuck, production head of Twentieth Century-Fox, and was attended by 75 studio executives in tribute to the men whose enterprise in behalf of screen merchandising technique had won them international recognition.

Preliminary discussions were entered into during Mr. Seltzer's stay in Hollywood and continued subsequently by mail.

Momand Suit Motions Postponed to September

Pending preliminary motions of defendants in A. B. Momand's Federal antitrust suits in Oklahoma City against major distributors, Griffith Brothers Amusement Company and others, which were to be heard last week in federal court there before Judge E. P. Murrah, have been stricken from the docket and assignment continued because the court could not hear the motions at that time.

The earliest possible hearing on motions will be in late September, according to Theodore M. Filson, court clerk. Mr. Momand is asking a total of $6,600,000 damages from defendants which include major operating circuits, exchanges and major film companies in Oklahoma.

Indiana Unit to Meet

Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana will hold a midsummer convention July 20th and 21st at the Spink-Wawasee Hotel on Lake Wawasee in northern Indiana.

SUB-SURFACE DISCORD CHECKED BY LEADERS AT CEA CONFERENCE

Summer Meeting Concludes on Note of Peace in Spite of Rumbles of Disagreement; Unity Is Seen Threatened

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Despite its festive flavor, despite the programme of shows, banquets and balls which met the delegates on their arrival, the CEA Conference, Folkestone 1938, proved notable less for what took place than for what did not. Superficially destined to be a dull conference, with the grading war out of the way and a new era of conciliation and compromise apparently breaking over the trade waters, with a self laudatory and rather snook-cocking report on the rentals situation greeting the General Council, all seemed set for a calm and unruffled week. That there ultimately were no fireworks proved, however, to be merely because the time was not ripe to set them off.

The General Council meeting, however, focal and pivotal point of the week's deliberations to which the press — a gesture neither unexpected nor uncanvassed—were admitted, made it abundantly clear that not only were the firecrackers and rockets in position, but that there were plenty of General Council members standing by, lighted matches in hand, ready at a gesture to set light to the tinder. It is an irony of the situation that only the presence of the press prevented the pyrotechnic display from taking place. Instead, it was postponed, to be resumed at the July meeting of the General Council—in the sacrosanct and secluded environs of Victory House.

All is not harmonious in the CEA camp. That immediately is clear. The solid independent circuit front, which met the renters implacably and formidably without a ruffle or a misplaced foot, is not so solid or so united it would seem as the optimists maybe believed, probably hoped and certainly assured us. Nor for that matter is every member of the General Council satisfied that the negotiating committee have won hands down, or that it was wise to abandon so chivalrously the principle of abritration. Indeed veteran Victor Davis, rose from his corner to suggest, rather surprisingly, that they had met defeat all the way, a suggestion with which the rest of the Council did not necessarily agree.

Dissension would seem to have arisen, now that grading as a problem is settled, over the double feature programme and covert—at times overt—hints being dropped that the circuits were not playing the game. It is freely stated by independents that the continued practice of the circuits in booking two supers in one programme, as well as at times dressing out the bill to inordinate lengths, is at direct variance with the Association's policy, and unfair to the non-circuit houses. The present shortage of product is further aggravating the situation, so that independent houses are hard put to make up their programmes at all.

The absence from the Conference, of Arthur Jarratt of Gaumont British and from both Conference and Council of Sidney Bernstein, both members of the Rentals Committee, was lamented and to some extent inspired the postponement of the fireworks.

New Problems

A significant paragraph in the General Council report dealing with the rentals situation alluded to "another problem" having been "brought in its train," a circumstance which, confessedly, had complicated the situation. Later in the Report it was stated "Every problem reveals new points, inasmuch as your Committee is representative of all sections of the trade, and the necessary discussions will occupy time and much consideration as fresh viewpoints are constantly emerging." The reference to "all sections of the trade" and to "fresh viewpoints" was not lost on the delegates and impelled a conviction that the self applause which flavored the Report covered, probably unconsciously, a state of nervous doubt.

Tribute was paid subsequently by exhibitors to the dispassionate and long sighted manner in which President Ken Nyman, himself a smaller independent, had handled the situation, taking the long view, and being inspired by the consideration that whatever might be his personal position, he was leader of a group containing representatives of every exhibitor section. Not the same was said about other members of the General Council, both in the body of the discussion, and on the platform itself, who were apparently ready to voice a disunity which was in some places interpreted as disloyalty.

So it is that the stage is set for a grand scale firework display, first cannons in which will be fired at the next July meeting of the General Council, a display in which all the explosions will not be on one side. Criticism is inevitable of the circuits. It is more than probable, too, that there will be executive criticism of members of the General Council.

The dissension, however, is symptomatic rather than significant. If the circuits presently are not toeing the independent line, the time would not seem to be far away when circumstances will compel them to do so. The grave and dominating factor of film shortage will inevitably have profound and inescapable effects on the whole film hire situation, and it is generally believed that in due course the circuits will find themselves in precisely the same boat—a boat with a very shaky framework. The KRS would, no doubt, welcome a CEA split. They will find very few serious members of the CEA General Council ready to assist that end. Unity first, foremost and all the time will be aimed at, and the growing belief that the real enemy is on the other side of the bargaining table, is likely to bring it about.

On application of the plaintiff, John Maxwell's Associated British Pictures Corporation, hearing of the suit against the Ostrer brothers and Gaumont British was postponed Wednesday to October 18th. Mr. Maxwell is charging misrepresentation.

Advance Licenses Sought

Probably the biggest shot yet fired in the cinema licensing battle, wrapped up with the whole question of redundancy, has been fired by the London County Council who, after examining the confused condition of the licensing situation, have decided to press for parliamentary powers to enable them to license picture theatres in advance.

Some months back a Barnstable decision established as the legal position that licensing authorities had no statutory powers to grant licenses for non-existing buildings.

Now the London County Council, in the face of the Governments' inaction in the matter nationally, are to press for a bill to enable them to grant provisional licenses for cinemas where it is proposed to build them.

Although it will affect immediately only the London area, it is certain to have repercussions on the country at large. Not only are local authorities certain to follow in pressing for local bills, but the movement is likely to act as a direct stimulus on the part of the Government.

750,000 for "Snow White"

A total of 750,000 paid admissions have been registered at the New Gallery with "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" when it commenced its 18th week on July 23rd last.

EXHIBITORS TO SEEK SERVICE CHARGE CUT

Indications that one of the foremost planks in the CEA's 1938 platform will be the drive to secure a reduction in service charges are contained in a circular which has just been issued to every member of the Association. The circular gives a comprehensive schedule of current service charges and the rates demanded by the leading equipment concerns for the conversion of existing sets.

It is made clear by the CEA officers that the matter will be raised later this autumn, and some flavor of the forthcoming attitude is seen in the suggestion that the conversion of older sets may not be economical, as the cost is high and the performance technically lower than some of the latest types. In any cast a big outlay is inevitable when the ten-year talkie contracts end from successive dates this year.

National Decency Legion Classifies 10 Pictures

Of 10 pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week five were approved for general patronage, four were listed as unobjectionable for adults and one was cited as objectionable in part. The pictures and their classification follow.

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Danger on the Air," "Man's Country," "Outlaw Express," "Reformatory." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "Always Goodbye," "Crime Ring," "Fast Company," "Son of the Sheik" (reissue). Class B, Objectionable in Part: "The Amazing Dr. Clitterhouse."

Insurance Sales Film Made

Industrafilm, Inc., of Hollywood has completed a three-reel sales training film for Aetna Casualty and Insurance Company. The picture, "Word Magic," stars Elmer Wheeler, president of the Tested Selling Institute, and illustrates his sales technique.

Story Purchases

Maurice Ostrer, for Gainsborough Pictures, announces the acquisition of Margery Lawrence's "Madonna of the Seven Moons," which has been purchased as a starring vehicle for Renee St. Cyr.

Mr. Ostrer has also purchased a story by Marjorie Allingham, which is being treated into film form by Angus McPhaill under the title of "Death of a Ghost." The story set in a Bohemian environment will be another vehicle for Margaret Lockwood and Michael Redgrave.

Thirdly, Gainsborough have also acquired Roland Pertwee's Southern France romance "Such an Enmity."

Park Replica

A replica of Chicago's Lincoln Park has been built up in the Gainsborough Studios, Islington, to add colour to the new Will Hay production "Hey, Hey, U. S. A.," in which the schoolmaster comedian is teamed with Edgar (slow-burn) Kennedy. The statue of the Gettysburg hero with his hand resting upon the head of a negro child, is not missing from the scene. The labour of three artists and fifteen days of work went into the making of the model, which will be used only in four shots.

A recent addition to the cast includes Eddie Pola, American wireless compere, who has a small role in the film.

"Marigold" Begun

Work has now started at Elstree on the Associated British production of "Marigold," in which Sophie Stewart, Perthshire, actress and female lead of the stage production, is to play the title role, with Thomas Bentley directing.

After four weeks of shooting in the studio—including interiors of a Scottish manse, furnished in the style of the eighteen-forties—the unit will leave for Scotland itself, where sequences will be taken at Edinburgh Castle, in the quaint, narrow streets of the city and at Craigiehall, famous beauty spot in the vicinity.

Patrick Barr, young British actor upon whom the spotlight of Elstree's attention is currently focused, gets his first screen lead in "Marigold." Phyliss Dare, Jean Clyde, Nicholas Hannen and Ian MacLean have also roles in the production.

Largest Set

What is claimed to be the largest outdoor set in Great Britain has been set up at Denham, Bucks, for production on the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer British picture "The Citadel." It represents the grey, squalid town of "Blaenelly," the South Wales mining town and scene of A. J. Cronin's novel, in which Robert Donat is playing the lead.

MGM's designers went to South Wales to take blueprints, photograph, sketch and take films of streets, houses, alleys, chimney-pots, pit-head gear and other features, and the set was built at Denham characteristically on a slope. It covers an area three hundred yards long and stretches with its ten cottages up a hill and loses itself in a murk of smoke and gaunt outlines of pit-head chimneys.

In all "The Citadel" will have a cast of 105 speaking parts, among those playing in it are Rex Harrison, Edward Chapman, Charles Quartermain and of course Rosalind Russell, who has the feminine lead.

Among the experts engaged to ensure accuracy on "The Citadel" are a doctor to keep an eye on medical details; a Welsh dialect expert, Cardiff-born actor Ben Williams, and an ex-colliery miner who is an expert in colliery routine.

The film is being directed by King Vidor.

Color Impetus

An indication of the forthcoming impetus to colour is contained in the news that George King, British independent producer, is to make six large scale pictures during the current year in Dufaycolor.

In association with George King will be John Stafford who is to make "Claude Duval," an adventure drama written around the celebrated French highwayman whose professional territory was England. Carl Brisson, Danish star known to Hollywood and London, is to play the title role.

In order to meet the new boom in colour, stages at Sound City are to be equipped with Mole-Richardson lights and other necessary gear.

Trick Cycler

Max Miller, leading British comic, appears in a trick cycling sequence, an art at which he is professionally adept, in "Everything Happens to Me" now in its concluding stages at Warner's, Teddington studios. He is seen in a slapstick passage shot at Fortescue House Orphanage, Teddington. Roy Neill is directing.

Napoleon Double

A striking resemblance to Napoleon is said to be one of the great assets of Pierre Blanchar, who plays in that role in the Wilcox production "A Royal Divorce," which is being directed by Jack Raymond and in which Ruth Chatterton appears as Josephine. It is claimed by the organization that "the salon sequences with the extravagent dresses and brilliant uniforms of the period presents a colourful spectacle while the dialogue has all the flavour of the day when wit was an essential in social life."

More on Victoria

With the completion of four weeks studio work on "Sixty Glorious Years," which is being shot in Technicolor by Herbert Wilcox and is to be released by R.K.O. Radio, the unit has now taken to the great outdoors where the rest of the film will be shot.

It is claimed by Wilcox that this shooting to time-table lays the bogey that colour must add considerable time to schedule.

A feature of "Sixty Glorious Years" are scenes showing that Queen Victoria had her own "stand-in" long before the film business. This was a Scottish woman named Maggie, who was used to save Her Majesty the trouble of dress fittings. The role of Maggie, which has been developed by the scenario to a sentimental and pathetic degree, is being taken by Marie Wright.

Specialists

Audiences who see the new Gracie Field's Twentieth Century production "Keep Smiling," will have little cause to complain that the members of the theatrical company which the comedienne sponsors in the film, are not specialists at their jobs.

Mary Maguire and Jack Donohue, the tap dancers of the group are, it happens, both stars of their metier. Roger Livesay, the pianist, is an expert on the keys. "Monsewer" Eddie Gray, eccentric juggler, plays his own stage act. The Dehl Trio, adagio dancers, have earned popularity on the stage. Mike Johnson, old-time comedian, is cast in his own mould. Hay Petrie, alone, whose role, that of a trick cyclist, has had to develop this particular talent, his forte having been that of previously playing Shakespearian clowns!

The film is being directed by Monty Banks.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

OUT OF THE SELZNICK-INTERNATIONAL STUDIO in Hollywood comes another echo from the olden days, to follow last week's joint plea of eight stars of yesteryear for a law compelling future stars to save ten per cent of their earnings as protection against penniless lives when their careers are ended. Seems that Mr. Selznick is rounding up the oldtimers for his "Young In Heart," and now has found among them Hollywood's very first motion picture "big-timer." He is Walter Cameron, who for 17 years has been wrangling horses for screen production, his unique position in film history unknown to the great figures of later days.

Mr. Cameron played the sheriff in "The Great Train Robbery," first story-telling picture ever made, 35 years ago. He was the screen's first hero, in a picture that started the film business on its way to billion dollar proportions.

The screen's pioneer star still is on the job, providing horses for the David Selznick's "Young In Heart." Now 69 years old, he is the owner of the Ben Hur stables in Culver City. He's perfectly content to wrangle horses and leave the acting to other fellows.

It was different when "The Great Train Robbery" was made. Cameron had been a deputy United States marshal in Oklahoma Territory, so he was selected to play the sheriff. Edwin S. Porter, who wrote, directed and produced the picture for the Edison Company, in New York, borrowed incidents from Cameron's two-gun career to bolster a simple screen play.

"For that job I got $35," Cameron relates. "Some of my horses now make that much in a couple of hours. We not only acted, but we helped move the camera around, gathered props and swept the floors."

"Porter managed to talk the Lackawanna Railroad into renting us a train that ran on a narrow gauge road in New Jersey. It cost $45 a day, so the picture's budget ran up to $2,000. We took a shot of the train crossing a bridge, and had a dummy tossed out of the cab window. Then we went over to a park and took shots of myself and posse chasing Barnes.

"A lot of the actors were gathered from park benches or cafes frequented by stage folk. Consequently, half the cast fell off their horses."

The picture coined money at rentals running no higher than $75 a week, the price based on $10 per 100 feet, with a phonograph thrown in, Cameron recalls.

Following "The Great Train Robbery," Cameron acted in at least 200 pictures, working for Thanhouser, Vitagraph and Biograph. For years he played leads in westerns, occasionally writing or directing. In 1922, he decided he was through as an actor, bought himself some horses, and devoted his efforts to making a living with his collection of trained mounts. His horses have galloped in "Ben Hur," "Big Parade," "What Price Glory" and others.

"How is it," he was asked, "that nobody ever found out you were the screen's first star?"

"Well," said Cameron, "nobody asked me."

It's the Hindu In Him

By special messenger and fast steamer from Calcutta in India the mails carried to these shores this week the photograph reproduced herewith. To the unknowing, the title and rank of the esteemed gentleman might be pronounced the Mahatma of Eyesore, Highest Potentate of Indore. To the knowing, he is none other than Mr. Benjamin Morris Cohen, better known as "Benny" to the patrons of the Loew College theatre in New Haven, which he managed until last December, when, on his own request, Loew's transferred him to Calcutta to manage their new Metro Cinema Theatre. Affidavits may be obtained, for inspection by the Loew bosses in New York, New Haven, or elsewhere, telling that the subject of the photograph is the same person whom they took from the shadows of the Yale campus and College theatre and transplanted in India, 9,800 miles away.

"The nightshirt and turkish towel," he writes, "were acquired after three hours on the job."

If Walter Elias Disney's Mickey Mouse was good for a Master of Arts degree from Harvard, Barret McCormick feels Snow White rates at least a Doctor of Philosophy in spades from the Sorbonne.

Things are beginning to look normal. The stock market has bounced back in enthusiastic style, and distributors are again talking about self-regulation.

THIS department has been attacked by the Chamber of Commerce of Hopkinsville, Kentucky, for recently referring to Hopkinsville as being located in "hill-billy" country. Robert B. Sapinsley, new and ambitious secretary of the Chamber, who arrived in Hopkinsville recently, on receipt of an inheritance, forced the issue across two-column headlines, two days in succession, in the local Daily New Era, after we had told how cats had chewed the telephone wires in a local theatre, causing signals to flash in the telephone exchange in the middle of the night, when the theatre was closed, thereby raising an alarm, or something.

The Chamber of Commerce and the newspaper are now alarmed because we called Hopkinsville "hill-billy," also pointing out on page one for all the natives to see, that it wasn't cats that had chewed the wires in the theatre, but nice big rats. The theatre's box office must have jumped at least 200 per cent when the townsfolk read about rats running around the place.

The Standard-Star of New Rochelle, in Westchester, notes that Barney Balaban, Paramount president, is the new tenant in Peter Ruthoven's waterfront estate on Edgewater Park, Mamaroneck, and in describing the background of the former Chicagoan to his new neighbors, discloses that it was Mr. Balaban who first brought cooling and air-conditioning into theatres, explaining that Mr. Balaban got the idea from his early days in refrigeration, when he worked for the Western Cold Storage Company, out in Chicago, after he left high school.

The management of the Fox theatre at Independance, Kansas, advertised "Woman Against Woman," MGM, on a two-for-one admission, two tickets being given for the price of one when accompanied by a copy of the theatre's newspaper advertisement. Aubrey Flanagan, of our London staff, was holidaying in Paris, where he met Max Schach. The two sat talking to Monty Marks, recently resigned from London Films and Denham Laboratories, and during the conversation Mr. Marks outlined an idea for a future motion picture project. Monty's so advanced he's calling a creditors' meeting for the first of the month."

Columbia

CATTLE RAIDERS: Charles Starrett, Iris Meredith, Sons of the Pioneers—While our patrons like this handsome Charles Starrett, a lot of credit for our box office happiness goes to the Sons of the Pioneers. Their songs are not worn out and they can really sing. This is our fourth Starrett picture and the rating to date is 100 per cent. Played June 17-18.—M. L. DuBose, Majestic Theatre, Cotulla, Texas. Small town patronage.

LONE WOLF IN PARIS: Francis Lederer, Frances Drake—The Francis Lederer fans will like this. Played on a money night and did fair. Running time, 67 minutes. Played May 20.—Richard C. Welch, Comique Theatre, Camden, Maine. General patronage.

PENITENTIARY: Walter Connolly, Jean Parker, John Howard—A picture of this type goes over swell. My patrons all liked this one. Some very nice acting; good enough for any theatre but business only fair. Running time, 79 minutes. Played May 14-15.—Fischer and Bichler, Mattray Theatre, Strasburg, N. D. Small town patronage.

First National

ADVENTURES OF ROBIN HOOD, THE: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Basil Rathbone, Claude Rains, Ian Hunter—Here's a picture that will make your bank roll swell. W. B. made me play it four days and I wish I had played it five days. Fourth day just about outgrossed first day. It's a picture every exhibitor should play. Advertise it big. Running time, 102 minutes. Played June 12-15.—Leo A. Backer, Roxy Theatre, Browns Valley, Minn. General patronage.

BELOVED BRAT: Bonita Granville, Dolores Costello, Donald Crisp, Natalie Moorhead—A fine little program picture that had a story worth while but the patrons were afraid of it. Donald Crisp was outstanding in his role and Miss Granville overacted her part terribly. As for Costello she could have stayed home for all the part she had. It is a mistake to give her top billing with such a minor role. An excellent drama that fell hard and far for us. Running time, 62 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

CRIME SCHOOL: Humphrey Bogart, Gale Page, "Dead End Kids"—A picture everyone, young and old, should see. The "Dead End Kids" were the ones that really made it a very good show. Running time, 85 minutes. Played June 10-11.—Leo A. Backer, Roxy Theatre, Browns Valley, Minn. General patronage.

GOLD IS WHERE YOU FIND IT: George Brent, Olivia de Havilland, Claude Rains, Margaret Lindsay—This picture won much praise from our customers and we felt it an outstanding production. All in color, full of action and romance. Everything to please the home folks.—Erma L. Raeburn, Grand Theatre, Lemmon, S. D. Small town patronage.

SLIGHT CASE OF MURDER, A: Edward G. Robinson, Jane Bryan, Allen Jenkins, Ruth Donnelly—Here is an extra fine picture. We were proud to show it and well satisfied with the grosses. Played June 8-9.—Erma L. Raeburn, Grand Theatre, Lemmon, S. D. Small town patronage.

SLIGHT CASE OF MURDER, A: Edward G. Robinson, Jane Bryan, Allen Jenkins, Ruth Donnelly—This feature enjoyed very much by my patrons. Robinson does a very good job of this and the cast with him very good. Running time, 80 minutes. Played June 9.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BETWEEN TWO WOMEN: Franchot Tone, Virginia Bruce—As nice a picture as you could ask for, but it didn't make film rental. After all, we must eat. —Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Canada.

DOUBLE WEDDING: William Powell, Myrna Loy—A silly comedy that failed to do business. Didn't make film rental.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Canada.

FIRST HUNDRED YEARS, THE: Robert Montgomery, Virginia Bruce—Rather amusing comedy which was well liked by those that came to see it. Running time, 73 minutes. Played May 15-16.—Richard C. Welch, Comique Theatre, Camden, Maine. General patronage.

SWISS MISS: Laurel and Hardy, Della Lind—I wish MGM would make one of these features every two months, for they are just what the patrons want. Went over the best of any show in months. Personally, I thought it the worst show I ever saw, but "The customer is always right," so I will welcome a return engagement from this pair at any time. Running time, 90 minutes. Played June 25-26.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

THOROUGHBREDS DON'T CRY: Judy Garland, Mickey Rooney, Ronald Sinclair, Sophie Tucker—A great picture for all. Could have stood alone but put in a Tarzan for good measure and everyone who came felt they surely got their money's worth. Played June 10-11.—Erma L. Raeburn, Grand Theatre, Lemmon, S. D. Small town patronage.

Monogram

BOY OF THE STREETS: Jackie Cooper, Maureen O'Connor—A fairly good attraction but not as good as Monogram would have you believe. Running time, 76 minutes. Played May 8-9.—Richard C. Welch, Comique Theatre, Camden, Maine. General patronage.

TELEPHONE OPERATOR: Judith Allen, Grant Withers—A good little programmer played on a double feature with "Boots and Saddles" (Autry), but which I think might stand alone in the small town if surrounded by a few strong short subjects. Some very nice flood scenes in this one. Running time, 62 minutes. Played May 21.—Richard C. Welch, Comique Theatre, Camden, Maine. General patronage.

Paramount

BIG BROADCAST OF 1938, THE: W. C. Fields, Martha Raye, Dorothy Lamour, Bob Hope, Ben Blue, Shirley Ross—We left W. C. Fields out of the billing and played up Dorothy Lamour and Ben Blue and had a full house. Perhaps not up to "Big Broadcast" standard but there's a lot of entertainment in this picture. Played June 21.—M. L. DuBose, Majestic Theatre, Cotulla, Texas. Small town patronage.

CASSIDY OF BAR 20: William Boyd. Frank Darien—Pleased, as do most of the Cassidy Hopalongs. Very short, so we doubled with Richard Dix picture. Played June 17-18.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

COCOANUT GROVE: Fred MacMurray, Harriet Hilliard, Rufe Davis—Hats off to Paramount. At last they did it. After a whirl with "Big Broadcast," "College Swing" and "Dr. Rhythm." they smack the old bulls-eye right in the middle. So smooth, it needs no chaser. Running time, 85 minutes. Played June 26-27.—Frank Templin, Strand Theatre, Kendallville, Ind. General patronage.

COCOANUT GROVE: Fred MacMurray, Harriet Hilliard—This musical has good acting coupled with a story which, with good direction, gives us a most pleasing picture. Sent people out satisfied and smiling, or humming the air of the theme song. The Yacht Club Boys added materially to the entertainment, also Ben Blue and Rufe Davis.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

COLLEGE SWING: Martha Raye, George Burns and Gracie Allen, Bob Hope, Edward Everett Horton, Betty Grable, Jackie Coogan—This picture flopped here and from what I can hear it has flopped all over the country. The bad advance publicity from critics, stories and comments ruined this, not to count the picture and plot itself. Be wary of booking it. Running time, 86 minutes. Played June 24-25.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

HEART OF ARIZONA: William Boyd, Natalie Moorhead—Every theatre should play the "Hopalong Cassidy" series. William Boyd is tops with the youngsters and has built a large following of fans among those who do not ordinarily go in for "horse operas." Running time, 68 minutes. Played June 21-22.—Howard F. Morin, Morin Theatre, Brookville, Ind. Small town patronage.

HER JUNGLE LOVE: Dorothy Lamour, Ray Milland, Lynne Overman, Dorothy Howe—Should do good business anywhere. An above average picture, the first jungle feature in color. Lamour always well in the semi-nude native type pictures. Voice just like figure, not bad by any means. Milland does well as does Gaga and Overman. Jungle colors beautifully portrayed. Interesting throughout and will draw a good crowd. Running time, 80 minutes. Played June 19-20.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

HIGH, WIDE AND HANDSOME: Irene Dunne, Randolph Scott, Dorothy Lamour, Akim Tamiroff, Charles Bickford, Elizabeth Patterson—A fairly good picture. There is considerable action in it towards the end but somehow it didn't draw so good. Comments were about evenly divided. Running time, 112 minutes. Played April 31-May 1.—Fischer and Bichler, Mattray Theatre, Strasburg, N. D. Small town patronage.

HUNTED MEN: Lloyd Nolan, Mary Carlisle—Pretty good program story of escaping gangsters, who take possession of the family of an average home and terrorize them. In the pinch the villain goes out to be shot rather than endanger the lives of those in the home. Played June 15-16.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

ROMANCE IN THE DARK: Gladys Swarthout, John Boles, John Barrymore—This type of picture is poison to a small town exhibitor. Strictly a class picture. We didn't have the class. Running time, 79 minutes. Played June 23.—Howard F. Morin, Morin Theatre, Brookville, Ind. Small town patronage.

SCANDAL STREET: Lew Ayres, Louise Campbell, Roscoe Karns, Porter Hall—A weak little program picture that has not much to it with the supporting cast taking all the honors in acting. Karns and Porter Hall are the real stars in this picture. It may get by on a double bill for you but it did not with us. Running time, 62 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SOULS AT SEA: Gary Cooper, George Raft, Frances Dee, Olympe Bradna—A nice sea picture. Well made and Gary Cooper did his stuff very well with plenty of action for the boys that like them tough. Business a little better than average. Running time, 92 minutes. Played May 7-8.—Fischer and Bichler, Mattray Theatre, Strasburg, N. D. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

MUSIC FOR MADAME: Nino Martini, Joan Fontaine—A feature that was thoroughly enjoyed by all my patrons. One of those that is not big but certainly clicks. More good comment on this one than on many of the would-be big feature productions. Won't make any mistake playing this. Running time, 80 minutes. —A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural patronage.

SNOW WHITE AND THE SEVEN DWARFS: Walt Disney—Disney did very well on this one. I put out plenty of advertising but somehow the public didn't come this way. A great deal of patrons were disappointed. I think the ballyhoo on this production made the people expect too much. Running time, 86 minutes. Played June 11-13.—Wayne Campfield, Maxine Theatre, Croswell, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

Campfield, Maxine Theatre, Croswell, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

VIVACIOUS LADY: Ginger Rogers, James Stewart—Pandro Berman, with the help of Ginger Rogers and James Stewart and their director, hit the bulls-eye this time in giving us what we think will be one of the best ten pictures of the year. The gags have been so expertly timed that there isn't a dull moment throughout the picture and it is the most entertaining picture I've seen thus far. Personally I think it outshines "It Happened One Night," for Ginger Rogers and James Stewart have been accurately cast in roles that fit their personalities better than anything they have done thus far, and it has been a pleasure to note that this picture has carried the largest word of mouth advertising we have noted in any picture we played, and it sets a pace that will be difficult to equal, for instead of being mere clothes horses and animated dialogue dishes, the actors in this picture are permitted to act and express their parts without any directorial or supervisional restraint with the result that the entire cast runs away with the picture. Thus far it's been the closest I've ever seen along the type of picture in which our beloved Wally Reid excelled. Can't say much more except that on the first day of a two-day run, picture broke the house record, and that, in this business, means something.—Charles Rossi, Strand Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y.

Twentieth Century-Fox

CHANGE OF HEART: Gloria Stuart, Michael Whalen—A short yet good little program picture that pleased the bank nighters 100 per cent. Running time, 66 minutes. Played June 23.—Frank Templin, Strand Theatre, Kendallville, Ind. General patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN AT MONTE CARLO: Warner Oland, Keye Luke—Chan always does well for us here, and this was no exception. Running time June 16.—Erma L. Raeburn, Grand Theatre, Lemmon, S. D. Small town patronage.

CHECKERS: Jane Withers, Stuart Erwin, Una Merkel, Marvin Stephens—Personally enjoyed this very much. We are trying to build Jane up to a Sunday draw and get a little criticism sometimes but I believe in time her pictures will bring in good business. Played June 5-7.—Erma L. Raeburn, Grand Theatre, Lemmon, S. D. Small town patronage.

IN OLD CHICAGO: Tyrone Power, Alice Faye, Don Ameche—Am afraid there are no new words of praise I can say about this splendid production, but I cannot pass it up without a report. A good story, splendid cast, and good photography makes this one of the outstanding pictures of the year. Alice Faye as the early day entertainer is tops, as is Alice Brady, Tyrone Power, Don Ameche, Andy Devine, Tom Brown and Berton Churchill. The fire scenes were a little too realistic for some of the ladies, but that was the only criticism I heard. Very, very good. Running time, 110 minutes. Played June 22, 23, 24.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

LOVE ON A BUDGET: Jones Family Series—One of the best in this series, and sure-fire for any audience. Running time, 64 minutes. Played June 24-25. —Frank Templin, Strand Theatre, Kendallville, Ind. General patronage.

ONE WILD NIGHT: June Lang, Dick Baldwin, Lyle Talbot, J. Edward Bromberg—We played it one day only; thank God for that. I most certainly will not recommend it. We had kicks on this one. Caution, small town exhibitor, and do not book this one on a single feature bill. Might survive a double feature, if first feature is strong enough. We had a cash night with this picture. It certainly needs something to help it. Running time, 71 minutes. Played June 21.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

RASCALS: Jane Withers—Slow in getting started but a patron pleaser after it gets going. Minnevitch and his Gang a welcome innovation, too. Running time, 77 minutes. Played June 17-18.—Frank Templin, Strand Theatre, Kendallville, Ind. General patronage.

THIS WAY PLEASE: Charles (Buddy) Rogers, Betty Grable—A fair musical comedy. Will get by but nothing to holler about. Played to average business. Running time, 73 minutes. Played May 28-29.—Fischer and Bichler, Mattray Theatre, Strasburg, N. D. Small town patronage.

WELLS FARGO: Joel McCrea, Bob Burns, Frances Dee—Splendidly produced tale of the early days but somehow didn't do the business it should have. Average business. Running time, 115 minutes. Played June 11-12.—Fischer and Bichler, Mattray Theatre, Strasburg, N. D. Small town patronage.

Republic

BOOTS AND SADDLES: Gene Autry, Judith Allen —Autry doesn't seem to be pulling them in the way he used to. This is as good as the others. Running time, 59 minutes. Played May 21.—Richard C. Welch, Comique Theatre, Camden, Maine. General patronage.

CALL OF THE YUKON: Richard Arlen, Lyle Talbot, Beverly Roberts—Fine entertainment for lovers of animals and it filled a long felt want. Children just eat it up. The two playful bears were present all through the picture and caused much laughter. We are asked why there are not more such pictures, railroad pictures and sea pictures. Running time, 70 minutes. Played June 22-23.—N. Monte Gill, Strand Theatre, Montpelier, Vt. General patronage.

OLD BARN DANCE, THE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Right up our alley. We're sure glad to have our old pal Joe Palansky back again selling Autry. Business good.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Canada.

OUTSIDE OF PARADISE: Phil Regan, Penny Singleton—Phil Regan sings as smoothly as ever but they spoiled the end of the picture for me with some crazy pie throwing.—Erma L. Raeburn, Grand Theatre, Lemmon, S. D. Small town patronage.

OUTSIDE OF PARADISE: Phil Regan, Penny Singleton—The second picture we have had with Penny Singleton and she certainly was the making of this one. Worth playing. Played May 10.—Richard C. Welch, Comique Theatre, Camden, Maine. General patronage.

TRIGGER TRIO: Ray Corrigan, Bob Livingston, Max Terhune—Just an average western but it seems like our people want the westerns even on Sundays. Played to a better than average house. Running time, 56 minutes. Played June 4-5.—Fischer and Bichler, Mattray Theatre, Strasburg, N. D. Small town patronage.

TRIGGER TRIO: Three Mesquiteers (Ray Corrigan, Bob Livingston, Max Terhune)—A very clever little western that is improved with the monkey and Buck to build up interest. Enjoyed by all. Running time, 56 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

BLIND ALIBI: Richard Dix, Whitney Bourne—Dix back in a good program picture, in which he impersonates a blind sculptor, and the "Seeing Dogs" are introduced as they guide the helpless blind. Doubled this with "Cassidy of the Bar 20."—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

BRINGING UP BABY: Katharine Hepburn, Cary Grant, May Robson, Charles Ruggles, Walter Catlett —As silly a comedy as Hollywood ever made and enjoyed by all who saw it. They were not many as so many are afraid of Hepburn. She is a star if there ever was one but with us no box office. This is her type role and RKO should keep her in it. The picture I think was stolen by Walter Catlett, the town marshal, who has been out of pictures all too long. Running time, 102 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

BRINGING UP BABY: Katharine Hepburn, Cary Grant, May Robson, Charles Ruggles—Opinion very divided on this one. Failed to interest and draw the masses, which means everything in the small town. Running time, 102 minutes. Played June 21-22.— Frank Templin, Strand Theatre, Kendallville, Ind. General patronage.

CHINA PASSAGE: Constance Worth, Vinton Haworth—Did fairly well. Good business. Comedy is supplied by a drunk. The story has a good plot. Running time, 65 minutes. Played June 18-19.—Wayne Campfield, Maxine Theatre, Croswell, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

HAWAII CALLS: Bobby Breen—This one was better than "Make a Wish" but not as good as "Rainbow on the River," which I think was the best Bobby Breen yet. Will stand alone. Running time, 72 minutes. Played May 11-12.—Richard C. Welch, Comique Theatre, Camden, Maine. General patronage.

JOY OF LIVING: Irene Dunne, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Alice Brady, Guy Kibbee—Not a small town picture at least. Proved to be the biggest box office bust in many months. Unfavorable comments from patrons on beer sequences. They thought Dunne miscast. Running time, 91 miutes. Played June 19-20.— Frank Templin, Strand Theatre, Kendallville, Ind. General patronage.

REBECCA OF SUNNYBROOK FARM: Shirley Temple, Gloria Stuart, Randolph Scott, Jack Haley— As usual, Shirley is the biggest box office draw in the country. When everything else fails, try a Temple picture. We haven't been running matinees but did on this picture and got a big crowd. This is a good all-around picture for the older folks as well as the youngsters. Don't be fooled into thinking the picture is anything like the story by the same name, as they are entirely different. Running time, 80 minutes. Played June 22-23.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

United Artists

ADVENTURES OF TOM SAWYER, THE: Tommy Kelly, May Robson, Jackie Moran, Walter Brennan, Ann Gillis—This picture will live up to everything you tell them about it. A box office honey! Running time, 99 minutes. Played June 19-20.—Howard F. Morin, Morin Theatre, Brookville, Ind. Small town patronage.

ADVENTURES OF TOM SAWYER: Tommy Kelly, Ann Gillis—I think that I have yet to see a bad Selznick production. This was the identical thing that Paramount made a few years ago but with different stars and beautiful color. Everyone satisfied. Running time, 91 minutes. Played May 18-19.—Richard C. Welch, Comique Theatre, Camden, Maine. General patronage.

DIVORCE OF LADY X, THE: Merle Oberon, Laurence Olivier—A poor picture that did the same kind of business. Running time, 91 minutes. Played June 19.—Walter Potamkin, Cedar Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa.

DIVORCE OF LADY X: Merle Oberon, Laurence Olivier—This we played on a money night when the money was high. Due to censoring of this in Mass., we advertised "no one under 16 years admitted." Take the whole three things, a large money night award, the age limit and beautiful technicolor (which is about all I can say for the picture), made for us a good day's business. Running time, 91 minutes. Played May 17.— Richard C. Welch, Comique Theatre, Camden, Maine. General patronage.

GAIETY GIRLS, THE: Jack Hulbert, Patricia Ellis, Arthur Riscoe, Googie Withers—A fair program picture with no box office appeal whatever. Running time, 73 minutes. Played June 16-17.—Howard F. Morin, Morin Theatre, Brookville, Ind. Small town patronage.

HURRICANE, THE: Jon Hall, Dorothy Lamour, Mary Astor, C. Aubrey Smith—This picture drew people in from long distances and many were the compliments we heard. It is a marvelous and unforgettable production. Played June 19-20.—Erma L. Raeburn, Grand Theatre, Lemmon, S. D. Small town patronage.

I MET MY LOVE AGAIN: Henry Fonda, Joan Bennett, Dame May Whitty, Alan Marshal—Not much to this one. Would call it fair. Joan Bennett good but that's all. Business poor. Running time, 74 minutes. Played May 21-22.—Fischer and Bichler, Mattray Theatre, Strasburg, N. D. Small town patronage.

NOTHING SACRED: Fredric March, Carole Lombard, Charles Winninger, Walter Connolly—A little bit screwy in places and Will Hays evidently overlooked one scene but can still class it as one of last year's Class A pictures. Played June 19-20.—M. L. DuBose, Majestic Theatre, Cotulla, Texas. Small town patronage.

NOTHING SACRED: Carole Lombard, Fredric March, Charles Winninger, Walter Connolly—All in color. Very good show but due to fact that I have to play after other towns makes the draw very poor. Also goes for "The Prisoner of Zenda," "The Goldwyn Follies," "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer," "Dead End" and "The Adventures of Marco Polo." Running time, 75 minutes. Played June 5-7.—Leo. A. Backer, Roxy Theatre, Browns Valley, Minn. General patronage.

Universal

FORBIDDEN VALLEY: Noah Beery, Jr.—Just a western and not a very good one either. Running time, 68 minutes. Played May 14.—Richard C. Welch, Comique Theatre, Camden, Maine. General patronage

THREE CONTRIBUTORS JOIN DEPARTMENT

Contributions from three exhibitors not previously heard from are among the reports in the What the Picture Did for Me department this week. They are:

LEO A. BACKER, Roxy Theatre, Browns Valley, Minn.

HOWARD F. MORIN, Morin Theatre, Brookville, Ind.

CHARLES ROSSIE, Strand Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y.

Exhibitors who have resumed their reports after absences of more than a year are:

WALTER H. E. POTAMKIN, Cedar Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa.

BEN BRINCK, West Point Theatre, West Point, Ia.

CHARLES C. CASSINELLI, Wyoming Theatre, Mullens, W. Va.

Read reports from these exhibitors in these columns.

LET'S MAKE A NIGHT OF IT: C. Buddy Rogers, Claire Luce, June Clyde—This picture was inadvertently booked and played without knowing it was an English one, and although the cast do their best, the picture falls short in its musical promises that the trailer bragged about. Possibly this is due to difference that exists between Americans and Englishmen in their interpretation of what constitutes good screen fare, and although the settings in the picture are as good if not better than the average Hollywood output, it bothers my conscience none in recommending this picture to all exhibitors who want to empty their theatre in two minutes, although the cast, photography and continuity are above average, the picture in itself greatly proves that the sense of humor of those people across the pond has not been improved and the cockney accents have not yet in our theatre been proven to be an excellent medium for the expression of either comical or dramatic situations.—Charles Rossi, Strand Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y.

ROAD BACK, THE: John King, Richard Cromwell, Larry Blake, Louise Fazenda, Barbara Read, Slim Summerville, Andy Devine—Received a bad print on this one. The picture is quite stirring but did nothing at the box office. Running time, 103 minutes. Played June 16-17.—Wayne Campfield, Maxine Theatre, Croswell, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

Warner Brothers

BORDERTOWN: Paul Muni, Bette Davis—Superb. A picture that brought a big hand at the close. Play it. Okay Warners. Business fine.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Canada.

GOLD DIGGERS IN PARIS: Rudy Vallee, Rosemary Lane—We played this picture in opposition to George Raft and Sylvia Sidney in "You and Me," which opposition showed at cut price of fifteen cents and we outdrew opposition without cutting prices at ratio of five to one. Perhaps the Charlie McCarthy Vitaphone reissue helped somewhat, although we think that the Schnickelfritz Band walked away with top honors during our showing of this picture, for they stopped the show. This also outdrew opposition's "Three Comrades," so we hopefully are looking forward to playing anything with the Schnickelfritz Band in the cast. Fritz Feld gives his best to the small part he plays in the picture but it is apparent that he is given no opportunity to steal the picture.—Charles Rossi, Strand Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y.

GOLD DIGGERS OF PARIS: Rudy Vallee, Rosemary Lane, Schnickelfritz Band—A very good musical. The Schnickelfritz Band is what helps the show. It takes W. B. to make good musical shows. Play it. The talking dog sure gets plenty of laughs. I had plenty of people that came back second and third night to see the show. Running time, 95 minutes. Played 19-21.—Leo. A. Backer, Roxy Theatre, Browns Valley, Minn. General patronage.

JEZEBEL: Bette Davis, Henry Fonda—Opinion very divided. Should do all right in spots where this type of entertainment is wanted by the customers. Otherwise watch out. Running time, 104 minutes. Played June 28-29.—Frank Templin, Strand Theatre, Kendallville, Ind. General patronage.

JEZEBEL: Bette Davis, Henry Fonda, George Brent, Margaret Lindsay—This is all they say it is. Wonderful acting, fascinating story and good suspense. A good picture for young girls who want to buck conventions to please their vanity. Played June 12-14.—Erma L. Raeburn, Grand Theatre, Lemmon, S. D. Small town patronage.

JEZEBEL: Bette Davis, Henry Fonda—This one laid an egg. Running time, 104 minutes. Played June 20-21.—Walt Potamkin, Cedar Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa.

LIFE OF EMILE ZOLA, THE: Paul Muni, Gale Sondergaard, Joseph Schildkraut, Erin O'Brien-Moore—Wonderful performance. A picture that should be shown in all spots. Running time, 90 minutes. Played June 16.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural patronage.

PENROD AND HIS TWIN BROTHER: The Mauch Twins—Played this on a double bill with "Forbidden Valley" and this was the top attraction. Running time, 62 minutes. Played May 14.—Richard C. Welch, Comique Theatre, Camden, Maine. General patronage.

PENROD AND HIS TWIN BROTHER: Billy and Bobby Mauch, Frank Craven, Spring Byington—Played this on Sunday with their favorite western and it gave us good returns.—Erma L. Raeburn, Grand Theatre, Lemmon, S. D. Small town patronage.

SWING YOUR LADY: Humphrey Bogart, Louise Fazenda, Frank McHugh, Penny Singleton, Nat Pendleton—We had to pay a lot of money for this picture and were a little worried but the investment was worthwhile for everyone got out that had a quarter and all had a grand time. The trailer on this feature is especially good. We heard people quoting some of its jokes long before the picture was shown. Played June 17-18.—Erma L. Raeburn, Grand Theatre, Lemmon, S. D. Small town patronage.

Short Features

Educational

ALL'S FAIR: Cabin Kids—Didn't hear any comments on this but if the patrons don't like them any better than I do they could discontinue them anytime. —Richard C. Welch, Comique Theatre, Camden, Maine.

SKY FISHING: Treasure Chest—Good shots of fishing, filmed in a beautiful green color. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas.

SWEETIES: Two-Reel Comedies—Very clever piece of humor and dancing.—Erma L. Raeburn, Grand Theatre, Lemmon, S. D. Small town patronage.

Garrison Films

CHINA STRIKES BACK: Timely, worth a date in any theatre. Good photography and excellent narration. Running time, 22 minutes.—Walt Potamkin, Cedar Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BEAUTIFUL BUDAPEST: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—Again FitzPatrick scores with this wonderful travel talk. His product so far outshines the others that there is no comparison. Running time, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

CAME THE BRAWN: Our Gang—These little kids sure get plenty of laughs. I wish Metro would make more and not so many Travel Talks or Peter Smith Comedies. Running time, 10 minutes.—Leo. A. Backer, Roxy Theatre, Browns Valley, Minn. General patronage.

SURF HEROES: Pete Smith Specialties—Another good Pete Smith.—Richard C. Welch, Comique Theatre, Camden, Maine.

Novelty Distrib. Co., Boston, Mass.

ROSS-ARMSTRONG FIGHT PICTURES: No box office draw here. Pictures not any too wonderful. Advise even the shooting galleries to skip these pictures at this late date. Might go in Ross's or Armstrong's home town. Give that a thought, you town managers from Ross's and Armstrong's home towns. Running time, 18 minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

Paramount

COPS AND ROBBERS: Grantland Rice Sportlights—A good short for the kiddies. Get's more or less tiresome in places. Give it a try if you want. Running time, 10 minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

NEWS EXTRA—JAPAN BOMBING CANTON: This extra feature sent along with the regular newsreel certainly was appreciated and should build good will between exhibitor and exchange. We featured this extra on a sandwich board, thanks to your telegram. Give Paramount a break, Mr. Manager, for their extra break to us. Running time, four minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

RKO Radio

DEVILED HAM: Nu-Atlas Productions—Good single reel.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural patronage.

DONALD'S BETTER SELF: Walt Disney Cartoons—These cartoons are the best anywhere and I believe that the Donald Ducks are even better than Disney's Silly Symphonies and the Mickey Mouses.—Richard C. Welch, Comique Theatre, Camden, Maine.

MARCH OF TIME SERIES: My patrons look forward to this reel. Very educating and interesting. Running time, 20 minutes.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural patronage.

MAJOR BOWES' AMATEUR THEATRE OF THE AIR: No. 6—A bad print on this one. It's the usual Major Bowes with a few good amateurs. Running time, two reels.—Wayne Campfield, Maxine Theatre, Croswell, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

FILMING NATURE'S WONDERS: Adventures of the Newsreel Cameraman—Interesting short. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas.

United Artists

DON DONALD: Mickey Mouse—Okay, Disney, even if you get long prices, you got something to sell.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Canada.

Vitaphone

DREAM COMES TRUE, A: Floyd Gibbons' "Your True Adventure"—Again Floyd Gibbons scores with his shorts. Another box office hit. Keep it up, Floyd. We're for you. Excellent. Running time, 11 minutes. —A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

OUT WHERE THE STARS BEGIN: Broadway Brevity—This subject is only a two-reeler, but if it were padded into a feature production would be a top picture. There isn't a dull moment in the picture, with every situation dovetailing into another, and the sharpness of the dialogue is equalled only by the excellence of the dialogue, aside from the fact that Mr. Fritz Feld, in supplying the comedy, which is sure fire, can be looked forward to as being one of the future's best picture stealers, for if he walks away with picture honors like he did in this, exhibitors can safely look forward to Mr. Feld being one of the future's box office draws. It is gratifying to note that producers hit the bulls-eye with this one.—Charles Rossi, Strand Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y.

PRISONER OF SWING: Hal LeRoy—A very good musical comedy and Hal LeRoy really can dance. Running time, 20 minutes.—Leo A. Backer, Roxy Theatre, Browns Valley, Minn. General patronage.

IN COURTS

French Writer Wins Libel Suit Against "Reporter"

Harris Jay Griston, New York counsel for the plaintiff, reports the awarding of $5,500 in a libel action instituted by Lucien Lemas, French journalist, against Hollywood Reporter, a Hollywood trade paper, and against Irving Hoffman, a columnist for the Reporter.

Justice Carew, before whom the trial was conducted, last week, in New York Supreme Court, pointed out that so-called bits of fiction in a story written by Mr. Hoffman and published in the Reporter fitted corresponding details concerning a visit made by Mr. Lemas with Rene Clair, French director, on the occasion of a visit made by Mr. Clair to New York in 1936, and in which the Frenchman was described derogatorily.

Warners' Objections Overruled by Court

New York Supreme Court Justice Peter Schmuck this week overruled the objections made by M. Witmark and Sons, Inc., Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., and Warner Brothers Productions Corporation to the cross interrogatories filed by Harry Armstrong and Richard H. Derald, composers of the song, "Sweet Adeline," and plaintiffs in a $250,000 damage suit.

The cross interrogatories will be used by the plaintiffs in an examination before trial by F. Hugh Herbert, Erwin Gelsey, Jerome Kern, Oscar Hammerstein, 2nd, Hal Wallis and Mervyn LeRoy in Los Angeles. The plaintiffs claim that the film "Sweet Adeline" plagiarized their song of the same name.

Paramount Awarded Fees In Gorman Court Action

Paramount Pictures, Inc., this week was awarded $700 counsel fees by Judge Harry Holzer of United States district court in New York in handing down a decision against Richard J. Gorman, who instituted plagiarism proceedings against the film producing organization.

Mr. Gorman claimed that Paramount's "The Old Fashioned Way" constituted plagiarism of his play "Soubrette."

Orders Loach Testimony

T. P. Loach, vice-president and secretary of Pathe Film Corporation, has been ordered to submit to an examination before trial on the application of John F. O'Keefe, who is suing in New York supreme court for $5,940 on a judgment claimed recovered against Pathe Studios, Inc., in California. Mr. O'Keefe charged that Pathe Exchange controlled Pathe Studios and that it affected a transfer of all the assets of Pathe Studios to RKO Radio "in fraud of creditors." He seeks an adjudication with Pathe Films as successor to Pathe Exchange as equally responsible with Pathe Studios for the payment of the judgment.

Paramount Order Approved

Federal Judge Alfred C. Coxe this week approved an order appointing the Empire Trust Company as successor to the commercial National Bank and Trust Company as special agent to Special Master John E. Joyce in the continuance of the Paramount Publix reorganization proceedings. Empire Trust will receive under the order certificates of deposit and undeposit certificates. The order will make Empire Trust act both as transfer and script agent. As of July 25, 1938, there will be 7,681 shares of certificates of deposit, and 34,544 undeposited certificates, the order indicated.

Clancy Wins Appeal

Philip T. Clancy, plaintiff in a $250,000 damage suit against Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Pictures Corporation and Robert T. Pirosh, was granted permission to appeal to the United States circuit court of appeals this week. The appeal was taken from a decision of Federal Judge Alfred C. Coxe, made March 28th, dismissing Mr. Clancy's complaint. Mr. Clancy's suit claimed plagiarism of his play, "Nuts to You" in the picture "A Day at the Races."

Hazelton Sues Ferguson

The Hazelton Corporation has filed suit against Ferguson Radio and Television Company, Inc., and has asked the court to award it $6,877 damages with interest from December, 1936. The plaintiff charged the violation of a contract claimed to be made on December 16, 1935, whereby Hazelton leased to Ferguson certain patents used in the manufacture of radio receiving apparatus. Hazelton claims that it has not received royalties under the contract from December, 1936.

Drop Adorno Suit

The lease suit of Sal Adorno against Warner Theatres has been dropped from the superior court docket in Middletown, Conn., subject to reinstatement under Section 191 of the Practice Act which orders the docket cleared at this time of cases pending more than two years.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

How Many Months Has a Theatre Year?

If business falls off in the summer months—why does it? Is it because the theatre cannot compete with outside attractions; that folks prefer other forms of entertainment during the heated months? Or is it that theatremen take it for granted that there is no business to be had and calmly fold up until the Fall?

That's a lot of questions to ask, especially on a hot day, and there are theatremen who—between yawns—will probably answer "yes" to all these queries. But not every showman. No, sir, not by a jugful. The woods are filled with lads so busily engaged in combating seasonal opposition that they haven't time to sit down and think it over.

This difference of opinion—and action—is always emphasized during periods of the year when showbusiness is expected to go sit in a corner and play dead in favor of other entertainments and activities—notably so in the summer. But that there is a sharp difference of opinion gives rise to the question:

How many months has a theatre year?

One side says "nine"—the other "twelve". The former discounts December, July and August. The latter gives no ground whatsover and persists in leaning on the ball whatever the season, good, bad or indifferent.

Which is the better part of valor depends, of course, upon the individual situation and showmanly judgment; but, at the risk of ducking a lot of artillery-fire, your Chairman aligns himself with those brave souls who see no reason to let down in Summer or Winter, nor, for that matter, at any other time.

Let us recognize immediately that the desire for entertainment, especially today, is 365 days strong. There are times when this desire must be catered to, stimulated—coaxed, perhaps—but the "yen" for amusement every day in the year is there. How much of this "yen" will be satisfied by entertainment provided by exhibitors depends in no small part on how tirelessly, and ingeniously, theatremen go about it.

Some will tell you that Summer slumps come about through a hangover from the old days of the legitimate when the theatre shut up shop in May or June. Quite true, and there were reasons for it. But today the modern theatre is sufficiently appointed to offer the greatest degree of comfort and convenience; to compete successfully with opposition that hitherto gave quicker relief from the withering heat. Furthermore, the average theatre today offers a better "buy" for value received than most any other low-price purchase. Theatremen who believe so are endorsing these viewpoints by doing as fancy a job of selling in the Summer as any other time of the year.

For instance, on a following page Kroger Babb tells how the Ohio Chakeres theatremen go about it, proceeding along a definite and elaborate plan of attack that takes in all departments of operation. Nothing is left to chance. The Chakeres boys say there is business to be had and "damn the torpedoes". Now, there might not be as much business as in other more favored times of the year. Unemployment, scarcity of product, hot weather, and other factors may well play a part in interrupting the flow of admissions. But the Ohioans realize the "yen" for picture entertainment is still strong and are committed to getting their share of whatever amusement money there can be pried loose with a barrage of intelligent showmanship, backed up by immaculate theatres and perfect service.

In this issue, also, are further attacks upon the "Summer front" pointed by Warner-ite Bill Yearsley and Pearce Parkhurst, the latter dealing especially with the Summer resort theatre, a similar situation faced by the Walter Reade organization, as told by Herman Addison, Jr., in last week's Round Table.

Happily, the articles by these members are not illustrative of isolated operations. They are indicative of progress made by those who divide the theatre year into 12 months, who fight for every nickel's worth of business every day, come Summer or Winter, come "hell or high water", or any other of the thousand-and-one boxoffice obstacles your hard-riding theatreman is trained to take in his stride.

Round Table In Pictures

Arranged by Harold Pike, Sydney, Australia, was tieup between the Prince Edward Theatre, Postmaster General and leading department store for the engagement "Wells Fargo." Teletype machine was set up in window, every third message being devoted to picture. Also displayed were colorful prints, tiein copy was included and called attention to the fact that their creation was inspired by the opus.

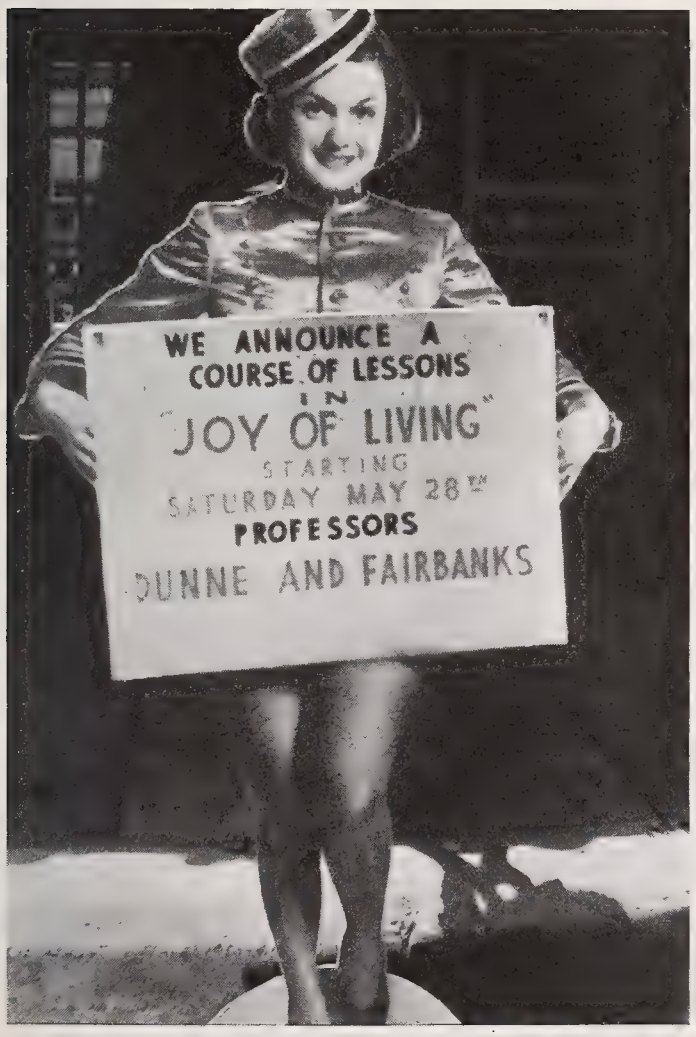
Effective indeed was the window display promoted in leading furniture store by Manager Paul Kessler, Suffolk Theatre, Holyoke, Mass., for "Holiday." Planted over glider were cutouts of Katharine Hepburn and Cary Grant with credit card carrying tiein copy and playdates alongside.



Giant caricature display routed through all the Chakeres, Springfield Ohio Theatres, and reported by Kroger Babb, advertising head, to sell the idea of coming big hits was made unique by blowup of individual manager heads atop swimming suit figure holding fish line. Titles of pictures were lettered on cutouts of giant fish to tie in with copy reading "The manager's been fishing."

What is reported to have been an eye-arresting stunt was street bally used by Manager Bill Harwell at the Roxy Theatre, Logan, Utah, for "Robin Hood." Chap dressed in costume similar to that worn by Errol Flynn in the picture rode throughout town and in parks ahead of opening carrying banner with title and playdate plug.

The "Forty and Eight" sound train of the Salt Lake American Legion Post ballyhooed "Battle of Broadway" for Norman Sprowl of of the Utah Theatre. Two parades daily at top hours and the train parked on main street during business hours made a flash. Banner across street in front of theatre, six sheets on sidewalks and tack cards on lamp standards were okayed by city commission at request of Legionnaires. In exchange, Legion was given percentage of special midnight show.

Block-long fence was too good a bet for Johnny Sanders, Chief Theatre, Gallup, New Mexico, to pass up without using it for exploitation purposes. And so this enterprising theatreman put his staff to work painting it with title and playdates to plug his opening of "Adventures of Tom Sawyer."

Ten days ahead of opening of "Joy of Living" at the Orpheum Theatre, Waco, Tex., J. R. Preddy planted cutout bellhop standees in his lobby. Card bore copy as follows: "We announce a course of lessons in 'The Joy of Living' starting," etc., etc., and was signed by Professors Dunne and Fairbanks.

Murphy Effects Postoffice Contest for "Test Pilot"

Frank Murphy, formerly of Loew's, Wilmington, Del., now at Loew's State, Syracuse, for "Test Pilot" tied in with local officials for a post office slogan and essay contest. Blanks were available at all branches, prizes were awarded winners and stunt was covered by papers and radio. Special screening was held for representatives of Bellanca company, officials of two airports and members of the Noisy Birdmen.

For advance lobby, Frank used giant cutout plane with small planes suspended by wires hung at various spots. Over radio old song contest, prizes were offered to see the picture, entire staff wore titled aviation caps during run and attraction boards in hotels carried picture copy and play dates.

Competitive Fire Drill Sells "Chicago"

Ahead of his opening of "Old Chicago" at the Chief, Gallup, New Mexico, Johnny Sanders tied up local fire department from nearby town to put on a competitive fire drill in front of theatre. Stunt was well attended and covered by newspapers, the theatreman acting as referee and broadcasting the procedure.

Highlights of Sanders campaign was a milking contest on stage in which only girls were eligible and boys competed by drinking the milk. Cash prizes were awarded both girls and boys and Johnny reports the event as proving highly successful.

"Soundtrack" Program Tied to "Boy Meets Girl"

Major tieup between Warners' and WNEW has been arranged for "Boy Meets Girl," consisting of national plugs and a 12-week contest to select a boy and a girl for a screen test at the studios. Contest is run in conjunction with the station's "Soundtrack" program.

Listeners are invited to send their photographs with complete description of height, weight and coloring. Dramatic experience is asked for but not essential. At the end of each week two boys and two girls will be selected to be among the finalists. A prominent night club will play host to the four selected each week.

At the end of the 12-week session the 24 finalists will be voted upon by prominent judges and winners given a free plane trip to Hollywood, cash award to cover expenses and screen test.

Blood-Donor Movement Staged for "Yellow Jack"

Under the supervision of Ted Schlanger, Warners' Philadelphia zone manager, the management of the Colonial Theatre and the Veterans of the Spanish American War during the run of "Yellow Jack" established headquarters at the theatre for free blood-typing. Quantities of blood thus secured will be kept "on file" against the time when dread disease strikes the unfortunate. Stunt was covered by local dailies, thus gaining plenty of advance publicity for the picture.

National Contest Launches "Sailor"

Paramount Pictures has completed an arrangement with the Fawcett Publications for a national beautiful legs contest to be run in forthcoming issues of Motion Picture Magazine in connection with "Give Me a Sailor." Contest is based on an important sequence in the film and provides for contestants to evolve ten star names in the slogan "Give Me a Sailor." A 15-word statement telling why any one of the 10 stars selected has the most beautiful legs in the contestant's opinion must accompany each list. First prize is free round-trip to Hollywood where the winner will be entertained by Martha Raye. In addition there will be 50 merchandise prizes awarded runners-up.

In addition, all wholesale news distributors of Fawcett Publications in cities throughout the country will participate in a separate contest for merchandise prizes. Distributors turning in the greatest sales on Motion Picture Magazine during September and October will be declared the winners of this extra contest.

As a direct aid to theatres playing the date, special tack cards have been prepared for newsstand displays. In addition, news wholesaler's truck will be available to exhibitors for cooperative bannering and copies of the magazine may be slip-sheeted with special heralds on the picture.

Eddy's Personal Appearance Sells "Girl of Golden West"

Abundant was the publicity garnered by Hal Bishop, Capitol Theatre, Winnipeg, Canada who booked "Girl of the Golden West" to coincide with the personal appearance of Nelson Eddy at local concert hall. Concert manager put out souvenir booklet for which Hal supplied story material and scene stills from the production. Eddy's manager was approached and permission secured for the star to sing some of the hit tunes from the picture.

Arrangements were also made with the advertising departments of the local papers to spot the theatre ad of congratulations to Eddy alongside the criticism of the concert. Leading radio bands were supplied with orchestrations, electrical transcriptions were played over various stations and ads were also run on radio page of papers.

Chicago Fire Survivor Aids on "Old Chicago"

Extra publicity for the opening of "Old Chicago" at the Capitol, Winnipeg, Canada, was garnered by Hal Bishop, who located a chap who claimed to have been a survivor of the Chicago Fire, and invited him to see the picture. Theatreman then contacted the Free Press, who sent a reporter to interview the chap, which brought a front page story.

Contacting the local fire department, Bishop promoted use of an old horse-drawn engine which was bannered and used for street bally during and ahead of run. Tying in with Standard Brands, window streamers were printed and used in all grocery shops in Winnipeg.

Gauntlett Holds Sawyer Style Show

Vic Gauntlett, advertising manager, Paramount, Seattle, Wash., aided by Eddie Rivers for their opening of "Tom Sawyer," contacted leading department store, retailer of the Sawyer clothes to put over a style show. Store ran a five column ad opening day and devoted full window to display which included pieces of wardrobe secured from the Studio, together with scene stills.

Leading book and stationery store was also promoted and a deal made whereby they purchased time on station KOMO for playing of the 15 minute transcriptions three days ahead of opening. In conjunction with this, store devoted one of their largest displays to the "Sawyer" books, which remained there during entire run. Special preview was held for members of the PTA which brought four radio broadcasts on tri-weekly series over KOMO and KJR.

National Paint, Varnish and Lacquer Association was contacted and tieup effected whereby the Seattle Paint Club appropriated funds toward the printing of window streamers in two colors. These were allotted to the various paint manufacturers and wholesalers of the city and pasted on windows of every paint and hardware store in Seattle and trading area.

Serialization Planted On "Chicago" by Miller

Two weeks ahead of the opening of "Old Chicago" at Warners' Hipp, Cleveland, manager Ed Miller and publicity man Manny Pearlstein planted a serialization in the Cleveland Press. Every day the serialization appeared it carried a scene from the opus and box plugging the picture version coming to the Hipp. The theatre ran a trailerette three days in advance.

Through tieup effected with the Cleveland public library system, stills and attraction cards were furnished them for displays in their 35 branches. Counter displays plugging the hit tunes were planted in leading music stores, books of the "Old Chicago" period were displayed in book shops and jumbo window cards placed in strategic spots about town.

"Beat the Heat"

Lafayette's Street Bally

Three men in convict's costumes with another dressed as officer paraded all downtown streets as part of Murray Lafayette's "Over the Wall" opening at the Avon Theatre, Utica, N. Y. Copy on their backs read: "Danger, desperate criminal has escaped from prison, see," etc., etc. Special lobby display consisted of stills together with "wanted" circulars, guns, revolvers, etc., supplied by local police department.

"Beat the Heat"

"Sweetheart" Gag

For "You're a Sweetheart," Ralph Morris, Colonial, Laconia, N. H., placed a young man and girl on the telephone calling subscribers. If a woman answered, the young man immediately said, "You're a sweetheart" and after a slight pause, went on with "is now playing at the," etc., etc. If a man answered, the girl picked up the call.

July Contest

The second week of the competitions for the prizes of trips to New York finds interest spreading all over the country as theatremen gird themselves to battle for the free vacation trips offered by leading distributors. It's an unusual offer, indeed, and scores of showmen intend taking advantage of this opportunity for an all-expense journey to the biggest of the Big Cities.

What happened? Well, six of the distributing companies decided to pep up those July grosses by setting up the New York trips for the best exploitation on July playdates. Each of the companies participating has selected one or more pictures for the contest and will give one trip each for the top entry. Here are the companies and the pictures:

Paramount: "Tropic Holiday" and "Professor Beware".
Twentieth Century-Fox: "I'd Give A Million" and "Always Goodbye".
Warner Brothers: "Racket Busters".
United Artists: "Algiers".
RKO Radio: "Having Wonderful Time".
Monogram: "Romance of the Limberlost".

Judges of the contest are the advertising and publicity directors of each company, as follows: Paramount, Robert M. Gillham; Twentieth Century-Fox, Charles E. McCarthy; United Artists, Monroe Greenthal; RKO Radio, S. Barret McCormick; Monogram, Louis S. Lifton; and, for Warner Bros., Mort Blumenstock, in charge of advertising and publicity in the East.

There is nothing involved about the simple rulings in the contest. Theatremen playing any of the above pictures between the first and last days of July are eligible to compete. Also eligible are dates starting the last days of June and running into July; dates starting the last days of July and running into August. Campaigns may be entered on one or more of the eight pictures listed.

As usual, proof of everything listed on each campaign must accompany each entry and deadline has been set for midnight of August 13th. Entries are to be forwarded to July Contest Editor, Managers' Round Table. So come one, come all. New York bids you a great, big welcome.

Last Call for Quigley Awards Entries In the Second Quarter

Of course, theatremen are immediately concerned with their material for the Second Quarter of the Quigley Awards and these lines are penned to emphasize again the nearness of the deadline—midnight of July 16th. Also to be stressed is that, while entries in the July Contest are automatically eligible for the AwardsCompetitions, they are so to be considered for the Third Quarter, and not the Second.

Second Quarter entries are on pictures played in April, May and June, and the Silver Plaques, Citations of Merit, First and Honorable Mention Certificates are again to be voted in the five classifications, according to population. Theatremen who would like to compete and have not as yet forwarded any campaigns for the Second Quarter are invited to do so to reach Committee Headquarters no later than the deadline, as noted above.—A-MIKE VOGEL.

"Beat the Heat" Campaign Boosts Chakeres Grosses

Ohio Circuit Attacks Seasonal Let-Down With Effective Plan Covering All Departments

by KROGER BABB

Advertising Director, Chakeres Theatres, Springfield, Ohio

That any seasonal slump can be successfully combated by a definite and consistent planning to hold up grosses, is the contention of Kroger Babb, who tells, on this page, what is being done in his sector to bring to the Chakeres theatres their fair share of the public's money spent on amusement. Bookings, maintenance, extra attractions and other devices are given special attention to beat the summer heat.

Like a cure for cancer, a receipt for kayoing our annual summer slump hasn't been perfected, but the doctors haven't a thing on our managers—because we're trying, too. Summer slumps are a natural sort of thing in show business and we believe it advisable to attack them in a natural way. What Chakeres Theaters Managers are doing to boost hot wether grosses is undoubtedly very much the same as showmen are doing everywhere.

Out here in the corn-hog-and-wheat country, we religiously believe bookings have something to do with box office grosses, be it in July, Lent or the Christmas shopping period. Because of this conviction, all of our seasonal plans are launched in the booking department.

Light Entertainment Advised

Experience reveals pictures which are definitely in the heavy drama class, are swell entertainment for a great many people when there's snow on the ground and icicles on the marquee. However, when the sun's so hot the artist needs to shellac the front displays to keep the water colors from boiling, this type of product should be kept in the producer's film vaults. The customers would much rather go fishing, swimming, boating, motoring and picnicing these hot days, than to weep big tears.

Musicals, breezy comedies, light romances and action product get preferred time from May to September.

The booking department gives much extra attention to short subjects during the summer. Programs are held down to less than two hours and managers advertise the fact. Furthermore, effort is made to include an exploitation short on each bill and the managers really exploit them. Pete Smith's "Surf Heroes" has as much B. O. appeal at this time of the year, if fully exploited, as do many features. Columbia's "Golf Magic" is another one, for example, which Chakeres Managers have turned into real dough.

Clean Houses Important

Producers could greatly aid heat-suffering exhibitors by releasing more product with regard to the season for which it is best suited, and by producing more pictures in the exploitation group with a definite "seasonal" story value.

Beer drinkers sop up three times as much suds on July 4th as they do on Christmas Eve, and it's reasonable to believe a theatregoer will attend and enjoy certain types of pictures in certain seasons of the year in much the same manner. Their "taste" for them is no different in July or December, but their "thirst" certainly has its seasons.

To this general formula, the bookers add what we like to call "B. O. Headache Powders" in portions of about one each 10 days. In this group fall such attractions as fight pictures, outstanding re-issues, religious films, and sure-fire radio acts, as special stage attractions. It is a fact there is tremendous box office draw in radio acts which personally you probably would tune-out.

From bookings we turn to putting our houses in order. Most women clean house in the spring and it's not a bad time for theatres to get out the sponges, soap, carpet beaters, paint, etc. Chakeres Managers favor doing a thorough spring house-cleaning "while the show's on" and it's surprising how many of the customers, especially the women, take note and give the work more than a passing glance.

Stresses Newspaper Art

Managers find patrons flattering them with such comments as—"My, your theatre looks nice and it smells so cool and clean." A white lattice work around the bottom of the marquee, hanging flower baskets, floral lobby displays and the like, add a refreshing coolness to theatres during the summer.

Equal attention is given the appearance of cashiers and staff. The cooler and cleaner they look, the better the customers like it.

With bookings and houses in order, managers cooperating with the circuit advertising and exploitation staff, go after business where it's most likely to be found.

Campaigns are always built around newspaper advertisements and extensive newspaper art-layouts and readers. In the summer months more attention is given exploitation of short subjects and special attractions of every nature. Newspapers are found to be in a more receptive mood for contests, special pages and art. The newspaper man never has a desire to hurt a good advertiser's business, and can be prevailed upon to lend better cooperation when things are toughest.

Secondary only to our newspaper campaigns we place trailers, lobby displays and fronts. During the summer season we use an increased number of special trailers. Some are advance teaser trailers on feature attractions, but for most part they are brief selling shots on B. O. short subjects, extra attractions, contests, give-aways, etc.

We also develop for the summer months at least one smash lobby display which can be moved from theatre to theatre. This summer it is a giant lobby piece which depicts the manager on his vacation. On the display is a caricature of the manager with fishing pole in hand, surrounded by bathing beauties. The background is a seashore scene. A photo enlargement of the manager's head is used on the shoulders of the caricature, and this changed as the display moves from theatre to theatre. The display shows the manager standing alongside a large hanging post on which are four small whales, each fish carrying the stars and title of a forthcoming big hit. A-top the display is the caption "The Manager Has Been Fishing! He Has Caught Four of the Season's Biggest Catches! Coming Soon."

Supplementing "inside selling" and of equal importance is roadside and outdoor selling. Three-sheet boards are used for each theatre, and managers relocate enough of them each spring to assure "coverage" of all parks, swimming pools and dance pavilions in the territory. Window cards are used extensively during the summer months with concentration on recreation spots of every nature. Where public address systems are in regular use managers arrange for "plugs."

From experience we have learned many theatregoers become so engrossed with the novelty of summer sports and recreations that they momentarily "forget theatres exist." They become so enthused with the summer itch to go places and do things they even pass up outstanding attractions they really do not wish to miss.

Introduce New Ideas

To combat this, managers arrange ethical give-aways throughout the summer months and give preference to plans which place into circulation a great number of coupons, as these serve as constant reminders there is such a thing as a theatre in town during the summer months.

Each year the Chakeres Circuit endeavors to introduce in June an entirely new idea of such magnitude as to attract and interest persons of all ages. This particular idea must be "big," and far-reaching in nature, and preference is given to an idea that will prompt discussion among the greatest number of people.

For this particular summer, as a B. O stimulant, the Chakeres Circuit has introduced "School Night," and already it is harvesting results. "School Night" is presented one evening each week and it is a capacity-business idea. The plan is of such nature it is adaptable to ladies' matinees and even to additional nights in the week.

The summer slump is a challenge to every showman presenting different problems in different localities. That it can be coped with has been proven. It behooves all in the profession to report without delay, any plans, ideas and stunts WHICH WORK to the trade papers for the consideration and aid of the industry.

Philadelphians Stress Cooling In Advertising

by C. L. "BILL" YEARSLEY
Manager, Circle, Philadelphia, Pa.

Summer is here again and it's time for theatremen to begin worrying about falling seasonal grosses due to rising temperatures. A-Mike is concerned about the fact that every summer a lot of the boys break out with the same old heat rash. When Mark Twain said "Everybody complains about the weather, but nobody does anything about it," he didn't know about theatre managers, especially A-Mike's Round Tablers.

This year our editor has decided to take the annual epidemic in hand, organize us to do our best to beat the heat and then forget it. And, possibly because I have survived 26 summers in the business, he thinks I should stand up in meeting and tell how I keep cool. It's a pleasure to co-operate, especially as this summer finds me in Philly as manager of Warner's air-conditioned Circle, "Where COOL breezes ALWAYS blow."

Our Philadelphia hot weather technique is simple. The Stanley-Warner theatres put on a special poster campaign advertising the air-conditioned houses. Every newspaper ad for houses so equipped is headed "Healthfully Air-Conditioned." Valances and other front of the house advertising along the same lines. Staffs wear white or grey summer uniforms. This done, we forget the weather and sell our shows. Naturally, grosses vary with the quality of attractions. And, finally, expenses are held down to the limit.

Patrons Invited to Cool Off

It happens that the Circle has a large and handsome air-conditioned foyer that is visible from the street. I have equipped it with bright colored summer lawn furniture, chairs and swinging couches, promoted from a nearby department store, in return for a neat credit card. A few growing ferns help. We run a trailer inviting patrons, when passing, to come in, rest and cool off. A card outside carries the same invitation. As the theatre is in the heart of the local shopping district the stunt promises to be a good-will builder. And the entrance to the theatre looks cool and inviting.

Last year I was at the Warner-operated Roosevelt which has no cooling plant. "Skip" Weshner, my zone manager, who is in charge of advertising, does not think it good business to cover the front of such houses with cool copy. It only takes the customers a few seconds to find out that they've been lied to, which makes them sore and weakens their faith in all the house's advertising.

We did do everything we could to make the Roosevelt look cool. House lighting was changed to blues and greens. Similarly colored summer wash covers were put on the furniture in the foyer, and the dark, heavy wall tapestries were covered with watercolor landscapes of cool-hued scenes. The cool, restful effect drew many compliments from patrons.

BUILDING BUSINESS IN RESORT THEATRES

Round Tabler Tells Methods of Securing Added Attendance from Summer Vacation-eers

by PEARCE PARKHURST
Manager, Paramount, Schroon Lake, N. Y.

Getting business in a small town summer resort theatre is no easy job, and it has its headaches, but at the same time it has its compensation in fun and experience. Quite frequently I have heard the remark that my theatre is a typical small town summer theatre. That may be true, but in order to make a summer theatre pay real dividends, one must not limit oneself to small town methods of operation, but instead must go out and exploit the theatre. However, one must remember that in a summer town the summer people and transients are the major part of an exhibitor's business. Therefore, I must lure people from nearby resorts, and camps into the theatre, as well as the local people.

Increases Mailing List

In the summer time I have a mailing list of 350 people, besides mailing an ample amount of programs to each of sixty rooming houses, boarding houses, and hotels in and around Schroon Lake. This keeps everyone informed of our attractions. Besides this I always add 10 to 20 of the latest pieces of attractive window advertising for the local stores. This year it is the new "show guides," and let me tell you they make one mighty nice piece of advertising. Still, I must have a local distribution of programs, and so I purchased one dozen attractive aluminum theatre news program boxes which also go into one dozen more local stores. These attractive boxes will draw one's attention to the programs, and at the same time keep them from being scattered all over the counter.

I double my window card list in the summertime, and put out 200 window cards within a radius of 100 miles from Schroon. Every store, hotel, rooming house, and boys' and girls' camp for miles around, has one of these cards to keep them informed as to the movies at the Paramount.

I try to center my campaigns around one extra good picture for the week, and try to dress my lobby up in some novel way for the big picture of the week. For example on "College Swing" the lobby was all strung with pennants on the picture, and it created a very collegiate atmosphere in the theatre. On "Test Pilot" we had airplanes hanging all around the lobby. Just a minor decoration like this in a small town theatre, can mean a lot in the increasing of the boxoffice receipts.

Publishes Own Paper

Besides lobby displays, however, one must go out among the merchants and promote window displays, sodas and sundaes named after the star of the picture, etc. Have the merchants put your program on the bottom on their daily menu in exchange for a pass to the theatre on an ad on your programs.

I find that it pays to publish my own local weekly newspaper, which is really nothing more than a glorified theatre program. We have no local paper and it goes over big with the local people. Everyone likes to see their name in print, so try to put in as many personals, etc., in your paper as possible. (I shall be more than pleased to send a sample copy of my paper to every exhibitor that requests same.)

Ties In with Camps

Another sure fire idea which is most successful when staged among the numerous boys' and girls' camps is this—about a week after the boys and girls have arrived in the camps for the summer, go around and see the various councellors and get acquainted with them. Offer to let them in free if they bring their group to your theatre. Stage a Camp Song Fest Night, getting girls and boys from each camp to compete with songs, cheering, etc. The winning team to be given some kind of a prize. The next week try a councellor contest and have judges from each camp pick entrants at the door; later they compete for a loving cup on the stage of the theatre. A good idea is to have the most beautiful woman councellor, and the most handsome man councellor.

One should follow this up the third week with a Camp Talent Show, having amateurs from each camp compete on the stage, awarding first, second, and third prizes to the three best contestants. Don't give up with this, but swing from the camps right over to the hotel and entertainment field, with a guest star night, having the star from each hotel compete. Be sure to announce what hotel each star represents, and work in a plug for the hotel. It certainly can bring in the old greenbacks, too. Have something going on every minute at your theatre, and it won't take the people long to find out about it.

Back to the paper idea again, if you put out a weekly paper, try selling some copies to non-theatre patrons for two cents per copy. Give it free to your patrons, and they will eat it up. Let grocers give copies with every loaf of bread, or with every purchase, or give it with any article that they wish to push. Run frequent contests, in your paper, and don't be afraid of an editorial once in a while. However, do not take either side.

Favors Novelty Ads

Novelty advertising is my weakness, and almost every week I have some sort of a new and novel idea in a herald or throwaway to work out on my patrons. Each picture, and title, can suggest a new and novel idea in a different kind of handout ad. A couple of stock novelty handouts for practically any picture are the season pass and envelope gag stunts.

The above article briefly gives you a few ideas for stimulating summer resort business. Even now as you sit down to dinner, however, another idea has probably entered your head. Jot it down in your notebook, and work it out properly when you get down to the office, then report it to the Round Table so the rest of us can read about it.

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parentheses after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1937-38 season.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

ANSWER TO QUESTION NO. 118

Question No. 118 was: (A) What does an overheated brush indicate? (B) May worn bearings cause sparking at the brushes? If so, why? (C) What occurs when an armature coil is short-circuited and what should be done about it? (D) How is a sprung (bent) armature shaft evidenced, and what should be done about it?

There were many excellent answers to some sections, but after due consideration, since these are points having to do rather intimately with the life and general efficiency of motor-generators, I have asked John Hertner, president of the Hertner Electric Company, long an authority on matters of this kind, to prepare an answer to this question. He has done so as follows:

"(A) This question covers extremely wide territory in that there are a number of reasons why a brush may get hot, and the heat may be the result of one or a number of causes.

"1. Overload. Either an overloaded machine or because the other brushes on the same polarity are not doing their part of the job.

"2. Improper pressure on the commutator. Every kind of brush has a range of pressure (pounds per square inch) at which it should be worked. This range is usually fairly wide and the pressure should be maintained therein.

"3. Under certain conditions a high resistance skin forms on the commutator surface causing undue heat. A certain grade of brush is known to do this if it is underloaded for some time.

"4. Besides this, there are such conditions as a faulty brush rigging where the brushes are not firmly held. A commutator that is rough, out of round, protruding mica, improper rocking, improper armature design, which will sometimes cause undue heating without much, if any, apparent sparking; new brushes not properly seated, poor pigtail contact in the brush in question or in the other brushes of the same polarity, and excessive machine vibration.

"(B) It is possible that a worn bearing would cause sparking at the brushes, particularly if the machine were inclined to spark. We have experimented in this direction and find that the armature may be considerably off center before the brushes show any sign of distress.

"(C) A shorted armature coil is always serious because not only will it burn out, but it is likely to cause the ruin of every coil which it crosses.

"The machine should always be stopped as quickly as possible and the damaged coil removed. Tests should then be made to find the seat of the trouble. If in the coil, and action was taken quickly enough so that other coils were not damaged, the machine could be repaired by the replacement of the coil. If the commutator shows a short between the bars which took this coil, the short must be taken out from between these bars.

"As an emergency measure, sometimes such a coil can be cut in two and a 'bridge' put between the commutator bars. In this way the machine can be run safely since the danger comes from the heavy short-circuited current in the coil which, of course, is no longer possible as soon as the coil is cut through.

"(D) A bent shaft generally shows itself in excessive vibration and an eccentricity of the commutator formerly running true. Such a shaft in the hands of an experienced man can generally be straightened quite acceptably on a good husky lathe. We are speaking now of small and moderate-sized units, for when a shaft reaches a diameter of upwards of two inches, it is pretty hard to handle.

"The straightening involves the use of a heavy crowbar with a short bite. It is a crude operation, but it does work. Care must be taken to see that the pressure is applied at the proper point along the shaft so that the strain will take the original bend out and not put in another at a different point. I am referring now to putting the finished armature into the lathe, between centers and using the bar to strain it in the direction opposite to the bend. The above is, of course, not a 100% remedy and its effectiveness depends upon the skill of the mechanic."

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 124

Closing the subject of motor-generator sets, I shall confine this week's question to this:

Give briefly those ten points you consider of highest importance in the care of motor-generator sets.

(Note: Remember, this is a Bluebook school and the answer to all save possibly some special questions can be found in that book.)

Eadie Named Member of 20th Century-Fox Board

W. J. Eadie, comptroller of Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation, has been elected a member of the company's board of directors to fill the vacancy caused by the death of John D. Clark.

Mr. Eadie has been connected with the company for the last 10 years. A public accountant, he went to Fox Theatres 10 years ago as comptroller. Three years later he was transferred to Fox Film Corporation as an assistant to Sydney Towell, comptroller at the time. When Mr. Towell was appointed treasurer, Mr. Eadie was made comptroller.

Open Canadian Drive For Reduced Rentals

The latest move on the part of the Independent Theatres Association of Ontario is to launch a campaign for reduced film rentals for the coming season, the agitation having been started prior to the signing of contracts for 1938-39 product by independent exhibitors. The reason advanced by Harold Kay, secretary of the association, is that the general falling off of business justifies a demand for lowered cost of film for next year.

"Bad box office due to general conditions cannot be remedied by us," Mr. Kay said, adding that "we should be in a position to get price reductions on pictures for next year's product." He said that "distributors are seeking to make an iron-clad contract even more rigid through alteration of certain clauses where small glimmerings of exhibitor rights still exist."

Ohio Ticket Tax Extended to 1941

The Ohio House of Representatives this week approved the tax-extender bill anticipated to produce $7,200,000 in poor relief from excise taxes, including the three per cent admissions tax, which was extended through 1941. The action was taken on the conference committee report which already had been approved by the Senate.

The House then voted to adjourn, sine die, the special session which began May 16th. The admissions tax will raise $1,500,000 annually for poor relief, but this amount, as in the case of other state grants covered in the bill, must be matched with local funds by the subdivisions.

Since the legislature did not raise the admissions tax in spite of vigorous efforts on the part of some groups to bring this about, theatre men throughout the state feel they won a decided victory in the session.

Burkhardt Honored by Providence Associates

Associates and friends of Howard C. Burkhardt, retiring manager of Loew's State, Providence, who left this week for Washington to assume direction of the Capitol theatre, honored him last week with a testimonial luncheon. Mr. Burkhardt was presented a traveling bag.

Those present included Mayor James E. Dunne, former Mayor Joseph E. Gaynor, Judge James E. Dooley, H. M. Addison, Edward M. Fay, Bernard E. Fay, Garrett Byrnes, John Hawkins, Thomas Meehan, William Spragg, Martin Toohey, William Brown, Sidney Kane, Abe Spitz, Edward Reed, Archibald Wilverman, Antonio Romano, Sam Kaufman, Albert J. Clarke, Morris Druker, Abraham Lipson, Ralph E. Snyder, David Falk, John Carroll, Herbert Allard, Dave Hochreich and Edward McBride, who succeeds Mr. Burkhardt as manager of the State.

Roberts Home from Central America

Charles Roberts of Columbia's foreign department, returned to New York this week after several months tour of the company's exchanges in Central America.

The LION'S ROAR

When you browse through the quarterly magazine published by Consumers Bureau of Standards, Summer 1938 issue, you'll be startled to find that motion pictures are appraised just like canned salmon, government graded butter and women's slips (pardon the expression).

There are 26 productions listed under the heading "RECOMMENDED MOTION PICTURES" and, if you will forgive our blushes, 9 are M-G-M, the next nearest competitor has 4 and thereafter the various companies rank with 3, 3, 3, 3 and 1.

If M-G-M didn't win one of these surveys, polls or star popularity votes.. that would be news. It would not only be man bites dog, but lion bites editor.

It's NEWS in any case.

Here's news, too. Lend an ear.

INSIDE STUFF ON "MARIE ANTOINETTE"

"Just met a theatre circuit operator back from California. This fellow was tipped off to a sneak preview (prior to the World Premiere—see below) of 'Marie Antoinette' outside of Los Angeles. Claims it's by far the greatest picture turned out in years. It's the talk of California. And here's what the Manager of the theatre showing the Preview wrote to his home office... confidentially: ...'This was the first preview and played to a full house. The minute the audience saw they were to witness 'Marie Antoinette' they pretty nearly tore the theatre down. We have never received a finer reaction to any preview in this theatre. The comment cards elected it as one of the greatest motion pictures of all time."

Rosy predictions for you, James. We get it from the showmen who show "Shopworn Angel." Listen to the fans. Overheard in the lobbies of America where money talks: "There's my new passion, girls, Jimmy Stewart." "Reminds me of how my Frankie makes love, so modest-like." "He's never been so appealing." "He's a real American type, the kind I'd like to have around the house." Mr. Stewart has been climbing, hit by hit, up the ladder of success. Conservative theatre men say that his co-starring role with Margaret Sullavan in "Shopworn Angel" represents the final clincher. He's a box-office name. Listen to the gals in your lobby after the show and you'll say ditto!

WHAT'S THE SHOOTING FOR?

Reports from the filming of "THE CITADEL" are exciting. King Vidor directing. Robert Donat, Rosalind Russell co-stars. Looks like the MEF (Metro Expeditionary Forces) will bring back an attraction bigger than "Yank at Oxford."

The "BOYS' TOWN" company still on location at the actual famed spot in Omaha. Spencer Tracy, Mickey Rooney—perfect casting for this heart story. Norman Taurog directing. A show to look forward to.

Hunt Stromberg, Producer, Van Dyke, Director, are too busy to take the bows for "Marie Antoinette." They're back with the pair they launched to co-stardom—Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy. "SWEETHEARTS" is the show, and the show's a sweetheart.

The talk of the M-G-M studios: the beauty, the romance of "THE GREAT WALTZ" (Luise Rainer, Fernand Gravet, Miliza Korjus) and the thrill, merriment and box-office wallop of "TOO HOT TO HANDLE" (Clark Gable, Myrna Loy).

All is not quiet on the Western front. It's busy as hell at the M-G-M studios.

And it all spells

Mid-Summer Morn

BRIGHT and fair, and far too early, this summer's morning your editor in his petal-pink atelier up where Radio City meets the sky looks out on the best of all possible worlds—or if not the best, at least the funniest.

Down yonder, three hundred Rockefeller feet below, the first and second gardeners in the Garden of All Nations are in conference. They appear to have found a weed, of all things, in that precious, hand-sifted foible farm.

Out the other window and down on the roof of the Music Hall, the entirely synthetic lawn where the Rockettes will be coming to play between shows is getting a manicure. Unlike the greenery across the Fiftieth Street canyon where the gardeners are, this Music Hall roof lawn was made of cork on a machine over in New Jersey. It has no weeds.

The sun, just clearing the Ritz Tower over on Park Avenue, shafts through the steel work of the rising Associated Press building and lays a most modernistic shadow pattern on the Rockettes' playground. Maybe that's symbolism. Maybe it's an omen. More likely, it is just the Monday sun coming up.

WE face a new week. In behalf of our bedevilled world of the motion picture, may it be as entertaining as the one just passed.

After tedious weeks of trade doldrums and feverish bickerings of commerce, events in the realm of name and fame last week broke into a summer blossoming of animated personal manifestations of choice interest. Issues, of which we have had too much, all at once became people. The news acquired human punch.

It all started, irrelevantly enough, with a piece in the Saturday Evening Post by Mr. Alva Johnston, well known reportorial man-about-town in New York and Hollywood these several years, on the subject of the insurance business and other activities of Mr. James Roosevelt, son of and secretary to the President of these United States. It was, if not inspirational, at least a success story.

Incidentally Mr. Johnston mentioned the acquaintance of young Mr. Roosevelt and our own Mr. Joseph P. Kennedy, formerly of F.B.O., Pathe, First National, etc., including some service to Paramount. The reference had something to do with an expedition to England some years ago and the acquisition of some excellent brands of Scotch for Somerset, Ltd., Mr. Kennedy's distributing company.

Mr. Kennedy was recently over from his post as ambassador to the Court of St. James's seeing his son graduated by Harvard. His presence on the home shores stirred again a bit of interest in what might come of trade treaty arrangements that would ameliorate the British Film Act quota provisions but not much news is had of that, yet.

For the first time in his able commercial and political career Mr. Kennedy was less than smiling to the press when he remarked that the story, so far as the part he had read about himself was concerned, was "a tissue of lies."

MR. JOHNSTON, whom you will be remembering for his joy in phrases as the author of "The Great Goldwyn," was interviewed for answer and closed with a quip about "our ambassador to the Court of Haig & Haig." That was not fair, because Dewars is good too.

The Kennedy will be having back at Mr. Johnston for that one. And as we know the Ambassador, he is quite a maker of quips and phrases himself, as witness one of his outgivings in that same Saturday Evening Post a couple of years back.

Meanwhile the story having become the big national topic of the period, Mr. Joseph Medill Patterson, publisher of the New York Daily News, low-brow miracle tabloid, himself professionally and personally in favour of the New Deal, took off with an editorial suggesting there ought to be investigation of the press, in the course of which he mentioned his own paper, the New York World-Telegram and others. The World-Telegram is, you know, bell-wether of the Scripps-Howard print circuit, with our own Mr. Merlin H. Aylesworth, nee N.B.C. and R.K.O., publisher. The World-Telegram came back and said: "If or when the Scripps-Howard newspapers decide to part company with the New Deal the fact will appear in these columns."

THE ball being over in his court, Mr. Patterson reiterated "that the air would be cleared by an impartial probe of the charges flying around the American newspaper and magazine press."

"We find," recorded Mr. Patterson, "that our offer to have the News lead the parade before an impartial investigation committee has stirred up unusual excitement among our friends and acquaintances in the newspaper racket."

So Mr. Patterson considers it a racket!

There speaks the robust young man who twenty-five years ago when he was learning his trade was likely to appear in the Chicago Tribune office in either a flannel shirt or an opera cape, or both. He had both moods, sometimes simultaneously. His tremendous success seems to worry him some yet. He apologizes, as well he might, to the readers of the Daily News, for using a French phrase in his editorial, and records a remark of a daughter concerning his demand for investigation of the press: "What's the idea, Pop? You've got plenty of skeletons in your own closet."

But anyway Mr. Patterson was presumably in a more than usually blithesome humor. For about the day his editorial appeared he was wed to Miss Mary King, for many years a member of the editorial staff of the News and the Chicago Tribune, and they sailed away to the British Isles a-honeymooning. That, incidentally, makes him the brother-in-law of Kate Cameron, motion picture critic of the Daily News, real name Miss Loretta King, sister of the bride.

Mr. Patterson, be it known, is among men of wealth the nation's most persistent picture patron. He sees several every

Invitation

The committee of distribution executives appointed two weeks ago to formulate plans and conduct negotiations with exhibitor organizations on self regulation by the industry of trade practices this week was ready to invite exhibition leaders to New York to study a program for a proposed round table discussion of grievances and ways of remedying them. The date and place for formal conferences to be held in the near future will be settled at the preliminary meeting and it is hoped to effect an understanding of what is required of each side.

Progress of the distributors' committee is related on page 13.

Infringement Actions

An unprecedented number of infringement actions have been filed against film companies during the last two years, a check of records revealed this week. Attorneys for the film companies attribute the ever increasing number of actions to the fact that the film industry has expanded until it now is viewed as a lucrative target and to the fact that there is an inherent desire in many persons to obtain something for nothing. The records show, however, that only two out of 25 cases which went to trial during the last two years resulted in awards for the plaintiffs. Eleven of the 24 cases were dismissed, eight were settled out of court and three were discontinued.

A complete story on infringement actions starts on page 15.

Uncle Sam, Producer

On authorization of the president, the National Emergency Council at Washington this week started a study pointing toward the establishment of two new divisions in the NEA, one each for films and radio. All government activities in each field would be coordinated and eventually the government itself would use its branches for the dissemination of so-called "propaganda" on a scale never hitherto attempted in this country.

The plan is outlined on page 45.

Government Publicity

Paul W. Shafer, Republican representative of Michigan, in a post session issue of the Congressional Record attacks the use of motion pictures, radio programs and paid publicity agents by various bureaus and agencies of the Government to disseminate "propaganda." Citing estimated costs and the approximate extent of the use of these mediums Mr. Shafer concluded, "Federal publicity activities are more extensive, more pervasive, and much more effective than any previously known; much of it is financed and carried on in contravention of the law, and much of it is designed and distributed in such a way as to contravene good public morals and the impartiality and objectivity which the citizen has a right to expect from his Government."

The representative's remarks are quoted on page 45.

Silverstone Returns

Maurice Silverstone, recently appointed chairman of the executive committee of United Artists, returned from London this week and said that a renewal of David O. Selznick's releasing arrangement with United Artists and a new long term contract for George J. Schaefer, general manager of distribution in United States and Canada, would be the chief topics of discussion at the company's first board of directors meeting in New York.

Lynn Farnol was named director of publicity and advertising to succeed Monroe Greenthal, who assumes the post of director of exploitation and will handle trade paper advertising.

Block Booking Status

Block booking is legal under the present laws of the state of California, according to the ruling of a superior court judge in that state. The decision pointed out particularly the uncertainties of production, laying special stress on the difficulties of planning on star availability.

The decision is discussed on page 48.

Mid-Summer Morn . . . An Editorial

week and some of the things he learns at the movies help him make a mass newspaper.

And back to the Roosevelts again. Little Miss Shirley Temple took her parents along and went for a visit up at Hyde Park. There she met "Buzzie" and "Sistie" Dall, in her own age sector, children of Mrs. John Boettiger, whose husband, now Hearst newspapering, you'll be remembering, was for a spell on the staff of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., in New York, through an introduction by that same Mr. Joseph P. Kennedy, friend of the White House family.

Little Miss Temple confided, exclusively, through a motor car window to the New York Times, that she couldn't go swimming with Mrs. Roosevelt because she'd have got her hair wet—and what a bother! She said the Hyde Park lamb chops, peas and raspberries were "very nice." In fact she especially mentioned the raspberries.

"Everybody talked a lot," Miss Temple said. But it seems there was no mention of movies. It is perhaps just as well, because along about Blue Eagle days there was some pungent quotation of the White House on "salaries paid to infants."

Exciting as all these matters have been, the most penetrating publicity job of the week consisted of nothing at all except a salty, grey old gentleman from Texas by the name of Mr. Jack Garner staying at home down in Uvalde and tending to his own business, which consisted of boiling a slab of lamb over a barbecue fire and saying nothing. The picture of that is traveling around the world and the newspapers are editorializing about it. He is the week's hit, a symbol of substantial peace in a troubled, feverish world.

Election Protests

Nine of the 18 studios affected by the recent National Labor Board order in which a collective bargaining agency election was held by screen writers have taken the first step toward contesting the decision by filing protests against the NLRB ruling. The protests were based on the claim that studios had no opportunity to check whether the writers voting in the election were actually on the studio payroll as required by the conditions of eligibility.

"Hitlerization"

British exhibitors are watching with trepidation the effects of a ruling of the London County Council that cinema theatres in London must display prominently in the lobby a lighted plan of the seats available at all times and the prices charged for them. The implied arbitrary regulation of exhibition practice is resented by the trade as threatening government regulation akin to "Hitlerization." Exhibitors have served notice on the Council that a test case will be brought as soon as possible and that appeals will be taken to the House of Lords if necessary.

Trade problems in England are reported by Aubrey Flanagan on page 71.

Steffes and Chicago Allied

Several Allied States exhibitor members in Chicago are considering approaching W. A. (Al) Steffes with a proposition to assume the leadership of their organization and operate it with his own Allied of the Northwest. The position in Illinois was left vacant by the sudden death, last Sunday, of Aaron Saperstein. (Mr. Saperstein's obituary appears on page 82.)

"Al" Steffes has had ambitions to enter Chicago exhibition organization activity since 1928, when exhibitors there called him from his Minneapolis headquarters to guide them in a labor fight. They again called him in 1929 to counsel them in a labor strike. In the first instance, Mr. Steffes was informed that Jack Miller, then dominating exhibitor organization leader, did not care for the intrusion. On his subsequent arrical, Mr. Steffes was visited by persons reputedly representing "Scarface" Al Capone. He left shortly thereafter. Regardless, Mr. Steffes is understood to have felt that the two large Alllied units of the middlewest should be closer.

Meanwhile, no outstanding candidate appears for the candidacy of chieftain of Allied in Illinois, and several members of that group are understood to be turning in the direction of Mr. Steffes because of the success of his Allied operations in Minnesota and the Dakotas.

Loew's Profit

Loew's, Inc., net profit for the 40 weeks ended June 9th, after expenses, subsidiaries' preferred dividends, depreciation and taxes, was $8,352,675 as compared to $11,714,722 for the 40 weeks ended June 3, 1937, it was revealed this week in an earning statement made public by the company. Other financial news of the week included the plan of Columbia Pictures to issue options on 25,000 shares of stock to three officers.

Lloyd and Paramount

Harold Lloyd may produce a high budget feature for Paramount in England, he said on his arrival in New York this week from the coast. He will confer with David Rose, head of Paramount's British production, and other officials, regarding sending a company to London to make "What Ho," by Richard Connell.

The comedian is discussing the production of a series of features starring W. C. Fields.

Mr. Lloyd said that he has other matters to discuss at Paramount, but that there will be no change in his releasing deal. Mr. Lloyd also was in New York to attend the opening of his latest picture, "Professor Beware," held Wednesday at the Paramount theatre.

MAXWELL AND OSTRERS

Broadway was speculating this week over the significance of the abrupt resignation of John Maxwell from the directorate of Gaumont British Pictures, cables from London having disclosed Mr. Maxwell's withdrawal without any explanation.

The resignation came in close sequence to Mr. Maxwell's petition in London courts for postponement of his suit against the Ostrer brothers, who control GB, charging misrepresentation in connection with their sale to him of a $3,000,000 Class "A" non-voting interest in GB. Gaumont British, it is understood, was ready to proceed with the case last week, but on Mr. Maxwell's motion the court set a new trial date, October 12th.

Mr. Maxwell, who heads Associated British Pictures, a GB competitor in British production and distribution, has been fighting the Ostrers and Gaumont for two years, since he attempted to gain control of GB and merge it with his Associated British company, reputedly to establish domination over the British film industry. He was unsuccessful and subsequently filed the pending action against the Ostrers.

Last week's motion by Mr. Maxwell for postponement of the action and his resignation from the board this week caused observers in New York to wonder whether Mr. Maxwell's position was not changing. It was considered a possibility that he might be under pressure from colleagues or other stock owners in his Associated British Pictures with respect to the policy of investing $3,000,000 of Associated's money seeking foothold in GB.

GB accounts published Wednesday showed debenture and preference dividends have been paid but not ordinary dividends. Profit balance increased £26,844, the reserve went from £85,000 to £100,000 and the bank overdraft dropped from £819,778 to £373,990.

Radio Agreement

A two-year agreement covering working conditions of actors and singers employed by the Columbia Broadcasting System and the National Broadcasting Company for sustaining programs in New York, Chicago, Los Angeles and, in the case of NBC, San Francisco, was signed on Tuesday with the American Federation of Radio Artists.

The contract will become effective the third Sunday following its ratification by members of AFRA and after the AFRA shall have been certified to the broadcasting companies by the American Arbitration Association as a representative of the majority.

DISTRIBUTORS INVITE EXHIBITORS TO TALK SELF-REGULATION

by JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Leaders of organized exhibition, representing virtually all theatres in the country, this weekend will probably receive from distributors an invitation in writing to confer in New York on a program for self-regulating distributor-exhibitor relations.

The invitation represents official notification that the distributors have formulated their version of a program and are ready to lay on a table definite proposals for establishing machinery to solve such trade problems as are still matters of contention among the buyers and sellers of motion pictures.

Exhibitors Reported Receptive

The distributors stand ready to effect important changes in their sales policies and to sponsor the oft-mentioned local conciliation boards proposed for adjudicating disputes in the field between distributors and exhibitors and among exhibitors.

The consensus in distribution headquarters in New York is that exhibitors are in a receptive mood for some form of self-regulation as opposed to regulation by the Government.

The letters going forth this week, addressed to the heads of exhibitor organizations, will ask these leaders to New York for preliminary conferences to determine their feelings in the matter of a date and place for formal conferences to follow, and the size and nature of exhibitor representation to attend the formal negotiations.

The preliminary discussions will in all probability be conducted with individual exhibitor leaders, or in small groups, preceding the formal "round-table" in which all will participate.

Study of Needs

In moving now to invite exhibitor representatives to New York, the distributors will also seek at the preliminary conferences to effect an understanding between each side as to what is required of both to solve so-called industry "ills" and to eliminate "unfair" trade practices. They expect also to determine how far each side is willing or empowered to go to arrive at a workable solution on each of the problems. They will not propose, nor do they expect that any agreement in writing be established at the preliminary discussions—that coming later at the formal "round-table."

The preliminary talks, according to a spokesman for the distributors, will not permit "trading" or "chiseling" by either side.

The distributors feel that organized exhibitors have in one form or another presented their proposals for an industry program, and that the distributors are now entitled to do likewise before any of the formal conferences commence.

The proposals which the distributors have formulated, the nature of which is being closely held, or based, insofar as possible, legally and otherwise, on the so-called "demands" and proposals made variously down through the years by exhibitor groups, principally on the ten-point program advanced two years ago by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America. This calls for local conciliation boards, more liberal cancellation, a short form of contract, adjustment of preferred playing time, clearance adjustment, mediation of overbuying and of unfair competition between theatres and adjustment of non-theatrical competition. The first three proposals are virtually certain to be granted. The last five, in the opinion of the distributors, are matters to be adjusted by the local boards. The remaining two points involve elimination of forced short subject scales and score charges.

The distributors feel that the committee they entrusted with the job of formulating their version of a program has made progress far beyond their expectation.

On Tuesday afternoon, June 28th, distributors announced that Sidney R. Kent, president of Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation and the prime mover for years for trade practice reforms, had agreed to act as chairman of a committee "charged with developing a program for the solution of trade problems."

Named with Mr. Kent as alternates to the committee chairmanship were Nicholas M.

Uncle Sam Hires "Sherlock of the Movies" for Monopoly Probing

by FRANCIS L. BURT
in Washington

Appointment of Daniel Bertrand, one-time NRA researcher, as administrative assistant to Leon Hendreson, executive secretary of the Administration's joint legislative-executive Monopoly Investigating Committee, was formally announced Wednesday in Washington.

The motion picture industry has been mentioned as a possible subject of the committee's contemplated investigation of "big business," and the designation of Mr. Bertrand this week led Washington to speculate as to whether his engagement might have some special significance in view of his motion picture code work under the NRA, where he wrote a voluminous report on distribution-exhibition practices, and his subsequent secret investigations into film conditions for the Department of Justice. It was during this latest association, some 18 months ago, that Mr. Bertrand was heard called "Uncle Sam's Sherlock of the Movies."

If the Administration's monopoly investigation does undertake a study of the film business, Washington wondered, too, whether the investigators would follow the lines Mr. Bertrand suggested in February, 1936, when, in his NRA report on the industry, he observed that a solution to film problems would be found in legislation outlawing block booking, prohibiting overbuying of product by exhibitors and regulating clearance and zoning, and a federal study of socalled film "monopoly." All of these points, he said at the time, were subject to application of federal authority. He added that present trade practices "tend to create a protected market for the large companies," and that "airs of suspicion and doubt" long extant within the industry "should be cleared."

"The public is entitled to full knowledge," concluded Mr. Bertrand, "and a thorough study of the industry by a federal agency with adequate facilities and authority should be made."

Mr. Bertrand lost his motion picture NRA code job when the Blue Eagle lost its feathers. Besides his investigations for the Justice Department, he has since been engaged in a variety of pursuits, notable among them the reorganization of the Amherst Club of his alma mater, various proposals for placing the motion picture in Grover Whalen's New York World's Fair and ambitions to enter the motion picture business.

PRELIMINARY MEETING PLANNED

Schenck, president of Loew's Inc., and Leo Spitz, president of RKO Radio.

Named to serve with the aforementioned, as the "negotiating committee," were William F. Rodgers, general sales manager of Loew's; Ned E. Depinet, vice president of RKO Radio, and Abe Montague, general sales manager of Columbia—all of them described at the time of their designation as friendly toward self-regulation, thus strengthening the possibility of its enactment.

Committee Meets Daily

The committee has been meeting in New York almost daily since its appointment, and by this weekend will be ready to announce that they are ready to talk to exhibitors about distributor proposals. This is in line with the original announcement of the committee that the program they will devise will be the basis of "renewed cooperative efforts with representatives both of all organized and individual exhibitor interests throughout the country for new steps in the self-regulation required for the further progress of the industry."

Seven of the eight major distributors—Warner Brothers being the exception—have variously committed themselves to a trade practice program, agreeing at one time or another to about 66 per cent of the proposals advanced by the MPTOA. Broadway has heard reports recently that Warners might be going along in the latest move, but to date no official announcement of a decision has been forthcoming from the company.

In any event, the eventual adoption of self-regulation has been a foregone conclusion for months, particularly in view of the advancement made in the last Congress by the Pettengill bill to regulate block booking and blind selling practices and also the proximity of the Administration's long-promised anti-trust probings of all "big business," in which connection the motion picture has been frequently mentioned. It has been generally expected that self-regulation would be effected and working before the next session of Congress.

Allied Will Consider Program for Industry

Allied States Association, which for years has been campaigning for correcting of industry "ills" through legislation, sponsoring the Pettengill block booking bill in Congress and the theatre "divorcement" bill in state legislatures, stands ready to "consider" any trade practice program presented by the distributors.

Allied only two weeks ago, following announcement by the distributors that a self-regulation program was in process of formulation, appealed to the Administration's Monopoly Investigating Committee, in Washington, for a thorough investigation of the film business. Speculation was rife at the time that in view of this action, Allied would not go along in any move toward self-regulation, but, rather, would proceed with its policy of correction-by-legislation.

Clarifying its position, Allied, through Abram F. Myers, general counsel, officially declared this week that, "When and if a concrete program is evolved by the distributors it will receive the consideration of the (Allied) board. Meantime, idle speculation as to what Allied's attitude may or may not be cannot be productive of any good, may do harm."

The statement pointed out that Allied's petition to the Monopoly Investigating Committee for a probe of the industry had previously been ordered, by the Pittsburgh convention of Allied held prior to the distributors' announcement of a conciliation movement.

NEW ANTI-MONOPOLY MOVE IS PROPOSED

Enactment by Congress of legislation prohibiting one company from obtaining control of more than 10 per cent of its industry is recommended by the Federal Trade Commission in Washington.

Present federal trust law prohibits certain acquisitions of competitors through the purchase of stock, but the commission charges the ban has been evaded by the purchase of competitors' assets, rather than stock.

Under the commission's recommendation, no company already controlling 10 per cent or more of its industry would be allowed to absorb any other company in that industry. The suggested measure also would prevent any mergers where the result would be to control more than 10 per cent of an industry.

Whether adoption of the recommendation would affect any motion picture corporations could not be determined because there was no telling whether the 10 per cent control referred to 10 per cent of gross or net production, distribution or exhibition, or total assets or other forms of control.

Allied of Ohio To Await Action by Abram Myers

Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio this week announced that, "No member of this board or any other member of this organization" will "act in any capacity in connection with the contemplated conciliation and arbitration plan until he is first authorized to do so by Abram F. Myers, general counsel of national Allied."

Saperstein Death Halts Talks On Practices in Chicago

The march of Chicago independents on New York last week demanding a "new deal" on alleged "unfair" clearance enjoyed by Balaban and Katz Theatres, was halted on Sunday with the sudden death of Aaron Saperstein, president of Chicago Allied and the leader of some 100 local independents in the move against distributors.

Mr. Saperstein, accompanied by Eddie Silverman, of Chicago's Essaness Circuit, and Joe Rosenberg, the independents' lawyer, comprised a "secret" mission to New York to adjust the differences, either by "cooperation or correction." They demanded that Chicago's clearance problem be adjusted without further ado, and threatened the filing of an anti-trust suit against B. and K. and distributors if no concessions could be obtained. Not made public, however, was the fact that the independents were willing to forego their legal attack on clearance if B. and K. abandoned its citywide dual bill policies in favor of single bills, which would release more product to the independents.

Discussions were held last Wednesday with Austin Keough, chief counsel in New York for Paramount, which controls Balaban and Katz, but resumption was prevented on Thursday due to the absence of Mr. Keough from his office.

The delegation returned to Chicago on Saturday, without any remedial promises from Paramount or other distributors. Mr. Saperstein died on Sunday at his home in Chicago, from a heart attack, at 42.

Mr. Saperstein was too ill on arriving home to make any report on the conferences, and Mr. Rosenberg and Mr. Silverman refused to talk. The general understanding in Chicago, however, prior to Mr. Saperstein's death, was that the committee was to return to New York in a week or so for further conferences, as Paramount wanted time to talk over the Chicago clearance situation with other distributors.

The chances now for any action by the independents appear slight, as the late Allied Chicago leader was admittedly the guiding force in the independents' fight for "reforms." There was some doubt in Chicago whether money had been raised for the contemplated legal fray, and action will probably be delayed until Allied gets a new leader.

Court Orders Hearing in Massachusetts Trust Case

Federal Judge Hulbert in New York this week directed the issuance of a subpoena against each of seven major motion picture film corporations calling for the taking of testimony and the production of documents, records and papers, all of which are to be sent to Boston, for use in trial of nine Sherman Anti-Trust Law suits pending in a Massachusetts Federal Court. The defendant corporations are Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Fox Film, Vitagraph, R-K-O, United Artists, Universal and Columbia Pictures.

They are charged in the several complaints, with having entered into a combination and conspiracy to monopolize interstate commerce in motion pictures. The complaint, filed by seven independent operators of theatres in New York, New Jersey and New England, alleged that the plaintiffs were prevented, because of the conspiracy, from contracting for an adequate supply of films and from securing commercially valuable films until they were of comparatively little value as attractions.

The complaints were filed by Aetna Amusement Enterprises, Commonwealth Amusement Enterprises, Nashua Theatres, Elite Amusement Enterprises, Fidel Amusement Enterprises, Standard Amusement Enterprises, and the A. and W. Amusement Corporation.

The plaintiffs seek injunctive relief and threefold damages from the defendants.

Other defendants with the distributors are Maine and New Hampshire Theatres Company, Colonial Theatres Company, Inc., and Colonial Theatres Company of Nashua, N. H.

Clofine Sails for Europe

The extension of News of the Day coverage in Europe is contemplated by Michael D. Clofine, managing editor, who sailed Wednesday on the Normandie for London, Paris and Rome. This will be his first trip to Europe in 15 years. Mr. Clofine will be accompanied by his wife and expects to be gone a month.

FLOW OF INFRINGEMENT SUITS PLAGUES INDUSTRY

Fifty-Two Actions Against Film Companies for Millions in Damages Are Carried to the Courts in Two Years

Fifty-two suits demanding uncounted millions in infringement damages and for invasion of copyright have been filed against motion picture producers in the United States in the last two years. Only eight per cent have won awards or settlements. These figures take no account of some hundreds of attacks that never progress beyond the "letter-from-attorney" stage.

Most spectacular in its several aspects, including the figures involved, the "Letty Lynton" case against Loew's, Inc., and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is the first to affirm and establish the liability of exhibitors showing infringing pictures. In this first instance the pursuit has extended only to the exhibition interests identified with the producer defendant. The limitation is, however, entirely arbitrary and not defined by law.

Attorneys for producers consider the big flow of infringement suits as reflecting only the fact that the motion picture industry with its conspicuous position and its publicity of millions is a shining mark. Preponderantly, they say, the suits are plain racketeering. Twenty-three out of every twenty-five cases, they point out, end in dismissals. Many other claims that never reach the courts are settled for minor sums on "nuisance value."

However, the lawyers agree—and the records substantiate their contentions—that the slight chance a plaintiff holds toward proving to a court that his literary work has been infringed upon fails almost completely to deter other prospective litigants.

With the lone exception of the now famous "Letty Lynton" case, which stands to cost Loew's and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer more than half a million dollars, the sums paid out by the companies in plagiarism actions each year is small when compared to the millions mentioned and demanded in the complaints filed.

The latest copyright threat appeared this Wednesday when Delores Lacy Collins, widow of the aviator, James H. Collins, filed an infringement action for more than $2,000,000, charging that Loew's Inc., MGM Pictures Inc., MGM Distributing Corporation, and Culver Export Corporation infringed, in the picture "Test Pilot," upon the copyright on the book, "Test Pilot."

The action, filed in the United States district court, southern district, New York, Harry Weinberger, attorney, New York, is in two parts. In the first cause of action, the plaintiff asks an injunction restraining further distribution and exhibition of the picture and an accounting of profits which Mr. Weinberger estimated at more than 1,000,000.

In the second cause of action, the defendants are accused of unfair business competition and 1,000,000 dagames are asked. The defendants, it is charged, exploited the picture in such a manner that the public was led to believe it was a film version of the Collins book.

Mrs. Collins further contents that in August, 1935, proofs of the book written by her late husband were submitted to MGM.

52 in Two Years

Figures for the last two years show 52 infringement actions were instituted against film companies in the United States. Of the total, 28 still are listed in court records as "pending," and of the remaining 24 only two resulted in court awards to the initiators of the actions. The judgments granted in these two cases totaled only $12,000, in one action $10,000, in the other $2,000.

Of the other 22 cases, 11 were dismissed, eight were settled out of court and three were discontinued.

Without passing any opinions on the merits of the cases settled out of court, the attorneys pointed out that it often is far better to settle a case for a "nominal" sum than to go to trial. Although the figures agreed upon for settlements are rarely disclosed by the film companies, it is widely noted that the actual money involved in most cases is a mere fraction of the amounts originally demanded. One attorney illustrated: An action for more than $1,000,000 was settled for "a nominal sum" and the settlement was made "for less than $100."

Highly Specialized Field

As a secondary cause of the large number of legal actions, the counsellors pointed to fellow attorneys. It is generally conceded that the practicing of copyright law is a highly specialized phase of law practice. The average attorney, dealing in other matters, is not well acquainted with rulings and interpretations involving the copyright law. As one well known attorney explained:

"We often get claims from lawyers, written in behalf of clients, of course. The lawyer has no case, but if we wrote to him and told him that, the first thing he would do is start suit. So we sit down and write to him, quoting decisions which would affect his case. Then we ask him to read the decisions and to let us know what action he plans to take. In most cases the matter ends there."

Lawyers agree that the increasing number of cases can be traced principally to the fact that the motion picture industry has grown. This, too, was explained by one of the attorneys for a large film company.

"With the large number of pictures now being put out," he said, "it is only natural that every once in a while some picture seems similar to some other author's work. That can't be helped because, after all, there are only a limited number of plots."

10% Reach Action Stage

The actual defending of actions, however, constitutes only a minor part of the work of each company's battery of attorneys. Each year hundreds of claims are filed against companies, but of the total the lawyers estimated that only about 10 to 15 per cent are carried to the stage of instituting an action. The statistics quoted previously show that only about half of the actions instituted ever go to trial.

However, it is with a hope of obtaining an award such as that which looms for the plaintiffs in the "Letty Lynton" case that litigants press for trial. The plaintiffs in the "Letty Lynton" case, after losing in the lower courts, were successful on appeal. Gordon Auchincloss, appointed special master by the court, recently submitted his final report estimating that Loew's, Inc., and its film and theatre affiliates are liable for damages of $587,604. The plaintiffs, Edward Sheldon and Margaret Ayer Barnes, and the defendant companies both have entered objections to the special master's report and the matter is now in the hands of the court. Loew's contends the maximum award should total no more than $35,000, while the defendants claim the award should be at least $1,000,000.

No matter what the court's decision is on the matter, it is generally understood that the case eventually will go to the United States supreme court for a final decision.

Mr. Auchincloss this week filed a petition asking for an allowance of $20,000 and $265 expenses, as compensation for his services. He said that he had been appointed by John C. Knox, federal judge, on July 21, 1936, to compute damages and between that time and the filing of his final report on May 9, 1938, he had spent 323 hours on hearings, in addition to 16 days spent in taking testimony at Culver City.

Aside from the fact that the special mas-

ASKS MAINTENANCE OF PRICE LEVELS

Fred H. Wehrenberg, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of St. Louis, Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois, in a letter this week to all members of the organization, issued an appeal to keep admission prices up.

Mr. Wehrenberg said that what the exhibitor must do is to "doll" up his theatre, in place of cutting his prices of admission and use every means at his command to try to keep his head above water during this off season period.

He said that if the exhibitors are not careful the city of St. Louis will be in the same situation as Kansas City, where, he said, the top price at first runs is 25 cents and the top price at the neighborhood theatres is 15 cents with giveaways and two and three features.

23 OUT OF 25 CASES ARE DISMISSED

ter estimates a record amount for an award, the "Lynton" case is considered outstanding because, according to Loew's attorneys, it is the first time that an award has been made against an exhibiting company. In his 87-page report, Mr. Auchincloss found that MGM Pictures Corporation was liable for profit in the amount of $268,861; that MGM Distributing Corporation was liable for $68,603; Loew's, Inc., for $97,466, and Culver Export Corporation, $152,673.

The figures are Mr. Auchincloss' estimate of the profits accruing to the various companies through the production, distribution, exhibition and exportation of the picture. The fact that all profits are included in the estimated liability of the companies is based, according to lawyers, on the fundamental principle of law that a wrongdoer can not profit through his wrongdoing.

Subject of Conference

It is in an attempt to iron out the conflicting differences between this principle of law and the fact that an award on this basis does not take into consideration other factors that attorneys for the film companies will confer in the near future, according to Edwin P. Kilroe, chairman of the copyright committee of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America.

The average person, Mr. Kilroe said, will agree that a wrondoer should not profit by his wrongdoing, but, at the same time, the average person also will agree that a story is not the sole reason for the success of a film.

Other factors, Mr. Kilroe pointed out, also contribute to the success of any picture. Among those Mr. Kilroe enumerated were the drawing power of players, the staging and the exploitation of a production.

After deciding upon a type of clause which the industry would favor for inclusion in the copyright law, the question probably will be brought up at discussions which will be held under the sponsorship of the committee for the study of copyright of the American National Committee on International Intellectual cooperation.

The first of these meeting was held in the Low Memorial Library at Columbia University, New York, last Thursday, but the session was devoted chiefly to an informal discussion.

Will Suggest New Provisions

The representatives of interests affected by the copyright law will formulate suggestions for the drafting of a proposed new copyright law and will forward them to James T. Shotwell, Columbia professor, who is chairman of the group.

When the meetings first were proposed, the sponsoring committee pointed out that it was undertaking the work because of the fact that no progress had been made on copyright legislation despite the fact that copyright laws have been proposed to every Congress since 1922. (Motion Picture Herald, July 2nd.)

The MPPDA was represented at last week's meeting by a specially appointed committee headed by Robert W. Perkins, general counsel for Warner Brothers. On the committee with Mr. Perkins are Mr. Kilroe, who is associated with Twentieth Century-Fox, and Gabriel Hess, general counsel for the MPPDA.

ALBANY CIRCUIT AIDS CAMPAIGN FOR JOBS

James A. Carrier, publicity chairman for the Fabian circuit in the Albany territory, is handling the campaign of the "Sales Means Jobs" Committee of Albany businessmen. Both morning and afternoon newspapers feature the campaign daily on the front page.

The latest stunt to be tried was the organizing of a group of ushers, taken from Fabian's Palace and Hall and Warner Brothers' Strand and Ritz to distribute cards bearing the legend "Sales Mean Jobs" to apartment houses, business offices, stores, etc.

General Representation Sought

Other interests represented at the meeting and the representatives included: Authors League of America, Miss Luise Sillcox and John Elliott; labor, Michael J. Flynn, Wage Earner Protective Association, and Clyde Mills, Typographical Union; American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, John W. Paine, general manager; Book Publishers Bureau, Frederic G. Melcher, chairman of the organization's copyright committee; Book Publishers Association (magazine), Marvin Pierce, chairman of the association's copyright committee, and George Lucas; Radio, National Association of Broadcasters, Sydney M. Kaye, and Scholarship, Robert C. Binkley and Richard Manning.

In her invitation to the various groups, Edith E. Ware, executive secretary of the American National Committee, pointed out that a copyright law drafted through the combined efforts of all representatives would stand a good chance of being adopted, because in the past legislative attempts in this direction failed due to the fact that each one became branded as one group's own bill.

Would Preserve Protection

With the exception of seeking to limit the amount of an award to the actual profit made on a property which infringes upon another and to obtaining a reduction in the statutory damages for which companies are liable, the film industry is desirous only of maintaining the protection afforded under the present copyright act.

In infringement suits the plaintiff first asks for an injunction to restrain further use of the infringing property and then for actual damages. In lieu of actual damages a plaintiff may be awarded statutory damages which in each case must be no less than $250 and no more than $5,000. Each showing of a picture is considered a separate infringement.

In this connection, Mr. Kilroe pointed out that statutory damages may be awarded even though a picture may have been a loss financially.

To guard against infringement actions, film companies exercise elaborate precautions. One of the most important of these precautions is the return, unopened, of all unsolicited manuscripts. One of the important steps in attempting to prove plagiarism is showing that the defendant had access to a literary property. Thus, by refusing to open unsolicited material, the studios eliminate one possibility of having access to a property which may infringe upon another.

Before any property is used, attorneys are assigned to trace the story from the time it "flowed from the author's pen." Because it is virtually impossible to tell whether an author has copied his material from another author, the companies are forced to rely upon the authors. There is a stipulation in purchasing contracts making the author liable for any damages resulting from infringement actions, but, for the most part, the clauses are not considered of great importance due to the fact that the average author would be unable to pay a judgment running into the hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Summary of 52 Cases

A summary of the 52 cases brought against film companies during the last two years follows: (Numerous other suits such as the "Letty Lynton" case were handled by legal departments during the last two years but they are not included in the list because they were instituted before July 1st, 1936.)

Five Against Columbia

Ralph S. Willard vs. Columbia—Plagiarism of original story known as "Paid to Die," "Frozen Alive," and "Man of Mystery," charged in film, "The Man Who Lived Twice." Action started in February, 1938. $50,000 demanded. Case now pending.

Plain Talk Magazine vs. Columbia Pictures and Screen Classics—Defendants accused of plagiarizing plaintiff's short story in short subject, "Norton I, Emperor of America." Suit instituted in May, 1937. An injunction against further exhibition of the picture and an accounting of profits asked. Suit "settled and discontinued" in January, 1938.

David Chagi vs. Columbia—Damages of $25,000 asked for alleged infringement. Plaintiff charged he submitted an adaptation of "Crime and Punishment," which was rejected. Later, he charged, parts of the adaptation were used. Action started in February, 1937. Case settled out of court.

HENRY BARSHA AND DAVID WEISSMAN vs. MGM, LOEW'S, AND MARX BROTHERS—Plaintiffs charged plagiarism of "High Fever" in "A Day at the Races." Action instituted in August, 1937, and damages of $100,000 asked. Award of $10,000 handed down in March, 1938.

SHORTER SHOWS WIN IN LONDON POLL

The ideal motion picture program should consist of one feature, two short subjects and a newsreel, according to a majority of reader's replies to the poll conducted by the Daily Sketch of London.

The poll showed that 67 percent of the replies were in favor of single feature programs, that 84 percent favored short subjects, especially travel films; that stage shows were less unpopular with an opposition vote of 56 percent. Two feature pictures, a short subject and a newsreel received 29 percent while one feature, three short subjects, an organ solo and a newsreel was hailed by only 15 percent.

CLEMENT PEDDELL vs. MGM, HAL ROACH AND FOX WEST COAST—$610,000 asked for alleged plagiarism of playlet, "Little Boy Blew In" in "Nobody's Baby." Case pending.

SAMUEL GORNBEIN vs. MGM—Plaintiff charged infringement of song, "Setting for Love," in the picture and song, "San Francisco." A total of $5,000,000 asked. Settled.

HARMS, INC., vs. LEO FEIST AND MGM—Defendant, it was charged, infringed upon plaintiff's song, "Fancy Our Meeting," in the song, "Did I Remember," which was used in the picture, "Suzy." Injunction and accounting of profits asked. Action started in September, 1936, and discontinued in August, 1937.

PARAMOUNT OBSERVES SOUND ANNIVERSARY

The tenth anniversary of Paramount's entry into production of sound pictures was observed at the studio in Hollywood this week with director Robert Florey as principal celebrant.

Exactly a decade ago Mr. Florey directed the first talking picture released by the company, "Pusher-in-the-Face," a two-reeler featuring Estelle Taylor and the late Raymond Hitchcock.

Marking the anniversary, Adolph Zukor, chairman of the board, presented Mr. Florey with a commemorative medallion, autographed a diary in which Mr. Florey has kept a record of the 50 pictures he has directed during the 10 years and announced his assignment to direct "King of Alcatraz."

Wilmer & Vincent in Three-Year Deal with Columbia

One of the most important of Columbia's franchise deals was consummated this week when the company closed a three-year contract with the Wilmer & Vincent Corporation for the entire line-up of features, serials, westerns and short subjects, starting with the 1938-39 program.

Louis Actor, circuit sales executive and Harry Weiner, Philadelphia manager, handled the negotiations for Columbia and Joseph D. Eagan represented the chain.

Solomon Gets Negro Film Rights

Louis H. Solomon has acquired world distribution rights for a series of all-Negro pictures produced in Hollywood by Million Dollar Productions, including a musical and two dramas, one of them starring Louise Beaver.

New Orleans Tax Bill Is Signed

The New Orleans amusement tax of two per cent on all theatres, night clubs, boxing exhibitions and similar attractions has been extended to 1940 by the signature of Governor R. W. Leche on the legislative bill granting the continuance.

Governor Leche also signed and placed in effect the one per cent general sales tax, which may soon be applied to all amusement admissions in addition to the amusement tax and a special one percent municipal sales tax.

Rulings are being sought as to whether the sales taxes of two percent apply to theatre and other amusement admissions.

Louisiana legislators ended the chance of passing an American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers bill at the closing session of the biennial term when a measure carrying this into effect was withdrawn.

In Ohio the House of Representatives is considering a compromise agreement for the financing of poor relief, which includes a proposal to extend the three percent admissions tax through 1941. A deadlock was reached when the House and the Senate disagreed over the amount political subdivisions should be permitted to borrow on anticipated revenues from excise taxes.

Threats of a three percent sales tax in Missouri, where the levy now is two percent and considered by exhibitors to be one of the factors in the poor business the past year, is contained in a report on the old age pension situation. Reduction of the age limit 70 to 65, which is required if Missouri is to get federal aid for pensions, will add 40,000 persons to the rolls.

Thompson Talks Pay with Union

L. E. Thompson, labor executive for RKO Theatres, this week met with a committee representing Local 1, Manhattan stagehands, for a general discussion relative to relief in view of lower grosses.

Mr. Thompson is representing the major circuits in the negotiations and is acting as as their spokesman until a definite proposal will be made, when the circuit representatives will meet jointly with the union committee.

Contracts with the stagehands, which have another year to run, provide for an increase in September, and it is understood the discussions are touching on this phase also.

The circuits' committee which met with Local 1 representatives last week for an initial discussion included, besides Mr. Thompson, Frank Phelps, Warner Brothers; Bob Weitman, Paramount theatre; Marvin Schenck, Loew's; Al Rosen, manager of Loew's State, and Louis Weber, attorney for the Skouras circuit.

ONE AFTER ANOTHER THE PICTURE COMPANIES HAVE COME UP WITH THEIR ANNOUNCEMENTS OF PRODUCT FOR THE NEW SEASON . . . And what power, what punch, what promise of big things, done in a big way, those announcements pack. Pictures planned to meet the demands of the most exacting market in screen history. Pictures with star value, production value, story value--pictures which must mean big business for the exhibitors of the nation. Pictures like M-G-M'S "Northwest Passage," 20th Century-Fox's "Alexander's Ragtime Band," Warner's "Desert Song," Sam Goldwyn's "Lady and the Cowboy." We here at Paramount who are exhibitors as well as producers wish to go on record as saying that never in our long experience in the business have we seen the industry present a more interesting series of potential hits than are right now starting before the cameras in Hollywood. We take our hats off to the vision, the enterprise, the fighting spirit of this great industry of ours and we say

THE Payoff ON PARAMOUNT'S PROFIT MAKERS OF 1938-'39

QUESTION . . . What is a picture company's duty to the theatre operator?

ANSWER . . . To hand him pictures that will make him a net profit, put more money in his pocket, give him a chance to be an active, thriving member of his profession.

ALL RIGHT! . . . In the past year Paramount, according to the figures (and figures don't lie), turned out more money makers than any other major company in the industry. In the next twelve months, the new season coming up the first of September, Paramount guarantees to top the record for 1937-'38.

On the following pages you will find a business-like sales analysis of Paramount's PROFIT MAKERS for the first quarter of the new season. In addition, you will see what our district managers have to say about these pictures, not as highfalutin' fancy work dressed up to make a good looking trade advertisement, but as the actual, factual payoff on the box-office champions of the new year...

PARAMOUNT'S PROFIT MAKERS OF '38-'39

will be the smash surprise hit of the new season!"

George is in position to know what he's talking about. He has read the script of "THE UNHOLY BEEBES," watched them shoot, seen the daily rushes. The other day he was present at a studio preview of the picture before a number of representative West Coast theatre showmen. The verdict was unanimous..."Crosby's greatest!"

G. A. SMITH
District Manager: Los Angeles,
San Francisco, Seattle, Portland, Denver,
Salt Lake City, Butte.

We're not surprised at all, George!

We've been watching Bing in pictures for a long time. We've also been listening to him on the air. To our way of thinking, Bing is one of the cleverest "light comedians" before the public today... a lovable, tongue-in-cheek individual... lively, happy, witty... a star millions of listeners have come to adore as the genial host of the weekly Kraft Music Hall programs. Bing's air program is now rated No. 3 on the national Crossley reports. Only two other national programs top him for audience interest, and that by a small margin. Shows you how he rates with the public!

..."THE UNHOLY BEEBES," however, is more than a "Crosby" picture! In addition to the suave maestro, it boasts a top-flight co-star in the person of FRED MacMURRAY, who does his full share to add romance and gayety to the heart-warming screen play fashioned by CLAUDE BINYON. WESLEY RUGGLES, who produced and directed, is conceded to be one of the greatest comedy directors in the business. With its human theme, its two popular stars, its direction by a showman who knows what it's all about . . . how can "THE UNHOLY BEEBES" miss being a great money picture!

"THE UNHOLY BEEBES"

is principally comedy. It's got a great story . . . a little heartache, a little heartbreak, a fine romance, a lot of human appeal . . . and music. The songs are brought into the plot naturally and with reason. They belong!

An excitingly thrilling horse race figures as the turning point in the dramatic action, and there's a swell fight and some sweet tunes that are really honeys, sung as only Bing can sing them. You'll get what we mean when we tell you that the picture has a sort of "Damon Runyonesque" flavor.

THE CAST is one for the marquee. In addition to BING CROSBY and FRED MacMURRAY, in a role that will put him farther up in favor with the fans. there are two newcomers to the screen . . . ELLEN DREW and young DONALD O'CONNOR. Wesley Ruggles could have had anyone in Hollywood for the two roles filled by the newcomers. But he wanted "new and refreshing characters." Ellen Drew only a short time ago was a sales clerk in a Chicago department store. Young O'Connor. chosen from 350 youngsters, comes from a vaudeville family. Bing says about O'Connor: "He sings, dances, acts and plays the accordion—and what more can you expect from a 'punk' kid?" Wesley Ruggles says:"We think we've got two young stars here." Coming from Ruggles, that's worth listening to. For Ruggles is a gambler on stars. It was he who gave worthwhile opportunity to such now-greats as Bing Crosby, Clark Gable, Irene Dunne and Janet Gaynor, among others.

"THE UNHOLY BEEBES" to receive Showmanship Exploitation and Publicity Build-up!

RACE TRACK ANGLE will be heavily exploited. Picture will be previewed at Delmar race track with broadcast from track and wire stories to every city in the United States. Two new personalities . . . Ellen Drew and Donald O'Connor . . . have already started to reap benefits of tremendous newspaper and magazine campaign. They're NEWS! Ellen Drew . . . the Department Store Cinderella . . . has fired the imagination of every girl in the country who dreams of a similar experience. Young O'Connor will be taken on a personal appearance tour in conjunction with initial key run engagements. His personality will sell him and the picture all along the line.

MUSIC will be built up in public favor by strategic broadcasts over most important programs on coast-to-coast hookups. You'll be hearing and remembering "Pocketful of Dreams," "Small Fry" and "Laugh and Call It Love."

PRESS BOOK will be full of national tie-ups with suggestions for cashing in on the race track angle, newspaper contests for Cinderella, seat-selling newspaper advertisements.

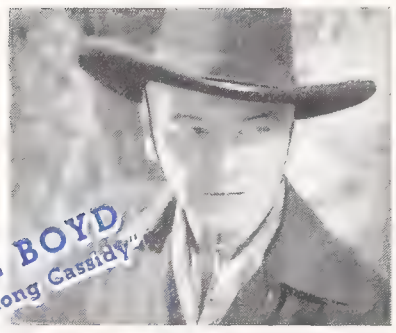
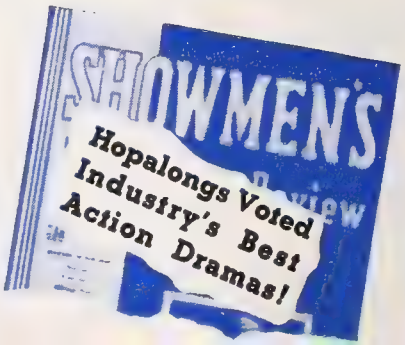
"'IN OLD MEXICO'

is the best Hopalong

. . . to date!"

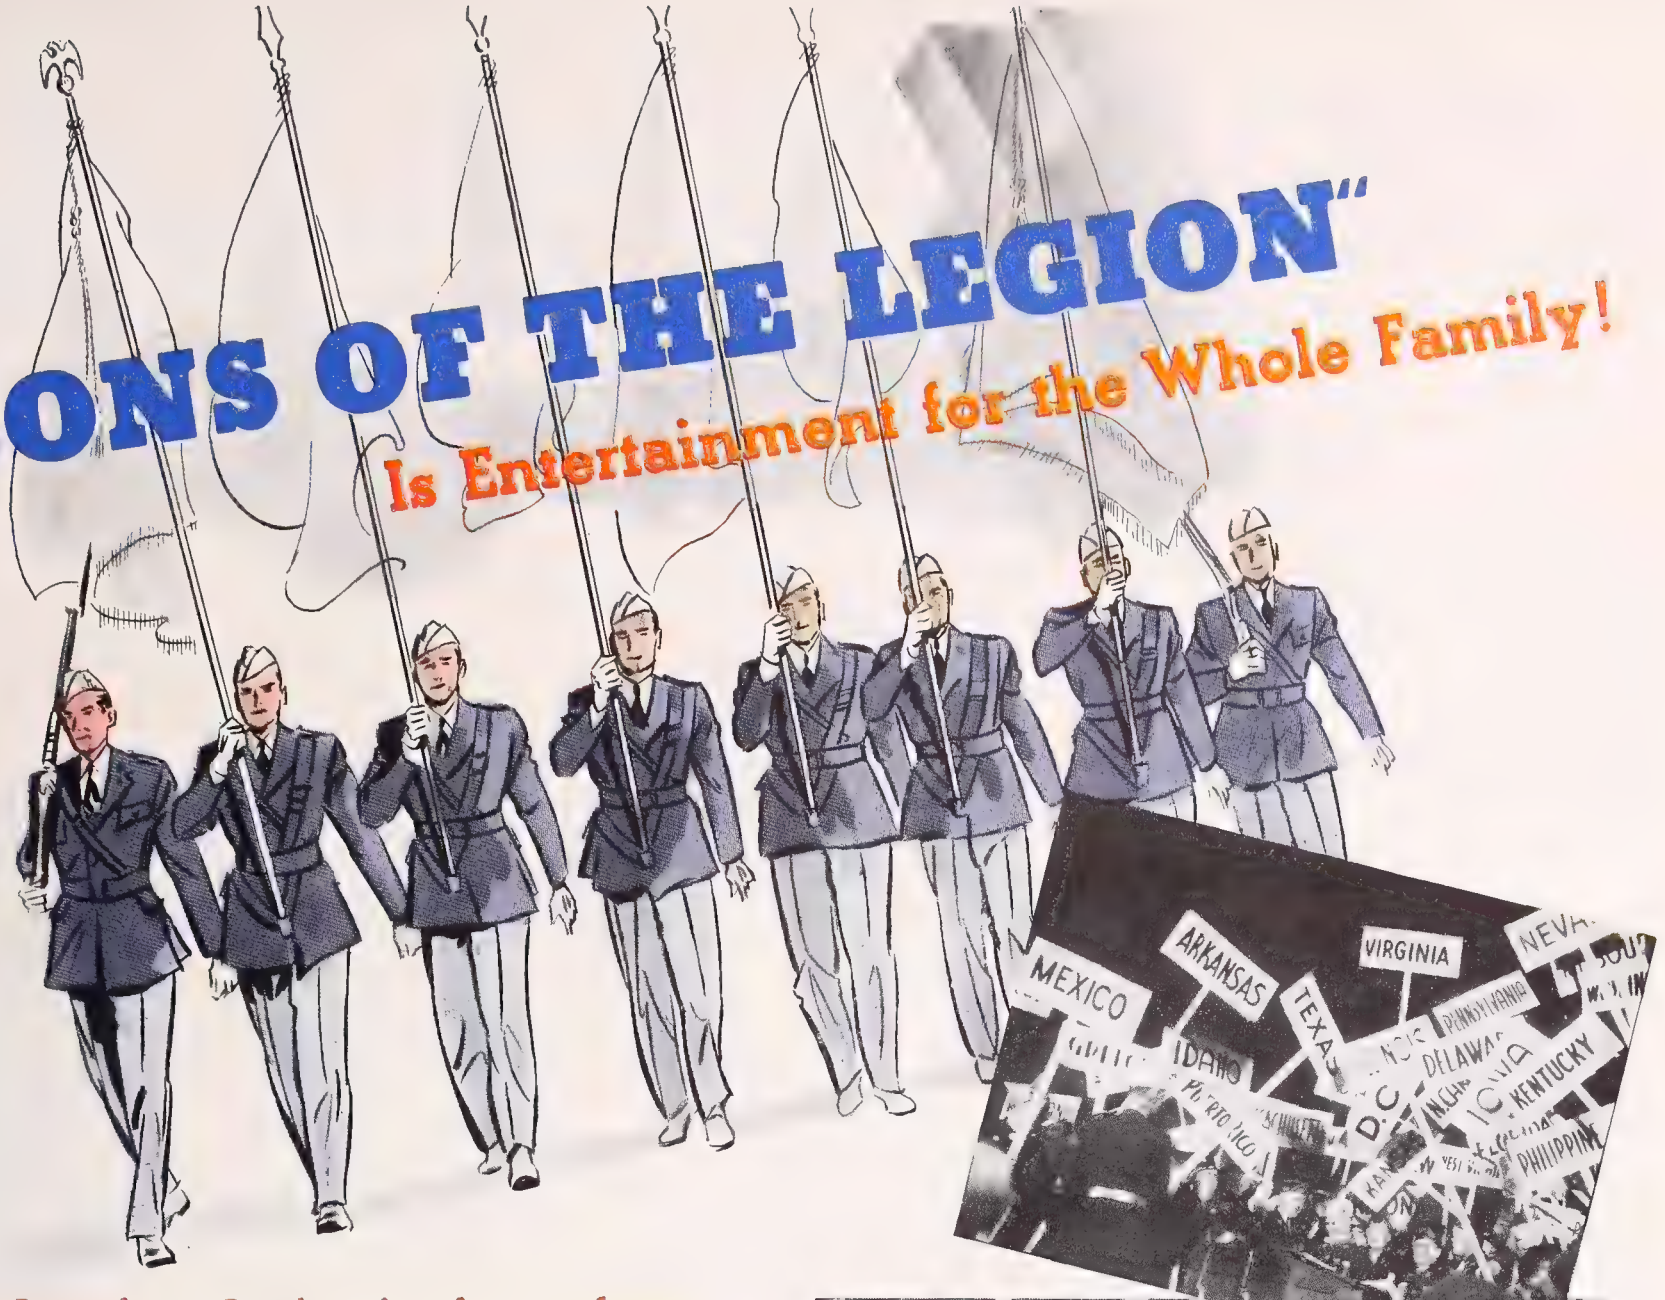


HARRY "POP" SHERMAN
Producer, Hopalong Cassidy Series



"POP" SHERMAN, whose Hopalong Cassidys have made money for every exhibitor who's played 'em, has only one ambition — to make each succeeding release better than the one before! And he does it! By constantly adding new touches — new story treatment — new thrill angles — new entertainment values — to keep the series at the top of the list.

"IN OLD MEXICO," the second release on the new season's series of Hopalong pictures, sets a new standard of excellence in this already-"tops" series.

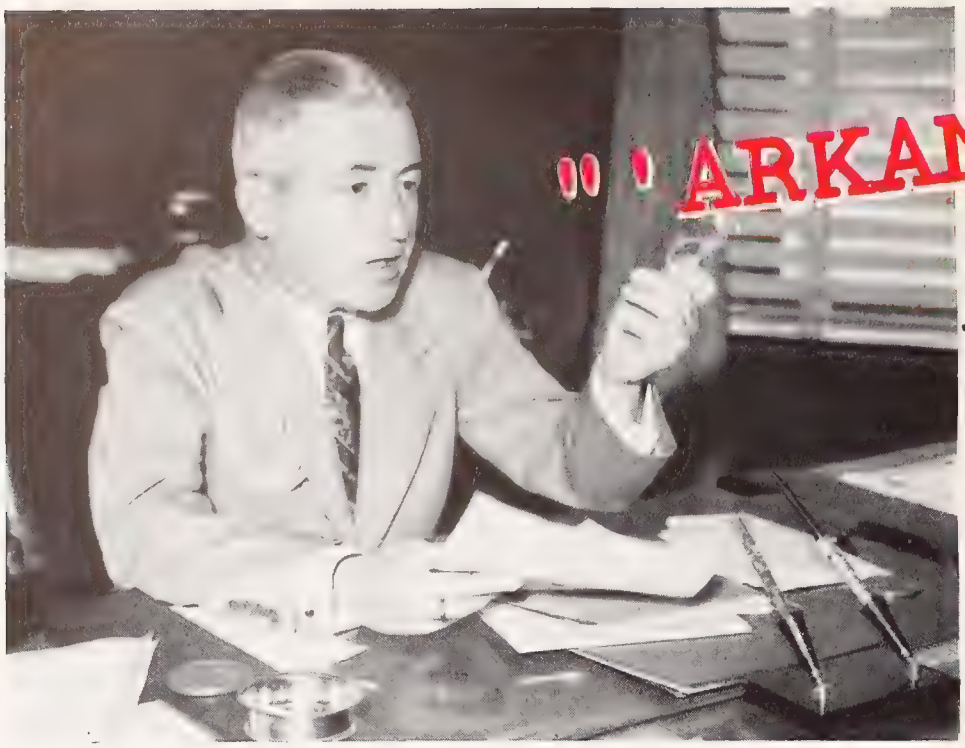


Of course, "Pop's" had a lot of grand help on this picture — a cast of surefire Hopalong Cassidy favorites headed by BILL BOYD, RUSSELL HAYDEN and GEORGE "WINDY" HAYES — a Clarence E. Mulford yarn that's action-packed from start to fadeout — scenery that's worth a feature story in itself — the brilliant direction of Ed Venturini, who's given "IN OLD MEXICO" the kind of treatment that makes it stand out like a Tiffany stone in Woolworth's — and photography by Russell Harlan, acknowledged one of the best outdoor action cameramen in Hollywood!

In the old days, all you had to give 'em was a hero on a white horse and plenty of the great outdoors—but today audiences want more! They want more story, more sense, more picture! And that's what "Pop" Sherman gives 'em in the Hopalong series—voted the best in the industry in an exhibitors' poll conducted by "Showmen's Trade Review"!

"SONS OF THE LEGION"

Is Entertainment for the Whole Family!



The American Legion is always front-page news. Its influence and its organization penetrate into every part of the United States. Its membership represents American civic and family life at its best. That's why a picture like "SONS OF THE LEGION," which is set against a background of American Legion heroism and ideals, is destined for popularity at the box-office.

"SONS OF THE LEGION" is the story of a father who loved his boy too much to hurt him, and of a son who loved his father so much that he couldn't bear the thought that his Dad wasn't all he ought to be! It's a story of bravery . . . of battles fought in peacetime to bring back the honor of a man whose name was under a cloud . . . of young romance that stood the test during a period of emotional stress.

DONALD O'CONNOR, the sensational kid discovery who almost stole "The Unholy Beebes" from Bing Crosby and Fred MacMurray, is given an important leading role in "SONS OF THE LEGION." BILLY LEE, popular youngster who scored in "Cocoanut Grove," is also importantly cast and lends another marquee name to the picture. The rest of the cast will feature performers of proven merit and pulling power.

JAMES HOGAN, whose "Last Train from Madrid," "Scandal Street" and "Ebb Tide" stamp him as an experienced box-office director, will handle "SONS OF THE LEGION" before the cameras.

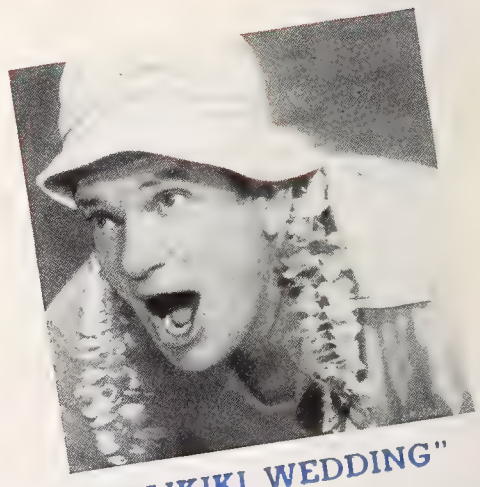
EXPLOITATION . . . "SONS OF THE LEGION" will be pre-released on September 9th in Los Angeles, at the time the American Legion convention will hold its sessions there. Full advantage will be taken of the opportunities that this will afford for nation-wide publicity coverage. American Legion posts, women's clubs, schools, Boy and Girl scout organizations . . . every organized group devoted to the advancement of Americanism . . . will be enlisted in behalf of "SONS OF THE LEGION," because of its implications. The Press Book will contain full information of all arrangements so that theatres will be in position to take full advantage.

"'ARKANSAS TRAVELER' with BOB BURNS is what I call a natural!"

OSCAR MORGAN — District Manager: Atlanta, Memphis, Charlotte, Jacksonville, New Orleans.

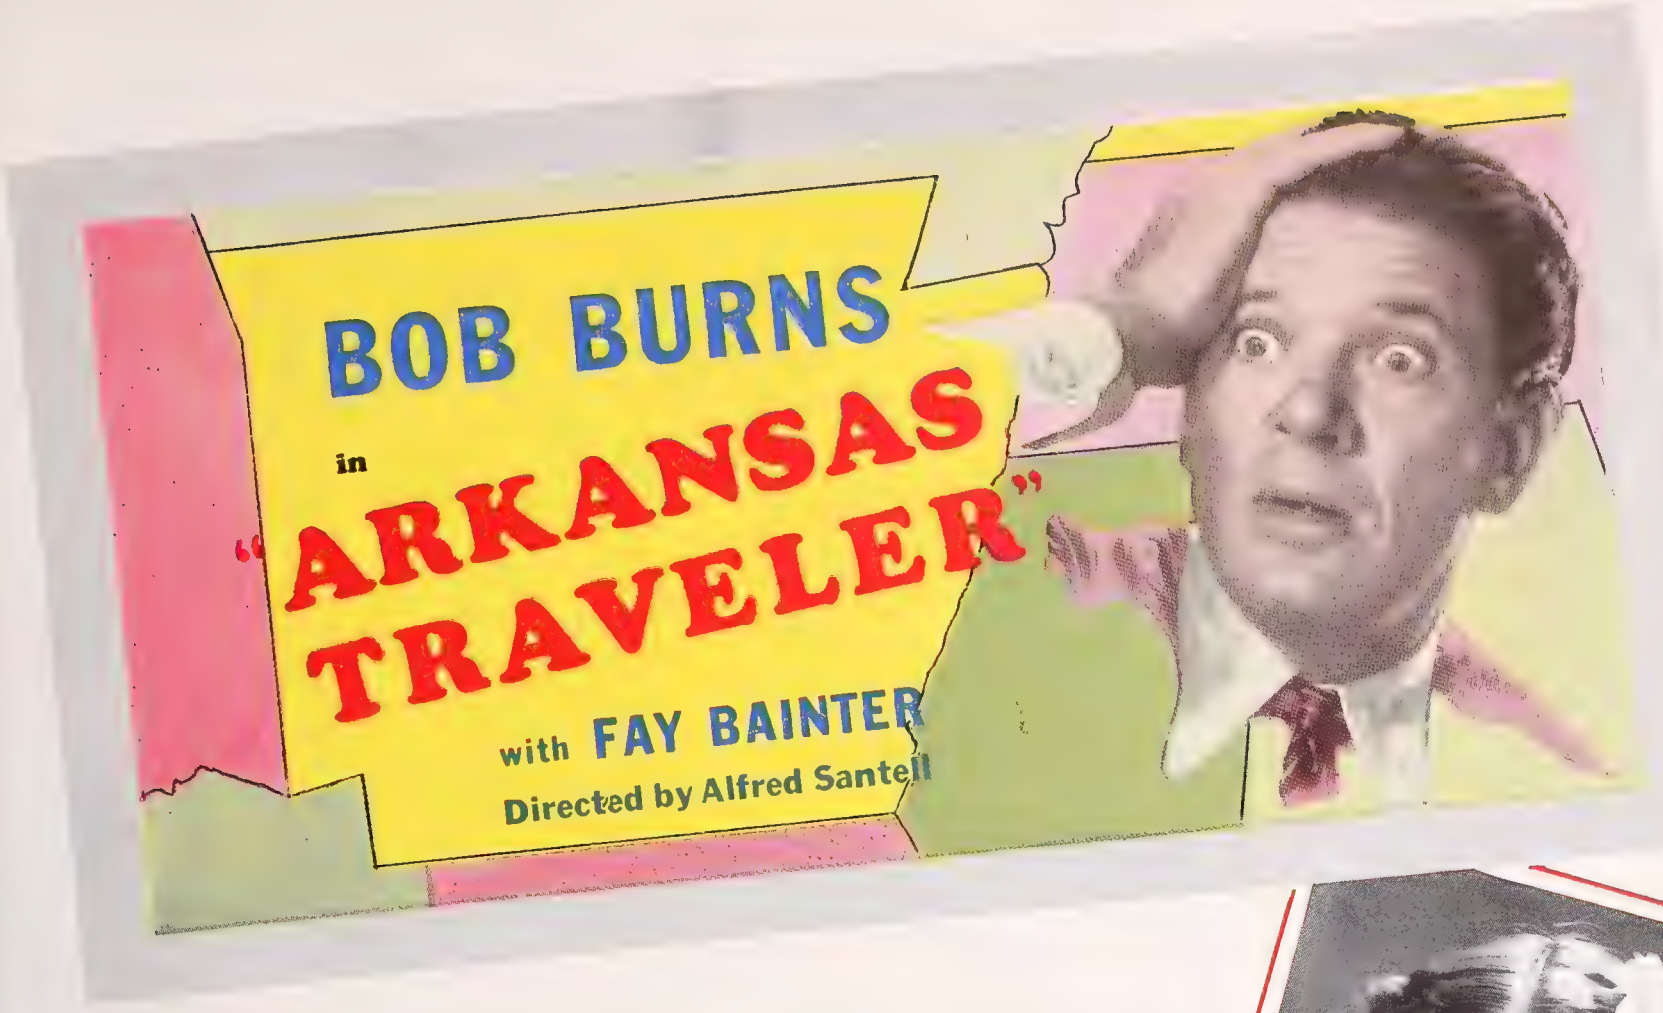
"'Natural' is the word for Burns, Oscar!"

BOB BURNS has a down-to-earth human quality. His following is tremendous. People like to see him, hear him, like to read his syndicated newspaper feature. The studio has long recognized, along with the theatres of the country, that Burns is a powerful potential draw at the box-office, and it has been on the lookout for a really great story to fit his personality. "ARKANSAS TRAVELER" fills all the requirements. It provides Burns with the best characterization he has ever had on the screen . . . one that is right down his alley. Picture a bashful, drawling straightforward sort of individual...an itinerant printer...with a strong sense of justice, a dryly humorous tongue, a twinkle in his eye and a homely philosophy...and you've some idea of Bob Burns' role in this picture. He strongly reminds us of the late Will Rogers.



You know how they went for Burns in . . .

"WELLS FARGO"

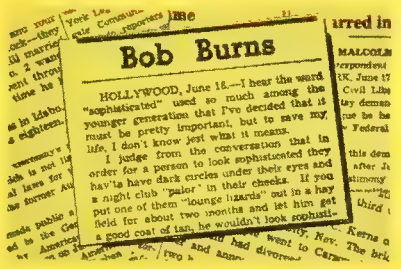


"MOUNTAIN MUSIC"

"WAIKIKI WEDDING"

. . . they'll love him as the "ARKANSAS TRAVELER"

JEAN PARKER will play the romantic feminine leading role in "ARKANSAS TRAVELER". She has been identified with a number of successful pictures and has recently scored in "Romance of the Limberlost"



FAY BAINTER will play opposite Bob Burns, in the role of a small-town widow. Her recent memorable performance in "White Banners" brought forth enthusiastic praise from both critics and public.

AL SANTELL, who is guiding the destinies of "ARKANSAS TRAVELER", has a happy faculty for getting down to fundamentals. He has a strong sense of human values. It is this quality that was so evident in such of his recent pictures as "Breakfast for Two", "Having Wonderful Time" and "Cocoanut Grove". Certain types of pictures cry out for certain types of directors. AL SANTELL can be depended upon to get the most out of "ARKANSAS TRAVELER".

"ARKANSAS TRAVELER" a Publicity and Exploitation "NATURAL"!

RADIO . . . Bob Burns takes over the Kraft Music Hall program for the summer. We are assured of plenty of national plugs for the picture via this medium.

Bob Burns

HOLLYWOOD, June 18.—I hear the word "sophisticated" used so much among the younger generation that I've decided that it must be pretty important, but to save my life, I don't know just what it means.

I judge from the conversation that in order for a person to look sophisticated they hav'ta have dark circles under their eyes and a night club "pallor" in their cheeks. If you put one of them "lounge lizards" out in a hay field for about two months and let him get a good coat of tan, he wouldn't look sophisti-

NEWSPAPERS . . . Throughout the country Bob Burns' syndicated humorous and philosophical feature is read and enjoyed by hundreds of thousands. A special plan has been worked out to concentrate special publicity on "ARKANSAS TRAVELER" in these newspapers.

International Typographical Union . . . the national printers' union . . . is one of the largest in the United States. Special screenings will be arranged for officials so that endorsement and sponsorship of the picture will permeate into every city and hamlet.

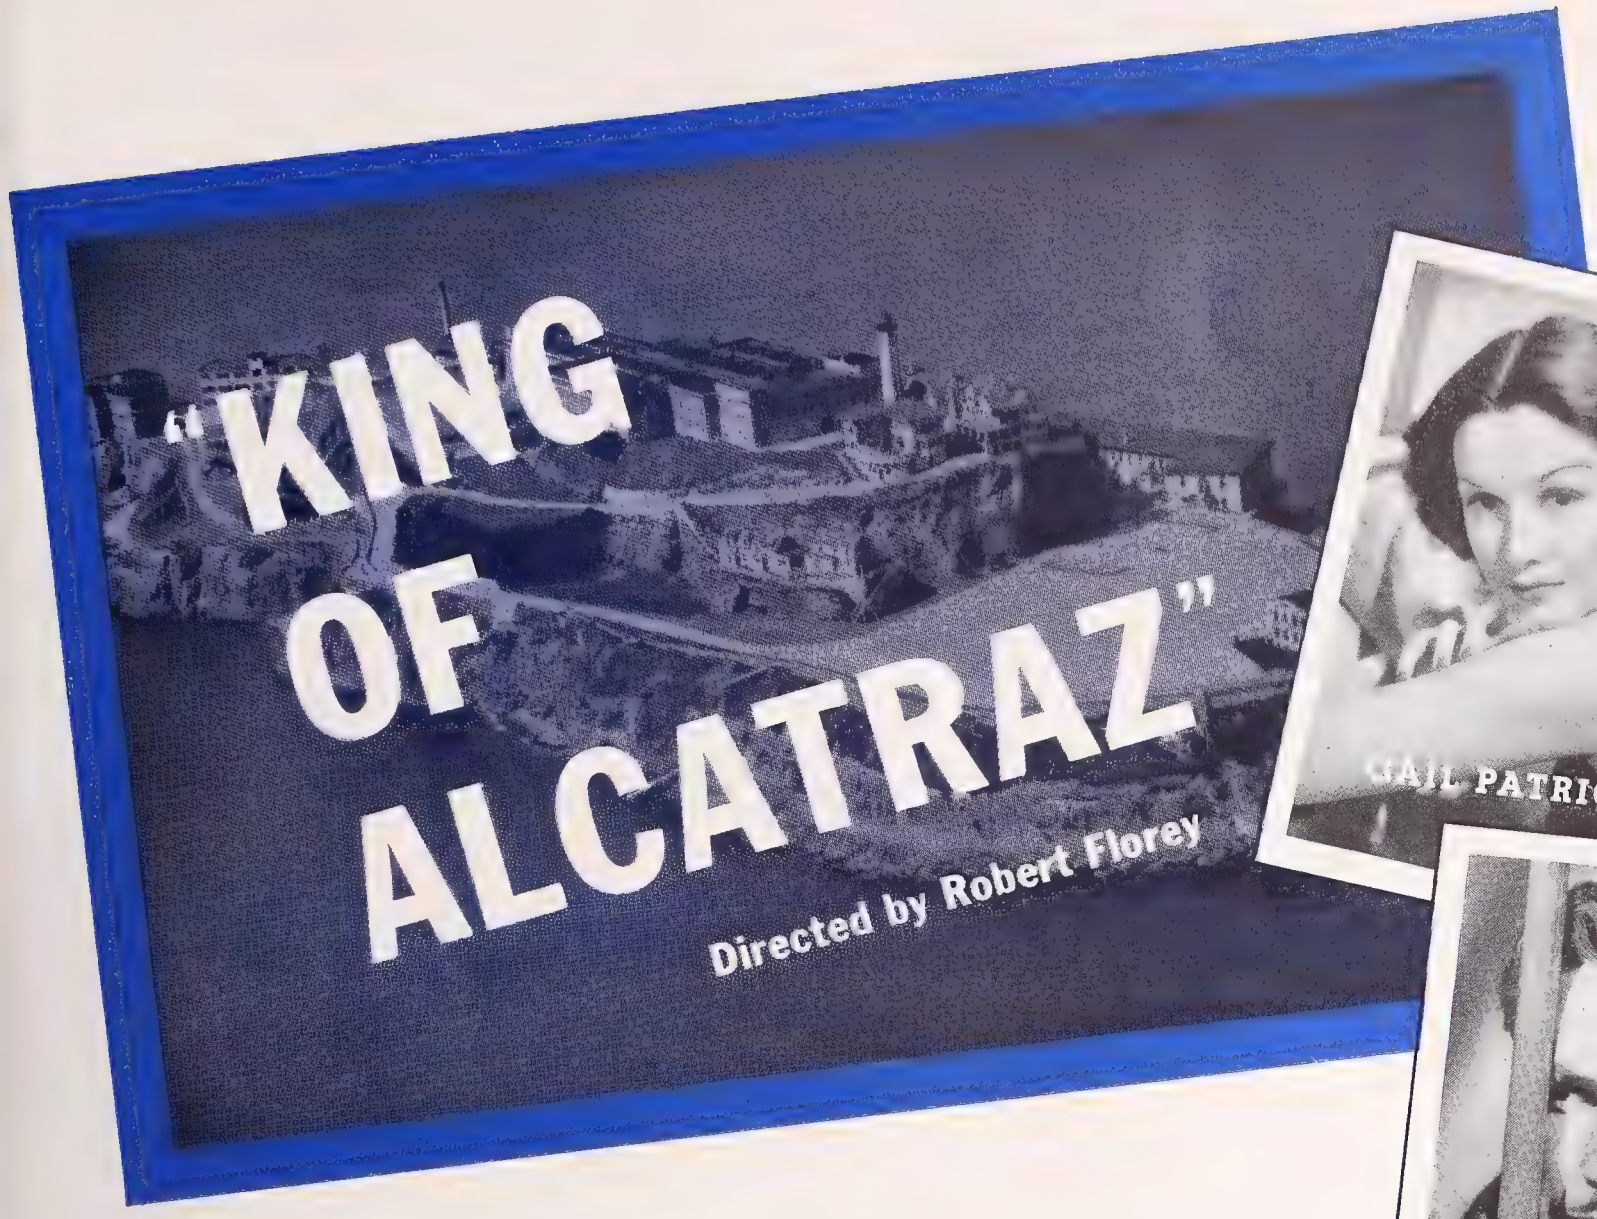
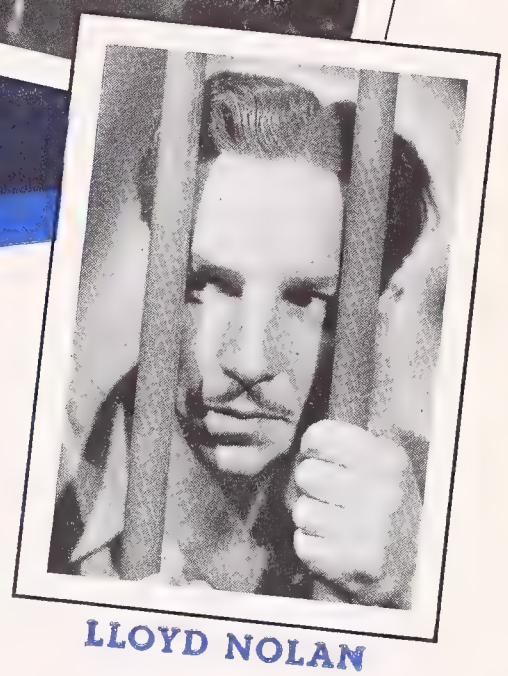
"TOUCHDOWN, ARMY!" and "KING OF ALCATRAZ"

...Wheat in the bins!"

That's Ben's colloquial way of saying "They're in the bag!"



"TOUCHDOWN, ARMY!" is to be released in October, at the time when interest in college football is at its seething height! It will be found a more-than-worthy box-office follow-up to previous highly profitable Paramount football pictures!



The story of "TOUCHDOWN, ARMY!" is more than the conventional "block-that-kick" type of yarn. It's a human tale of boys and girls whom college teaches to "live"...of a young cock-of-the-walk who decides to "honor" West Point with his presence, only to find that the spirit and loyalty of the Army have turned him into a man. The football episodes are the most thrilling and suspenseful that have yet been devised.

THE CAST includes such popular young stars as JOHN HOWARD, MARY CARLISLE, ROBERT CUMMINGS, WILLIAM FRAWLEY, BENNY BAKER. Direction has been placed in the hands of KURT NEUMANN, who has proved he has a decided flair for bringing a story like "TOUCHDOWN, ARMY!" to the screen so that it scores high in entertainment values.

SHOWMEN will know how to sell "TOUCHDOWN, ARMY!" to a fare-thee-well! Released during the peak of the football season, it will cash in on national interest in this most popular of all college sports. The Press Book contains a complete lineup of new ideas and sales material to help theatres get the public in!

"TOUCHDOWN, ARMY!"... answers the demand for a successor to last season's popular "Hold 'em Navy!"

Tremendous enthusiasm that audiences are according Paramount's fast-paced thrill-packed melodramas have inspired hundreds of theatre showmen to write in and say "Give us more! Our audiences love 'em!"

"KING OF ALCATRAZ" is a box-office follow-up of earlier Paramount smash "action" hits. It is a powerful story of what happens after the Government "puts the finger" on the racket kings. The plot is novel, fresh, up-to-the-minute! Some of the highlights are the capture of a passenger ship by escaping gangsters... an emergency operation on shipboard directed by radio instructions from a doctor hundreds of miles away . . . plus a romance that's tender and true.

THE CAST is headed by LLOYD NOLAN and J. CARROL NAISH, two male leads who are top marquee names because of the great way in which they registered with the fans in previous pictures of this type. GAIL PATRICK is the female lead. Another excellent name to grace the marquee!

ROBERT FLOREY is the director. Past success with pictures like "Dangerous to Know" and "Daughter of Shanghai" is proof conclusive that Florey can be relied upon to weave all the action, thrills, suspense and romance in "KING OF ALCATRAZ" into an outstanding production.

EXPLOITATION is a cinch on a picture with the action-appeal of "KING OF ALCATRAZ." Can be sold in advertising and out front on a "newsy" basis . . . with flash posters, action cut-outs, dramatic displays and punchy copy treatment. The Press Book will carry all the details.

"KING OF ALCATRAZ"... answers the demand for more smashing action melodramas like "Tip-Off Girls," "Hunted Men," "Prison Farm"

"'IF I WERE KING' will pack 'em in across the country!

W. H. ERBB
District Manager:
Boston, Maine, New Haven

The public has demonstrated that it is ready for a great picture of romantic adventure...a picture based on a great story...enacted by a great cast...produced by a great director! Paramount is ready to meet that demand with one of the biggest box-office pictures of this or any other year..."IF I WERE KING"!

GREAT STORY!—"IF I WERE KING" is based on Justin Huntley McCarthy's immortal love story of swashbuckling Francois Villon, romantic poet-thief who rose to become the savior of France. A tale read, re-read and loved by millions. A tale of the type that made "Beau Geste" and "Lives of a Bengal Lancer" and "Robin Hood" the outstanding box-office pictures they turned out to be. A tale—exciting, glamorous, unforgettable—of a man lifted from the gutter to a throne by love, and of a girl who exchanged position and security for the thrill of her lover's arms. A tale—vivid, melodramatic! A tale that has now been turned into one of the great screen plays of all time!

GREAT STAR!—In the role of Villon is RONALD COLMAN, a part made to order for his gay, debonair, romantic personality. Preview reception of Colman's performance guarantees that Villon is his greatest role, the character for which he will be remembered long after his other roles have been forgotten! And that's saying plenty when one stops to remember that it was Colman who carried to success such pictures as "Lost Horizon" and "Prisoner of Zenda."

GREAT SUPPORTING CAST!—Lovely FRANCES DEE plays the role of the regal beauty who inspires the "king of ruffians" to scale the heights of romantic sublimity. Her last picture was "Wells Fargo." BASIL RATHBONE (the screen's most beloved aristocratic villain) portrays King Louis of France, who gives Villon his chance at immortality. ELLEN DREW (the "Cinderella Girl") does an outstanding job as "Huguette," Villon's first love. Other important names in the large and splendid cast are such favorites as Henry Wilcoxon, Colin Tapley, John Miljan, Montagu Love, William Farnum

GREAT DIRECTOR! Production is in the hands of FRANK LLOYD, master producer-director of truly great pictures, his most recent being "Wells Fargo." He is the only director ever to win the Academy Award three times—for "Divine Lady," "Cavalcade," "Mutiny on the Bounty." Those who have seen rushes of "IF I WERE KING" unhesitantly rate it as FRANK LLOYD'S greatest achievement to date. In it he has recreated an entire city of the most glamorous period the world has ever known.

"IF I WERE KING" Will Receive Royal Build-Up Campaign

Radio! Ronald Colman appears on a Lux coast-to-coast hookup on September 12th, in a dramatization of one of the gripping scenes in "If I Were King." An auspicious startoff for one of the most ambitious radio publicity campaigns ever placed behind a motion picture!

Fashions! Department stores will feature styles adapted from original garments introduced in the picture, with appropriate credits and displays. So planned as to dovetail activities of leading department stores with playdates of picture.

Schools, Libraries! Because of the nature of the story, advertising, publicity and kindred selling will be aimed at the schools, colleges, history societies, and so on. Special charts, study guides, and direct mailings to important educational bodies will be available.

Newspapers and Magazines! Elaborate art layouts, feature stories, and special "by-line" articles will appear in every newspaper and magazine read by the masses and the classes.

National Tie-Ups! Dozens of national manufacturers tied in for what it may be worth to theatres. Paramount has always had a great deal of success with these promotions, as theatres will testify. We are now working out the details of a number of worthwhile cooperative endeavors, and a full account of how these operate will be found in the Press Book.

All in all "IF I WERE KING" will receive the grandest promotion campaign of any picture of the year!

"'IF I WERE KING' is a GREAT box-office attraction for Canada!"

Canadian General Manager: Toronto, Montreal, St. John, Vancouver, Winnipeg, Calgary

"CAMPUS CONFESSIONS' is the kind of picture we root for!"

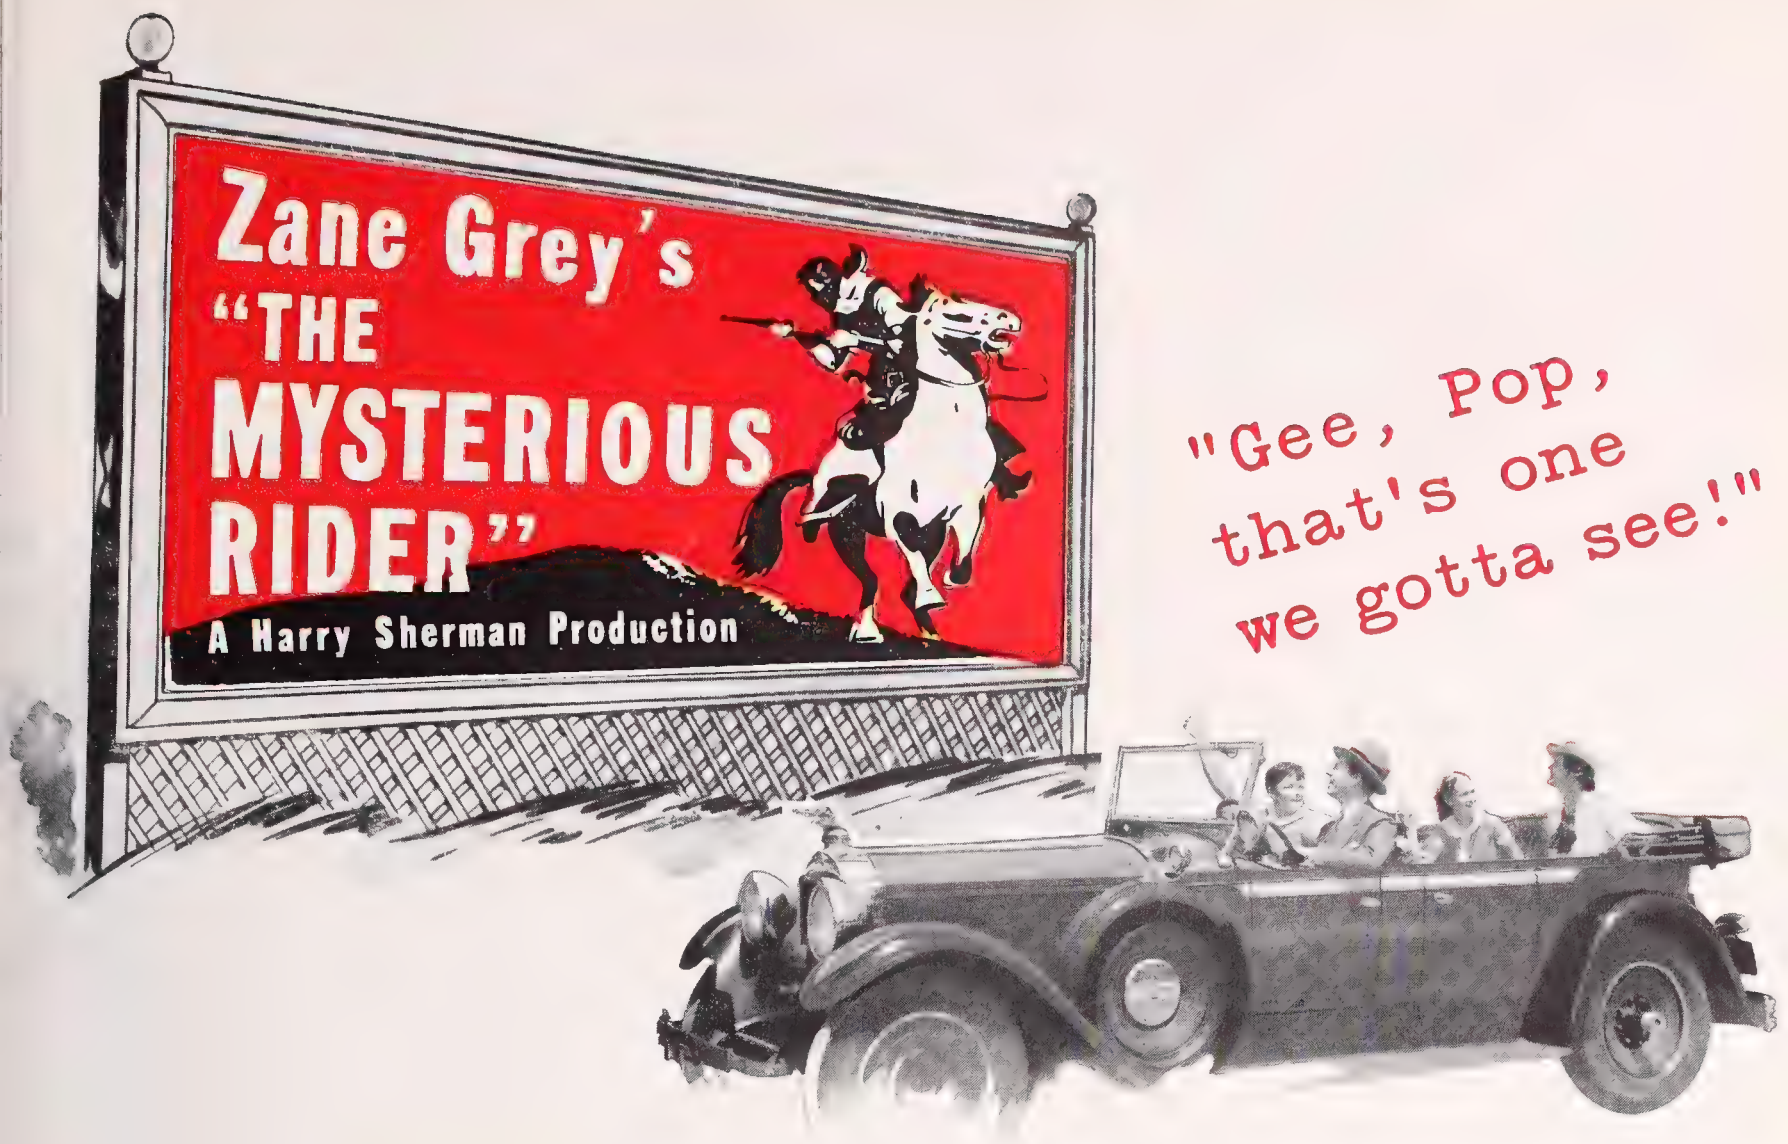
there's millions of 'em!

College romance and college sports, always surefire at the box-office, take on added audience appeal and selling opportunities in "CAMPUS CONFESSIONS," the first motion picture to feature basketball—the game that's fast jumping to a high place in national favor! To cash in on this new angle, Paramount introduces, in a featured role in "CAMPUS CONFESSIONS," HANK LUISETTI, the personable, likeable Stamford basketball sensation, who has garnered more national publicity than many another college athlete of our generation!

"CAMPUS CONFESSIONS" has everything that's ever made a college picture great: a peppy laugh-and-thrill-packed story . . . a cast of youthful stars popular at the box-office headed by ROBERT CUMMINGS, BETTY GRABLE, ELEANORE WHITNEY, ROSCOE KARNS, and ELIZABETH PATTERSON . . . in addition to HANK LUISETTI.

Direction is by George Archainbaud, whose "Hideaway Girl," "Hotel Haywire," "Blonde Trouble" and "Thrill of a Lifetime" guarantee a fast-moving romance that'll keep audiences entertained from the main title to the final victory dance.



"CAMPUS CONFESSIONS" is an Exploitation Natural!

Every high-school and college in town can be tied into exploitation campaigns to help make "CAMPUS CONFESSIONS" a box-office winner.

Local sports pages should open wide because of the national appeal of HANK LUISETTI, star of basketball stars, and the additional appeal of the FIRST picture with a BASKETBALL background!

"CAMPUS CONFESSIONS" cashes in on YOUTH!
Released in October, when college activities are at their peak!

In "THE MYSTERIOUS RIDER," Producer HARRY SHERMAN, whose name as a showman, is box-office guarantee of his ability to turn out action dramas with audience appeal, has assembled everything that gives a picture the selling angles exhibitors want!

The story, by ZANE GREY, is an all-time favorite with action fans. It's a punch-packed, driving drama of a man who waited twenty years for the right time to clear his name of a false charge of murder—a man who single-handed smashed the crookedest setup that ever disgraced the West to give his daughter her chance for happiness and love!

"THE MYSTERIOUS RIDER" is presold not only to the hundreds of thousands who read the book, but also to everyone else who knows that the name of ZANE GREY on a yarn means thrills and action and a story that will live in the memory!

THE CAST will include a hand-picked line-up of outdoor action favorites with outstanding audience appeal. HARRY SHERMAN'S personal supervision of production means the kind of fast-paced, keep-'em-on-the-edge-of-their-seats entertainment that always packs 'em in!

"ARTISTS and MODELS ABROAD"* is O.K. Means TOP BUSINESS in my territory!"

"A Jack Benny Picture is TOPS in any territory, Allen."

JACK BENNY is box-office! The records prove it conclusively! Pictures in which he has been featured... "Big Broadcast of 1937" and the first "Artists and Models"...all landed in the top-grossing class...That's a pretty impressive record... and there's plenty of good reasons for it, too. Jack Benny is a peculiar show business phenomenon. His Jello radio program has been tops for years! His personality is still the smoothest and easiest of the radio elite in comedy. His gags are quoted at every dinner table. His amiable, personable, careless, effortless manner is the delight of millions.

THE STORY is the thing in Hollywood today . . . as never before! And the story of "ARTISTS AND MODELS ABROAD" is tailored to fit the Benny personality. Don't let the idea prevail that this latest Benny picture is a hodge-podge of specialty acts, dragged in without rhyme or reason, and held together by a song or two and a dance or two. The studio has gotten away from all that clambake musical stuff. They've got PLOT in this one . . . and what a plot! Built for laughs, surprises, glamour...with a lot of swell gags, some soothing romance, and a brace of hit songs to send the customers out whistling.

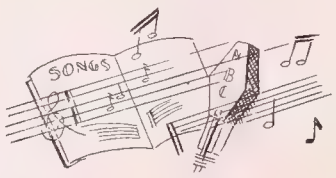
JACK BENNY  is ably supported by a hand-picked cast: For romance, lovely  JOAN BENNETT, who comes to the nation's marquees fresh from her triumphs in "The Texans," an August release.  For comedy MARY BOLAND,  CHARLES GRAPEWIN and THE  YACHT CLUB BOYS. And oh, so easy on the eyes are the beautiful girls who have been picked as members of the troupe stranded with Jack Benny on the Boulevards of Paris.

"ARTISTS and MODELS ABROAD"

has a terrific woman's angle: One of the big scenes is set in the Paris Exposition grounds, where Jack Benny is mistaken for the manager of the attraction known as the "Palace of Feminine Arts." This is a magnificent display of great ladies, their gowns, their perfumes, their jewels. It shows feminine allure down through the ages. One of the thrillingly dazzling scenes is a great foam bath through which pass thousands of beautiful girls! What a spectacle! Tied in with the "Palace of Feminine Arts" are creations by some of the greatest names in the world of fashion—Schiaparelli, Worth, Lelong, Lanvin, Patou. Nothing has been spared in this sequence to make it of interest to women and to bedevil the men.

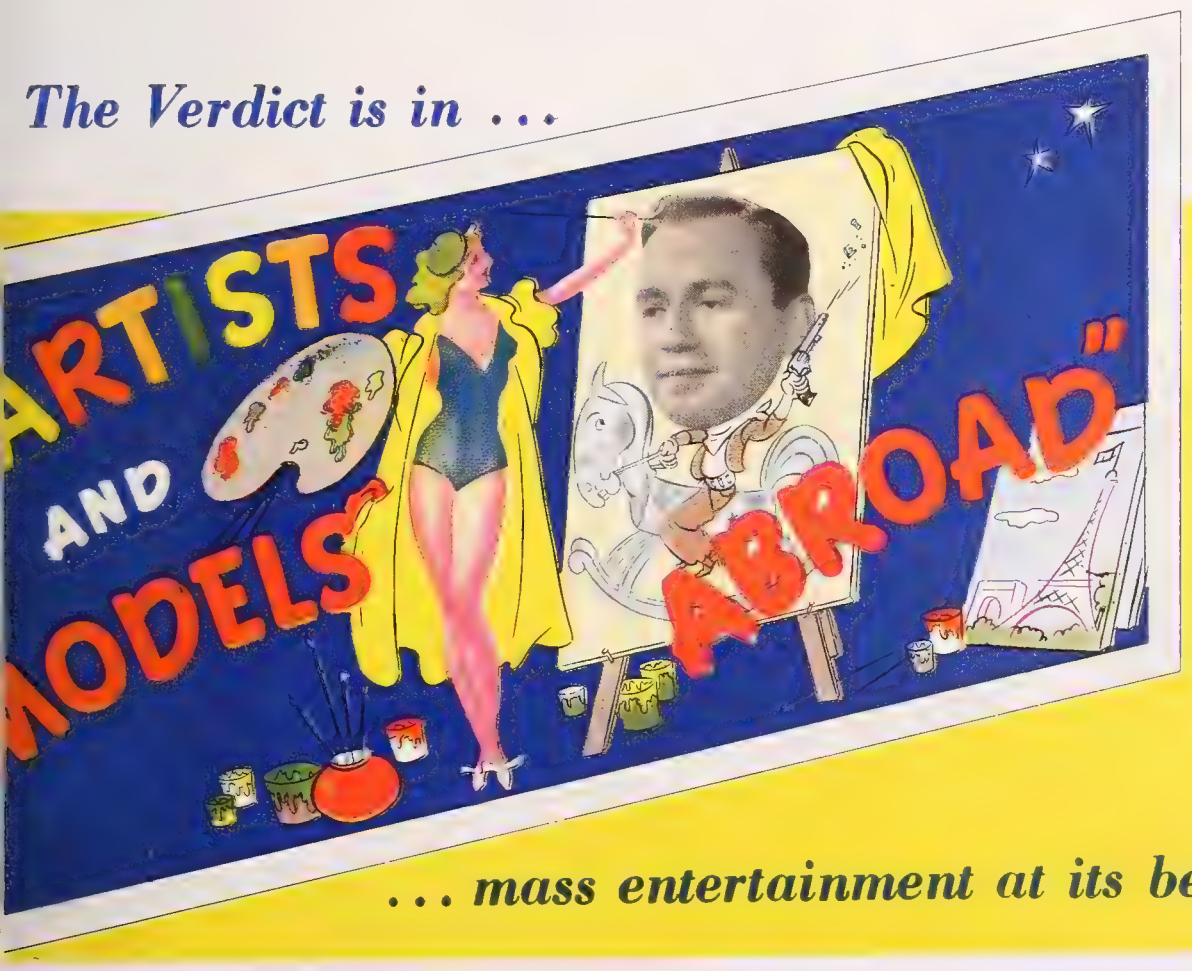
MITCHELL LEISEN is the director. He's an old hand at getting fast-paced, smooth-flowing action on the screen out of this type of story.

MUSIC is by Rainger and Robin, who turn out the sort of tunes that strike the public ear and the popular fancy. All America will soon be hearing "Do the Buckaroo," "What Have You Got That Gets Me?" and "You're Lovely, Madame."



Broad Publicity Preselling Campaign

Millions of listeners to the last half-dozen Jack Benny broadcasts have been hearing plenty about his scene with Joan Bennett in "ARTISTS AND MODELS ABROAD." Benny's been taking a great deal of his sponsor's time to build up interest in the picture. He will resume these plugs in the fall, just before national release, when Benny goes on the air again for Jello. Jello merchandising interest will be tied in for nation-wide cooperation with theatres when the picture is released.



The fashion background will be tied in with leading department stores, fashion groups, women's magazines, perfume houses and so on. This makes for national advertising, invaluable window space and publicity in key cities, merchandising helps of all sorts everywhere.

Radio Promotion will be employed to publicize the picture and broadcast the songs.

The Verdict is in . . .

. . . mass entertainment at its best!

"'SOUBRETTE'

is the Bradna picture the fans have been waiting for!"

"SOUBRETTE" is the answer to the demand from every part of the country that lovely OLYMPE BRADNA be given a screen story worthy of her talents. For this little lady is unique... versatile... in that she possesses a singing voice of rare quality...is an extraordinarily clever dancer...and displays emotional dramatic ability of a high order. All these attributes are called forth by "SOUBRETTE," in which Miss Bradna has a role that is a combination of the dramatic power of her part in "Souls at Sea" and the music-filled song-and-dance moments of "Stolen Heaven."

Here's What Newspaper Critics Think of OLYMPE BRADNA

"... Rising stars are always fascinating to watch. Olympe Bradna is one."
—New York Times

"... A decidedly attractive Miss who ought to be with us a long time."
—New York Post

"... Olympe Bradna proves Paramount officials know a star when they see one."
—Denver Rocky Mountain News

"... Seems destined to become one of the great dramatic stars of our generation. The most promising actress in Hollywood today."—Kansas City Journal

RAY MILLAND, cast opposite Olympe Bradna in "SOUBRETTE," is at the height of his popularity. Pictures like "Easy Living," "Her Jungle Love," "Tropic Holiday," established this handsome Englishman as a prime favorite with fans and critics. "Men With Wings," in which he plays the greatest role of his career, will be released ahead of "Soubrette." We venture to assert that his role in this air picture will make him one of the great marquee names in this industry. In "SOUBRETTE," Ray Milland comes through with a light comedy role—that of a young millionaire who swaps a fortune for five feet of brown-eyed French wife . . . and knows that he's made a good trade!

An excellent cast will be chosen to support OLYMPE BRADNA and RAY MILLAND in "SOUBRETTE." Direction will be placed in the capable hands of ANDREW STONE, who showed in "Stolen Heaven" that he can get away from formula and bring a story to the screen with imagination and "differentness."

* TENTATIVE TITLE

Directed by ANDREW STONE

"SOUBRETTE"... and OLYMPE BRADNA to receive tremendous national publicity build-up!

Miss Bradna is one of the most promising stars on the Paramount roster. Fans everywhere flocked to see her on her recent triumphal personal appearance tour on behalf of "Stolen Heaven." Another intensive publicity campaign is now being devised to further build her up with the public. This calls for special newspaper and magazine treatment. Theatres will tie in with human interest trailers that will sell her to the public as the star of "Soubrette." These trailers will be furnished gratis by Paramount.

"'MEN WITH WINGS' is the ace air picture of all time!"

MILTON S. KUSELL
District Manager: New York, Brooklyn, New Jersey, Albany, Buffalo, Philadelphia, Washington

GREATEST AUDIENCE PICTURE EVER PRODUCED ! . . . in Technicolor

"MEN WITH WINGS" is epic drama, breathless adventure, an exciting love story, and the mighty history of a mighty industry combined in one grand, glorious screen adventure! And it's all photographed in the newest TECHNICOLOR... the first time in the history of the screen that an air picture has been filmed from the sky in color!

It took vision, courage and leadership to translate the amazing script of "MEN WITH WINGS" to the screen. It also took a budget of well over $2,000,000! For "MEN WITH WINGS" is the story of the aviation industry from the pioneering days of the Wright Brothers to the super planes of the present and the fantastic ships of the future!

High-Powered Publicity and Exploitation

ORGANIZED YOUTH GROUPS . . . comprised of many millions of youngsters—boys and girls up to eighteen years of age—vitally interested in aviation, will cooperate actively all over the country on "MEN WITH WINGS."

NATIONAL MAGAZINE ADVERTISING in a large list of big circulation weekly and monthly magazines will take the story of "Men With Wings" into every home.

BILLBOARD POSTING will supplement magazine advertising campaign in all important key cities in the United States. Every avenue for newspaper and magazine publicity will be intensely covered.

"FLYING CIRCUS" will be routed around to a list of selected cities to put on "dog fights" and other stunts.

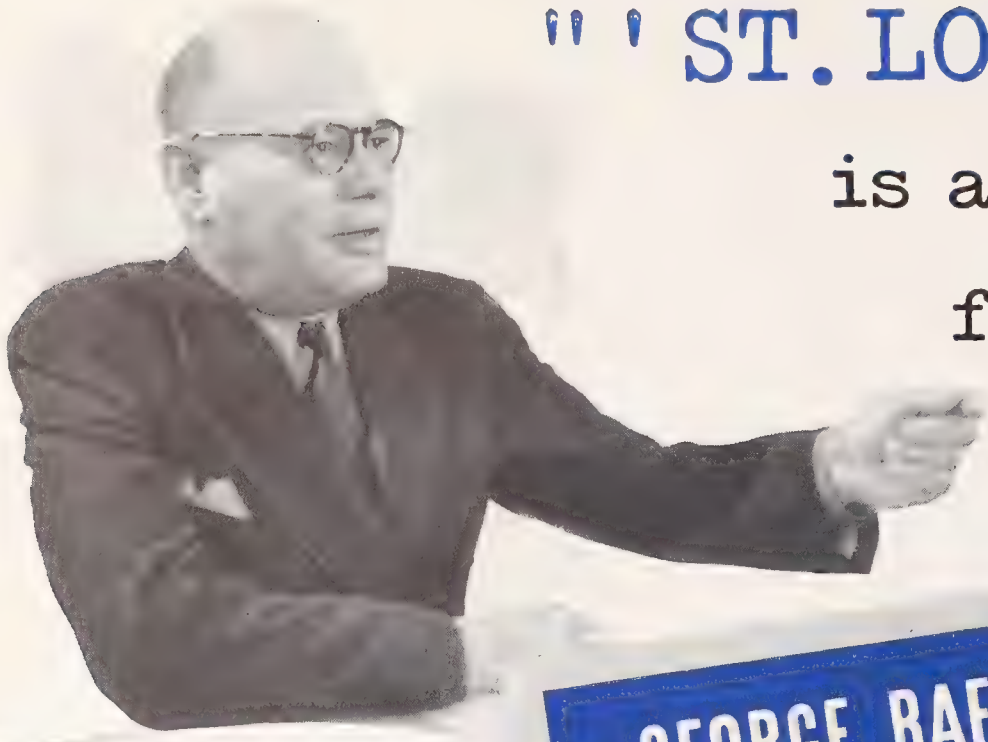
COMMERCIAL AIRLINES will do all in their power to cooperate.

CONTESTS will be arranged for school and college participation, with prizes to be awarded by Paramount.

WILLIAM A. WELLMAN

directed "MEN WITH WINGS." Without this ace director at the controls, this air saga could never have been made. Wellman, himself a noted war flyer, gave it everything he had, even to the extent of working himself into the hospital. He gave the industry its first big air picture—"Wings." It is only fitting that he give it its last vital air epic. It will be impossible for the future to equal "MEN WITH WINGS," let alone surpass it. Wellman himself couldn't do it!

"MEN WITH WINGS" boasts every kind of plane, from the early crates of 1903 to the modern bombers. The world's greatest stunt flyers and daredevils were brought to Hollywood to work in the picture. They fly real planes, do real stunts, risk their lives dozens of times daily so that the Technicolor cameras could record for all time the thrills that they furnished.



THE CAST

turns in memorable performances under Wellman's inspired direction. You'll see a new FRED MacMURRAY and RAY MILLAND will surprise you. LOUISE CAMPBELL, a newcomer to the screen, will establish herself as a marquee name overnight. The supporting cast includes Andy Devine, Lynne Overman, Porter Hall, Walter Abel, Virginia Weidler, Donald O'Connor.

"MEN WITH WINGS" . . . will soar to unprecedented box-office heights!

"'ST. LOUIS BLUES' is a smash picture for any theatre!"

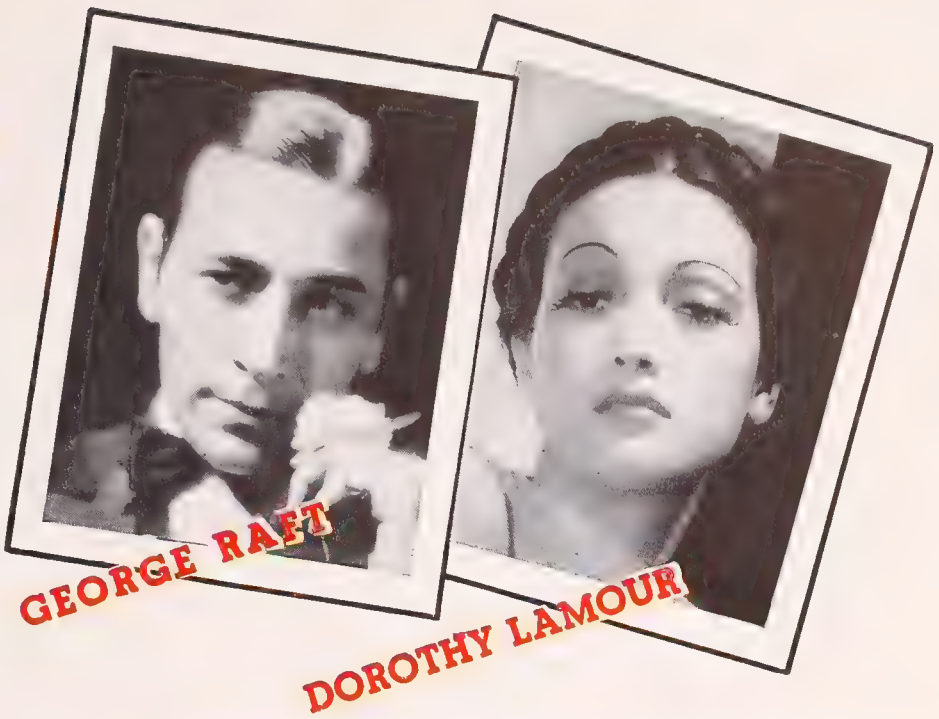
RALPH C. LI BEAU,
District Manager,
Kansas City, St. Louis,
Omaha, Des Moines



"You've spotted a real winner, Ralph!"

When a picture has a whale of a story . . . a swell title...and a cast of box-office favorites to give it all the dramatic punch that it deserves...that picture is destined for success. Particularly is this true when the direction is placed in the hands of a showman whose name is synonymous with screen entertainment.

• THE STORY! "ST. LOUIS BLUES" is a modern, up-to-the-minute showboat type of tale...recounting the lives and loves of the folks who travel down the inland rivers, bringing thrills and song and drama to the natives along the banks. It's a human story, with real characters, in situations that make their appeal to every class of audience! What's more, the title on the marquee immediately SELLS the picture for what it is... swing, rhythm, romance and melody! It's a PRE-SOLD title . . . for it's so inescapably tied up with a song that will never die!

• THE DIRECTOR is RAOUL WALSH, and he doesn't have to be sold to anyone in the industry. Going as far back as "The Big Parade," his pictures have been consistent money makers. He directed the first big money-making "Artists and Models." Walsh, himself, states that "ST. LOUIS BLUES" will top anything he's done in the recent past.

. . . . GEORGE RAFT and DOROTHY LAMOUR top the high-powered cast of "St. Louis Blues." Raft plays the owner of a showboat, Lamour plays an actress—stranded and in trouble. Rated on their co-starring performances in "Spawn of the North," this pair of names on the marquee represents audience pulling power at its best. In supporting roles are such popular favorites as Tito Guizar, Elizabeth Patterson, William Frawley . . . and Maxine Sullivan!

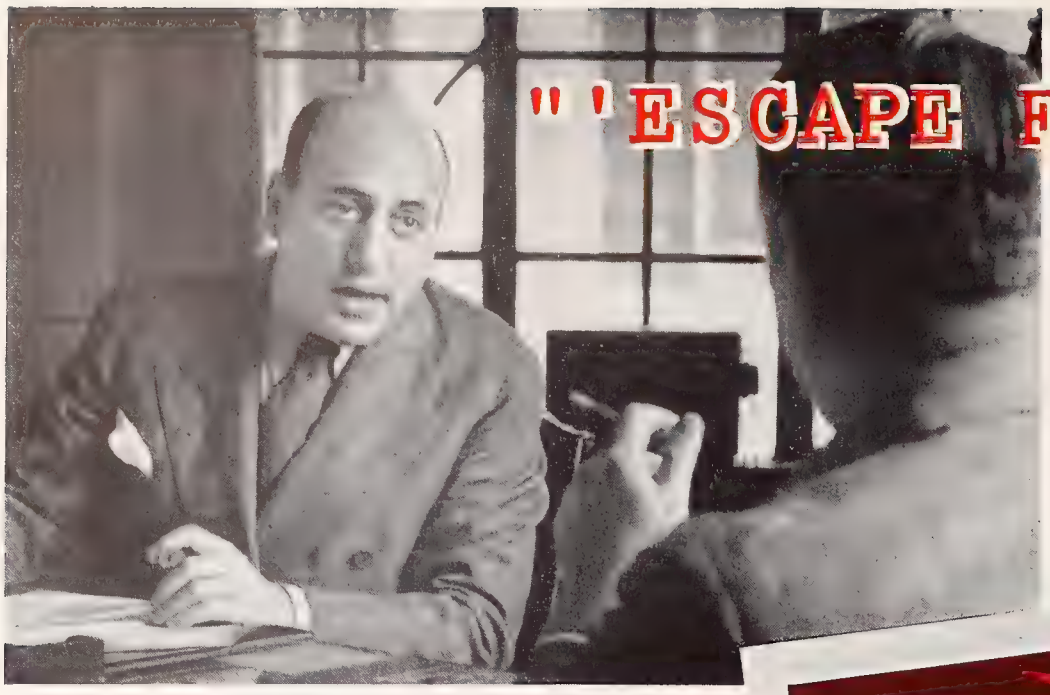
Inimitable songstress who created a furore with her new style of melodious swing arrangements of old classics. Her name "out front" will sell plenty of tickets! Who hasn't heard her swing "Loch Lomond"?

And talking about "SWING!"... wait till you hear the new type of "swing" music to be introduced for the first time in "St. Louis Blues"! This is a melodious and rhythmic form of "swing" originated by Boris Morros, musical director at the Paramount Studios. He achieves new effects through novel instrumentation. You're going to hear a lot about this new music craze! Because it's "sweet and simple," music lovers as well as "cats" and "jitterbugs" will go for it!

MUSIC . . . Nation's leading tunesmiths and lyric writers—Hoagy Carmichael, Leo Robin, Ralph Rainger, Sam Coslow, Ned Washington, Burton Lane, Frank Loesser — have written songs to be featured during the action of "ST. LOUIS BLUES." Among numbers nation will soon be hearing out of picture are "Kinda Lonesome," "The Nearness of You," "I Know What Aloha Means," "Junior," "The Beat of My Heart Is a Rhumba," "Sombrero."

Showmanship Advertising and Exploitation!

A newspaper and magazine publicity campaign of large proportions has already been started on the picture. By the time "ST. LOUIS BLUES" hits the screens of theatres, news about it will have permeated into every section of the country. Elaborate premiere in St. Louis with wire and syndicate coverage to all parts of the nation will start the point of sale publicity rolling.



Press Book will contain many showmanship ideas on how to SELL the picture to the public. Replete with up-to-date advertising, newspaper features, special art ideas, contests, and plans for making the lobby and front do some real SELLING.

Radio will broadcast the music, with plugs over national hookups by Dorothy Lamour and Maxine Sullivan.

Phonograph Record Companies will go to town with window display material and other sales helps in every city.

"ST. LOUIS BLUES"... bound to be a top grosser!

"'ESCAPE FROM YESTERDAY is action-drama at its best!"

HARRY GOLDSTEIN,
District Manager: Cleveland,
Pittsburgh, Cincinnati

TENTATIVE TI

Here's a picture built around a theme that is NEW to the screen! It's a two-fisted human drama of a father and a son old enough to be his rival . . . in love, in life, in loyalty and patriotism.

Picture
AKIM TAMIROFF
as an ex-Cossack, transplanted to this country, who becomes a modern, motorized cattle thief. (He's rough, tough, yet plenty human.)

Picture
FRANCES FARMER
as the third side to a strange triangle . . . she's the girl the men scrap over, for the old Cossack has a roving eye! (Miss Farmer's best.)

Picture
LEIF ERIKSON
—a virile, six-foot-three bundle of emotions and loyalties, as the son who hasn't seen his father since boyhood. (A real he-man role.)

Then picture these characters in sequences that breathe thrills and suspense, that pile conflict upon conflict, until the red corpuscles start a-singing in the blood . . . and you get some idea of the type of action picture we have in "ESCAPE FROM YESTERDAY."

THE STORY

of "ESCAPE FROM YESTERDAY" is terrific in its emotional appeal and dramatic implications. Conflict between father and son, because of the barbaric resentment of the ex-Cossack for any sort of restraint, Government or otherwise. In difficulties with the authorities, the father is sent to prison. The son joins the cavalry, learns the meaning of devotion, discipline and loyalty in spite of his unbridled Cossack blood, and is torn between helping his father escape and keeping faith with the oath he swore. The appeal of Americanism is strongly developed.

If ever a star deserved a story like "ESCAPE FROM YESTERDAY," that star is AKIM TAMIROFF. Recognized as one of the greatest character actors on the screen, his portrayal of the old Cossack will rank alongside his Chinese general in "The General Died at Dawn" and his pirate gunner in "The Buccaneer."

ALFRED GREEN, one of the screen's respected craftsmen, directed "Escape From Yesterday." He is a past master in the handling of emotional material and tensely dramatic situations. He will be remembered for his most recent successful "Thoroughbreds Don't Cry."

FRANCES FARMER most publicized actress of the year—has been chosen to play the feminine lead. She returns to the screen after a long run in the successful stage play "Golden Boy." Critics raved about her performance!

LEIF ERIKSON (husband of Miss Farmer in real life) handles the virile role of the ex-Cossack's son. He spent an entire season on the Broadway stage in "All the Living," and returned to the studio for the opportunity to play in "Escape From Yesterday."

Publicity and Advertising

FATHER AND SON ORGANIZATIONS will get solidly behind "Escape From Yesterday," because of the way in which the father and son angle is handled. The picture will be screened for such groups as well as for CIVIC AUTHORITIES, WOMEN'S CLUBS, AMERICAN LEGION, Federal and State officials and others who are spreading the gospel of Americanism. BOY SCOUT organizations will be tied in.

"ESCAPE FROM YESTERDAY" adds up as one of the greatest heart-tug pictures to be released in many a season!

ROOSEVELT APPROVES STUDY OF PLAN FOR GOVERNMENT IN PRODUCTION

Would Form Two New Federal Divisions, One for Motion Pictures, the Other for Radio, Under Emergency Council

The United States Government, on authorization of the President, is considering entering the production and exhibition of motion pictures and radio broadcasting for the dissemination of "propaganda" on government activities.

The project would take the form of two new government divisions, one each for films and radio, as part of the National Emergency Council. To what extent the government would compete with the motion picture and radio industries, if at all, has not been made clear.

That the government is visualizing government theatres showing government films and government radio studios broadcasting government propaganda became known on Monday in Washington following the disclosure that such a plan had been outlined to President Roosevelt before his departure on his present speaking tour, and apparently he had given his approval of a study looking toward the setting up of the new divisions in the NEA.

Most of the countries on the European continent, and others elsewhere, already are making wide use of both films and radio to teach and preach socalled "cultural" information to their nationals, particularly in Nazi Germany, Red Russia and Italy.

Would Coordinate and Expand

While the Washington plan would coordinate all motion picture and radio activities of all government departments—which activities are now spread over all branches in a confusing network—thus streamlining for efficiency, the new plan, it is expected, eventually would result in a more ambitious effort to publicize government activities than anything yet attempted.

Disclosure of the study of such a project follows many vigorous protests by anti-New Dealers in Congress that Federal funds reputedly "ear-marked" for relief were being used by the Government to produce films, described as "propaganda," showing progress of the various Administration "alphabetical-agencies"; TVA, WPA, Resettlement Administration, et al. The attacks have been made both on the floors of Congress and elsewhere, over a long period. They began during the last Presidential campaign when Administration opponents charged that government-made films describing workings of the "alphabetical agencies" were being used for direct campaigning purposes.

As Washington viewed the proposal this week, it saw the Administration circumventing the difficulties experienced when regular theatre owners refused to exhibit the government-films of the Presidential campaign period.

Would Equip Studios

Once in control of the film and radio activities, the NEC would equip motion picture and radio studios, develop its own staffs of technicians, trained radio announcers, script writers and workers for other branches involved.

A "skeleton" staff, headed by Pare Lorentz, already has been transferred to the Emergency Council from the Resettlement Administration. Mr. Lorentz will be remembered as the Government's Use of Films for Political "Propaganda" Is Attacked at Capital

Motion picture and radio publicity of the Federal Government is carried on with a flagrant disregard of law and in such a way "as to contravene good public morals and the impartiality and objectivity which the citizen has a right to expect from his Government," it is charged by Representative Paul W. Shafer (Rep.) of Michigan.

Airing his views in a post-session edition of the "Congressional Record," the Michigan Congressman cited an act of 1913 prohibiting the payment of salaries to publicity experts unless specific appropriations were made for that purpose, and alleged that, to circumvent that law, many government agencies were camouflaging their publicity agents as "special assistants," "directors of information" and the like.

Spreading Propaganda by Films

"The radio has been rendered more useful by a ruling by the Federal Communications Commission classifying Government programs as 'educational.'

"The motion picture, with Pare Lorentz' 'Plough That Broke the Plains' turning the furrow, is widely used to further the principles, purposes and reputation of Resettlement—now Farm Security Administration — Social Security and WPA and particularly Federal Housing.

"The Government is using the movies extensively to spread propaganda," he charged. "For example, on October 27, 1936, the National Archives reported that Federal Government departments had on hand more than 15,000,000 feet of motion-picture film, constituting more than 533 different films.

"The Department of Agriculture has issued by far the greatest number, 307. During the fiscal year 1936 the Department of Agriculture employed 23 persons in the production of motion pictures at a cost of $100,000. In the distribution of these films it employed 14 persons. In addition, the department spent $22,000 on films made by the Civilian Conservation Corps. The Department of the Interior is the next largest producer, with more than 55 films. During he fiscal year 1936, it spent approximately $68,000 producing movies.

Seven Films Cost $33,000

"Probably one of the most spectacular films produced by a Government agency was 'The Plough That Broke the Plains,' which cost more than $40,000. The Federal Housing Administration in 1936 produced films costing $33,000. In the entire Government approximately 23 persons are engaged in distributing —not producing—motion-picture films."

Radio also is used freely, the Congressman continued. The Federal Housing Administration spent more than $28,000 in 1936 preparing broadcasts used by more than 300 stations, he declared, and in the same fiscal year the Office of Education in the Department of the Interior spent $54,000 preparing broadcasts, and the Resettlement Administration spent $28,600.

"The Brookings Institution estimates that the total annual cost of motion pictures produced by the Federal Government is in excess of $200,000, and that the annual cost of paid radio programs is more than $150,000," he said. "With reported annual salaries of publicity employees at approximately $602,000, it is safe to estimate that the total cost of publicity put out by the Federal Government is well over a million and a half dollars."

Charges Contravention of Laws

However, he continued, all figures on such expenses are merely guesses, since some of the Federal agencies consistently have refused to disclose the extent of their publicity activities. The most secretive of these agencies is the WPA, which is known to spend very large sums on publicity of all kinds.

Furthermore, he charged, a highly efficient technique has been developed for the distribution of news releases, radio talks and motion pictures at times and in places where they will be most effective as a means of "editoralizing the news"—and in many instances, he alleged, there has been deliberate distortion, falsification or suppression of facts.

PLANNING EDUCATIONAL PICTURES

producer of the government's recently widely-exhibited "Plough That Broke the Plains" and "The River," both Resettlement films.

Funds for the new work are expected to be allocated by the President in the near future through the Works Progress Administration.

In the field of motion pictures, the Government already is understood to be planning the production of educational films for use in schools and colleges to meet an alleged complaint that there is a serious lack of such material now available.

In radio, the Government would embark upon a definite "propaganda" program of broadcasts for South America, to offset German and Italian propaganda in that area.

In developing its new "propaganda" plans, the Administration has based them largely upon legislation which was introduced—but not enacted—during the last session of Congress for the creation of a central Federal motion picture agency in the Government Printing Office, to coordinate all film activities of the Government, and for the establishment of a Federal broadcasting station, either on the West Coast or in Washington.

"Publicity Plants"

Labeling the contemplated film and radio divisions as sources for "publicity plants" by the U. S., the New York Herald-Tribune said this week that the idea is intended to "promote extensive use of the air and screen to spread information on the government."

Groundwork for both those activities already has been laid. In the motion picture field, the Government establishments have several hundred films of what Adminstration leaders call an educational type, which others describe as "glorifying" the WPA, the Housing Administration, Resettlement Administration, Social Security Board and other New Deal agencies.

In radio, the Government has a new and completely equipped studio layout in the comparatively new Interior Department Building. Initially, the studio will be used for Government broadcasts which are carried by the networks, but all the necessary equipment is said to have been installed for its use with a Government transmitter, should a station be built.

Opening Broadcasting Studio

Until now the government has had no central moving picture production and distribution agency and it has used the commercial radio chains for its radio programs. Within a week or ten days the Interior Department intends to open the broadcasting studio on top of its new building. Although the building has been in use for more than a year, the existence of the radio station was unnoticed until word leaked out not long ago that it would soon be ready.

A score of government departments and agencies have been using radio and motion pictures. Besides the Resettlement Administration's two films, "The Plough that Broke the Plains," on conservation, and "The River," on flood control. The Department of Agriculture's "Farm Hour," and the office of Education's series of coast-to-coast educational broadcasts have attracted attention.

The conception of a central agency of propaganda grew out of the President's reputed dissatisfaction with the uneven quality of the output of the departments. Few of them have staffs trained to prepare radio scripts or to make or distribute films, and only the Resettlement Administration produced pictures which exhibitors would show.

Proponents of the project are expected to disclaim a desire to put the government into competition with commercial radio or motion picture studios. Its programs, it was explained, would be devoted to government activity. In time, it was suggested, the government pictures, which might also deal with educational, historical and scientific themes, "could be made interesting enough to command booking fees," the New York Herald-Tribune reported.

An obstacle is the reluctance of department heads to relinquish existing funds allocated, for radio and screen publicity. Proponents of the centralized agency hope to overcome this by providing for co-operation with the departments.

Radio programs have been used extensively by the Federal Housing Administration, the United States Housing Authority, the Department of Agriculture, the Social Security Board, the National Park Service and the Bureau of Education. The F. H. A. has had success in stirring up interest in its building loan program. The social security program has used radio and motion pictures to explain old age and unemployment benefits legislation.

Council Given New Lease on Life

The National Emergency Council was designated to make the study because it has been acting as a coordinating agency for the government's emergency activities and has developed extensive press-intelligence service for the use of congress and the departments, the intelligence division clips 400 newspapers daily and hundreds of magazines, and has amassed 4,000,000 clippings.

The agency was given a new lease of life in June by the President, although he previously had ordered its liquidation by July 1st. No explanation was given for the rescinding of the liquidation order.

Under the direction of Lowell Mellett, who recently was named director, the NEC has started new activity. By order of the President it has begun a study of economic conditions in the South, with a view to drafting recommendations for coping with what the President called a few days ago the "Nation's No. 1 economic problem."

Advocated by Voorhis

WPA production of educational films, as a means of relieving unemployment in the motion picture industry, was advocated last month in Washington by United States Congressman H. Jerry Voorhis, Democrat, California.

Uneven production schedules, which call for the completion of a large number of pictures at one time of the year while at another period activities are almost at a standstill, is one of the major reasons for unemployment in Hollywood, Mr. Voorhis declared.

Establishment of work projects and extension of the WPA theatre project to include production would do much to solve the problem, the Congressman declared.

The latter, he explained, would permit the employment of idle film labor in the making of pictures in a field which the Goverment has long neglected.

"There is no doubt that visual education has certain great advantages over ordinary methods of instruction," he declared, "and I believe that if the Federal Government were to produce moving pictures which would enable school children to see with their own eyes a reenactment of the birth and growth of our country, its various geographic aspects, and its variety of industrial and agricultural pursuits and processes, it would not only be a sensible step forward in educational technique, but would also give future generations of Americans a love for their country and pride in its traditions and ideals which some people are afraid are now in danger of being lost.

"Once this project is established it should in a short time be almost, if not completely, self-liquidating and self-supporting. There would be no need for fabulous salaries or million-dollar bonuses paid out to executives. By eliminating that drain on the income, it would probably be possible to charge a comparatively small admission and still take in sufficient funds to pay for the cost of the project and provide the workers involved an adequate living wage."

SECURITY BOARD URGES ACCURACY

With employers' quarterly old-age insurance reports due August 1st, the Social Security Board this week pointed out that businessmen can save themselves unnecessary work and help their employees get the benefits due them, by avoiding errors in reporting wages.

The return covers employees' wages for April, May and June. It is the second quarterly report to be made on the new Form SS-1a put into use in 1938 in place of the three forms used in 1937. Taxes are payable at the time of filing the quarterly return. This new procedure for wage reports helps materially to simplify the work required of employers, according to the board.

Ordinarily, the due date for the report is the last day of the month following the quarter for which it is filed. However, since July 31st falls on Sunday regulations provide that the report may be filed on the following business day.

MGM Foreign Personnel In New York on Visit

Another contingent of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer foreign sales department arrived in New York this week as a prize in a sales contest. The party includes R. Gerbert, circuit sales manager at the London office; Alfred G. Neville, Dublin branch manager, and Arthur J. Whetter, Liverpool branch head.

Forty members of the foreign field sales staff were given the trips which also includes a visit to Hollywood. About 15 are still to arrive.

Shirley Temple's Tour

Shirley Temple continues her triumphant tour with a visit to the White House last week where the President quit work to entertain her; Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau turned aside from fiscal problems to spend considerable time with her and in New York Mrs. Roosevelt invited her to Hyde Park and devoted practically the entire day to her entertainment. On Sunday Governor Lehman and Mrs. Lehman entertained her at their home in Purchase, N. Y.

NLRB'S HOLLYWOOD WRITER ELECTION HEADS TOWARD BATTLE IN COURTS

Protests Filed by Nine Studios; Similar Action by Nine Others Awaited; Denied Opportunity to Check Eligibility, Is Claim

The first step toward an indicated court battle over the National Labor Relations Board's conducting of an election among film writers was taken by studios this week when they filed formal protests against the election which showed the Screen Writers Guild overwhelmingly favored over the Screen Playwrights.

Protests were filed by nine of the eighteen studios affected by the election and Dr. Towne Nylander, regional director of the NLRB, indicated that he expected the remaining nine companies to enter their protests before July 16th, the deadline for entering objections.

All protests received to date are based on the claim that the studios had no opportunity to check whether the writers voting in the elections were actually on the studio payroll June 4th, as required by the conditions of eligibility.

Paramount and Twentieth Century-Fox were the first studios to challenge the legality of the election which was held June 28th (MOTION PICTURE HERALD, July 2nd). Additional protests then were filed by Universal, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Republic and RKO.

Denies New Hearing Plan

Dr. Nylander denied reports that a new hearing would be held in Hollywood and said his intermediate report, together with all protests, would be forwarded to Washington on July 16th, after which certification of the agency is expected to follow.

Thereupon, the studios, which repeatedly have announced they will not recognize the NLRB decision as binding, will be free to file an appeal with the circuit court of appeals, ninth district, San Francisco.

The NLRB decision on the Guild-Playwright dispute and the election is considered of major importance by the studios because they cleared the way for hearings on almost 100 other labor cases involving the motion picture industry which have been held in abeyance in the Los Angeles Regional Labor Board office pending a decision by the National Board on the status of the industry in interstate commerce.

Question Authority

It is the studios' contention that the NLRB had no authority to order the election. The 18 studios affected by the election order are Republic, Universal, Warner Brothers, MGM, Twentieth Century-Fox, Selznick International, Hal Roach, Samuel Goldwyn, Columbia, Paramount, RKO, Monogram, Darmour, Walter Wanger, Trem Carr, Major, B. P. Schulberg and Grand National.

Meanwhile, the Screen Writers Guild has gone ahead with its plans. At a meeting last week, the executive board of the organization approved additional clauses to be inserted in the proposed contract to be submitted to producers when the SWC is certified by the NLRB as the writers' bargaining representative. Final action on the agreement, which was drafted by a committee headed by Ralph Block, is now pending.

Should the NLRB consider the studios' protests valid, a hearing to determine whether the election was conducted properly probably would be held. Should the board then certify the Guild as bargaining representative and should the studios carry out their threat of refusing to recognize the Guild, the latter organization's next step would be the filing of charges with the NLRB asking that the producers be forced to bargain with it.

Playwrights Deny Jurisdiction

Screen Playwrights, which this week re-elected its officers and directors, continued to maintain that the NLRB has no jurisdiction over writers and that the organization's contract with producers is valid. Officers of the SP are John Lee Mahin, president; William Conselman, and Beth Meredith, vice-presidents; Bert Kalmar, secretary; Walter DeLeon, treasurer; Waldmar Young, Grover Jones, Casey Robinson, Howard Emmet Rogers, Rupert Hughes, Rian James and Patterson McNutt, directors.

Hearing Set for Monday

Dr. Nylander this week set next Monday as the date for a hearing on a motion to dismiss the application of Studio Utility Employees, Local 724, for certification as exclusive bargaining agent at the Republic studio where, it was charged, workers had been notified they must join the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees by July 2nd.

Dr. Nylander announced the date for the hearing after conferring with L. C. Helm, signer of the petition; Harland Holmden, international vice-president of the IATSE, and Harold Smith, IATSE business representative.

"The idea of the IATSE trying to take over all studio workers has been greatly exaggerated in press reports," Mr. Holmden declared. Only eight of the 75 studio utility employes at Republic had been referred to in the IATSE manifesto and these only because in the course of their work they occasionally had overstepped boundaries and performed services properly in the province of the IATSE men on the lot, Mr. Holmden added.

LABORATORY UNION SEES CLOSED SHOP

The resolution calling for an International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees label on all films, adopted at the union's convention in Cleveland recently, "will lead to a closed shop situation throughout the laboratory industry in a short time," officials of Motion Picture Laboratory Technicians Unions, Local 702, said this week.

For the first time, the IATSE went on record as declaring that "film bearing the IATSE label be processed only in laboratories under the jurisdiction of the IATSE." This provision was added to the "label" resolution at the request of the laboratory union.

While officials of the Alliance agreed to invite Local 702 to negotiate contracts with the major companies at the basic agreement conferences which may be held this year, the union is proceeding with negotiations on its own before basic agreement revisions are discussed.

Canadian Censors Inspected 2,474 Films in Year

The American Consul General at Toronto, Canada, reports that the Ontario Board of Motion Pictures and Theatre Inspection Branch recently submitted its report for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1938. In this report the board noted its examination of a total of 2,474 films, features and short subjects of which 2,380 came from the United States and 77 from Great Britain. One originated in Russia and the remaining 16 were produced in Canada.

The board rejected four of the films submitted, three being from the United States and one from Russia. Of the films finally approved, 18.4 per cent of those from the United States were subjected to alteration, while 49.4 per cent of those from Great Britain were approved after alterations.

The board states that during the past several years a substantial decrease has occurred in the portion of films amended or rejected by the board. This is attributed partially to the effective operation of the Production Code Administration adopted in 1930, which was designed to insure high standards in taste and morals in motion pictures. In the fiscal year 1937-38, 80.4 per cent of all films submitted were approved without alteration, whereas in 1933-34 only 60.6 per cent were so approved.

Films from Great Britain submitted to the board during the fiscal year totalled 77, as compared with 127 in the fiscal year 1936-37. While the number of American films submitted in the fiscal year 1936-37 is not shown in the report for that year, a substantial increase occurred in 1937-38, as indicated by the total of 2,474 films examined, compared with 2,107 in the previous fiscal year.

In its report the Ontario Board of Censors defined its censorship policy as follows:

"In reviewing these films the board has followed as closely as possible its rules which prohibit ridicule of a religious sect or the characteristics of any race of people; the presentation of subjects tending to debase morals; loose conduct between men and women; bar room scenes and excessive social drinking and suggestions which can be construed as providing instruction in crime; prolonged and passionate love scenes when suggesting immorality.

"The board also points out that social, political and economic changes of worldwide significance present a more complicated problem in censorship than those created by the enforcement of the rules referred to when it is understood that the film is one of the most powerful agencies at the disposal of the propagandist who is anxious to disseminate views and opinion contrary to the democratic outlook of the Canadian people."

Cooper Donates Fellowships

J. H. Cooper, theatre owner with houses in Nebraska, Colorado and Oklahoma, has presented two fellowships, each amounting to $500 each year, to the University of Nebraska in the form of a $25,000 endowment in honor of two former business men of Lincoln, Neb.

FEDERAL COURT RULES BLOCK BOOKING IS UPHELD BY LAWS OF THE LAND

District Judge in Los Angeles Cites Problems of Production and Distribution, Says "The Law Is Severe but It Is the Law"

If block booking in the motion picture industry, which requires exhibitors to take out a yearly license from distributors to a block of titles representing pictures to be produced during the year instead of being allowed to choose certain special titles, is to be done away with; it will have to be done, if at all, through national legislation rather than through court action under the laws as they stand now. This is the practical effect of a decision rendered this week by United States District Judge Leon R. Yankwich, in Los Angeles, sustaining a demurrer interposed by Paramount Pictures, Inc., to the complaint filed by Oxnard Theatres, Inc., and 19 other exhibitors.

The action originally began in the superior court in Los Angeles in October of last year. It was transferred to the federal court. It originally charged fraud and violation of the California anti-trust law, known as the Cartwright Act.

Judge Yankwich, in an opinion filed on January 31, 1938, declared, following a ruling he himself had made in 1931, when a judge of the superior court of Los Angeles county, that the Cartwright Act was unconstitutional. A second complaint was filed which was attacked by the distributor. The plaintiff abandoned it and confessed demurrer. A final attempt was made and it was agreed between the exhibitors and the producer that a new complaint would be filed in just one of the cases and submitted for a final ruling with the understanding that the ruling on it would apply to all the cases.

Second Amended Complaint

The second amended complaint was filed in the case brought by Oxnard Theatres, Inc., operating the Oxnard and Boulevard theatres at Oxnard, Cal., against Paramount Pictures, Inc.

In this complaint the charge was made that during the year 1926 and 1937 the defendants represented through their agents that they would deliver a special group of motion pictures consisting of: "Souls at Sea" with Gary Cooper and George Raft; "Artists and Models" with Jack Benny, Ida Lupino, Richard Arlen, Gail Patrick; "Angel" with Marlene Dietrich, directed by Ernst Lubitsch; "High, Wide and Handsome" with Irene Dunne and Randolph Scott; "Spawn of the North" with Carole Lombard, Gary Grant, Randolph Scott, directed by Henry Hathaway, who did "Lives of a Bengal Lancer" and "Trail of the Lonesome Pine"; "The Count of Luxembourg" with Irene Dunne, John Boles, W. C. Fields and Frank Forrest. Frank Lehar's world-famous operetta with the original glorious Lehar music; "The Barrier" with Jimmy Ellison, Jean Parker, Randolph Scott, Frances Drake, Bob Burns, George Bancroft; one additional motion picture starring Marlene Dietrich; one additional picture starring Harold Lloyd; one additional picture starring Claudette Colbert; and one additional motion picture starring Gary Cooper.

Alleging that this promise was made without the intention to perform, and that during the season the pictures were not delivered but offered at a higher price the following season, each of the plaintiffs seeks damages in the sum of $5,000. The total damage as to all exhibitors would amount to $100,000.

Judge Yankwich declared he was bound to follow the law on the subject as laid down by the supreme court of California. He held that because the written contract divided pictures as to which there could be and those as to which there could not be substitution, by the distributor, the promise to the contrary made before it was entered into could not form the basis of a charge of fraud.

The opinion says:

"These clauses relate to the very matter of the fraudulent promises alleged to have been made. The two cannot co-exist. The contract as written provides specifically that while the agreement is made with relation to certain motion pictures, contingencies might arise which might cause the distributor to substitute other motion pictures for the motion pictures promised. So it reserved the right to make substitution.

"These substitutions the exhibitor must accept. When the right to substitution is not reserved, the motion pictures are designated 'no substitute.' It is as clear as can be that by their agreement the parties divided the motion pictures which were the subject of the contract into two groups. As to one group the producer-distributors retained the right of substitution. Once the right is exercised, the exhibitor had to accept the substituted motion picture. The other group was one as to which the right of substitution was not reserved. As to these, the exhibitor was not bound to accept the substituted pictures, but had the right to reject them.

Notes Production Problems

"One can readily surmise the motive behind such an agreement. The period of the contract is one year. The difficulties attending motion picture production, the personal elements which can enter it, the availability of a particular star, or of a particular director at a particular time, the proper atmospheric conditions, the availability of suitable locations, the contingencies arising out of possible disagreement between star and director, or star or director and producer and the like, would call upon the distributor even if, he were not, as is evident here, a subsidiary of the producer, to exercise caution, and to protect himself against contingencies which might make it impossible for the producer to produce a particular picture. After a picture is produced, marketing problems might arise. One can see why a producer might hesitate to release a certain picture at a particular time because of a specially outstanding production might be occupying the public attention and might warrant withholding release for general distribution of a special feature. But even if we assume, as charged, that the object was mercenary, that the distributor sought to reserve to himself the right to defer public exhibition of certain designated motion pictures in order to obtain higher prices for the same, whatever might be said of the ethics of such procedure, no legal principle stands in the way of exacting such a condition."

The opinion concludes:

"The law is severe, but it is the law. The license agreement under consideration covers specifically the eventuality of non-release or non-delivery by providing the right to substitute as to certain productions. The representation charged to have been made would turn, as pointed out in the prior opinion, an optional promise into an absolute promise, without the reserved right of choice or election, through substitution.

"Under the principles discussed in the prior case and additional authorities here cited, this cannot be done."

Judge Yankwich sustained the demurrer and ordered all the cases dismissed.

Messrs. Neblett, Warner and Macdonald appeared for the plaintiff. Messrs. O'Melveny, Tuller & Myers represented the defendant.

"Cowboys" Whoop It Up Along Broadway

As part of a publicity stunt for the Cosmopolitan picture, "Cowboy from Brooklyn," which opened at the Strand, New York, Wednesday, an 1836 New Hampshire stagecoach rolled up Broadway and came to a halt in front of the theatre.

Aboard the coach were six "cowboys," three of the "Wild West" type and three of the Brooklyn variety. Their six hour trip over the hot pavements was made to the accompaniment of numerous whoops and shouts. A banner on the coach announced: "We are cowboys from Brooklyn invading Manhattan."

Texas Officials To Attend Premiere of "Texans"

A group of government officials headed by James V. Allred, governor of Texas, will attend the world premiere of Paramount's "The Texans" at the Majestic Theatre, San Antonio, Friday night. In the group will be James E. Berry, lieutenant governor of Oklahoma; Senator J. Manley Head of Texas; William Lindsay, lieutenant governor of Kansas, B. L. Callahan, mayor of Bilene, and L. C. Griffith, head of the Griffith Amusement Company.

HOLLYWOOD GOES COLOSSAL ONCE AGAIN AS MGM PRESENTS "MARIE"

Returns to Happy Abnormal When 25,000 Cram Environs of Carthay Circle at Lunch Box Premiere of Shearer Film

by WILLIAM R. WEAVER
Hollywood Editor

(Showman's Review of "Marie Antoinette" appears on page 52, this issue.)

Colossal days are here again. Happy Hollywood is back to abnormal.

The power and the glory have been demonstrated, as before, and as never before, bigger and better.

The art, the industry, the nation, maybe the world, are saved. We have "turned the corner" on a skyrocket—as proclaimed, demonstrated, proved by the altogether titanic prevue opening of "Marie Antoinette," Friday night at the Carthay Circle.

The campaign began in accelerating crescendo weeks ago and culminated in the demonstration of the opening night when not less than 25,000 a-motor and a-foot assembled in a boiling conclave of gaping to glimpse the coming and going and the illuminated exterior of the sacred auditorium where beauty, splendor and glamor and power sat to see each other and the unwinding of a tale of a queen of France.

The demonstration began in hot midmorning in the spectator's area and the gala event moved on through its spectacular phases through afternoon, evening and night, ending only at last when at 5 o'clock the last lights went out at the Trocadero, scene of a sequel party given by Louis B. Mayer.

One can deduce without much effort that the proceedings were of competent design to tell the assembled public, the hundreds of Hollywood correspondents of the world press, and the industry of elsewhere, something in answer to recent comments and censures concerning the production community and its works.

So the occurrences of this ermine-edged evening of July 8, 1938, were none of them of an accidental nature. The pretext was a queen of France, but the job was by an ace of publicity, Howard Strickling, long famed for his operations under the industry generalship of Mr. Mayer.

The fascinated peasants and burghers bearing lunch boxes began to assemble in the 4,000 bleacher seats provided at 11 A. M. and they sat until 1:15 o'clock Saturday morning when the more resolute of the invited guests succeeded in extricating their motors from the traffic snarl that had been keeping residents of the region from access to or egress from their homes since the dinner hour the night before.

Interviewed while propped astride his stymied motorcycle, a greyed and perspiring police veteran versed in the mad history of Hollywood's devotion to the town's chief industry estimated the pedestrian turnout at about 25,000 head. He'd been keeping close tab these many years, he said, and this topped the "Hell's Angels" phenomenon, banner manifestation, until now, of how far how many people will go to get to a show they know they can't get into. The 25,000 figure, he said, didn't include the 1,500 who would finally look at the picture all the excitement was about, nor the thousands of passengers in the thousands of automobiles that crept in endless procession both ways along Wilshire Boulevard and snaked around through cross streets back to where they'd come from. Effort to control the fuming flood had been frankly pronounced futile by the boys on the bikes and it was pretty much every motorist for himself for miles in any given direction.

A New Garden of Versailles

As on past occasions in general kind, early birds in the provided bleachers were theoretically rewarded with a clear view of the celluloid nobility traversing the long forecourt to the Carthay curb. This time preparedness won the adulants little, for men, women and children, outnumbering the seated 4,000 some 5 to 1, stood row upon row, hour upon hour, overflowing the pavement along which the carriages of duly identified invitees inched their feverishly inspected occupants gingerly to the floodlighted threshold.

Few had for their pains a fair view of the splendor Mr. Strickling's forethought had furnished for them in the forecourt, so great was their number. Within the area bounded by Wilshire Boulevard on the north and San Vicente Boulevard on the south (a spacious plaza christened McCarthy Vista by a conscientious municipality) had been reproduced with startling fidelity to the film, which reproduces it on only slightly larger scale than the original, the Garden of Versailles. Those who couldn't see it on opening night will be around to look it over later, for that is the way of the community.

High above the heads of the crowd, however, were—and are—to be seen the 23 standards from which streamed down the silken banners bearing the colorful crests of the noble families of Marie Antoinette's France. These surround a rectangular acre of green around which are placed 15 stone urns interspersing 32 statues which may or may not be marble, but will stand, nevertheless, throughout the run of the picture. At the Wilshire entrance to the forecourt thus converted is a reproduction of the tomb of the tragic heroine, and a bas relief beneath a sculptured head of her bears the text: Marie Antoinette, Queen of France, One of the Greatest and Most Glamorous Women Who Ever Lived.

And the Flowers—

On the evening of the premiere it was possible for few to follow the decorative scheme on down to the point where the uniformed gentleman asks for modern tickets to feed into his ultramodern chopper. During the run of the film the plain people, of whom MGM hopes there prove to be as many as the late Abraham Lincoln said there are, will discover that after they have passed along the length of the forecourt, observing its impressive glories, they will have yet to wend their way from curb to door through rows of basketed red dahlias and white gladioli, flowers the lady of the story is reputed to have lost her head about before she lost it to the executioner.

The story of how Mr. Strickling got all these people out to witness the mere externals of a motion picture presentation is long and not readily come at. It is of record that the Los Angeles area had been amply decorated with billboards bearing extremely delicate and dignified statement of the fact that Norma Shearer and Tyrone Power in "Marie Antoinette" was to be on display at the Carthay Circle from July 8. The message was not, most pointedly not, in the blunt "Garbo Loves Taylor" tradition. Neither were the newspaper advertisements which began appearing in the local media a fortnight before the premiere. Neither had been the news stories appearing in the press, nor the comments of the columnists. On the contrary, the Strickling technique throughout had been impressively on the Tiffany side, a persistent, infallibly gentle repetition of the statement that "Marie Antoinette," Miss Shearer's first picture in two years, was to be on view at the specified date. The character of the response was as hoped.

60-Minute Broadcast

On and beyond the environs of the Carthay Circle, radio listeners tuned to NBC stations heard the ceremonies during 60 minutes of broadcast presided over by such master of micophony as Pete Smith, Don Wilson, Frank Whitbeck, showman to his patent leather pumps, Carey Wilson, Robert Young and, briefly, Freddie Bartholomew. Next day the nation's amusement pages informed breakfast readers, in their favorite annotators' finest phrases, of what had transpired. Friday morning Life had brought into several hundred thousand homes a complete pictorial summing up of the picture, plus captional comment of a kind calculated to put the reader on notice that Miss Shearer's return to the screen is a most notable event in the annals of cinema.

The Strickling technique employed for the premiere is to be adhered to strictly, or as strictly as MGM can contrive by insistence and example, throughout the general distribution of the production. There is to be no beating to empty tom-toms, no touching off of gag stunts, but always the formal tone, the gentle touch, the calm but firm assurance that "Marie Antoinette" is an extraordinary film entitled to extraordinary attention. The extraordinary success of this technique as applied for the premiere engagement would appear to prove it.

Miss Shearer's next role will be in "Idiot's Delight" with Clark Gable. Production will start August 15th.

Cardinal O'Connell, Archbishop of the Roman Catholic diocese of Boston, this week sold the Keith Theatre Building, Lowell, Mass., to the Lowell Theatre Company, a Massachusetts Corporation. The Cardinal acted as trustee of the estate of A. Paul Keith, son of the founder of the theatre circuit, in the transaction.

"MARIE ANTOINETTE" DISPLAY AT ASTOR

On Thursday, the day the French celebrated Bastille Day, the Astor theatre in New York opened its doors to the public to view a museum containing antiques, costumes, jewelry and pieces of furniture, all sent from the coast where they were used in the production of "Marie Antoinette."

Purple velvet has been hung at the back of the orchestra and covers the walls as a backdrop for a gallery of enlarged stills, pictures and captions. The technicians as well as the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer artists and other concerned in the production are shown.

The exhibits are insured for $100,000 and cannot be shipped around the country, but Howard Dietz, director of publicity and advertising for MGM, hopes that they will create sufficient interest in New York to evoke imaginative promotional stunts elsewhere.

An invitational preview of "Marie Antoinette" museum was held Wednesday afternoon at the Astor. The picture will have its premiere at the theatre on or about August 9th.

Graham Proceeding to Panama for Assignment

Robert L. Graham sailed Saturday on the Oriente for a short stay in Cuba, after which he will proceed to Panama for a new assignment. Mr. Graham recently returned to New York following two years as special representative in Australia for the company.

Saul Jacobs, formerly manager in Guatemala, has gone to Trinidad to assume the managership there. Henry Gordon, whom Mr. Jacobs succeeds in Trinidad, is proceeding to Panama, where his promotion to another territory will be announced by Paramount shortly.

To Preview "Return to Life"

A charity preview of the film, "Return to Life," under the sponsorship of the Film Division of the Theatre Arts Committee will be held in the Grand Ballroom of the Waldorf-Astoria next Wednesday, the proceeds of which will be used for the "benefit of the wounded soldiers and refugee children of Loyalist Spain." The picture was produced by Frontier Films Productions.

Golf Tourney July 25th

The Indianapolis Variety Club will hold its annual golf tournament July 25th, at the Indianapolis Country Club. Floyd Brown, Universal branch manager, is chairman of the golf committee.

Two Arrested in Coast Swindle

A swindle scheme by which the name of Louis B. Mayer, vice-president in charge of production for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, was forged to $50,000 in promissory notes, was nipped this week when two MGM employees were jailed in Los Angeles.

George Donald Smart, obscure sound recorder, and Layne Britton, make-up artist described by Los Angeles police officers as Mr. Smart's unwitting tool were held on a suspicion of forgery, grand theft and conspiracy covering a period of two years.

As related in a confession, Mr. Smart set himself up in 1936 as "Mr. Mayer's confidential representative." His front was a forged letter, saying he was to negotiate special contracts with MGM stars. For getting them to agree to quit MGM if Mr. Mayer should resign, Mr. Smart claimed he was to receive 10 per cent of their salaries as commission.

To forestall inquiries, the sound man is said to have told victims that "Mr. Mayer will positively deny any connection with the matter" if approached.

The scheme paid its first dividends investigators said, when Mr. Smart obtained $10,000 from the Santa Monica Commercial and Savings Bank on a note forged so skillfully that even experts identified the signature as Mr. Mayer's. The bank was informed the loan was to pay "bonuses" to certain stars for signing the special contracts.

Cashing a $15,000 30-day note with a second client, Mr. Smart repaid the first note. While dickering on a third note for $25,000 he paid back $10,000 of the second note.

The third client, Attorney Gail Burck, asked the advice of investment counselors. They mailed the note, filled out but unsigned, to Mr. Mayer's Santa Monica home. A few days later it was returned to a post office box they had rented. Mr. Smart, investigators said, admitted he obtained Mr. Burck's letter from Mr. Mayer's chauffeur on a pretext.

When the Burck note fell due last month and was unpaid, the attorney finally reached Mr. Mayer and the case was turned over to the District Attorney.

Industrial Campaign

With the increase in demand for industrial and educational films, Pathe News has launched a campaign offering its mechanical facilities, expert technicians, script writers and directors to the industrial field. Trade publications and direct mails are being used. Mears Advertising, Inc., has been appointed to handle the campaign.

The third annual Connecticut Motion Picture Theatre Owners golf tournament will be held at the Racebrook Country Club, New Haven, August 2nd.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Much Ado

With fifty pictures actually in production, Hollywood today finds itself in the position of much ado about something. Celebrating Fourth of July week, those whose business it is to make pictures here removed seven features from the active list and put ten into work.

Two new films are credited to Columbia. "Finishing School" went before the cameras with Margaret Tallichet, Anne Shirley, Nan Grey, Peggy Moran, Joan Tree, William Henry, Noah Beery, Jr., Cecil Cunningham, Marjorie Main, Ralph Bellamy and Franklyn Pangborn assigned to important roles. Supported by the usual complement of riding, shooting buckaroos, Buck Jones and Dorothy Farley started work on "The Phantom Trail."

Warner Brothers said "go" to a pair of pictures. "Heart of the North," which is being made in color, will present Dick Foran, Gale Page, Patric Knowles, Allen Jenkins, Gloria Dickson and Janet Chapman. John Garfield, Rosemary Lane, Peggy Shannon, William Davidson, Wade Boteler and Stanley Fields are the principals in "Blackwells' Island."

Two features also started at 20th Century-Fox. Michael Whalen, Chick Chandler, Joan Woodbury, Jean Rogers, Robert Kellard, Harold Huber, William Demarest and Marc Lawrence will be among those to be seen in "While New York Sleeps." The incomplete cast of "By the Dawn's Early Light" will feature Warner Baxter, Alice Faye, Arthur Treacher, Keye Luke, Charles Winninger and Willie Fung.

"Freshman Year" was started at Universal. Dixie Dunbar, Ernest Truex, William Lundigan, Constance Moore, Stanley Hughes, Frank Melton and Spec O'Donnell will be among those present in the player credits.

At Monogram "The Circus Comes to Town" was started. It will feature Anne Nagel and Jack LaRue with Marjorie Main, Herbert Rawlinson, Charlene Wyatt and Betty Compson.

With Barbara Stanwyck and Henry Fonda starred, RKO-Radio began "The Mad Miss Manton." Frances Mercer, Vicki Lester, Whitney Bourne, Penny Singleton, Paul Guilfoyle, William Carson, Hattie McDaniel and Ann Evers will also be seen.

Republic started "The Tenth Avenue Kid," which will feature Beverly Roberts, Bruce Cabot, Phillip MacMahon, Ben Weldon and Horace MacMahon.

Seven Completed

Star picture of the completed allotment, unquestionably, is "My Lucky Star." Sonja Heine is the star. With her will be Richard Greene, Joan David, Cesar Romero, Buddy Ebsen, Arthur Treacher, George Barbier, Louise Hovick, Billy Gilbert, Patricia Wilder, Paul Hurst, Elisha Cook, Jr., Robert Kellard, The Brewster twins, Charles Tannen and Kay Griffith. The company also completed "Ellis Island" in which Don Ameche, Arleen Whelan, Lyle Talbot, Gregory Ratoff, Binnie Barnes, Gilbert Roland, Raymond Walburn, Marjorie Gateson, Maurice Moscovich, Harry Carey and E. E. Clive are the principals.

Two productions came off the line at RKO-Radio. "Fugitives For a Night," a Hollywood story, will present Frank Albertson, Eleanor Lynn, Bradley Page, Allan Lane, Russell Hicks, Adrienne Ames, Richard Lane, Jonathan Hale, Robert Gleckler and Cecil Kellaway. Second feature, "Breaking the Ice," a Sol Lesser production, stars Bobby Breen with Charlie Ruggles, Dolores Costello, Irene Dore, Robert Barrat, Dorothy Peterson, John King, Billy Gilbert, Spencer Charters and Charlie Murray.

Hal Roach finished his last picture for MGM distribution, "Blockheads." It will present Laurel and Hardy, Patricia Ellis, Billy Gilbert and Minna Gombell.

"Wild Bill Hickok" was completed at Columbia. The cast includes Gordon Elliot, Carole Wayne, Monte Blue, Kermit Maynard, Roscoe Ates, Frankie Darro, Dickie Jones, Sammy McKim, Male and Chief Thundercloud.

Featuring Dennis O'Keefe, Lewis Stone, Ann Morriss, Nat Pendleton, Lana Turner, Barbara Pepper and Henry O'Neill, MGM finished "The Chaser."

Star Loan

David O. Selznick's youth discovery, Tommy Kelly, the New York lad who leaped to stardom via "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer has been lent to Sol Lesser for "Peck's Bad Boy at the Circus." Scheduled to go into production July 22, the George W. Peck story was adapted by Robert Neville, David Boehm and Al Martin, and will be directed by Eddie Cline.

Thirteen year old Tommy is still not sure he wants to go ahead with a picture career.

"I'd still rather be a big league ball player," is his idea of how things should be.

Wisdom

Harold Lloyd had a few words to say about the art and technique of making comedy pictures, the result being a few gems of showmanship wisdom, applicable to any type of campaign.

The fragments:

"Invariably it is the simplest but most human gag in a picture that gets the most favorable audience reaction."

"We often hear of a so-called sure-fire gag. There is no such thing. An apparently spontaneous situation often gets a much bigger reaction than one which we have been working up to for several hundred feet."

"Sincerity is the keynote of all situations and gags that find greatest favor."

"The modern audience cannot have its credulity taxed. The minute they suspect you are putting something over on them you're licked."

"You cannot build up sympathy for your principal character and not have him outwit his oppressors. Most favorable reactions come from what you do to your enemies, not what they do to you."

"It is much easier to get the right results when you have built up an impression of reality."

Signs of Times

Preparing for more intensive work in color production, MGM has accepted delivery of 110 new 150 ampere arc spots to be remodeled with sound proof housing. In addition 45 similar lamps already owned by the studio are being sound-treated with a system perfected by Lou Kolb, chief electrical engineer. Arc light being more adaptable to color photography, these lamps will replace incandescents where it is necessary for special effects, the studio folk announced.

Strange Source

Sidney Blackmer always thought he was a respectable sort of a fellow, even though his film work quite often has him in unsympathetic roles, until, recently, his fan fail took a turn for the worse.

Checking up, he found that one-third of the mail was coming from convicts, many of whom had never seen him on the screen. Blackmer believes the reason for his popularity with the prison clientele is because he answered with a personal note of encouragement a letter from a prisoner which he received some time ago. The actor received 150 notes from New York prisons during June as well as several score from other penitentiaries.

Fortuitous

Airplanes zooming noisily over studios have spoiled "takes" ever since pictures took to sound. This week, for the first time, one was welcome. William Wellman was directing a sequence in "Men With Wings." The action was laid in an aircraft factory. An unknown aviator roared over the stage and a perfect sound background was duly recorded on the film.

Itemized

John Russell, the five-year-old actor who plays his first important role in "Always Goodbye," has been signed to a long-term contract by Twentieth Century-Fox.

Harry Sauber, former producer at Republic, has been signed by Columbia as assistant to Irving Briskin and will act as story editor of the Briskin unit.

Collective Film Producers, Inc., has begun shooting David Pinski's "Yankel the Shmid" under the direction of Edgar G. Ulmer, with the assistance of Ben Zvi Baratov and Ossip Dimov.

Ted Eshbaugh Studios, Inc., this week announced plans for the production of 12 cartoons in color. Mr. Eshbaugh will produce the short subjects, which will be released by a major company, it is said. The first release will be in September.

Marie Antoinette

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

Biography of a Woman

"Marie Antoinette" tells a story of one of history's most fascinating women. Thematically, it is a frank, honest and moving human document. It is thrilling romance. The fury and terror, blood and tears of its melodrama provide gripping sensationalism. The tragic fate of its ill-starred heroine, a royal maid who became a queen but was always a woman who loved and was loved, hated and was hated, is heart-touching.

Able story tellers wrought this tale. Claudine West, Donald Ogden Stewart and Ernest Vadja faced a monumental task when they were assigned to adapt Stefan Zweig's biography. To their credit the screen play is a masterpiece of literary composition, rich in showmanship substance.

No easy job was that of producer Hunt Stromberg or that of director W. S. Van Dyke, II. Audiences will see that. So will exhibitors. The beauty of the settings which reflect the splendor of royal France, the squalor of those mirroring the poverty of the empire's poor, add power, force and realism to the varying moods of the narrative. Shrewdly taking full advantage of the talents of the players at his command and the wealth of detail he had for backgrounds, Van Dyke permitted the story to tell itself. So engrossing is that story, when it concerns itself with romance, intrigue, the melodrama of men and women and mobs driven frantic by events they provoked but could not control, the blood lust of revolution or bitter tragedy, Herbert Stothart's musical score is tellingly achieved.

Just as individuals who have proved themselves were behind the scenes, those in the forefront, those whose duty it was to make visibly real the story of Marie Antoinette, are personalities who with but few exceptions are widely known. Many are featured; at one time or another thousands appear. Few artistes, either on stage or screen, have ever so capably demonstrated their ability to make a character so completely womanly, human, understandable and believable as does Norma Shearer in her portrayal of "Marie Antoinette." Few actors have handled a difficult role with such skill and finesse as does Robert Morley "King Louis XVI." With Tyrone Power, Joseph Schildkraut, Anita Louise, Gladys George, John Barrymore, Henry Stephenson and Joseph Calleia, Miss Shearer and Mr. Morley carry the massive story sincerely and with a conviction that is the hallmark of those who appreciate a fine thing finely done.

"Marie Antoinette" was a queen, but, more pointedly, she was a woman of great strengths and weaknesses, subject to the temptations, jealousies and aspirations of all women. She lived life fully as she chose to live it. But her loves, intrigues, triumphs and tragedies were not those that line the paths of ordinary women. Her one moment of ecstatic love reached heights of happiness that were to last a short lifetime. When her doom was near those loves and the offering of them were her consolation. Two men shared her love. One was a foreign nobleman who dared to love a queen because she was a woman, and risked his life in one of history's most daring episodes, the attempt of the royal family to escape from France when the Revolution flamed in Paris. The other was a dull-witted but kindly clod, the Dauphin, who became her husband and King of France. A symbol of an institution whose extravagances impoverished a nation, "Marie Antoinette" was despised by her subjects, who screamed for her life. Her husband made victim of maddened fury, her children torn from her, one moment of comfort in her lover's arms was "Marie Antoinette's" triumph before the guillotine dropped.

It may be that not all audiences will like "Marie Antoinette." No picture has ever been universally satisfactory. Nonetheless, exhibitors have in the picture one of the finest pieces of screen merchandise that they ever have had opportunity to offer patrons. Essentially it is an adult attraction, and upon exhibitors descends the responsibility of interesting understanding grown-ups in it. Students of history may quibble about some of its minutiae, but it is a good bet that most critics will acclaim it. The picture was not intended to be an historical study. It simply is the romantic, melodramatic and tragic love story of a woman, and that is the point that should be driven home.

The international premiere of "Marie Antoinette" was held at Carthay Circle theatre, Los Angeles, the environs of which had been transformed into a replica of the Garden of Versailles. The great and the near great in all their jewels, furs and finery were there. An unusual audience, it could not be expected that its reactions in any way would reflect those of a usual gathering. Of course, there was thunderous applause and a standing ovation to Miss Shearer immediately upon the conclusion. Road-show results must be awaited before one can anticipate what "Marie Antoinette" will mean to general audiences and exhibitors when it is released at popular prices.—GUS MCCARTHY.

Professor Beware

(Paramount-Lloyd)

Characteristic Comedy

High in the thin roster of fixed factors of show business is the Harold Lloyd comedy. Time marches on and newcomers contribute their little or much to the changing scene. Some of them rise to their heights, then fall into oblivion within the two year stretches between the bespectacled comedian's offerings. But his name is as potent on a marquee today as when he rocked the cinema world with "High and Dizzy" and won its heart with "Grandma's Boy." Telling showmen how to sell a Lloyd comedy is like telling the U. S. Mint how to make money.

Mr. Lloyd is faithful to first principles in this swift and satisfying demonstration of his undimmed comedic talent. The picture is fundamentally a chase, starting in Los Angeles before the picture is five minutes old and ending aboard a yacht off New York 90 minutes later. Meantime there have been riotous stopovers in the desert, in Kansas, in Ohio, Pennsylvania and Jersey. The transportation has involved travel by motor, by train, by foot, fire truck, taxi and boat. It's never been slow.

Source of all the excitement is the professor's conviction that he and a young lady he meets by chance are reincarnations of ill fated Egyptian lovers learned about in the course of his archaeological explorations. As their modern experiences seem more and more closely to parallel those of the long departed, the professor strives more and more heroically to escape the seemingly foreordained doom. By the time he discovers that he is not actually under supernatural control he has generated enough courage born of desperation to carry him through an even more heroic finale.

Mr. Lloyd is beneficiary of the collaborations of five writers, Delmer Davis, Jack Cunningham, Clyde Bruckman, Francis Cockrell and Marian B. Cockrell, and it would seem that each contributed enough gag situations for a nine run feature comedy. The closely spaced detonations of their laugh bombs are a tribute to the directorial ingenuity of Elliott Nugent. Laughter occasionally obliterates dialogue, but Phyllis Welch plays the feminine lead, a role permitted more romantic realism than is usual in Lloyd comedies. Lionel Stander, Raymond Walburn, William Frawley, Sterling Holloway, Christian Rub and Thurston Hall play principal roles, Messrs. Walburn and Stander joining the comedian in midpicture and continuing on through as his hobo companions.

High spots are many. The sequence staged atop a freight train entering a tunnel is among the best Lloyd ever achieved. A hitch hike episode in which a chicken makes him seem a ventriloquist is purest laugh entertainment. The final episode in which he enrages a mob and commandeers a fire truck is terrific.

We're Going to Be Rich

A Fields Day

Here in the States we have "our Gracie" (Allen), while the British Empire upon which the sun never sets has its own special "Gracie" (Fields). American audiences are now thoroughly acquainted with the particular comic playing of their native comedians but up to the present moment of reporting a widespread introduction at least on this side of the big pond to the darling of the English music halls has been unwisely delayed. However, this production, Miss Fields' first picture for an American company, will do much to remedy her almost anonymous standing on the motion picture screens of this country.

Capitalizing on Miss Fields' unique personality and comedy talents should serve the enterprising showman as fertile "teaser" material for arousing audience interest in seeing and hearing for the first time this distingushed singer-actress. Miss Fields' fame in her own country has merited her the award of Commander of the Order of the British Empire from King George VI and for the second consecutive year the honor of placing first in MOTION PICTURE HERALD's poll of British money making stars. In this present vehicle, Gracie is given rich opportunity to sing several sentimental and comic numbers in her own individual style, so removed from the prevalent "hot-cha" manner of vocalization, as well as the chance to play straight in a simple and effective way.

Assisting Miss Fields are two of Hollywood's leading male players. Victor McLaglen, as the talkative and unproductive husband, has one of the best roles in his screen career and plays the part accordingly. Brian Donlevy, recently feuding with McLaglen in "The Battle of Broadway," enacts the role of a gambling joint proprietor and looks appropriately sharp and calculating. A likeable and talented juvenile, Ted Smith, and Coral Browne, as a sultry dance hall belle, are two outstanding players in a list of capable supporting individuals.

Filmed in the British studios at Denham, the technical side of the picture has been given the care usually associated with Hollywood output. The musical portion of the plot has a quaint nostalgic air of the "good, old days." Particularly effective are the reproductions of gold "strike" locales in the days of the late '80's. A concluding sequence detailing an old fashioned fisticuff exhibition prior to the days of one round championship bouts will bring howls of glee from the sporty set. Monty Banks has given the cleverly devised script of Sam Hellman and Rohama Siegel some smoothly paced direction.

The general run of the scenario is of a motif that should appeal especially to the feminine fans. Telling of a wife's devotion to her apparently shiftless and worthless husband, the plot opens in an Australian music hall in Melbourne where Miss Fields is giving a farewell performance before leaving for England with her spouse and her nephew. The itinerary is halted when McLaglen squanders the family savings in buying fraudulent mine stock. While he is working out a jail sentence for starting a riot as a result of his raw deal, Miss Fields takes employment as a singer in Donlevy's saloon. Upon his release McLaglen shows his gratitude for Gracie's efforts to keep the little family together by misinterpreting Donlevy's interest in his wife and walks out on the little woman to become a prize fighter. The sight of her spouse being beaten to a pulp stirs up Miss Fields' conjugal sentiments and a reconciliation is effected.

Gold Mine in the Sky

(Republic)

Western

Showmen who have eagerly awaited this production, which marks the resumption of the Gene Autry westerns, will find it a carefully wrought production with the cowboy star at his best. The story is not a new one, as what western story is, but it has been handled well and enjoyably so. Action, romance, comedy and music are spotted throughout the picture in the right places with a minimum of dull spots.

The picture is easily one of the best that Autry has made. In addition he also has been fortunate in the selection of songs. The title song, for instance, "Gold Mine in the Sky," has had a popular success this season and Autry's singing of it rivals anything that he has previously sung in the pictures. "As Long As I Have My Horse," is another song that has merit with a good comedy twist to it.

That dependable comedian, Smiles Burnette, who is something of a fixture in the Autry series, continues in this to uphold his part. An Autry picture without Burnette would be something akin to bread without butter. Carol Hughes is a personable leading lady. Her role has more to it than is customarily the case in these outdoor dramas.

The story is but another twist to the one about the ranch owner who dies and leaves his estate to his daughter, who has spent most of her years in the east, subject to the administration of the foreman. The girl, "Cody" (Carol Hughes), rebels at the thought of being told what to do by the foreman, "Gene" (Autry), and wires "Larry" (Craig Reynolds) to join her. "Larry," gambler and racketeer, proposes to marry "Cody."

As her guardian "Gene" refuses to permit the marriage until "Larry" has proved capable of supporting her. "Larry" and "Cody" turn the place into a dude ranch. "Larry" and some racketeering friends fake a cattle rustling raid to decoy "Gene" into a trap without success. When "Cody" learns his true character she orders "Larry" off the ranch. Later he kidnaps "Cody" and demands $25,000 ransom but "Gene" and his cowboys trap the kidnaper and free the girl.

I'll Give a Million

Comedy

Few and far between are the comedies which send observers away wondering why they've seen nothing precisely similar before. This is one. Telling the customers so, one way or another, is obviously the thing to do. Telling them that Warner Baxter, Peter Lorre, Marjorie Weaver, Jean Hersholt, John Carradine, J. Edward Bromberg, and practically innumerable supporting players capable of playing a type to practical perfection, are here seen in something unlike anything seen previously, is perhaps the expedient way of getting the whole exploitation story across.

The scene of this extraordinary comedy is the French Riviera. A jaded millionaire leaps from his yacht into the sea to rescue a suicidal moron who wishes he hadn't. In the conversation which ensues the millionaire remarks that he'll give a million francs to anybody who'll volunteer him an unselfish service. While the moron sleeps, the millionaire exchanges clothes with him and goes away. Next morning the moron wanders into town wearing the millionaire's clothes and telling his story. A reporter overhears, his newspaper headlines the news that a millionaire dressed as a tramp is at large in the area with a million francs he is anxious to give some kindly soul. Promptly the population, en masse, takes all trampdom to its bosom. Complications which follow, cleared up ultimately when the millionaire appears and makes good his promise, incidentally proving to his own satisfaction that the girl he loves loves him for himself alone, are too intricate for brief synopsis and more than comic enough for half a dozen feature pictures.

EXHIBITORS NAME BEST PUBLICITY AND ADS OF YEAR FOR AMPA AWARDS

Fifty Judges Vote on Campaigns Conceived by Home Offices of Distributors; Trade Press Ads. Impress Showmen

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's Leo captured a lion's share of the honors Thursday when the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers presented its 1937 awards for the year's best publicity and advertising at the organization's third annual "medal and prize-winning luncheon" in the Sert Room of the Waldorf Astoria, New York City.

While executives and representatives of virtually all companies looked on, Ralph Rolan, AMPA president, announced the results of voting by 50 judges who were identified as exhibitors representing a "high percentage of the key runs in territories throughout the country."

The field of AMPA's awards differs from the Quigley Awards which give monthly and annual recognition to the working theatre manager in the field for the best showmanship campaigns submitted to the Managers Round Table of MOTION PICTURE HERALD. The AMPA's awards pertain to what is done by the home office only.

MGM's publicity and advertising campaign on "Good Earth" was awarded first place in three of the five AMPA classifications in which votes were cast and in the remaining two divisions the "Good Earth" campaign rated second and third.

The divisions in which "Good Earth" was declared the winner were: The best all-around campaign, in which all angles of theatre merchandising were considered; the best campaign direct to the public, in which newspapers, national magazines, radio, exploitation, and merchandising tieups were considered the best campaign direct to the trade, in which the judges considered trade papers.

The first place winners in the other two divisions were the publicity campaign for MGM's "Saratoga" in which newspaper space, features in magazines, columnist mention, radio tieups, and contests were considered, and the display material for United Artists' "Hurricane," in which 24-sheets, 6-sheets, 3-sheets, 1-sheets, lobby displays, 40x60 blowups, color paints, heralds, novelties, etc., were considered.

Trade paper advertisements evidently made the greater impression on the exhibitor judges, for they gave votes to 19 pictures in this classification, whereas only 14 pictures were in the running in the "all-around" group, 14 in the "best publicity" class, 13 in the "direct to the public" group and 15 in the "display material" campaigns.

In commenting upon the manner in which the awards were determined, Mr. Rolan pointed out that the judges were the men who reflect the reception of the public to the industry's advertising and publicity, and determine the amount of effort involved in the campaigns.

The company conducting the winning campaign in each division was awarded a plaque while parchments were presented to those companies which took second and third places and to those that received honorable mention.

Honorable mention in the "best all-around campaign" division went to the campaigns conducted in behalf of "Lost Horizon," Columbia, which just fell short of receiving sufficient votes to make it a three-way tie for third position; "Saratoga," "The Plainsman," Paramount; "Alcatraz Island," "A Star Is Born," United Artists; and "Shall We Dance?" RKO.

Other pictures receiving votes in this division were: "The Awful Truth," Columbia; "Stage Door," RKO; "Stella Dallas," United Artists; "Souls at Sea," Paramount; and the "Dick Tracy Series," Republic.

Commenting on the voting in this unit, Mr. Rolan revealed that the "Good Earth" campaign received twice as many votes as any other campaign.

The pictures which took second and third place, "Hurricane," "Wells Fargo," and "Zola," registered as many votes as the next five in the list, excluding "Lost Horizon," Mr. Rolan said.

"Hurricane" took fourth position in "the best publicity campaign" and narrowly missed tying "Zola" for third place. Other pictures receiving votes in this division were: "Wells Fargo," "100 Men and a Girl," Universal; "A Star Is Born, "Shall We Dance" "Lost Horizon," "The Plainsman," "Stage Door," "Artists and Models," Paramount; "1937 Disney Series," RKO; and "Alcatraz Island."

In this group, Mr. Rolan explained, the winner, "Saratoga," led by only a few points. The first four in the list, "Saratoga," "Good Earth," "Zola," and "Hurricane," received a 50 per cent margin over the balance in the group.

"Hurricane" also barely missed out in tying for third position in the "best campaign direct to the public." Votes in this division after the four leaders went to "Lost Horizon," "Saratoga," "100 Men and a Girl," "The Plainsman," "Stella Dallas," "A Day at the Races," MGM; "The Awful Truth," "A Star Is Born," and "Broadway Melody of 1938," MGM.

"Lost Horizon" in capturing third place in the "best campaign direct to the trade" just nosed out "Stage Door," Mr. Rolan reported. His list of other pictures receiving votes included: "Saratoga," "Hurricane," "Souls at Sea," "100 Men and a Girl," "Zola," "The Plainsman,' "Wells Fargo," "Boy of the Streets," Monogram; "The Awful Truth," "A Star Is Born," "Shall We Dance?," "Broadway Melody of 1938," "Merry-Go-Round of 1938," Universal; "Stella Dallas," and "Prisoner of Zenda," UA.

The winners in "best display material" division received more than 100 per cent more votes than the other pictures which received attention. The latter group included "Lost Horizon," "Zola," "The Plainsman," "Alcatraz Island," "Stage Door," "Shall We Dance?" "A Day at the Races," "Artists and Models," "Broadway Melody of 1938," "A Star Is Born," "Marked Women," "Submarine D-1" and "Saratoga."

The instructions issued to the judges by AMPA included the warning that they should consider "box office returns only on the basis of the class of the picture."

An awards committee headed by Vincent Trotta of Paramount, had charge of the voting and all details connected with determining the winners. Members of the committee were Hap Hadley, motion picture artist; James P. Cunningham, of MOTION PICTURE HERALD; Rutgers Nielson of RKO; and Martin Starr, film news radio commentator and press agent.

The judges were Ted Schlanger and Julian Seltzer, of Warner Brothers, Philadelphia; John Nolan and George Lynch of Schine Enterprises; Vincent R. McFaul, Buffalo Theatres; George Skouras and Charles Skouras, National Theatres; Harry Brandt, Brandt Theatres; S. Samuelson, Allied Theatre Owners of New Jersey; William K. Hollander and John Balaban, Balaban and Katz; Jules Rubens, Great States Theatres; Sid Dannenberg, Warner Brothers, Cleveland; E. P. Dinnerman, RKO Albee, Cincinnati; Earl Hudson, United Detroit Theatres; E. C. Beatty, W. S. Butterfield Theatres; John L. Friedl and Charles Winchell, Minnesota Amusement Company; Elmer Rhoden, Fox Midwest, Kansas City; Dean Hyskell, Fox West Coast, Los Angeles; M. A. Lightman, Malco Theatres; Sonny Shepherd, Wometco Theatres; W. R. Lynch, Paramount Enterprises, Miami; Frank Rogers, United Theatres, Miami; R. J. O'Donnell and Frank Starz, Interstate Circuit; William K. Jenkins, Lucas and Jenkins; I. M. Rappaport, Hippodrome, Baltimore; Carl Bamford, Publix-Bamford, Asheville, N. C., and J. Arthur Hirsch, Consolidated Theatres, Montreal.

WINNING CAMPAIGNS IN FIVE DIVISIONS

The five divisions and the first, second and third place winners in each group were as follows:

The Best All-Around Campaign

GOOD EARTH, MGM.
HURRICANE, UA.
WELLS FARGO, Paramount, and LIFE OF EMILE ZOLA, Warner Brothers, tied for third place.

Best Campaign Direct to the Public

GOOD EARTH, MGM.
LIFE OF EMILE ZOLA, Warner Brothers.
WELLS FARGO, Paramount.

Best Campaign Direct to the Trade

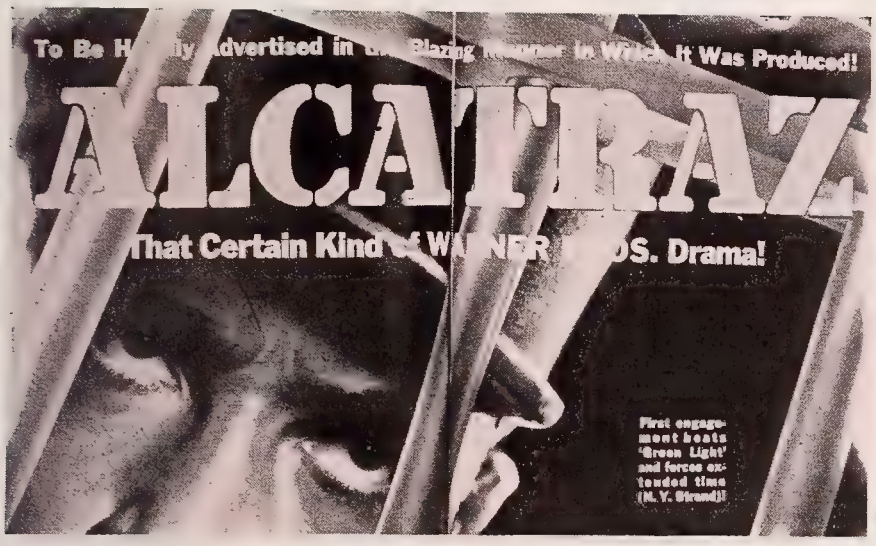
GOOD EARTH, MGM.
ALCATRAZ ISLAND, Warner Brothers.
LOST HORIZON, Columbia, and STAGE DOOR, RKO.

Best Publicity Campaign

SARATOGA, MGM.
GOOD EARTH, MGM.
LIFE OF EMILE ZOLA, Warner Brothers.

Best Display Material

HURRICANE, United Artists.
WELLS FARGO, Paramount.
GOOD EARTH, MGM.



In each case, the winner proved a strong money-maker, indicating that the pictures which had the merchandising support of the distributor reflected that support at the box office.

Trade Press Campaigns Receive AMPA Awards

FIFTY leading exhibitors were judges in the annual AMPA balloting to determine the best advertising for the year. (See opposite page.) For the best trade campaigns they selected "Good Earth," "Alcatraz Island," "Lost Horizon," and "Stage Door." Herewith are reproductions of ads from the winning campaigns, as they appeared in MOTION PICTURE HERALD.

Indicating the extent to which the trade campaigns impressed the judges, they voted for 19 pictures in that class, compared to 14 in the best "all-around" campaign group.

portunity to display his ability, including the vocal, than anything he's had to do in the past year or so. Peter Lorre's portrayal of the dim-witted vagabond is his usual masterful depiction. Jean Hersholt makes much of a smaller chore, John Carradine is brilliant in an even smaller one, and Miss Weaver handles the relatively minor feminine lead effectually.

The film is a Kenneth Macgowan production directed by Fritz Lang. Both gentlemen distinguished themselves in keeping a complex narrative flowing steadily in a stream of unstemmed action. The screen play, by Boris Ingster and Milton Sperling from a story by Cesare Zavattini and Giaci Mondaini, is a finely wrought work.

The Affairs of Annabel

(RKO Radio)

Farce Comedy

Don't let this lavender-and-old-lace-sounding title fool you. "The Affairs of Annabel" is no summer time romance. There's no love in it nor is there anything sophisticated about it. It simply is farce comedy, prepared and executed in a welter of nonsense. It is pointed to let any one who has them give vent to his or her risible emotions. There isn't a serious moment in the whole show. At no time is there occasion for anything but laughter. It's showmanship, taking whatever advantage of name values as desired, of course, is merely letting the patrons know that the show is laughable amusement. There's no limit to the crazy stunts that can be applied. In fact the picture calls for all the most ridiculous ideas in the exploitation catalogue.

As there's little that is old in the motivating idea, there is less that is trite or stale. The plot merely has the picture business making a clown of itself in a fresh new way. It only has two principal episodes. However both are embellished with a wealth of that nonsensical detail which has caused many people to form the opinion that Hollywood and its denizens are the silliest things on earth.

Press agent "Morgan" exists only to publicize star "Annabel" and her pictures in the most sensational ways imaginable. A continual victim of stunts that backfired, "Annabel," nevertheless, loves the publicity. She goes to jail to exploit "Behind Prison Bars" and the tragic results to her were considered high amusement by the preview crowd. A little soft-soap and she readily consents to become a domestic when "Morgan" paints a rosy picture of what the publicity will do for her when "A Maid And A Man" is released. She gets world wide publicity, when after a round of trying experiences to her, but utter insanity to the crowd, she captures a pair of public enemies. But when the title of the picture is changed to "The Diamond Smuggler," "Annabel" is out of the frying pan of one "Morgan" gag into the fire of another when he has diamonds planted on her and tips the customs officers off that she is a smuggler. The picture concludes abruptly, creating the impression that it may be the first of a series featuring the same pair in a continuation of the idea.

Though the original story by Charles Hoffman and the screen play prepared by Bert Granet and Paul Yawitz are ridiculous, it is not beyond the bounds of Hollywood press agent reasoning or imagination. Similar actual instances actually have been perpetrated. In his first production effort, Lou Lusty has given the picture an air of credibility and with Jack Oakie turning in one of his better performances and Lucille Ball again demonstrating that she is a comedienne of talent, director Ben Stoloff chose to hold the strings lightly and let the mirth of the picture put across its own punches.

Little Tough Guy

Melodrama

The problem of selling "Little Tough Guy" resolves itself into what several of the "Dead End"-"Crime School" kids mean to audiences as entertainers and what their box office value is. The production is simply another portrayal of and the story another delineation of the causes, forces, circumstances and environments which lead youngsters into lives of crime in such a manner that they become menaces to themselves, their families, friends and the community at large.

The law executes "Jim Boylan" and immediately, as the family is compelled to move into the slums, son "Johnny" establishes himself as an enemy of society and the leader of a gang of juvenile hoodlums. They progress from petty thievery to bold robbery when rich boy "Cyril" in search of thrills gives them the benefit of his erudite-gangster-czar advice, only to expose them to the police when things get hot and dangerous for him. Cornered by the officers, "Pig" is killed as he is about to surrender and "Johnny" is induced to surrender by his sister, "Kay." The gang, including "Cyril," is sentenced to the reformatory, but as no details are shown as to how all are regenerated and started on the path to becoming useful citizens, the only indication that such a desired result has come to pass is shown by "Johnny" leading the school band in which all his gang play.

As some sacrifices have been made to the continuity of Brenda Weisberg's original which she adapted in corroboration with Gilson Brown, director Harold Young elected, in bringing the theme to screen realism, to stress the melodrama of separate sequences and the picture is given the aspect of being a series of episodes. Of these Billy Halop's first reactions to law which he considers unequal because it would execute his father, his fight with Huntz Hall, his plea to the judge to commute his father's sentence, his rebellious outbursts upon denial, several scenes with his mother and sister, Marjorie Main and Helen Parrish, and the sequence in which the two boys are besieged are well and forcefully acted and directed.

Previewed July 7 in RKO Hillstreet Theatre, Los Angeles, where "Snow White And Seven Dwarfs" was playing at popular prices. The audience which had, no doubt, seen the "Dead End" gang before, was expectant and early enthusiasm was high. This faded in a noticeable degree, nevertheless, as the picture progressed. However, secret previews had given Universal executives a high opinion of the film and it may be expected that it will be returned for further work. As scenes and sequences may be added to make for better clarity and coherence, it may be expected too the incidents showing the rich boy offering his juvenile pals champagne and cigarettes may be eliminated as well as dialogue lines that tend to illustrate that smartness rather than toughness is the route to undetectable crime.—G. Four's a Crowd

(Warner Bros.)

Sophisticated Comedy

The brothers Warner, lately in the news as pledged to give the summer showman magnetic merchandise with which to offset seasonal competition, may be said to have made good in spades as pertains to the week of August 20th. This is a showman's picture if Burbank ever produced one. There are as many ways to sell it as there are types of cinemas to show it in and audiences to show it to.

The easiest way, and in this instance a pretty effective one, is a conspicuous cataloguing of the talent. Such a listing may well start with the news that Errol Flynn, Olivia De Havilland and Patric Knowles, from the cast of "Robin Hood," are together again here in roles about as different as possible. Here also is Rosalind Russell in her first Warner film and here are Walter Connolly and Hugh Herbert in assignments cut to their measure. Added mention of Franklyn Pangborn, Herman Bing and Melville Cooper should convince the most dogged devotee of outdoor amusement that what goes on on the inside is breezy stuff.

A rather large sector of the reading public will be interested to hear that the hero of the film is a public relations counsel whose operations are distinctly reminiscent of the late Ivy Lee's. A phase of human activity not previously dealt with in detail on the screen, a still larger sector will want to be told that perhaps the biggest and best toy train setup ever assembled is an important item given much footage in the picture. There are also more than enough dogs to fascinate the canine conscious.

To still others the name of Michael Curtiz as director is "must" copy for the marquee. His present film resembles in no particular his "Gold Is Where You Find It," but he handles the far different Casey Robinson-Sig Herzig screen play, based on Wallace Sullivan's story, no whit less dexterously. Associate producer David Lewis provided facilities with a lavish hand.

The story deals with a newspaper publisher, a girl reporter, a super press agent, a millionaire, his daughter, and their variously conflicting yet ultimately parallel interests in the financing of a clinic. Complications are much too numerous and involved for coherent synopsis. Everybody lies to everybody else, and only a stroke of good sense in the finale gets the right men married to the right women.

Love Finds Andy Hardy

(MGM)

Domestic Comedy

Exhibitors who feel that their customers may have been less than unanimously convinced by the recent MGM declaration that the studio was to produce no more of the so-known "B" pictures have in this number of what was originally set up as a series falling under that letter-classification a made-to-order instrument for proving to the payers that MGM wasn't spoofing. This has everything that a motion picture commonly described as "A" is supposed to have and much more of each component, including that most essential one, entertainment, than 9 out of every 10 "A's" offered the trade and its public. It is far above the high standard set by the earlier Hardy pictures in every department.

To the permanent cast, Lewis Stone, Mickey Rooney, Cecilia Parker, Ann Rutherford and Fay Holden, MGM this time has added Judy Garland, Lana Turner, Gene Reynolds and others, including Raymond Hatton. To Miss Garland have been given three songs to sing, two by Mack Gordon and Harry Revel which have strong hit possibilities and one by Roger Edens which fits snugly into and carries forward the story, a number with as finely written lyrics as have been heard in recent years. Before she gets around to singing these, Miss Garland establishes her character in the story quite positively and she plays it out in a manner sure to advance her expanding popularity.

The screen play by William Ludwig, from the stories of Vivien R. Bretherton employing the characters created by Aurania Rouverol, centers around "Andy Hardy" and sets forth in convincing and frequently convulsing detail his social dilemma encountered when he learns his best girl cannot go with him to the country club dance. To earn eight dollars with which to complete purchase of a used car, he bargains with "Beezy," a pal, to date "Cynthia," "Beezy's" girl, by way of saving her for him. "Betsy," visiting next door and infatuated with "Andy," aids him in his planning, but he finds girl estranged, "Cynthia" enraged, his car, Tux and top hat at hand, but no girl to escort. "Betsy" comes to his rescue, proves the sensation of the evening, and returns him next morning to the romantic custody of his steady girl.

Young Mr. Rooney's thriving talent reaches full blossom in this stanza. Mr. Stone and the other members of the Hardy family are their accustomed indelible selves. Miss Turner plays an emotional redhead with impressive conviction. Gene Reynolds, as the neighbor boy whose "ham" radio set figures in an extraordinary sequence, is an unforgettable personality.

Army Girl

(Republic)

Romantic Melodrama

Dealing with the romances, dramas, jealousies and loves of military life, this ambitious Republic feature is thoroughly an army story—but decided not a war story. It makes good on Republic's promise of major calibre production.

Sentimentality is prominent in both the love theme of the story and in the background of the picture, which tells of mechanized tanks succeeding the mounted cavalry in the Army. Republic recognizes the passing of the horse cavalry by dedicating the picture to the men and mounts who often have been glorified in song, story and pictures.

As "the old order passes, yielding place to new," the production tells in a convincing spirit of the clash of human temperaments, loves and ideals.

Dike Conger, an Army captain, and Three Star Hennessy, a sergeant, arrive at a desert cavalry post with their tanks. The two are regarded by officers of the post and by troupers as jockies of beer cans.

In a thrill packed test, the tank proves itself to be superior to horses and, in a like manner, Dike proves himself the best man among the officers, including Captain Joe Schuyler, who are vying for the affections of Julie Armstrong, daughter of Colonel Armstrong. However, just as Dike and Julie discover they love each other, an order arrives at the post. It abolishes horses for tanks, retires Colonel Armstrong from command of the post and promotes Dike to the position.

Traditional loyalties collide with modernization and the love between Dike and Julie vanishes.

Despised by his fellow officers for having brought about the modernization that resulted in the death of their leader, Dike faces almost certain conviction on a charge of negligence. At the crucial moment, though, Captain Schuyler remembers his oath to always be an officer and a gentleman and forces Sergeant Harry Ross to confess that he was responsible for the fatalities through tampering with the tank.

Dike is exonerated, discovered by Julie to the only man she can love as much as her deceased father, and recognized by fellow officers and troupers as being the herald of a new day and new glories for the cavalry.

Romance, drama, thrills, suspense and comedy are blended, giving the leading and supporting players an opportunity to register commendable performances.

This realistic story will be understood by both mass and specialized audiences.

Pathe Parade, No. 6

(RKO Radio)

Boxing Subject

More closely approaching the format of a sport reel than any other release in the "Parade" series, this one picturizes the background of fights and fighters. Starting with a lively street fight it shows the supervised training and gruelling work necessary before boxers are eligible for public contests. Supervised by Frederick Ullman, Jr. Prepared by Frank Donovan. Running time, 10 minutes.

Management of 5 Theatres In Shanghai Consolidated

The operation and management of Shanghai's four first-run theatres, the Grand, Nanking, Metropol and Cathay, and one second-run house, the Rialto, have been taken over by a newly organized American corporation, Asia Theatres, Inc.

A. R. Hager is president of the corporation, which was formed for the express purpose of taking over the management of the theatres. The directors are Mr. Hager, T. J. Holt, Percy Chu, N. F. Allman, R. K. Butler, S. S. Franklin, W. Imin Hsu, Luther M. Jee, Jordan D. Liang and George Sellett.

WET STEPS UNCOVERED, EXHIBITOR HELD LIABLE

Use of Uncarpeted Marble Stairs in Inclement Weather Banned by Rochester Court Ruling

A new source of potential litigation for theatre owners was opened by two decisions published this week, when Justice Tompkins, of the city court of Rochester, virtually banned the use of uncarpeted marble steps during wet weather by a ruling that "wet marble treads have a peril peculiar to themselves," and the decision was affirmed by a three to two vote of the Appellate Division of the New York Supreme Court. Both decisions appear in the advance sheets of 3 N. Y. Supplement (2d Series) at pages 956 and 1,023 respectively.

Jennie Freedman, a patron, was awarded a judgment of $267 against Clinton Court Corporation, owners of Loew's Rochester theatre, by the verdict.

The plaintiff contended, for her first charge of negligence, that the use of smooth marble violated section 604 of the Building Code, which reads, "Treads and landings shall be constructed and maintained in a manner to prevent persons from slipping there." Justice Tompkins upheld the legality of marble steps, and said that "the use of marble in the construction of this stairway was not in and of itself negligent." But, he continued:

"Concededly, when these marble stairs were wet, they were slippery. Unquestionably, slippery stairs may cause a user to slip, and, slipping, to fall with possible injury.

"Did the defendant perform fully the duty it owed the plaintiff, its patron, to use reasonable diligence in protecting her from a manifest danger, known to it? Carpeting is used for such protection. It is a fact that may not be denied that smooth, wet marble is far more liable to cause slipping than is marble covered with matting or carpets, or even corrugated marble. Carpeting is used in another Rochester theatre. It does not appear that it was not feasible to use it in defendant's theatre."

Signs on Stairway

The defense urged the court to consider the fact that floors were mopped every half hour, that signs had been placed at the stairway, and that 7,000 patrons had used the stairway without injury on the day of the plaintiff's accident.

Concerning these arguments, the court said:

"The defendant knew that this marble stairway was slippery when wet. It caused it to be mopped every half hour, yet it did nothing to warn its patrons of the danger it sought to assuage. It had signs 'Watch Your Step.' Descending a stairway is always attended with some danger. This is common knowledge. Those who went up this stairway on their way to the balcony knew they must later go down. 'Watch Your Step' proclaimed a danger they already knew. It did not, however, apprise them of the danger attending wet and slippery marble. This menace is not common, everyday knowledge. But a small part of movie patrons live in houses with marble stairways. All know from daily experience the danger of descending any stairway, but they cannot be charged with knowledge that wet marble treads have a peril peculiar to themselves. Had the defendant erected conspicuous signs bearing this lenged, 'These Steps When Wet Are Slippery and Dangerous,' those who saw it would have been timely warned.

"That there is no other reported accident among the 7,000 patrons does not establish there was not a known and preventable danger when this plaintiff slipped on these stairs. They may not have been wet when the greater portion of the 7,000 used them. Then there is probably less danger when a crowd is moving slowly down, than when a single person descends. Pollock (the manager) testified that there had been other accidents on these stairs. Even had there been no similar accident before, it is no complete defense, if it might in reason have been anticipated.

Upheld by Appellate Division

"In the winter season a known condition of danger existed. Defendant sought to alleviate it by mopping. The marble treads were left still moist, wet, and slippery. It carpeted the floor of the promenade. The marble stairway was left bare. Carpeting would have remedied the slipperiness of the wet marble. A conspicuous sign proclaiming the danger would have put its patrons on their guard. Defendant neither cured the danger nor warned its patrons of its existence. In the exercise of that reasonable diligence to secure the safety of those from whose presence it profited, it should have done one or the other. It failed to perform the duty it owed its patrons. That is negligence."

The appellate division rendered no opinion when it upheld the judgments but noted that it did so on the authority of the case of David and Rose Richman vs. Stanley Mark Strand Corporation and Warner Brothers, Inc., decided by the appellate division on January 19, 1934 by a four to one vote (241 A.D. 633) and subsequently affirmed by the Court of Appeals on December 31, 1934 (261 N. Y. 494).

In the Richman case, the plaintiff entered the aisle of the theatre during a performance. The concrete floor was covered with a rubber composition and was mopped every ten or fifteen minutes to take up moisture and dirt brought in by patrons. Three fixtures on the side wall, each with two bulbs, were lighted, in addition to the usual exit lights required by law. Nevertheless, the highest court in New York State sustained a verdict for the patron.

That the rulings were not altogether in line with previous cases, in stairways for other types of business, is evidenced in some measure by the fact that both cases were decided by a divided court.

In view of the decisions, however, it would appear that ordinary precautions, such as the usual signs, mopping, lights, etc., are insufficient to guard against law suits. A prominent sign, warning of unusual danger, is hardly practicable. A non-slippery covering is apparently required.

Not Showing Junior Programs

In a story entitled "Theatres to Be Asked to Stage Child Shows," which appeared in Motion Picture Herald in the June 18th issue the Plaza theatre of Asheville, N. C., was listed as holding performances sponsored by Junior Programs, Inc. The statement was incorrect. The Plaza has not shown the programs.

"Snow White" on Way to All-time Domestic Gross

Walt Disney's "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" is on its way to an all-time high domestic gross with 7,000 contracts and a billing of approximately $3,400,000, according to estimates from current business.

Produced independently, with exhibition contracts subject to the producer's approval, "Snow White" was free of distribution entanglements and went out entirely on its own.

The selling started with the announcement that the picture would be distributed on 50-50 terms and included such other stipulations as single feature restrictions, double playing time, weekend dates, minimum admission of 15 cents and minimum guarantee of $50.

Concessions on one side or the other resulted ultimately in deals in all but four important situations. RKO sold away from the Saenger circuit of New Orleans when E. V. Richards insisted on a flat rental. The Griffith circuit, Oklahoma and Texas, controlling a majority of the towns in which it operates, refused to play percentage terms and RKO sold where there was opposition. The long circuit, New Mexico, which has since become part of the Griffith circuit, bought the picture before the consolidation.

The Mullin and Pinanski circuit, in New England, held out against RKO's single bill stipulation. The circuit played the picture in its 14 single feature houses, but RKO sold away in the rest of the territory. The St. Louis Amusement Company, operating second and subsequent run theatres in St. Louis, refused to buy the picture on anything except flat rental. RKO sold around them, although Fanchon and Marco played the picture first run there. "Snow White" is billing at the rate of approximately $100,000 rentals per week. Although it is nearing the 26th week of release, at which time high billings normally drop off sharply, the delay in closing many important situations will extend its period of active revenue beyond the average.

Subsequent run engagements started July 1st in Los Angeles, and the neighborhood theatres in Detroit have still to show the picture. The subsequent run situation in Chicago has been delayed by exhibitor resistance to the demand for Saturday and and Sunday playing time, but dates are now being set in that area.

New Plays Course in Fall

Theresa Helburn, director of the Bureau of New Plays, said this week that the Bureau's advanced practical course in playwriting will commence early in September, and will be conducted by John Gassner, Lee Strasberg, Johnny Johnson and Cheryl Crawford. The Bureau is sponsored by Columbia, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Paramount, RKO, 20th Century-Fox, Universal and Warner Brothers.

Buy Superior Cleveland Branch

Leroy P. Langford and E. H. Forbes have bought out the Cleveland branch of Superior Theatre Supply Company, including the lease in the Warner Building and the complete stock, from Arthur F. Morrone of Pittsburgh. Mr. Morrone will confine his activities to Pittsburgh and surrounding territory. Mr. Langford and Mr. Forbes are operating under the name Theatre Service and Equipment Company with offices in Cleveland and Detroit.

IN THE CUTTING ROOM

My Lucky Star

(20th Century-Fox)

Romance and Spectacle

The selection of selling angles whereby "My Lucky Star" may be marketed successfully should not be too much of a strain on any exhibitor's mental processes. The story it will tell is made of popular stuff. It is simply a collegiate romance, with comedy complications, embellished by music and with spectacular ice skating replacing the customary dancing.

Planned to be a surpassing successor to "One in a Million," "Thin Ice" and "Happy Landing," all of which were MOTION PICTURE HERALD Box Office Champions, the photoplay will feature Sonja Henie, seventh among the 10 leading box office personalities,

The picture will provide the star with a new leading man as Richard Greene, seen lately in "Four Men and a Prayer," steps into the spot previously occupied by Don Ameche and Tyrone Power. Also in the featured supporting cast are Joan Davis, Cesar Romero and Buddy Ebsen. Other important roles are filled by Arthur Treacher, Billy Gilbert, George Barbier, Louise Hovick and Elisha Cook, Jr.

The film's big spectacle feature will be the presentation of an ice carnival in a department store. Produced directly under the guidance of Darryl F. Zanuck, "My Lucky Star" is being directed by Roy Del Ruth, maker of "Happy Landing" and such other glamorous musicals as the 1936 and 1938 editions of "Broadway Melody," "Born to Dance" and "Thanks a Million." Based on an original story written by Karl Tunberg and Don Ettlinger, the screen play is credited to Harry Tugend and Jack Yellen. Mack Gordon and Harry Revel composed the music and lyrics which includes seven special numbers.

Release date not set.

Painted Desert

(RKO Radio)

Action Adventure

"Painted Desert" is based on an original story by Jack Cunningham. The present screen version was transcribed by John Rathmell and Oliver Drake. "Painted Desert" was made once before in 1930 by RKO-Pathe. At that time there was a minor player by the name of Clark Gable in the cast and William Boyd, now "Hopalong Cassidy," was the hero.

George O'Brien will be the star of the show. The girl will be Laraine Johnson, who was the heroine in "Border G Man." As a bit of information this picture will mark the first time that O'Brien has had the same leading lady twice in a row.

The supporting cast will feature singing cowboy Ray Whitley, who was with O'Brien in "Border G Man" and "Gun Law." It will also include Stanley Fields, now prominent in "Algiers," Fred Kohler seen lately in "Blockade" and "The Buccaneer," Max Wagner, Harry Cording, Lee Shumway, who is playing the role earlier occupied by Gable, Lloyd Ingraham, Maude Allen and William V. Mong.

The third George O'Brien picture which Bert Gilroy has produced for RKO-Radio, "Border G Man," is being directed by David Howard.

Release date: August 12, 1938.

The Missing Guest

(Universal)

Spooky Mystery

No new thing is this idea of having a newspaper man inject himself into a weird series of mysterious murders. Neither is it new, that there might be romance in the picture, to have the girl in the case to be first antagonistic but eventually friendly to and cooperative with the hero.

As the fabric is commonplace, showmanship ingenuity whereby it is anticipated the production will assume commercial value commensurate with its entertainment potentialities must, of necessity, center about what box office names will be in it. The question is answered by a census of the cast. Therein will be found Paul Kelly, lately in "Nurse from Brooklyn" and "Torchy Blane in Panama" and Constance Moore of "Wives Under Suspicion" and "State Patrol" in the principal roles. Among others who will participate are William Lundigan, seen in many Universals, Edward Stanley, recently transported from the state and the journeymen players Patrick Kelly, Selmer Jackson, Florence Wix, George Cooper, William Wayne, now in "The Amazing Doctor Clitterhouse" and Guy Usher.

Release date: August 12, 1938.

The Road to Reno

Marital Mix-ups

About a year ago, Universal announced that it had signed Hope Hampton to a contract. For the benefit of a newer generation of exhibitors, it might be stated that in the days before sound, Miss Hampton was one of the screen's foremost personalities. Retiring from picture affairs, she went on to further fame as a musical comedy and grand opera headliner in this country and abroad. "The Road To Reno" will mark her debut in a talking picture.

The story related in the picture is one that deals with a love that rediscovered itself.

The film will have a western background and Universal and producer Edmund Grainger took more than usual care in selecting the supporting cast for Miss Hampton's returning picture. Randolph Scott who cut his screen teeth on westerns and recently was in "Rebecca Of Sunnybrook Farm" and "The Texans," is the story's problem husband. The conniving "other woman" in the case is Glenda Farrell, while the other man is Alan Marshall who was important in "Parnell," "Conquest" and "I Met My Love Again." Helen Broderick, featured in "The Rage Of Paris," is Scott's plain-spoken aunt, happy only when she is trying to straighten out the kinks in other peoples' business. Principal comedy character in the story which has much action, dialogue and situation comedy is David Oliver last in "You're A Sweetheart."

The original I. A. R. Wylie story was adapted by Roy Chanslor and Adele Commandini and it is being directed by S. Sylvan Simon maker of "A Girl With Ideas," "Prescription For Romance," "Nurse From Brooklyn" and "The Crime Of Dr. Hallett."

Release date: Sept. 9, 1938 (tentative).

The Young in Heart

(UA - Selznick International)

Comedy

David O. Selznick is inaugurating his 1938-1939 production program with a comedy. His ambition is that the season's output will result in a series of pictures fully as entertaining and as commercially profitable to all concerned as were those of the past year which witnessed the delivery of such films as "Tom Sawyer," "The Prisoner of Zenda," "Nothing Sacred" and "A Star Is Born."

"The Young in Heart" is a situation comedy story. Its humor is derived from the unique but natural conditions which a bizarre family erect for themselves or find themselves in. The Carltons live by their wits. They have no character, a moral status which worries them not a wit.

The thematic parent of "The Young in Heart" is I. A. R. Wylie's novel which was published serially in the Saturday Evening Post. It is being directed toward screen realism by capable director Richard Wallace.

From a standpoint of name values there is nothing wrong with the principal and featured player roster. It will offer Janet Gaynor in her first appearance since "A Star Is Born," Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., now in "Having a Wonderful Time" and "Rage of Paris," "Paulette Goddard, who made her screen debut with Chaplin in "Modern Times," Roland Young, remembered for "Topper," Billie Burke, newcomer Richard Carlson and noted old stage trouper Minnie Dupress.

Release date: July 29, 1938.

Paris Honeymoon

(Paramount)

Comedy-Musical Romance

Should one visit the set where it is being made, he could not fail but note the spirit of team work that has gripped the entire cast and crew which is producing "Paris Honeymoon." The whole crowd senses that it has a good story with which to work, realize that there is a capable troupe of actors and that they are working with a technical crew and director in whom they have confidence.

The story being filmed is funny. Once lucky, the hero lets superstition guide his life.

Frank Butler and Don Hartman who collaborated on Bing Crosby's "Waikiki Wedding" as well as the current "Tropic Holiday," "Champagne Waltz" and "The Princess Comes Across" adapted Angela Sherwood's original story. It is being directed by Frank Tuttle who guided Crosby in "Waikiki Wedding" and "Dr. Rythm."

The featured and supporting cast is made up of well known names. Franciska Gaal who made her screen debut in Cecil B. DeMille's "The Buccaneer" will be seen as the peasant girl. The other woman, who isn't "the other woman" as most pictures of conflicting romance have it is Shirley Ross. The menace in the yarn is Akim Tamiroff and the trio of comedians responsible for most of the hilarity are Edward Everett Horton, Ben Blue and Georges Renaud. Other players are Rafaela Ottiano and Keith Kenneth.

Release date: Sept. 23, 1938.

LOEW NETS 8 MILLIONS; EQUALS $4.80 A SHARE

Columbia Grants Three Officers Options on 25,000 Shares; Rogers Maj. Profit $139,788

Loew's, Inc., had a net profit of $8,352,675 after expenses, subsidiaries' preferred dividends, depreciation and taxes, for the 40 weeks ended June 9th, according to the company's earnings statement which was made public this week.

The profit, equal to $4.80 per share on the 1,599,053 no-par shares of common stock and to $61.09 on the preferred stock, was $3,362,047 less than the $11,714,722 profit made during the 40-week period ended June 3, 1937. The profit in the 1937 period was equal to $85.68 a share on the preferred stock and to $7.07 a share on 1,560,826 shares of common stock.

For the 12 weeks ended June 9, 1938, the indicated net profit, based on a comparison of the company's reports for the 28-week period ended March 17th, and the 40-week ended June 9th, was $1,864,997 equal to $1.04 a share on common stock, comparing with $3,108,592 or $1.81 a share on common for the 12 weeks ended June 3, 1937.

The comparative earning statement for the company follows:

	40 weeks ended June 9, 1938	40 weeks ended June 3, 1937
Company's share of operating profit after subsidiaries' preferred dividends	$12,907,877	$17,018,081
Depreciation and taxes.	4,555,202*	5,303,359*
Company's share of net profit	8,352,675*	11,714,722*

Without provision for surtaxes on undistributed profits.*

The board of directors of Loew's on July 6th, declared a quarterly dividend of $1.62½ on the outstanding $6.50 cumulative preferred stock payable August 15th, to stockholders of record on July 29th.

Columbia Grants Executives Options

Options on a total of 25,000 shares of Columbia stock will be issued to three officers of the company at $13.875 a share if the plan is approved by the stockholders and authorization to list the additional common and voting trust certificates is obtained, it was disclosed this week in a report filed by the company with the New York Curb Exchange.

The options will go to Samuel J. Briskin, vice-president in charge of production; A. Montague, general sales manager, and Abe Schneider, treasurer. Mr. Briskin's option is for 10,000 shares, 7,500 of which may be acquired up to August 10, 1943, and the remainder between June 10, 1940 and August 10, 1943. The options issued to Mr. Montague and Mr. Schneider are for 7,500 shares each, the first expiring August 10, 1941, and the second, August 10, 1943.

Majestic Profit $139,788

Rogers Majestic Corporation, Ltd., issued its financial report in Toronto this week, showing that its net profit of $139,788 was the highest for the company in the last seven years. The profit in the previous year was $129,651. The net for the year ended March 31, 1938, was equal to 65 cents per share on the combined A and B stock, compared with 60 cents last year.

Major Withdraws Statement

The Securities and Exchange Commission this week announced withdrawal of the registration statement of Major Film Productions, Inc., of Los Angeles. The company, of which Fred Church is president, filed its statement in October, 1934, and it went into effect November 14th, of that year. The withdrawal was requested June 28th.

Stock Placed on Market

The Jackman Color and Process Corporation of Hollywood this week placed 50,000 shares of common stock on the market at $2.50 per share. The corporation will engage in the color processing of pictures and the creating and photographing and processing of special effects used in picture production.

Triple A Purchase Of Federal Play Sets a Precedent

The recently formed Triple A Productions which will produce ". . . one-third of a nation . . ." with Sylvia Sidney for Paramount release, discovered when it became interested in the Federal Theatre play that there was no existing precedent for purchase of Government property for individual profit making enterprises.

Negotiations for purchase were begun through the Guild's Committee for Federal Writers' Publications, Inc., formed two years ago to provide a publishing outlet for the works of federal project writers. The committee is now empowered to do the same thing for the Federal Theatre Project as for WPA writers.

The Government gives the guild's committee permission to sell writings by persons on WPA salaries, but the bid for ". . . one-third of a nation . . ." by a film company was the first time any project entered the competitive market.

When the legal complications were straightened out the guild's committee, headed by Morris Ernst, made a contract with Triple A which then purchased the play for $5,000 and a percentage of possible profits from the picture.

Harold Orlob, president of Triple A, borrowed the money from himself to finance the picture. Through a personal loan from Mr. Orlob to Triple A, he received 136 shares of common stock in the corporation. The remainder of the 200 shares issued was allocated to associates Dudley Murphy, who will direct the picture; Paul C. Mooney, Bernard Steels, Emil Katzka and W. S. McKay, who are the only stockholders.

English Director Sails for Home

Alfred Hitchcock, noted English director, sailed for London Wednesday after a visit to New York and Hollywood. While on the coast Mr. Hitchcock was signed by David O. Selznick to direct "Titanic," which will be placed in production in the fall.

On Tuesday evening Mr. Hitchcock was interviewed by Otis Ferguson over Station WNYC, New York. The subject of the broadcast was "Melodrama on the Screen" and was sponsored by the National Board of Review. Mr. Ferguson is film editor of the New Republic.

Mr. Hitchcock returned to New York from Hollywood Monday. He said that "B" pictures, made on limited budgets, and often representing material that is not considered sufficiently worthly to merit an "A" picture expenditure, might achieve new importance if made from experimental stories.

He mentioned the O. Henry and Edgar Allan Poe stories as in that category. "The O. Henry stories with the plot and ending which are not the conventional formula stuff and the Poe thrillers, the horrific stories, would fit admirably into such a program and I, for one, should like to see the results," he said.

Mr. Hitchcock was impressed by the quality and quantity of exploitation and publicity of American films. He said the results were immediately discernible here and could be copied to advantage in England.

Mr. Hitchcock's whose latest film for GB will be released in this country soon, is best remembered for his melodramatic pictures, "The 39 Steps," "Secret Agent," and "The Man Who Knew Too Much."

THE KEYSTONE OF YOUR FUTURE

PRINTED IN U.S.A.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Noting publication in this department the other week of a description of the "Crypt of Civilization" as dedicated by David Sarnoff at Oglethorpe University, Georgia, Dr. T. K. Peters, Director of Archives at the University, passes along an interesting tale behind the collection and sealing in the vault of the various motion pictures and documents which are supposed to be preserved for 6,000 years for posterity's study of a cross-section of our life today.

Dr. Thornwell Jacobs, of the University, in the course of a discussion with Dr. Peters, wondered whether English would be spoken when the crypt is opened 6,000 years hence, adding that if it was no longer the language, all of the work and expense of preservation would be in vain. So Dr. Peters said he would make a machine to teach the English language. He set about the task and evolved a simple apparatus, merely combining an old Mutoscope, contributed by International Mutoscope Company, with a phonograph turn-table geared to the Mutoscope in such a way as to turn in synchronization when a crank is used.

A person looking into the machine and turning the crank at the same time will see a man holding up an object, as for example, an apple. The man in the image will then pronounce the word, while the printed word will appear underneath the object. The machine was loaded with all of the necessary vocabulary to reconstruct the English language.

The Mutoscope, therefore, with its phonograph and crank, might represent 6,000 years hence the key to forgotten English, if it is forgotten, much as the Rosetta Stone, discovered in Egypt in 1799, gave scholars the key to the forgotten hieroglyphics in which the ancient language of Egypt was written. All the knowledge of the Egyptians had been lost for thousands of years until the Rosetta Stone was painstakingly deciphered. The people of the future, then, might be saved all of the trouble of reconstructing the English language by a motion picture device invented by Coleman Sellers in 1861 and adapted for the purpose of reconstruction in the year 8113 A.D.

Howard Hughes Of "Hell's Angels"

THE climax to activities in aeronautics which have kept him from motion picture production since he made "Scarface," in 1932, was reached by Howard Hughes this week in his record-breaking world-girdling flight in his "World's Fair of 1939" flying laboratory.

Heir to the many millions made by his father, Howard R., in the Hughes Tool Company, Texas, and in Texas oil fields, Mr. Hughes first turned attention to Hollywood, when only 22, making "Two Arabian Knights," in 1927. His most pretentious production, "Hell's Angels," steeped in planes—$4,000,000 worth—was nearly three years in the making. And he is reputed to have gotten back every nickel.

"Hell's Angels" was the only production ever to have two big, gala, arc-light, top-hat-and-ermine premieres simultaneously, opening on the same night at the Criterion and the Globe, on Broadway, after Mr. Hughes had entertained the press and the trade at a 72-hour continuous-running cocktail party, taking a large section of the Hotel Astor for the purpose. That was in the old "speakeasy" days, and the young moneyman bought out three complete bars, lock, stock and barrel, in nearby Times Square, transferring the bars, beverages and fixtures to the party.

His "Hell's Angels" was the beginning of Jean Harlow, and in his "Two Arabian Knights," Louis Wolheim first gained recognition as a character actor and Lewis Milestone as a director. "Hell's Angels" was in the making so long that the Hollywood players appearing therein began to demand release from their commitment, complaining that Hollywood would no longer remember them by the time the picture was finished.

"Who's Who in America" lists Howard Robard Hughes as a capitalist, gives lengthy recognition to his standing in aeronautics and in Texas tool and oil fields, barely mentions his motion picture propensities, merely citing "Hell's Angels" in passing.

Howard Hughes, holder of the world's land airplane speed record, for 352 miles per hour, is the nephew of Rupert Hughes, the writer. He was born on Christmas Eve, in 1904, in Houston, and like many a son of Texas, is a lank.

Grover Whalen hasn't received any word as yet on what the motion picture chiefs are going to do to put something into his New York World's Fair to symbolize the screen, but this week Grover did sign up some other amusement concessions, 19 of them in fact, including a burlesque bull fight, an "infant incubator show," "with at least 50 incubator babies"; a "live monsters" concession, with a lot of snakes; a "phantom ghost" show, and another for and in behalf of skinless frankfurters. Also—probably making Sam Goldwyn envious—Billy Rose is going to put on a spectacular musical extravaganza tableau, to cost $500,000, in a building costing $1,750,000 with 1,000 girls, on a stage 200 feet wide in a theatre seating 10,000—twice the width of the Music Hall stage and almost twice its capacity.

And now India assumes the position of the offended and joins in the foreign attack against our U. S. motion picture companies. Writing in Bombay, in Filmindia, Hindu trade publication, a gentleman of apparent high sensitivity, who signs his monthly articles, "Judas," says: "Some distributors of foreign pictures have yet to learn a lot of business methods and they must unlearn a lot. Some of these boobies do not yet know how to conduct press shows of their pictures. Indian producers can give them pointers in this department, as the press shows given by local producers are heavily sprinkled with courtesy.

"I was invited to a press show by a local office of foreign films. But there was no one to receive the pressmen. The press people were left to the tender mercies of a couple of doorkeepers. The show was due to start at 12 noon. It actually began at 12:40. The fans in the room were switched off and there was no one to whom an appeal could be made to switch them on. Even the theatre was not represented by anyone who was intelligent, and to add insult to injury, the wrong picture was shown. America distributors are just damn fools."

Our New York friend, Peter Spilios Harrison, by the way, is some pumpkins as a regular contributor to Filmindia. They call him the "world known critic."

After an absence of two years Harold Lloyd returns to a Broadway screen this week in "Professor Beware," at the Paramount. Lloyd has made millions as a screen comedian.

Time was when, working as an extra in "Samson and Delilah," at Universal City, some 20-odd years ago, he met Hal Roach, then a young man with an ambition to direct. Roach had just inherited $3,000 and plunged into production with Lloyd playing leads. "Just Nuts" was their first offering and from it came a contract with Pathe. That allowed Lloyd to make enough money to indulge his fancy for fancy striped silk shirts.

UNITED ARTISTS SPEEDS CORPORATE ALIGNMENT

Renewal of Arrangement with Selznick and New Contract for Schaefer Discussed

Maurice A. Silverstone, chairman of the executive committee of United Artists, returned to New York Tuesday from London and brought to a specially convened directors' meeting a resume of world business conditions that stressed the continued importance of international markets to the business of the company.

Mr. Silverstone said that his company is willing to add other producers to the company's roster but emphasized that no additional releasing deals would affect plans to release 30 films in the 1938-39 season. The company, he pointed out, has assured itself of product by signing all its producers to eight-year distribution contracts.

At the board meeting Tuesday the renewal of David O. Selznick's releasing contract and a new contract with George J. Schaefer as general manager of distribution were expected to be taken up.

Mr. Silverstone left New York Thursday for Hollywood. He is expected to continue negotiations of the Selznick matter there and to resume negotiations on Mr. Schaefer's contract when he returns to New York. He said he was going to discuss commitments with all producers.

Election of a board chairman and president to succeed Dr. A. H. Giannini, who withdrew last month, has been deferred until fall.

The executive chairman said of the general revision of assignments in the publicity and advertising department announced by the company this week, that before leaving for England a few weeks ago, he had authorized the negotiations which culminated in appointment on Monday of Lynn Farnol as director of advertising and publicity, on a three-year contract.

The company's contemplated profit sharing plan for its producers is said to have been delayed by the opposition of Charles Chaplin.

Mr. Silverstone's contract is understood to have been signed for five years at $2,500 a week. A provision that barred him from board membership, and thus from the presidency, is said to have been eliminated.

With Donahue & Coe Three Years

Mr. Farnol, in charge of film and theatrical advertising and publicity accounts for Donahue & Co., Inc., for the last three and one-half years, succeeds Monroe W. Greenthal, who assumes the post of director of exploitation and who, in addition, will be in charge of United Artists trade paper advertising. Mr. Greenthal held the position of advertising and publicity director for the last three years.

Ben Washer, former exploitation director, has been placed in charge of United Artists publicity. Meyer Beck, who has handled that post for several years, will continue in the department as assistant to Mr. Washer.

The appointments are effective as of July 18th, or as soon thereafter as Mr. Farnol is able to conclude his affairs at Donahue & Coe. While associated with the advertising firm, Mr. Farnol handled the accounts of the Music Hall and the United Artists producers, Samuel Goldwyn, Walter Wanger, Edward Small and Alexander Korda.

The eight-year distribution contracts, he said, are in effect with Mr. Goldwyn, Mr. Korda, Douglas Fairbanks, Mary Pickford, Charles Chaplin, Walter Wanger, Edward Small and Hal Roach.

His observation that the company would be willing to sign additional "great producers" was made after he had said a releasing deal with Herbert Wilcox, British producer, had been discussed informally. However, he added, any deals for additional films will be for the 1939-40 season.

Members of the board residing in New York who acted at this week's board meeting and who constitute the new "eastern board" included James Mulvey, acting for Mr. Goldwyn; Ed Raftery, for Mr. Fairbanks; Charles Schwartz, for Mr. Chaplin; Dennis F. O'Brien, general counsel for Mary Pickford; Mr. Silverstone, Emanuel Silverstone, for Alexander Korda and Mr. Schaefer.

Named Producer of Trailers

John Myers, formerly studio publicity head at Alexander Korda's Denham studios, has been appointed a producer of special London Film trailers and also will act as chief of the exploitation staff. His studio publicity post will be filled by John Ware Well, writer.

Marchetti to Italy to Sell Hollywood Talent

Roger Marchetti, Los Angeles attorney "identified with prominent motion picture interests" in Hollywood, is at the Plaza Hotel, New York, until sailing Saturday on the Conti di Savoia for Italy, "where he will negotiate with bankers and motion picture companies for the production of American directed films in Italian studios," according to a statement to the press from the Plaza Hotel press department.

Mr. Marchetti, it was said, will offer the services of Hollywood producers, stars, directors and writers. Two versions of each picture would be made, one in Italian and the other in English, both to be financed by the Italians. "As no money can be withdrawn from Italy, the English version of the picture would represent the payment for American assistance," he said.

Mr. Marchetti is carrying letters from Frank L. Shaw, Mayor of Los Angeles, to the Governor of Rome and the Italian Minister of Popular Culture. In addition to his film mission, he will represent the Southern California Academy of Criminology at the first congress of the International Criminology Society in Rome early in October.

Feld Joins Universal; Executive Assistant

Milton H. Feld joined Universal this week as executive assistant and will work with Clifford Work and Matthew Fox in administering studio management.

Mr. Feld for two years was with Twentieth Century-Fox as assistant to Darryl Zanuck and also as producer. For 12 years he was in charge of theatre operations for the Publix circuit.

Atlas Corporation Considers Italian Film Production

Atlas Corporation, which has investments in Paramount and RKO Radio, has considered the advisability of engaging in film production in Italy in conjunction with the Italian government in order to utilize its blocked financial resources in that country, it was indicated this week by Floyd Odlum, president of Atlas, on his arrival in New York from a European trip.

While not giving any particulars, Mr. Odlum admitted that "there may have been some negotiations along this line." He added, however, that "nothing has been finalized."

The Atlas investments in Italy, Mr. Odlum said, were his principal concern while abroad. His company is an equal partner with the Italian government in IRI, which, he said, is the Italian Reconstruction Institute, and corresponds, roughly, to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation in this country. IRI, however, has investments in a variety of private enterprises and does not make loans, as does the RFC.

Mr. Odlum said that action on the Atlas option to purchase the balance of Radio Corporation of America's holdings of RKO securities would be taken within the next week or two. He indicated that a decision had not been made yet as to whether the remainder of the holdings would be acquired or an extension of the option negotiated on the purchase of an additional one-twelfth of the RCA holdings for $500,000 cash, as provided for in the existing agreement.

Management changes in RKO will await the approval of the reorganization plan now before the federal court, he said.

"There have been no discussions about the future management setup or the constitution of the new board," Mr. Odlum said. "We have a plan before the court and the first step is to get it approved."

Mr. Odlum made this explanation in answer to a query concerning reports that Peter J. Rathvon, an associate of Atlas and the investment trust's representative in the RKO organization, is slated to become an important figure in the management of the company following the reorganization, that Leo Spitz has expressed a desire to return to his law practice in Chicago and Mr. Rathvon may succeed him as president.

The latter formerly was a partner in Atlas, but now has his own investment trust. He is acting in an advisory capacity for Atlas in the reorganization.

Mr. Odlum said business conditions are changing for the better. "I am more optimistic about conditions here and abroad than when I left," he said. Accompanied by Mrs. Odlum he visited Switzerland, France and Germany after a stay in Italy.

Brooks With Eastern Service Studio

Walter H. Brooks, former press representative for Eddie Dowling and manager of the St. James theatre, New York legitimate house, in 1934, has been named publicity director for Eastern Service Studio and Audio Productions. Mr. Brooks previous to his appointment was the executive assistant to the New York State director of the National Emergency Council.

EXHIBITORS SEE "HITLERIZATION" IN LONDON THEATRE REGULATIONS

CEA in Full Cry Against New Restrictions by Council on Admission Price Fixing and Adjustment of Seating Plans

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Wearied with the tenuous and tortuous tussle with the distributors over the seemingly insoluble problem of film hire, exasperated by their own riddles of corporative disunity and redundancy, disillusioned by the Government's inaction over the theatre tax, British exhibitors now find themselves in the shadow of a bitter and looming battle for their own trading rights, a battle, the first grim hint of which has come with the London County Council's imposition of rigid and arbitrary conditions controlling the fixing of cinema admission prices and the adjustment of seating.

At the moment, the battle looms only over London. The localization deludes nobody in exhibitor circles, for it is the guiding policy of most English municipalities dealing with theatre and licensing matters, that what London does to-day, most of them should seek to do tomorrow. The trade, in brief, is nervously aware that the situation may lead to a gradually insistent process of Hitlerization, with anti-social results, not only in limiting the free trading of the picture house proprietor, but in lessening and limiting the number of cheap seats available for the toiling proletariat.

The London County Council have given notice that as from January 1st, 1939, every picture house under their licensing control will be compelled to display prominently in the vestibule a lighted plan of the seats available, together with the prices charged for them. This plan must not be varied throughout the day. Further, while any seat is unoccupied no patron wanting to occupy it shall be kept waiting longer than is reasonable." Finally, in the auditorium itself, notices are to be exhibited showing precisely the position of the seats, and the prices charged for them.

Complaints Started Investigation

This surprisingly arbitrary regulation, not the least surprising inasmuch as it is imposed by a democratic Council in which the Labor party has a majority, comes as a sequel to the incident recorded some months back in MOTION PICTURE HERALD, in which complaint was made by a patron against the Curzon cinema, Mayfair. It was stated at the time by Reginald Stamp, chairman of the entertainments committee, that he was going to investigate the situation, and would if necessary take drastic action. Since then, investigations have been carried out by the Council's officers, conversations have been held with the London branch of the CEA, and, this most significantly, and, contend exhibitors, most distressingly all, appeals have been made by Mr. Stamp in the columns of the daily press for comments and complaints from members of the paying public.

Now that the battle, even if for the time being only a London battle, has come directly to an open fight, the Exhibitors' Association have dived into their ammunition dump and trained their first artillery battery on the municipal dictatorship. Realizing that the struggle against the highly powertul and admittedly in general, enlightened and fairminded London County Council, is bound to be both long and arduous, they are choosing their tactics with the utmost discretion, but fully concerned that the action of the Council is a vital precedent affecting their liberties as traders, and not impossible of repetition throughout the country, they will not stop at the most drastic action.

It is the Council's contention that they are within their legal rights in imposing this obligation, but the CEA, equally convinced that the Council's powers under the Cinematograph Films Act—an act designed to insure public safety—have announced that a test case will be fought at the first opportunity and that the matter will be taken to the House of Lords if necessary.

Precedent Feared

It has not been lost upon the London exhibitors that the County Council, announcing their decision to introduce these management rules, contest the association's plea that "juggling" with theatre seats and manipulation of queues was exceptional and insist that "the practice was in operation in most parts of the country and indeed in the provinces." This significant phrase is regarded as a direct hint to other municipalities, a hint that would have ugly consequences if taken.

Professedly championing the cause of the man in the street, Mr. Stamp's committee state that they have received numerous complaints from patrons of cheap seats who were compelled to wait outside in the hope that they would be induced to pay higher prices. Following an appeal from Stamp to the press, letters, it is claimed, have rolled in complaining of abuses and demanding action. It is evident that the practice of varying, without notice, the prices of seats according to the demand and of endeavoring to induce patrons to take seats at higher prices than they originally intended to pay is, or has been, widespread.

Intrusion of Rights Claimed

It is certainly unusual for leading officers of a great municipality to canvass complaints through the press from members of the general public, instead of seeking to settle the matter with the collaboration of the traders concerned, and the CEA have not lost the opportunity of chiding Mr. Stamp for what they contend is neither dignified functioning nor even fair play. "An unusual and undesirable method of persuading the public that they are not getting a fair deal." Why were the complaints, they ask, not handed to them to deal with? And, anyway, how many do they represent out of the four and a half million patrons of London picture houses?

These polemical points, however, are less serious than the question the new rules raise of direct interference with the liberties of the picture house proprietor as a legitimate trader. The Council's action, firstly, it is claimed, undermines the confidence the consumer has in the provider of the commodity, but with even more sinister intent, it limits his freedom of action in selling that commodity, it seeks to interfere with the one law upon which trading is practicable, that of supply and demand. No other trade, it is believed, has such control exercised upon it. No other trade would tolerate it.

The first result which it would seem is inevitable is one which will have anti-social effects. In order to safeguard themselves exhibitors will be driven to decrease and limit the number of cheaper seats. Theatre seat prices will in fact be driven up, not by the wish of the exhibitors, but by the workings of an anti-social law imposed by a supposedly democratic Council.

Other entertainments, theatres, circuses, and concert halls, for instance, are without the scope of these new management rules, which are to apply exclusively to picture houses which here, for the most part, operate on a continuous performance basis.

The new rules will not be applied until the New Year. Between now and that date much may happen. It is certain that the battle will not be lost without a hard fight, for London realizes that it is in this instance suffering the first casualties in what may prove to be nation-wide war.

GB Unit in Pact with MGM

Under the terms of an agreement signed this week Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will distribute in England pictures made by Gainsborough, production subsidiary of Gaumont British. The product will be distributed in the United States by GB.

Pictures to be made under the new arrangement will star Jessie Matthews, Will Hay and Margaret Lockwood and the first release will be Alfred Hitchcock's recently completed "The Lady Vanishes." MGM will pay half the cost of production.

Metro officials in London said the deal would occasion no interruption in the company's British production program, already in progress, and it is believed in many quarters that the arrangement is to be used by the American company to add to its British schedule. Among the eight already released or on the schedule of MGM British, in addition to those now expected from Gainsborough, are: "A Yank at Oxford," "Citadel," "Goodbye, Mr. Chips," "And So Victoria," "Busman's Honeymoon," "Death on the Table," "The Missing Miniature," with Wallace Beery, and one untitled.

Labor Appeal Board Planned

An ultimate national agreement on wages and hours was foreshadowed in an agreement between the CEA and the National Association of Theatrical and Kine Employees to proceed with the formation of a national conciliation appeal board. In response to a request for collaboration the CEA instructed officers to draw up a constitution for submission to the General Council. The board would be solely an appeal body.

ITALY TO FINANCE BRITISH PRODUCTION

Under an agreement made between English interests and an Italian production organization, British films sponsored by Italian money are to be made in England in the near future. The new company, Anit Limited, is reported to have planned the production of twelve films during the coming year, four of which will be made in this country. The organization will also endeavor to distribute Italian films in Great Britain.

NOW BEING EDITED—HERBERT WILCOX'S—"THE GANG SHOW"

Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board of Twentieth Century-Fox Film, sailed Wednesday on the S.S. Normandie to meet Darryl F. Zanuck, vice-president, in Europe to make plans for the company's production abroad, particularly in England. At the French Line pier in New York on Mr. Schenck's departure were (left to right) Herman Wobber, new Fox general sales manager; Joseph Schenck; Charles J. McCarthy, director of advertising and publicity; Spyros Skouras, operating chief of Fox's National Theatres, and Nicholas Schenck, president of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Schenck, Zanuck See Business Rise

The press of two continents this week interviewed two of the top members of the executive staff of Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation—Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board, who was in New York, and Darryl F. Zanuck, vice-president in charge of production, in Paris—and from them gathered some optimistic views of film business indices, together with explanations of some of the operations of the company.

An analysis of the trend of business indices points to the 1938-39 season being the best for the industry since 1935, Mr. Schenck declared before sailing on Wednesday aboard the Normandie for Europe.

Mr. Schenck described his trip as a two-month vacation but while abroad he will confer with Mr. Zanuck and will approve details of the company's British production plans, which call for six films at a total expenditure of $4,000,000 in the next year.

Mr. Zanuck's predictions for the year were similar to Mr. Schenck's. "This year will be the greatest in history for the practice of showmanship," Mr. Zanuck said, calling upon exhibitors to make a greater effort in selling their shows to the public, in order to "keep pace with Hollywood's appreciation of the value of big pictures."

Mr. Schenck revealed that his company is not planning to purchase a studio in England and that it will continue to operate under the long term leases it holds on the facilities used by the company's English production unit.

He also denied London reports indicating discussions or negotiations of a merger of Gaumont British theatres with the Odeon circuit. Twentieth Century-Fox and Loew's hold a substantial interest in the GB circuit while United Artists owns 50 per cent of Odeon.

Mr. Schenck said no negotiations were underway for the acquisition by the United Artists Theatre Circuit of a large interest in the Fanchon & Marco theatres in St. Louis. He pointed out that as president of the UA circuit he would know if any negotiations were being held.

"Has F & M made an offer of any kind?" he was asked.

"They may have made us an offer," Mr. Schenck replied. "I guess they made an offer to everybody."

To support his plea for greater effort by exhibitors in selling pictures to the public, Mr. Zanuck pointed to the large expenditures being made by producers and declared that exploitation should be geared correspondingly.

"It is important that showmanship play a bigger part in our industry today than ever before," Mr. Zanuck said.

"Conservative figures," Mr. Zanuck continued, "now place the weekly attendance in the United States at approximately 89 to 90 million persons—a healthy advance over last year. Any student of theatre receipts will recognize that this tremendous gain is the result of concentration on bigger films.

"A quick survey of receipts proved that the bigger pictures are playing to capacity crowds while the unimportant ones are merely holding their own.

"Of greater significance also is that we have learned to forget traditional taboos. We don't frighten at the prospect of war pictures, costume dramas or deep sociological problems. Experience during the last year or so has shown that a big picture, intelligently produced, liberally conceived and honestly presented, will do as much or more business than a half dozen others of lesser importance.

"Practical, too, would be an increase in the confidences exchanged between exhibitors and producers. In this respect I believe every producer would welcome comments from those in the field. I know I would prize communications of this sort, a word or two from someone with problems to solve."

Mr. Zanuck said he believes the European industry is "healthier" as a result of the economic and political disturbances. "In the clamor for business," he pointed out, "showmen have had to practice greater initiative, devise ways and means of attracting attention."

BOOK REVIEW

TELEVISION: A STRUGGLE FOR POWER, by Frank C. Waldrop and Joseph Borkin. New York: William Morrow & Company, 299 pp. Price, $2.75.

With an approving foreword by George Henry Payne of the Federal Communications Commission, the authors trace the development of television as a gigantic struggle between the telephone, radio and motion picture industries. And they consider the motion picture the weakest of the three contenders for the ultimate dominant position in the entertainment field.

They assert that the advent of sound destroyed the financial structure of the leading motion picture producing organizations, making them "the vassals of bankers." The financial powers, the authors assure us, will prefer television to the motion picture as a medium for the employment of their money. There would seem to be no need for this review to point out the broad assumptions here, including the assumption that television will be a-coming around that continuing lengthening corner ready to do the job our speculations have set up for it.

As has often been said, one's guess about television is as good as another's, and Messrs. Waldrop and Borkin make no exception of themselves. Ignoring the fact that the New York stage, during the last two seasons, has been operating without motion picture ramifications, and enjoying rather unexpected prosperity, too, the authors cite the "legitimate" theatre as "an appendage" of the motion picture business, then ask whether it is "inconceivable that the next step in the theatre's metamorphosis is a vestigial movie house in which to test public reaction before the great exhibition to the nation by way of the radio spectrum?"—and, "Will the motion picture theatre occupy the present situation of the legitimate theatre?"

They do not anticipate the complete disappearance of the motion picture, however; they offer it the function of a television tool. "The bulk of the television programs," they say," will probably be in the form of motion picture films. For one thing, films are more easily televised than stage performances and have proved so successful that in the present experimental period, 60 per cent of the broadcasts are made from films." They name other advantages of the filmed production for televising.

A sizeable portion of the book is devoted to the authors' conception of "the struggle" between the telephone and radio interests for the control of television, which introduces a brief review of some of the financial and technical aspects of the establishment of sound, including the Tri-Ergon and William Fox litigations, and the Western Electric-Warner Brothers deals and controversies.

Among the many conjectures offered, none bears upon how long it may be before television shall arrive.—GEORGE SCHULTZ.

Martin Mooney has been signed to adapt "Murder in the Big House" for Monogram. The original story was written by Reverend Patrick O'Neill.

So far as possible, I select for publication those answers that display evidence that the one making them has devoted some thought to the matter under consideration and some reasonable care in the preparation of his answer, though by care I do not necessarily mean the answer must be "dolled up," except by evidences of thought and understanding. To Section A, C. Umphrey answers:

"Excessive commutator lubrication has the effect of building up a thin high-resistance coating on the commutator surface; also to some extent upon the contact surface of the brushes. Not only is this effect created, but also surplus lubricant tends to collect dust from the atmosphere, also carbon particles and bits of copper, and to cause them to be collected in the undercut slots between commutator bars, where in time a current-carrying contact between bars may, and probably will, be formed.

"Such deposit tends to increase friction between the commutator and brushes, thus increasing operating temperature, which in turn acts to force still greater excess of lubricant from the brushes. Projectionists should give careful consideration to this matter, since it has to do not only with electrical efficiency, but also with rapidity of mechanical wear. The coating may of course be removed from time to time by means of No. OO sandpaper, but that, too, has objectionable features. The real projectionist will devote thought and care to his selection of brushes, using only those carefully watched experiments shown to give best service, everything considered, or following the advice of the machine's manufacturer."

(B) Leo Cimikoski says, "Excessive commutator lubrication is very bad. Too little is decidedly better than too much. Excessive lubrication, either applied or supplied by the brush itself, tends to combine with carbon dust in the air, bits of copper, etc., and to fill up the space between the commutator bars. In time, dependent upon amount of excess, amount of foreign particles in the air and amount of friction pressure by the brushes, such deposit may cause current leakage between adjacent bars, with consequent sparking, or may even short-circuit adjacent bars. Also excessive lubrication, combined with aforesaid tendency to collect dust, etc., may build up a thin coating, either over the whole commutator surface, or in spots, that will offer high resistance, and this not only cuts down the machine's efficiency, but tends to add to the operating temperature of commutator, brushes and their holders and pigtails."

R. Feasel says, "After sanding a commutator, it should be brushed vigorously, endwise, with a rather stiff-bristled brush. A stick of hardwood should be whittled to a point that will fit snugly into the undercut between the bars. Draw this point through each undercut slot to dislodge any bit of foreign substances that has resisted the brush bristles. Then, to make doubly sure, apply the brush again. Next, apply the commutator lubricating pad (see page 319 of the Bluebook), replace brushes, adjust their pressure (see page 316 of Bluebook), and the machine is again ready for use."

(C) J. R. Prater replies, "A commutator stone is a rectangular brick formed of abrasive material, intentionally made sufficiently soft to wear down quickly until it will fit the commutator curvature, at the same time having the ability to abrade the copper surface rapidly. These bricks may be secured in several degrees of coarseness, also, to fit any size of commutator. They must be used with care and good judgment. When held against a rotating commutator, they made be made to do an excellent, economical job of smoothing its surface, especially after having become fitted, by continual use, to the commutator curvature.

"However, if brushes capable of further use are installed, remove them and grind the commutator to an almost finished surface. Reinstall the brushes at normal contact pressure and complete the grinding job, whereupon the brush contacts should fit perfectly. If new brushes are to be installed, it may be well to leave them in place through the whole grinding process. Use judgment about this.

"When the job is done, remove brushes, give commutator a vigorous endwise brushing, followed by use of stick described on page 318 of Bluebook. Inspect to make sure the undercuts are perfectly clean. Clean the brushes thoroughly. Before replacing, hold lubrication pad (page 319 of Bluebook) to commutator surface a few seconds. Replace brushes, adjusting contact pressure (page 316 of Bluebook) and the job is done.

"In case soft brushes containing paraffin are used, perhaps all necessary lubrication will be supplied by them. However, in most cases using the pad after each sanding or grinding job is good practice. A commutator in perfect condition presents a clean, slightly brown, glazed surface. A dry, unglazed, 'raw' surface indicates too little lubrication. If the surface shows any indication of black, gummy deposits, clean it off with light application of No. 00 sandpaper and apply no lubrication at all. Watch the commutator surface; it 'speaks' to the understanding projectionist, telling him a lot about the machine's operating condition."

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 125

(A) Describe start of current generation in a generator.

(B) What happens when in starting a generator the point of required voltage is reached?

(C) How may electrical power be calculated in terms of horsepower.

(D) Just how is two-phase and three-phase current secured?

(Note: Remember, this is a Bluebook school and the answer to all save possibly some special questions can be found in that book.)

RKO Lining Up New Season Plans

Final plans for the first group of pictures on RKO Radio's new season schedule of 48 features will be completed by the company within two weeks, it was said this week. Titles, casts and producer-director assignments will be decided from time to time throughout the year with pictures being planned in small groups. The first product announcement is expected to list 12 to 16 titles.

As indicated earlier by Jules Levy, sales manager, the company will not hold formal sales meetings this year. Mr. Levy and other RKO sales executives visited every branch office last spring in the course of the annual sales drive and plans and policies for the new season were outlined at that time.

Kendor Launches Series

Kendor Productions, with headquarters at Rockefeller Center and filming at Film Art Studios, Bronx, has started as a new independent. With the completion of a two-reel subject, directed by Ray Cozine, a series of "new talent" pictures is planned. The talent selected for the series is to be taken from screen testings of persons seen by the major companies. Negotiations now are under way for release through a major. The series is called "New Talent for the Screen."

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

AWFUL TRUTH, THE: Irene Dunne, Cary Grant—An entertaining comedy which lost money due to high rental.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

FIGHT TO THE FINISH, A: Don Terry, Rosalind Keith—Used this on a double bill and must say for action and thrills this is hard to beat. The fans sure did eat this one up; not a dull moment in the whole 59 minutes. Give us more like this, Columbia. Running time, 59 minutes.—Georg Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, N. S., Canada.

HEADIN' EAST: Buck Jones, Ruth Coleman—First Buck Jones played here. Saturday crowd disappointed in not seeing Western. Good action picture. Business good opening but dropped second night.—E. W. Savage, Palace Theatre, Booneville, Ark. Small town patronage.

HOLLYWOOD ROUND-UP: Buck Jones, Helen Twelvetrees—Did a good Saturday business on this.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

LEGION OF TERROR, THE: Bruce Cabot, Marguerite Churchill—Very good and pleased. Running time, 60 minutes.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, N. S., Canada.

NO TIME TO MARRY: Richard Arlen, Mary Astor—Lively comedy drama. Held up well on a double bill.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

OUTLAWS OF THE PRAIRIE: Charles Starrett, Donald Grayson—This is the first of this series I have played. I was very skeptical about them but after seeing and hearing the many pleasant comments about this one I concluded that they were the best musical westerns we had played. They are not the usual run of the mill musical westerns, but they are different. Running time, 58 minutes. Played June 24-25.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

PENITENTIARY: Walter Connolly, Jean Parker—One of the best we've played from Columbia this year. Didn't do business, though. Running time, 79 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town patronage.

SPEED TO SPARE: Charles Quigley, Dorothy Wilson—Yes siree. It's sped plus and as feature No. 1 on a double it more than satisfied. Running time, 60 minutes.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, N. S., Canada.

STAGECOACH DAYS: Jack Luden, Eleanor Stewart—The dog was good. Enough said, except that Columbia is off their nut when they think this Luden will ever be a sensation as a western. Maybe if the directing was better and the dog was in a few more scenes, then the people would laugh when expected to, and not at the feeble efforts of the cast. Running time, 58 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town patronage.

START CHEERING: Jimmy Durante, Walter Connolly, Joan Perry—Here's a real college musical with lots of action. Most appropriate for university situations. Business excellent.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

TRAPPED BY G-MEN: Jack Holt, Wynne Gibson—Lively action picture. Did a good weekend business.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

UNDER SUSPICION: Jack Holt, Katherine DeMille—No complaints from a Saturday crowd on this one.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

WIDE OPEN FACES: Joe E. Brown, Jane Wyman—Not as good as "Fit for a King," but pleased the Joe Brown fans. Business average for Friday and Saturday. Played June 24-25.—Bill Simon, Rialto Theatre, Saguache, Col. Rural and small town patronage.

First National

CRIME SCHOOL: Humphrey Bogart, "Dead End" children—Very good but title was hard to sell. This pleased all. Running time, 86 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box-office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

What the Picture Did for Me
MOTION PICTURE HERALD
Rockefeller Center, New York

DAREDEVIL DRIVERS, THE: Dick Purcell, Beverly Roberts—Good racing picture. Running time, 60 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Small town patronage.

DAREDEVIL DRIVERS, THE: Dick Purcell, Beverly Roberts, Gloria Blondell, Gordon Oliver—Can't say this was even a fair picture. Nothing to it. If you play doubles, give it a bottom spot.—Bill Simon, Rialto Theatre, Saguache, Col. Rural and small town patronage.

FOOLS FOR SCANDAL: Fernand Gravet, Carole Lombard—Very poor entertainment for my patrons. Didn't please the majority although a few ladies thought it "cute." I could well do without a thing like this here. Running time, 81 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town patronage.

GOLD IS WHERE YOU FIND IT: George Brent, Olivia de Havilland, Margaret Lindsay, Claude Rains—Technically and any way you run it, Warner Bros. has the worst recording. In this one they turn their backs to the camera and talk. Perhaps backwards; who knows. Played May 29-30.—Jesse L. Lausman, Hill Top Theatre, Louisville, Ky. Neighborhood patronage.

GOLD IS WHERE YOU FIND IT: George Brent, Olivia de Havilland—An excellent picture. One of the year's best. Color and scenes are great; also unusually good story. Although rather old, it's still worthy of best playing time.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis.

HOLLYWOOD HOTEL: Dick Powell, Lane Sisters—Same old Warner musical. Too long and drawn out. Comedy good in spots. Business n. g.—E. W. Savage, Palace Theatre, Booneville, Ark. Small town patronage.

PATIENT IN ROOM 18, THE: Patric Knowles, Ann Sheridan—The screwiest, nuttiest murder comedy I have ever run and the patrons all agreed with me. Ran this one on Bargain Night and filled in with a lot of Warner's good shorts and it seemed to please 100 per cent better than any double bill. Running time, 64 minutes. Played June 15-16.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

STAGE STRUCK: Dick Powell, Joan Blondell—Heard many comments on this and must say this was a natural with us. As a rule, our patrons want plenty of action and thrills and it sure was a surprise how they raved over this. The same can be said about "Bordertown," another from Warner.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, N. S., Canada.

WEST OF SHANGHAI: Boris Karloff, Beverly Roberts—Fair Saturday business on this.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

WEST OF SHANGHAI: Boris Karloff, Beverly Roberts—Used this as feature No. 2 on a double and it pleased 100 per cent. Karloff is well liked here and using everything he produces.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, N. S., Canada.

Grand National

GREAT GUY: James Cagney, Mae Clarke—This drew an above the average crowd on bargain night. Picture was very good.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala.

HEADIN' FOR THE RIO GRANDE: Tex Ritter, Eleanore Stewart—My first Ritter. Was a little disappointed with his singing. Picture is okay. Syd Saylor was very good.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala.

HELD FOR RANSOM: Blanche Mehaffey, Grant Withers—What a dog if there ever was one! Never played a more disconnected story which so completely left the patrons spellbound with disgust. This is the quickiest "quickie" I have ever seen. Running time, 59 minutes.—M. Grenewald, Barry Theatre, Pittsburgh, Pa. General patronage.

RENFREW OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED: James Newill, Carol Hughes—One of the best produced of the independents. Seemed just as well-made as the average from the majors. Story, scenery and direction all very good and business also was a little above average. Used as the top half of a double feature, with a very weak picture for the other end.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis.

SPIRIT OF YOUTH: Joe Louis, Edna Mae Harris—Played this on a Monday and Tuesday following three days with "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs." It took a lot of nerve to follow "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" with Joe Louis, the Brown Bomber, but figured the novelty and the unusual might bring them in, and for once we guessed right. Nearly doubled our usual Monday and Tuesday business. Joe isn't an actor but it's a good little picture and it will please. Should draw well now that Joe is still the world's champ. Played May 23-24.—Bill Simon, Rialto Theatre, Saguache, Col. Rural and small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BAD MAN OF BRIMSTONE: Wallace Beery, Virginia Bruce—A well-made western. Did a fair midweek business but lost money due to the excessively high rental.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

BEG, BORROW OR STEAL: Frank Morgan, Florence Rice—Passed this one but reports said it was good, so played it to an appreciative audience. Everyone enjoyed it, but there weren't many here. Running time, 72 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Railto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town patronage.

BIG CITY: Spencer Tracy, Luise Rainer—Fair Sunday business.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

BIG CITY: Spencer Tracy, Luise Rainer—A very fine picture that did nice business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

DOUBLE WEDDING: William Powell, Myrna Loy—This crazy comedy lost me plenty of money on Sunday.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

FIREFLY: Jeanette MacDonald, Allan Jones—A very high class musical drama that took a terrible beating on Sunday.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

GIRL OF THE GOLDEN WEST: Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy—No business on this. Running time, 119 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town patronage.

JUDGE HARDY'S CHILDREN: Lewis Stone, Mickey Rooney—Fairly well attended by a few kids. It pleased, but like all Metro pictures here, it failed to draw. Running time, 77 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town patronage.

LIVE, LOVE AND LEARN: Robert Montgomery, Rosalind Russell—Rather slim business. Didn't pay expenses.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

MADAME X: Gladys George, Warren William, John Beal, Reginald Owen—When MGM makes a picture and nobody comes to see it, we call it bad business. MGM pictures keep our regular patrons at home and strangers remain strange. Played May 26-29.—Jesse L. Lausman, Hill Top Theatre, Louisville, Ky. Neighborhood patronage.

MERRILY WE LIVE: Constance Bennett, Brian Aherne—A howling comedy. Good for most any spot. A little on the slapstick side. Pleased 100 per cent.—E. W. Savage, Palace Theatre, Booneville, Ark. Small town patronage.

MERRILY WE LIVE: Constance Bennett, Brian Aherne, Billie Burke, Patsy Kelly—A swell show. Should have played it on Sunday but it even pleased our Saturday patronage to perfection. Played June 24-25.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

OF HUMAN HEARTS: James Stewart, Walter Huston—We should have more like this. Comments all unusually fine. A picture you can be proud to play and should easily rate among the ten best for 1938.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis.

PARADISE FOR THREE: Frank Morgan, Florence Rice—Very good picture to better business than we expected. The trailer was exceptionally good and I believe that is what brought in the extra business. Played midweek during worst show month of the year, June.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis.

ROSALIE: Eleanor Powell, Nelson Eddy, Ray Bolger, Frank Morgan, Edna May Oliver—A very, very good show. Had lots of compliments. Has some of the most beautiful settings ever put into a motion picture. Running time, 125 minutes. Played June 30-July 1.—Cecil Ward, Stone Theatre, Bassett, Va. Small town and factory patronage.

TEST PILOT: Clark Gable, Myrna Loy, Spencer Tracy—Very good. Paid average but not as much as I expected to. My patrons appreciate a picture of this type, but try to get one. Running time, 119 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town patronage.

TEST PILOT: Clark Gable, Myrna Loy, Spencer Tracy—Any exhibitor can go all the way on this one, cast, story; it has everything. Ranks with the all time good aeroplane pictures. What a relief to get something away from the sophisticate tripe that comes through in one set, so-called comedies. The audiences want something they can sit through without squirming and wishing for the end.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

THOROUGHBREDS DON'T CRY: Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland—Fair mid-week business. Very pleasing picture.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

TOY WIFE, THE: Luise Rainer, Melvyn Douglas, Robert Young, Barbara O'Neil, H. B. Warner—I think that this picture is Luise Rainer's first big mistake. The picture is good but by no means can it compare with "The Good Earth" or "The Great Ziegfeld." You will probably do fairly good business on it but don't hope for too much and you won't be disappointed. Running time, 96 minutes. Played June 26-27.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

WOMAN AGAINST WOMAN: Virginia Bruce, Herbert Marshall, Mary Astor, Janet Beecher—Very weak. We played it one day only with a cash night and it didn't do anything to rave about for us. It might go on a double feature without any squawks. Single feature man use caution when booking this picture. It won't do good business alone for any exhibitor unless his theatre is a "natural" anyway. Running time, 61 minutes. Played June 28.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

Miscellaneous

HELL FIRE AUSTIN: Ken Maynard—A real bang-up old western we picked up from Superior Films. Thank you, Mr. Davidson, for the tip; it was O. K.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

Monogram

BOY OF THE STREETS: Jackie Cooper, Maureen O'Connor—Very pleasing picture. Fair Sunday business—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

LAND OF FIGHTING MEN: Jack Randall—Jack Randall is fast becoming a good western star since he stopped the songs he used to sing. This picture has a very good supporting cast of old western favorites. Very good for action. Running time, 55 minutes. Played July 2.—Cecil Ward, Stone Theatre, Bassett, Va. Small town and factory patronage.

MY OLD KENTUCKY HOME: Grant Richards, Evelyn Venable, the Hall Johnson Choir—Very well received, especially the Hall Johnson Chair. Played April 13-19.—Robert S. Farrell, New Rivoli Theatre, Portland, Ore. General patronage.

NUMBERED WOMAN: Sally Blane, Lloyd Hughes—Fair picture for double bills. Played with a western and had a good show. Running time, 65 minutes. Played July 2.—Cecil Ward, Stone Theatre, Bassett, Va. Small town and factory patronage.

PARADISE ISLE: Movita, Warren Hull—Monogram came through again. If Paramount don't look out, Movita will pass Lamour in drawing power and in this type of picture. Our patrons enjoyed this one and so did we. Box office average. Played April 28.—Opera House, Crowley, La. General patronage.

ROSE OF THE RIO GRANDE: Movita, John Carroll—Monogram again makes a grand little picture. Business responded for good gains during extremely hot weather. Played June 6.—Robert S. Farrell, New Rivoli Theatre, Portland, Ore. General patronage.

FIVE MORE EXHIBITORS JOIN CONTRIBUTORS

Contributions from three exhibitors who have not reported previously and two who have been absent from these columns for more than a year are included in the What the Picture Did for Me department this week. New contributors are:

M. Greenwald, Barry Theatre, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Little and Friesen, Abbotsford Theatre, Abbotsford, B. C., Canada

The Opera House, Crowley, La.

The prodigal contributors are:

Jesse L. Lausman, Hill Top Theatre, Louisville, Ky.

Cecil Ward, Stone Theatre, Bassett, Va.

Mr. Lausman's last report was on April 25, 1936, and Mr. Ward reported last from the Bassett Theatre, Bassett, March 20, 1937.

SALESLADY: Anne Nagel, Weldon Heyburn—This is a nice wholesome and entertaining picture.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

Paramount

BAR 20 JUSTICE: William Boyd, George Hayes—Fairly good, and was enjoyed. Windy (George Hayes) has many friends here who would like to see him have a bigger part, such as in this, and if this was any indication, he could handle it. Running time, 65 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town patronage.

BIG BROADCAST OF 1938, THE: W. C. Fields, Martha Raye, Dorothy Lamour, Bob Hope, Ben Blue, Shirley Ross—Had more complaints on this picture than any in a long time. We rather liked it because we had schooled ourselves not to expect much. But so many told us they thought it the poorest picture we had shown in months. Must have been the picture. Fields is not liked here and Raye would be much better if they would forget trying to enlarge her mouth every time she appears. Running time, 91 minutes. Played June 19-20.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

BIG BROADCAST OF 1938, THE: W. C. Fields, Martha Raye—This deserves all the bad comments it has had in these columns and more, too. Comments all against the show and kicks continued to come in for many days after the showing. Business lowest on record for a Sunday opening and a two-day run.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis.

BLUEBEARD'S EIGHTH WIFE: Gary Cooper, Claudette Colbert—When they won't come to this when it's playing on Bank Night then there is something wrong in Paynesville. Or could it be the picture? Business off 50 per cent second night. Personally thought it rather good, but guess it missed somewhere. Running time, 85 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town patronage.

BLUEBEARD'S EIGHTH WIFE: Gary Cooper, Claudette Colbert—Not as good as I expected although it is a better than average show. Not the right type of picture for Cooper. Business not at all up to expectations.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis.

BLUEBEARD'S EIGHTH WIFE: Claudette Colbert, Gary Cooper—Pretty good program picture that did not do so well at the box office. Claudette Colbert is not much of a drawing card any more. Running time, 87 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Small town patronage.

BLUEBEARD'S EIGHTH WIFE: Gary Cooper, Claudette Colbert—Excellent comedy. Pleased most everyone. Did average business. Paramount should forget the "Lubitsch touch." There's nothing in it to sell customers.—E. W. Savage, Palace Theatre, Booneville, Ark. Small town patronage.

BLUEBEARD'S EIGHTH WIFE: Claudette Colbert, Gary Cooper, Edward Everett Horton, David Niven—Extra good programmer. But, certainly not up to price we had to pay for it. The trailer sent out on this picture almost killed it. A long trailer catering only to the feminine trade and talking only women's wear certainly does not go in these western places. Had many complaints about it. Running time, 80 minutes. Played June 26-27.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

BULLDOG DRUMMOND'S PERIL: John Barrymore, Louise Campbell, John Howard—Good entertainment, although not as baffling as predicted. Will please the mystery lovers. Running time, 55 minutes. Played June 26.—Bob Elliano, Palace Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

COCOANUT GROVE: Fred MacMurray, Harriet Hilliard, Ben Blue, Rufe Davis—This musical is okay; it had some catchy music and this Miss Hilliard has a swell voice, and cute besides. Ben Blue don't seem to make much of a bit; his stuff is pretty silly. It is all right for those of low mental calibre.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

COCOANUT GROVE: Fred MacMurray, Harriet Hilliard—It was a long road and a rough one, but you finally made a good one, Paramount. This was without a doubt the best musical show from Paramount this year. Business poor, but was to be expected. Running time, 90 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town patronage.

COCOANUT GROVE: Fred MacMurray, Harriet Hilliard, Ben Blue, Rufe Davis—After seeing "College Swing," I suspected that Paramount would be putting out another stinkaroo like "College Swing," but I was very much surprised to find that "Cocoanut Grove" was a very nice picture. Exploit it heavy and the money will start to roll in. Your patrons will all walk out with a big smile and tell you the picture was grand. Running time, 88 minutes. Played June 29-30.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

COLLEGE SWING: Burns and Allen—Punk. Too much is too much, especially when there's no sense in direction or story. Running time, 89 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town patronage.

COLLEGE SWING: Martha Raye, George Burns and Gracie Allen, Bob Hope, Edward Everett Horton, Betty Grable, Jackie Coogan, Ben Blue—There is nothing wrong with the picture so far as we can see. Why all the panning? It's as good a Burns and Allen as they have ever made which is not saying much, and Gracie certainly has improved. The biggest audience reaction against it was from the people who read Ed Sullivan's comments in the Chicago Tribune of July 3d. I feel that it is wrong for a commentator to print an exhibitor's comments in his paper as these comments are strictly for exhibitors and after all is said and done his idea only of the picture. What goes good in Columbia City does not always make a hit in my situation and we are only twenty five miles apart. Mr. Hancock for instance cannot play westerns and we cannot exist at a profit without them. Our audience, which was not afraid to come after they had read Sullivan's column, seemed to enjoy this picture immensely. Ben Blue is certainly a star. Bob Hope now shows why Paramount has him on contract. Gracie Allen was exceptional and Martha Raye at her best. All in all I cannot say that this is a bad musical on the style that Paramount makes. Our crowd was small due to other reasons than the picture and we feel that some times these columnists do more harm than good. Running time, 85 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

COLLEGE SWING: George Burns, Gracie Allen, Martha Raye—Cannot hand Paramount much on this mess of "acts." Our patrons seem to be tiring of the Ben Blue and Martha Raye type of comedy. It's overworked.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

DANGEROUS TO KNOW: Anna May Wong, Akim Tamiroff—Played to practically nobody on a bargain night. Picture was okay, but no draw. Running time, 70 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town patronage.

DOCTOR RHYTHM: Bing Crosby, Mary Carlisle—Not as expected and nowhere near the draw of other Crosby pictures. Could it be possible that people are a bit tired of your continuous mass production of dumb musicals, Paramount? Running time, 81 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town patronage.

EVERY DAY'S A HOLIDAY: Mae West, Edmund Lowe, Charles Butterworth, Charles Winninger—We're sorry Mae but it's just no draw. The good old days of "I'm No Angel" are gone. Business below average. Played June 29-30.—Bill Simon, Rialto Theatre, Saguache, Col. Rural and small town patronage.

HER JUNGLE LOVE: Dorothy Lamour, Ray Milland—Very good. Many compliments. Thanks, Paramount.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala.

NIGHT CLUB SCANDAL: John Barrymore, Lynne Overman—A murder story where the audience knows the killer from the start. An interesting story which pleased but the title didn't attract customers in our town. They came for bank night and were surprised to find an entertaining picture. Business average. Played June 1-2.—Bill Simon, Rialto Theatre, Saguache, Col. Rural and small town patronage.

ROMANCE IN THE DARK: Gladys Swarthout, John Boles, John Barrymore—Too high class for our people. Singing was very fine but surely not the type to please the rank and file of music lovers. No drawing power. Running time, 78 minutes. Played June 22-23.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

SCANDAL STREET: Lew Ayres, Louise Campbell —One of those built for double bills. And we hate those things. No name value but a good story after you get them in. But, we couldn't get them in. Running time, 62 minutes. Played June 15-16.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

TIP-OFF GIRLS: Lloyd Nolan, Mary Carlisle, J. Carroll Naish, Evelyn Brent, Larry Crabbe—A very clever little crook drama, of which all companies are making too many, that was well received by the audience. Naish is the best of a fair cast. Mary Carlisle could just as well been out dancing for all the part she had. Just a fair picture in too high an allocation. Running time, 62 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

TIP-OFF GIRLS: Llloyd Nolan, Mary Carlisle—Very good program picture. Believe it pleased the people who came. Running time, 60 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town patronage.

TRAIL OF THE LONESOME PINE: Sylvia Sidney, Fred MacMurray—Brought it back for second time and drew good week-end business. Print in terrible shape. Still good entertainment. Played June 10-11.—E. W. Savage, Palace Theatre, Booneville, Ark. Small town patronage.

TRUE CONFESSION: Carole Lombard, Fred MacMurray, John Barrymore—I didn't see this one myself but one glance at the box office reports told a sad story. Poorest business on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday in six weeks. No draw for the small town.—Bill Simon, Rialto Theatre, Saguache, Col. Rural and small town patronage.

WELLS FARGO: Joel McCrea, Bob Burns, Frances Dee—Here's a real picture. If we could have more like this there wouldn't be a recession at the box office. The best we have had from Paramount. Played June 12-14.—Bill Simon, Rialto Theatre, Saguache, Col. Rural and small town patronage.

Republic

CALL THE MESQUITEERS: Bob Livingston, Ray Corrigan, Max Terhune, Lynn Roberts—The Three Mesquiteers in another entertaining western. This time the trio are mistaken for silk highjackers and in order to clear themselves they must keep undercover until the real crooks are captured. Good for both juvenile and adult patronage. Running time, 55 minutes. Played July 1-2.—Bob Elliano, Palace Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

GANGS OF NEW YORK: Charles Bickford, Ann Dvorak, Alan Baxter, Wynne Gibson—Good programmer. Republic could have turned out a much better gangster thriller had they distributed the action throughout the picture instead of saving it till the closing scenes. A good one for the week-end trade. Running time, 67 minutes. Played July 1-2.—Bob Elliano, Palace Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

KING OF THE NEWSBOYS: Lew Ayres, Alison Skipworth, Helen Mack—A very good program picture. Nothing big but one which will please nearly everyone. This picture warrants extra advertising. Get them in and they will be satisfied by a good story well acted. Played June 3-4.—Bill Simon, Rialto Theatre, Saguache, Col. Small town and rural patronage.

LADIES IN DISTRESS: Alison Skipworth, Polly Moran, Bob Livingston—Just a fair programmer. May get by if played with a strong co-feature. Alison Skipworth enacts the role of Mayor and Polly Moran is seen as her secretary. Bob Livingston plays the part of the gangster who is hired to clean up the town of racketeers. Running time, 66 minutes. Played June 26.—Bob Elliano, Palace Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

MAMA RUNS WILD: Mary Boland, Ernest Truex —Mary sure turns on the steam when she turned out this comedy. People came back a second time to see this one so it must have pleased. Running time, 88 minutes. Played June 22-23.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

OLD BARN DANCE, THE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Second Autry to play here. Very well received as it is splendid entertainment. Running time, 57 minutes. Played April 7.—Robert S. Farrell, New Rivoli Theatre, Portland, Ore. General patronage.

RKO-Radio

BRINGING UP BABY: Katharine Hepburn, Cary Grant, May Robson, Charles Ruggles—A silly comedy but sure pleased. They seem to go for this kind of comedy now days. Miss Hepburn should stick to comedy; she really did get over in this one. Business average. You won't need to double this one.—Bill Simon, Rialto Theatre, Saguache, Col. Rural and small town patronage.

DAMSEL IN DISTRESS: Fred Astaire, Burns & Allen—Fairly entertaining comedy. Just got by on Saturday.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

DOUBLE DANGER: Preston Foster, Whitney Bourne—Very satisfactory. Audience comments very good. Played April 13-19.—Robert S. Farrell, New Rivoli Theatre, Portland, Ore. General patronage.

DOUBLE DANGER: Preston Foster, Whitney Bourne—Good program picture. Running time, 65 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Small town patronage.

GO CHASE YOURSELF: Joe Penner, Lucille Ball, Tom Kennedy—A knockout for the Penner fans. The best he has given us in a long time. Miss Ball as we predicted is coming into the limelight and is very good. An excellent comedy that was enjoyed by all. Where they got the title nobody knows. Running time, 70 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

GO CHASE YOURSELF: Joe Penner, Lucille Ball —Terrible, but they sure came in to see it. As a picture, it was bunk, but guess it went over okay, and if that's what they'll go for, I know where I can get more of them. Running time, 70 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town patronage.

GUN LAW: George O'Brien, Rita Oehmen—A nice action western that will please most western fans. Running time, 60 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town patronage.

RADIO CITY REVELS: Bob Burns, Jack Oakie, Ann Miller—Good entertainment. RKO has something in this Miller gal if given a fair break. Running time, 90 minutes. Played June 14-15.—Frank Templin, Strand Theatre, Kendallville, Ind. General patronage.

SAINT IN NEW YORK, THE: Louis Hayward, Kay Sutton—Acting of leads okay, but story a little gruesome for youngsters. The police commissioner virtually gave the hero a hunting license for certain men and he went out and turned 'em in dead. Played June 24-25.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

SHE'S GOT EVERYTHING: Ann Sothern, Gene Raymond—Picture okay, but title kept them away. RKO title writers should be kept locked up. Several of their best pictures this season haven't done anything on account of titles.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis.

SNOW WHITE AND THE SEVEN DWARFS: Walt Disney—We received more excellent comments and repeats on this attraction than any previous picture. We broke all existing records and made more money, even at the high percentage terms than any previous engagement. The population of our town is only 600, seating capacity 365, yet we played to 1,454 people in three nights and one matinee. Give us another "Snow White."—Little & Friesen, Abbotsford Theatre, Box 11, Abbotsford, B. C. Canada.

SNOW WHITE AND THE SEVEN DWARFS: Walt Disney—I worked like a dog to tie up with the schools on this picture. Then I had it booked in for me on commencement week after the rural schools had closed. Ran four nights and three matinees and had $.25 left for my trouble after paying expenses. Created a lot of ill will too by being compelled to charge adult prices for children at evening performances.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason Mich. Small town patronage.

SNOW WHITE AND THE SEVEN DWARFS: Walt Disney—Played six days. Was booked for four days and we held it over two more days. The multiplane color is terrible. The colors looked faded and unnatural; will look better thru high intensity blue light. The FitzPatricks, Mickey Mouse and Columbia Rhapsodies color make "Snow White" look like Joe Louis. Played June 26-July 1.—Jesse L. Lausman, Hill Top Theatre, Louisville, Ky. Neighborhood patronage.

SNOW WHITE AND THE SEVEN DWARFS: Walt Disney—Very good. We played this too late. Many of our customers went to other towns to see it, but at that we did a very nice business. Running time, 84 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Small town patronage.

STATE POLICE: John King, Constance Moore—Strictly double feature, although we played it on a money night with a few good selected shorts. Running time, 60 minutes. Played May 13.—Richard C. Welch, Comique Theatre, Camden, Maine. General patronage.

THERE GOES THE GROOM: Ann Sothern, Burgess Meredith—Fast, clean, excellent comedy. Our patrons had many laughs and enjoyed this feature very much. Running time, 62 minutes. Played April 7.—Robert S. Farrell, New Rivoli Theatre, Portland, Ore. General patronage.

WISE GIRL: Miriam Hopkins, Ray Milland—The continuing hot weather was responsible for the biggest boxoffice flop in our history. Show very good. Played June 22-23.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

WISE GIRL: Miriam Hopkins, Ray Milland—The title is no good although the picture is about an average. We doubled this with a good western, but even that wasn't enough on a Friday-Saturday change to keep this from giving us the lowest Friday-Saturday gross on record.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ALWAYS GOODBYE: Barbara Stanwyck, Herbert Marshall, Binnie Barnes, Ian Hunter—Barbara is always good and she played her part beautifully in this picture. This picture may not have the name of "Stella Dallas" but it is a nice, little picture and you should have a fair attendance on the picture. Our business was very good on it. Work in the human interest angle and run a contest for letter of 100 words or under on what you would do if you were in Stanwyck's place. This went over good here. You can award guest tickets for the best answers. Give it a try anyway. Running time, 98 minutes. Played July 1-2.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

BORROWING TROUBLE: Jones Family—We had very nice business for this family offering. Very good in every respect. Showers drove the people into the theatre. Played June 25.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN ON BROADWAY: Warner Oland, Joan Marsh—We ran into a heat wave and the first band concert of the season. Consequently business suffered. Played June 18.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

IN OLD CHICAGO: Alice Faye, Tyrone Power, Don Ameche—Biggest business since "Happy Landing." Played three nights midweek to double our Sunday-Monday-Tuesday business the same week. Thought the fire scenes a little too long (over-done) and a little too much on politics. This is, however, a fine production and one of the best this year.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis.

IN OLD CHICAGO: Tyrone Power, Alice Faye, Don Ameche, Alice Brady—Very good production for any spot and every kind of an audience. Played July 3-4. —Rudolph Covi, Covi Theatre, Herminie, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

ISLAND IN THE SKY: Gloria Stuart, Michael Whalen, Paul Kelly, June Storey—Good melodrama with plenty of action. But the name draw was not there and we had the smallest Friday-Saturday attendance in months. Don't believe it was hardly as good as "Change of Heart." Running time, 67 minutes. Played June 17-18.— Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

JOSETTE: Don Ameche, Simone Simon, Robert Young, Joan Davis—The best that Simone has done, but she has a cast to help her along. She still is a little hard to understand, or so the audience tells us. We, who hear the show for the full number of runs get her all right, but that is not true of some of our audience. There is the little bird, shows up in "Josette" as the Customs Inspector that was the drunk in "In Old Chicago," that when he was given five minutes to get thrown out, could make it in three. I wish I knew his name; it is not given in the cast. He deserves more juicy parts and my regrets are that I can't identify him.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

JUDGE PRIEST (REISSUE): Will Rogers, Anita Louise—We did tairly well for "Judge Priest." Like many other boxoffices, we are suffering at this particular time. Of course the feature gave satisfaction. Played June 15-16.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

KENTUCKY MOONSHINE: Ritz Brothers, Tony Martin, Marjorie Weaver—Yes, sir, everybody was nuts, Ritz Bros., director, and the stars of the cast, including most of the audience, but if it is insanity that they want, bring on some more like it. When you have the Ritzes you can expect anything from Hilly Billies (phoney) to the Seven Dwarfs and wicked queen.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

KIDNAPPED: Freddie Bartholomew, Warner Baxter, Arleen Whelan—An atmospheric picture of the Scottish clans and purporting to be historical. Splendidly done, but for some unaccountable reason, it took a nose dive at the box office. Whether they confused it as a gangster picture, for all our our explaining in our ads to the contrary, I don't know, but if they did, the power of the press is not so good.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

LOVE ON A BUDGET: The Jones Family—This comes very close to being the best of the Jones Family series. Title is not so good so business was off. Alan Dinehart is outstanding.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis.

RASCALS: Jane Withers, Rochelle Hudson, Borrah Minnevitch and His Gang—They support Jane in her pictures and we get as usual the same kids that wait out both shows. This one is full of the old malarky heiress in the gypsy camp and baron who is after the dough but the honest young hero gets the girl with the help of Jane and Mr. Minnevitch. At that the audience gulps it down and seemed to like it. The screwy actions of the Minnevitchs put the picture over. —A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

RASCALS: Jane Withers, Robert Kent—Entertaining comedy drama that brought in good hot weather business. Story could be taken apart, but no one worried about that.—P. G. Eetee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

REBECCA OF SUNNYBROOK FARM: Shirley Temple, Gloria Stuart, Jack Haley, Randolph Scott—Very good Shirley Temple picture. Don't confuse this story with the old "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm." Very good for small towns. Played June 27-28.—Cecil Ward, Stone Theatre, Bassett, Va. Small town and factory patronage.

REBECCA OF SUNNYBROOK FARM: Shirley Temple, Gloria Stuart—Not nearly as good and far from being the draw that "Heidi" was. However, is still a very good show and business was above average, in fact, about double ordinary midweek. Perhaps we expect too much from the Temples.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis.

REBECCA OF SUNNYBROOK FARM: Shirley Temple, Gloria Stuart, Randolph Scott—This drew fairly well in face of hottest weather of the year and it pleased. Shirley still has her "draw" for our patrons. —P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

REBECCA OF SUNNYBROOK FARM: Shirley Temple, Gloria Stuart, Randolph Scott—Here is one exhibitor that wants more Shirley Temple. Our best first of week business in six months.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

SALLY, IRENE AND MARY: Alice Faye, Tony Martin, Fred Allen—A swell musical comedy which did only fair business. Alice Faye is tops. Fred Allen and Jimmy Durante do some good clowning. Customers raved about Joan Davis. All in all, a very good picture.—E. W. Savage, Palace Theatre, Booneville, Ark. Small town patronage.

TRIP TO PARIS, A: Jed Prouty, Shirley Deane, Spring Byington—"The Jones Family" series. We are not doing so well with this series that Fox seems to think a lot of. They are clean, that is one point for them, but they are too much a sameness; not enough novelty; it is the same old scenario in a different locale. But "Boy Meets Girl," etc., not much to go on. Hence, we are not getting the play on them as we did on the first ones.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

United Artists

ADVENTURES OF TOM SAWYER, THE: Tommy Kelly—Very nice. Drew good also. Believe that Tom Sawyer could have been a little less sweet and more of a roughneck but then Tommy Kelly must be given credit for a very fine performance. Running time, 92 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town patronage.

DISNEY, WALT, ACADEMY AWARD REVUE: Five Award winners—This was a very pleasing subject but did not draw any extra business.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

GOLDWYN FOLLIES, THE: Adolphe Menjou, Andrea Leeds—Comments divided. Had seven walkouts Sunday night and a few the other two nights. However, it is a very fine production. Objection came from too much grand opera and some of the dances where we find males doing their part in a "spring dance." Business was lowest on record for a three-day run here. Musicals are certainly getting to be the jinx at the boxoffice.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis.

GOLDWYN FOLLIES, THE: "Charlie McCarthy," Edgar Bergen, Ritz Brothers, Adolphe Menjou, Phil Baker, Andrea Leeds, Zorina—This one really had me worried as our folks don't go for quite so much class in their singing and dancing. Sunday business was rotten but those that came went away so well pleased that the word of mouth advertising they gave the picture nearly doubled the average Monday and Tuesday. A real class production that will pleased 95% if you can get them in. Business for three days a little above the average. Played June 26-28.—Bill Simon, Rialto Theatre, Saguache, Col. Rural and small town patronage.

HURRICANE, THE: Dorothy Lamour, Jon Hall—Although I played this picture very old, it seems to please and United Artists seemed to know of the drawing power of this one so they got all they thought the picture would stand for rental. After paying them and taking what was left, the take was very small. Running time, 102 minutes. Played June 19-20-21.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

Universal

AS GOOD AS MARRIED: John Boles, Doris Nolan —Used this on a double bill and it just got by. Nevertheless, the picture is okay. Running time, 81 minutes.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, N. S., Canada.

GIRL WITH IDEAS, A: Wendy Barrie, Walter Pidgeon—The Saturday crowd appeared to be pleased with this one.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

LAW FOR TOMBSTONE: Buck Jones—Very good and Jones is a big favorite here. Have yet to see one of his pictures that fail to draw and satisfy. More power to you, Buck. Running time, 59 minutes.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, N. S., Canada.

MAD ABOUT MUSIC: Deanna Durbin, Herbert Marshall—Excellent. One of the best pictures of the year. The acting by little Deanna Durbin was great; the story and directing very good. A picture for the whole family. Clean and entertaining. A four-star picture in every respect. Running time, 96 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Small town patronage.

MERRY-GO-ROUND OF 1938: Bert Lahr, Alice Brady—A slim Fourth of July crowd pronounced this a very funny and entertaining picture.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

100 MEN AND A GIRL: Deanna Durbin, Adolphe Menjou—Perfect entertainment and good Sunday business.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

Warner Brothers

BORDERTOWN (REISSUE): Paul Muni, Bette Davis—Both stars are favorites here and can always depend on them pleasing our patrons. Received wonderful print on this and must say the sound was perfect.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, N. S., Canada.

BORDERTOWN (REISSUE): Bette Davis, Paul Muni—Good picture. Running time, 90 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Small town patronage.

HOLLYWOOD HOTEL: Dick Powell, Lane Sisters —It looks very much like this man Powell is very much washed up here. The picture just barely grossed the rental which is the first time for him, and I hope this is the last. This is not the usual Powell picture. It was disconnected, draggy and very dull in spots. Benny Goodman's Band was no extra drawing power. I would say that if you bought it right, okay, but if not, go easy. Running time, 109 minutes. Played June 26-27-28.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

INVISIBLE MENACE: Boris Karloff, Marie Wilson —Played this two weeks after "West of Shanghai" and it drew good. More power to Karloff. Give us more of his pictures.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, N. S., Canada.

JEZEBEL: Bette Davis, Henry Fonda, George Brent—Positively no box office draw. The kind of a picture the aristocracy pretend they like because it's the "thing." I believe we had more dislikes than likes on this picture. Played June 24-25.—Rudolph Covi, Covi Theatre, Herminie, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

JEZEBEL: Bette Davis, Henry Fonda, George Brent—Heavy drama with Southern locale, 1852. Having to do with Southern life and chivalry. Pleased. Running time, 104 minutes.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

KID COMES BACK, THE: Wayne Morris, June Travis—Clever action comedy drama. Good for Friday-Saturday, or double. Played July 1-2.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

LIFE OF EMILE ZOLA: Paul Muni, Gale Sondergaard—Must say this is sure a breadwinner. The producers can sure be proud of this and our boxoffice felt the same way. Play it. You can't miss this. Running time, 116 minutes.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, N. S., Canada.

LITTLE MISS THOROUGHBRED: Ann Sheridan, John Litel, Janet Chapman—Pleased the ladies. Little Miss Chapman stole a few hearts. Personally I think Miss Sheridan is tops. With her looks and ability I don't see why she isn't given better roles. I believe she would be on top in a short while. Running time, 65 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town patronage.

LOVE, HONOR AND BEHAVE: Wayne Morris, Priscilla Lane—Good program picture. Running time, 71 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold. Iowa. Small town patronage.

PENROD AND HIS TWIN BROTHER: Billy and Bobby Mauch, Frank Craven, Spring Byington, Philip Hurlic—An excellent little picture that the little colored boy took for his own. The poorest acting the twins have done to date but the colored boy and the dog saved the show. Excellent audience appeal. Running time, 63 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SERGEANT MURPHY: Ronald Reagan, Mary Maguire—Passed okay as the weak sister on a double feature. Running time, 63 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town patronage.

SWING YOUR LADY: Humphrey Bogart, Louise Fazenda, Nat Pendleton, Frang McHugh, Allen Jenkins, Penny Singleton, Elvira Weaver and Brothers—Here is a feature that will go over in the small town. A goofy comedy that really gives them plenty of laughs. The customers complained that they didn't get enough of the Weaver Brothers and Elviry. Played with "Quintupland" and business was just a little above the average. Played June 5-6.—Bill Simon, Rialto Theatre, Saguache, Col. Rural and small town patronage.

WHITE BANNERS: Claude Rains, Fay Bainter, Jackie Cooper, Bonita Granville—Very good. A picture of family life. The story is told in a simple direct manner; there are no heroics, but fine acting and skilful directing together with the work of the cast.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

Short Subjects

Educational

CACTUS CABALLEROS: Two-Reel Comedies—I didn't care for this short particularly and as I don't think the appeal to the general public is any too good I cannot give this short my endorsement. Running time, 20 minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

CUPID TAKES A HOLIDAY: Two-Reel Comedies—Wish the producers of these silly things would "take a holiday." They're terrible!—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

GANDY THE GOOSE: Terry-Toons—O. K. Cartoons almost always are well received. Good time filler. You're safe in booking it and your patrons will appreciate it. I publish my own weekly paper, "The Schroon Lake Observer." Write me enclosing stamp for free copy. You may get some ideas from it. Running time, eight minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

GREY OWL'S LITTLE BROTHER: Treasure Chest —Has a good moral, and if you are a lover of animals or cater to old ladies who are, book it. Shows the life of a beaver and how Grey Owl, an Indian, befriends the beavers. Running time, 11 minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

HOW TO DANCE THE SHAG: Arthur Murray and His Shag Dancers—A very good short that the younger folks especially are likely to enjoy. Teaches how to do the shag and should find a place on every manager's program. Feature this short in all advertising for extra revenue. Running time, 10 minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N.Y. Small town and summer patronage.

JITTERBUGS: Two-Reel Comedies—O.K. Not too good and not too bad. Will pass.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

SAW MILL MYSTERY, THE: Terry-Toons—Anybody that has read any of my other reports knows what I think of Terry-Toons. Absolutely N. G.—Richard C. Welch, Comique Theatre, Camden, Maine.

Columbia

BLUEBIRD'S BABY: Color Rhapsody—This one was just about the cleverest and the cutest reel that the patrons had ever seen and they lost no time in asking for more of them. The coloring was perfect. Running time, 9 minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash.

CADET CHAMPIONS: Special Sport Thrills—All about West Point athletic training.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

DOGGONE MIXUP: Harry Langdon—Harry Langdon tries a comeback disguised with a bewhiskered upper lip. Shave them off, Harry, we knew it was you all the time.—Rudolph Covi, Covi Theatre, Herminie, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

HEALTHY, WEALTHY AND DUMB: The Three Stooges—These sure are knockouts. Running time, 21 minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash.

LYIN' HUNTER, THE: Krazy Kat Cartoons—Just fair colored cartoon.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

SAD LITTLE GUINEA PIGS: Krazy Kat Cartoons—Columbia is making a bad bet if they do not continue this series of the guinea pigs. They have an appeal to the grownups as well as the kids. Running time, 11 minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash.

TIMBERLAND REVELS: Broadway Follies—Not so hot. Running time, 11 minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash.

TIME OUT FOR TROUBLE: Charlie Chase—These Chase comedies are rapidly coming to the front as headline comedy attractions. Running time, 21 minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash.

UNUSUAL HUNTING: Special Short Thrills—As the title implies, it was the most unusual short subject that I have ever run and have ever seen. It was very well received. Running time, 11 minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash.

WRONG MISS WRIGHT, THE: Charlie Chase—O.K. Charlie Chase comedy.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

MGM

CAME THE BRAWN: Our Gang—Not so hot. These comedies seem to have lost their pep with us. Will have to do better to keep up the standard of the past. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

CANDID CAMERAMANIACS: Pete Smith Specialties—Very fine. Nice for picture snapshot tie-up.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

CAPTAIN AND THE KIDS: These cartoons are tiresome and uninteresting.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich.

CLEANING HOUSE: Captain and the Kids—The world's worst cartoons. If a company as large as MGM ever puts out another series such as this they had better hide their heads in shame. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

FISHY TALES: Our Gang—Good.—Richard C. Welch, Comique Theatre, Camden, Maine.

GIVE TILL IT HURTS: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—These "Crime Doesn't Pay Series" are a credit to the film industry, both instructive and entertaining.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Canada.

KING WITHOUT A CROWN: Historical Mysteries—Very fine, instructive.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Canada.

MUSIC MADE SIMPLE: Robert Benchley—The next day a patron asked me where we got that poor short. Running time, 10 minutes.—Richard C. Welch, Comique Theatre, Camden, Maine.

NEWS OF THE DAY: I have four day news and sure do get very good shots. Thanks, Metro, for the good work. Running time, 10 minutes.—Leo A. Backer, Roxy Theatre, Browns Valley, Minn. General patronage.

STOCKHOLM, PRIDE OF SWEDEN: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—FitzPatrick seems to have the answers when it comes to travel talks.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Canada.

RURAL SWEDEN: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—Beautiful but rather dull, even in a Scandinavian community. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn.

STORY OF DR. CARVER: Pete Smith Specialties—Very interesting. I believe more reels of this type would counter-balance some of these goofy features we have to run. This short should be played, in the north anyway. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn.

SAYS WOLFSON OF "DR. CARVER"

The other day R. B. Wilby, down in Atlanta, enclosed, incidental to a letter to Terry Ramsaye, a bit of interoffice communication from his circuit, which read:

Montgomery, Alabama
July 6, 1938

To: Mr. J. H. Harrison

The Pete Smith MGM subject, "The Story of Dr. Carver," is without a doubt one of the finest and most interesting short subjects this theatre has ever played. The subject is tensely interesting throughout and is very well done and is especially interesting here due to the fact that Dr. Carver is so widely known in this territory. Of all the short subjects we have played in this theatre, this is the first one that got applause after each showing so the audience must like it.

WM. N. WOLFSON

Paramount

CRIME FIGHTERS: Paragraphics—A very interesting short on modern crime fighting. Running time, 10 minutes.—Cecil Ward, Stone Theatre, Bassett, Va. Small town and factory patronage.

HONEST LOVE AND TRUE: Betty Boop Cartoons—An excellent little black and white. Better than the usual run of this season. Running time, six minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

HOUSE BUILDER-UPPER, THE: Popeye the Sailor—Popeye scores again. Running time, eight minutes.—Cecil Ward, Stone Theatre, Bassett, Va. Small town and factory patronage.

KILLER OF THE TONTO: Paragraphics—Another animal picture. Music on this short very poor and too sensational. I didn't like it. Don't think it will go with the majority of your patrons. I advise you not to book it. Running time, nine minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

RKO-Radio

BUCKAROO BROADCAST: Ray Whitley and Six Bar Boys—A fair musical with a lot of mediocre cowboy songs. Running time, 20 minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash.

DONALD'S BETTER SELF: Donald Duck—Very good. Running time, 8 minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash.

MARCH OF TIME: No. 10—They get better as they go along. Running time, 18 minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash.

MORNING JUDGE: Edgar Kennedy—The usual Kennedy antics screened with a little different angle. As a drawing card they are not so hot but as a program filler they are good. Running time, 19 minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash.

Twentieth Century-Fox

LAUGHING AT FATE: Adventures of the Newsreel Cameraman—This deals with people who risk their necks in order to make some money and entertain people. It's o.k. but nothing to rave about. If you want, give it a try. You can't lose much.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

MOVIETONE NEWS: Good. Lew Lehr's comedy touch brings a few laughs into this newsreel as well as the other news and national problems. Running time, nine minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

Universal

GOING PLACES WITH LOWELL THOMAS: Unquestionably the best short. We have played all of them for years. The music and other arrangements are perfect. They give your patrons food for thought and will keep them coming back for more.—Jesse L. Lausman, Hill Top Theatre, Louisville, Ky. Neighborhood patronage.

HOLLYWOOD SCREEN TEST: Universal Special—The Sunday crowd found this a very interesting subject.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich.

STRANGER THAN FICTION SERIES: Unquestionably the best short. We have played all of them for years. The music and other arrangements are perfect. They give your patrons food for thought and will keep them coming back for more.—Jesse L. Lausman, Hill Top Theatre, Louisvlile, Ky. Neighborhood patronage.

Vitaphone

FORGET-ME-KNOTS: Bernice Claire—Will get by. Running time, 20 minutes.—Richard C. Welch, Comique Theatre, Camden, Maine.

FREDDIE RICH AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—All Band shorts are very good. Running time, 10 minutes.—Leo A. Backer, Roxy Theatre, Browns Valley, Minn. General patronage.

GOT A MATCH: Broadway Brevities—This company has not given us a Brevity worth writing about this season. This one is no better nor poorer than the balance. Running time, 20 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

INJUN TROUBLE: Looney Tunes—A clever little black and white cartoon that the kids liked. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

ISLE OF THE PINGO PONGO: Merry Melody No. 57 Technicolor—This is one of the best shorts I've seen on any screen, and has been highly commended by my patrons, who have asked me to repeat the booking. Audience consisting of many vacationists who are accustomed to better type entertainment, advise me it is the cleverest thing done in animation, including any subject made by Walt Disney.—Charles Rossi, Strand Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y.

LITTLE RED WALKING HOOD: Merrie Melodies—Very good and the color is getting more perfect all the time. Running time, 8 minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash.

MAN WITHOUT A COUNTRY, THE: Broadway Brevities—This is one of the outstanding short subjects of the year. One that every man, woman and child should see. A great credit to the famous book.—Erma L. Raeburn, Grand Theatre, Lemmon, S. D. Small town patronage.

NOW THAT SUMMER IS GONE: Merrie Melodies—Very good cartoon, but not for the hottest day of the year when I played it. Nice color. Running time, 8 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn.

PETER VAN STEDEN AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—Warners have given us better musicals.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

SKI FLIGHT: Vitaphone Varieties—Played this one on a day and evening when the thermometer register was about high as it could be and then seeing this fellow play around on skiis made one forget the heat. Warner shorts are sure tops. Running time, 11 minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash.

UNDER THE WIRE: Joe and Asbestos—A comedy good enough to bring laughs to our Saturday night crowd. Just fair. Running time, 20 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

WEDDING YELLS: Ken Murry, Oswald—Terrible. They just can't make two reel comedies that are worth running and the sooner they find it out, the better it will be for all concerned. How we will fill the short footage schedules, I don't know, but rather than run two reelers that are really tragedies, I for one will pick up the novelties and all the pictorials and travelogues I can secure to fill out the show. I won't have to apologize for them at least.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

WOODS ARE FULL OF CUCKOOS: Merrie Melodies—These short subjects are really coming to the front.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash.

Serials

Republic

LONE RANGER, THE: Lee Powell, Herman Brix—I gave the first episode a good send-off with a very good vaudeville act, but it fell down terribly the next week and hasn't done anything for itself since.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich.

IN COURTS

Ising's Reorganization Petition Approved

Approval to the petition of Harman Ising Corporation, cartoon producers, for reorganization under Section 77B, was granted this week by Leon Jankwich, federal judge in Hollywood. The court set August 8th as the date for a full hearing by interested parties.

The approval provided for continuance of company operations under the present management pending the hearing.

The corporation's product has been released through Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer but no new distribution deal has been made with MGM.

20th Century-Fox Gets Ruling

Federal Judge Vincent Leibell has ordered William L. Gross, as assignee of the creditors of Theatre Magazine Company to show cause as to why his suit for an injunction and an accounting of the profits of the Twentieth Century-Fox picture, "Earl Carroll's 1935 Scandals," should not be dismissed on the ground of insufficiency of fact. The plaintiff brought suit claiming infringement of the August, 1929, cover design of the magazine in the picture.

Approves Compromise

Referee John E. Joyce at a meeting of creditors this week approved the application of Leonard Bronner, Jr., trustee in bankruptcy of the Theatre Trailer Corporation, for a compromise of the claim of Mark Block, president of the bankrupt company, claimed to be based on a chattel mortgage held by him on the furniture and equipment.

Ruling Upheld

The circuit court of appeals this week unanimously upheld a ruling of Federal Judge Robert P. Patterson, which expunged a claim in bankruptcy of the Electrical Products Corporation of California for $8,015 against the Orpheum Circuit, Inc. The order of Judge Patterson, made on March 30th of this year, reversed a decision of Referee Oscar W. Ehrhorn, which allowed Electrical Products' claim in full, and ruled that any right to a claim had been forfeited by the claimant.

Permits Release of Films

Federal Judge William Bondy this week granted application of the French Motion Picture Corporation, now in reorganization, to allow J. Louis Geller to pay the United States $965 to release two French motion pictures, "Avec Le Sourire" and "Angel" now being held in bond at the Custom House, New York. Under the agreement which Judge Bondy approved, the pictures will be exhibited and the net proceeds will be equally shared by Mr. Geller and the French Motion Picture Corporation.

Withdraws Suit

Sam Hoffman, former trade paper journalist, who was suing Columbia Pictures Corporation for $200,000 claiming that the picture "Racketeers in Exile" contained material from his story, "Command Performance," which had been submitted to the studio earlier, withdrew his claim this week.

AARON SAPERSTEIN

Saperstein Dies; Exhibitor and Allied Leader

Aaron Saperstein, for many years president of Allied Theatres of Illinois, and long an exhibitor leader of prominence in the country, died in Chicago Sunday suddenly of a heart attack. He was 42 years old. Surviving are his widow and two sons, Henry and Seymour.

Mr. Saperstein had visited New York late last week in connection with the demands of independent exhibitors of Chicago that Balaban and Katz eliminate duals and comply with certain other requests on policy. Mr. Saperstein discussed the matter with Paramount officials at the home office.

Starting as an errand boy for the Globe theatre in Chicago at the age of 14, Mr. Saperstein became inspector, clerk, booker, salesman and assistant manager. He joined Mutual Film Company as assistant manager and became general manager in Chicago. Then he operated an independent exchange for two years. Later he branched into exhibition, taking a theatre on the site of the former Chicago Stadium.

At the time of his death he was operating several theatres in Chicago, including the Lexington and the Avon. He was elected president of the Allied Theatres of Illinois and had retained the post for eight consecutive terms up to the time he died.

Interment was held Tuesday in the Waldheim Cemetery in Forest Park. Pallbearers were Barney and John Balaban, Edward Silverman, Ben Bartelstein, Julius Goodman, Charles Nelson, Joe Stern, Samuel Roberts and Alderman Jacob M. Arvey. Honorary pallbearers were Ludwig Sussman, Henri Elman, Abe Gumbinger, Jack Rose, Phil Dunas, Jack Osserman, John Mednikow, Ben Lasker, Jules Rubens and Samuel Trinz.

Mr. Saperstein was a member of Mecca Lodge, A. F. and A. M. Lake View Lodge, B'Nai B'Rith, the Congregation Anshe Emet and the Covenant Club.

J. E. Grimm

J. E. Grimm, 66, former manager of the Orpheum theatre, Darlington, Wis., died suddenly this week of a heart attack at his home there.

OBITUARIES

W. Tom Blair Dies

W. Tom Blair, 51, for the last 15 years a district sales manager for the Griffith Amusement Company died after a long illness on his farm near Alma, Ark., last week. He retired to the farm six months ago. Prior to his connection with Griffith he operated theatres in Poteau, Fairfax, Tonkawa and Enid in Oklahoma as well as Lubbock, Pampa and Borger in Texas.

Webster Cullison

Webster Cullison, former stage and screen director employed in the Hollywood Bureau of Quigley Publications for the last seven years died last week. A long time member of the Troupers and the 233 Club he is survived by his widow, Lucis Cullison, and his mother.

J. J. Strickland

J. J. Strickland, 57, former chief counsel for Publix Theatres, Inc., and lately chief counsel for Interstate Circuit, Inc., died of a heart attack at the Medical Surgical Hospital in San Antonio last week. As state senator he fostered the bill which resulted in the repeal of "Blue Laws" banning Sunday films.

William Kriesel

William A. Kriesel, 57, connected with the La Crosse Theatre Company, La Crosse, Wis., for many years, died last week.

George Appleby

George Appleby, 58, director of the Music Box, Blue Mouse and Playhouse theatres of the Hamrick-Evergreen circuit, died in Portland, Ore.

J. H. LaVoy

Major J. H. LaVoy, 71, theatre manager of Aurora, Ill., died there this week.

Ohio Cooperative Claims 33 Houses

Cooperative Theatres of Ohio, the buying organization recently formed by Milton A. Mooney, former branch manager for Warner Brothers in Cleveland, reports that it has closed contracts to handle 1938-39 buying for 33 northern Ohio theatres.

The theatres are: Akron—Allen, Dayton, Liberty, Majestic, Nixon, Southern, Spicer and Tivoli; Bedford—Bedford; Carrolton—Virginia; Delphos—Capitol and Star; Lisbon—Lincoln; Lorain—Dreamland and Elvira; Maple Heights—Maple Heights; Maysville—Avalon and Strand; Millerburg—Opera House; Minerva—Roxy; Cleveland—Avalon, Beach Cliff, Corlett, Ezella, Garfield, Jennings, LaSalle, Lorain-Fulton, Lyceum, Madison, New Victory, Parma and Regent.

Hammons Reported Studying GN Plan

E. W. Hammons, president of Educational Pictures, left New York for the coast this week to attend Twentieth Century-Fox sales drive meetings in Los Angeles and San Francisco. Reports that Mr. Hammons would confer with Loyd Wright, trustee for Grand National, revived rumors that he was considering acquisition of the control of that company.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

TONICS NEEDED, NOT LAXATIVES

Well, no—every theatreman doesn't go for the circus method of exploitation. True enough, the majority of members who have been around long enough to know will tell you the old sockeroo and "boom boom" is what the doctor ordered. But others still incline to the less fanciful. They may not subscribe utterly to the striped-pants-and-gardenia school, perhaps, but neither do they look with favor upon Big Top technique as the healthiest blood for a boxoffice transfusion. For instance, there is able Round Tabler E. E. Bair, city manager for Mallers Brothers Theatres in Defiance, Ohio.

In an endeavor to expedite a movement generally toward the revival of circus-like exploitation, as adopted recently by Wilmer & Vincent, your Chairman invited members to contribute, from their files, representative exploitations of the circus-like type, sound enough to repeat or adapt by those so inclined. On following pages are set down various of these contributions, with more to come. Many of the senders included unsolicited endorsements of circus-type exploitation as the industry's most vital current need. However, Mr. Bair feels differently, as follows, which are quotes from his interesting communication on the subject:

"While it is true that I have resorted to this type of exploitation in the past, I am sorry to state I am not decidedly in sympathy with a return of these methods. . . . The industry has spent years and tons of printers' ink trying to get away from the circus ad cycle. Now, why jump back into it—head first? . . . Circus ballyhoo is not going to cure what is wrong. . . . "

Now, let's see. Is the industry trying to get away from the circus-type bally? On certain types of production, no doubt, and wisely. But hardly in so sweeping a manner as "E. E." indicates. If in the past the industry has aimed for conservatism, for more dignity in advertising dress and expression, that tendency has been disregarded, at least, as concerns the many and important "spectacle" pictures recently released and in work. "In Old Chicago", "Hurricane" and "Wells Fargo", for instance, had plenty of inherent boxoffice strength, but a check will reveal that the best business was done in those spots where the dates were "circused" to an old-fashioned fare-thee-well.

No one, even its most ardent enthusiast, confers upon "circusing" the magic of an industry cure-all, nor is it so intended. But we'll lay six-two-and-even that the "boom boom" prescribed intelligently where it is called for can do a heap toward tonic-ing the boxoffice health of theatres weakened by laxative overdoses of conservatism and dignity.

CONGRATULATIONS, LOEW-MEN

Any wholesale transfer of Round Tablers to new situations is to be regarded here as page one news, especially when all of the moves are to larger operations and wider opportunities. Consider, then, of more than passing importance the announcement by J. R. Vogel which moves Loew-men Mike Cullen from Pittsburgh to the home office on special assignment, Charlie Kurtzman from Washington to Pittsburgh, Ed McBride from Syracuse to Providence, Frank Murphy from Wilmington to Syracuse, Harold Burkhardt from Providence to Washington and Edward J. Doob from Norfolk to Wilmington.

From these evidences, among others, it appears the market on theatre manpower continues decidedly bullish. Evidently the boys who belong "up there" eventually get there.

RE: JULY CONTEST—PLEASE NOTE

Due to realignment of releases, "Racket Busters", originally scheduled for July, has been replaced by Warner Bros. with "Cowboy from Brooklyn", which now becomes that company's picture on which theatremen will compete in the July Contest. In order to allow those who intend entering July Contest campaigns on "Cowboy" an equal break in time, the deadline for the Warner attraction has been moved up to August 27th.

All entrants are requested to note, however, that the deadline for the other pictures in the July Contest still remains August 13th, as previously announced. Full details of this summer competition have been carried in the three last issues of Managers' Round Table department.

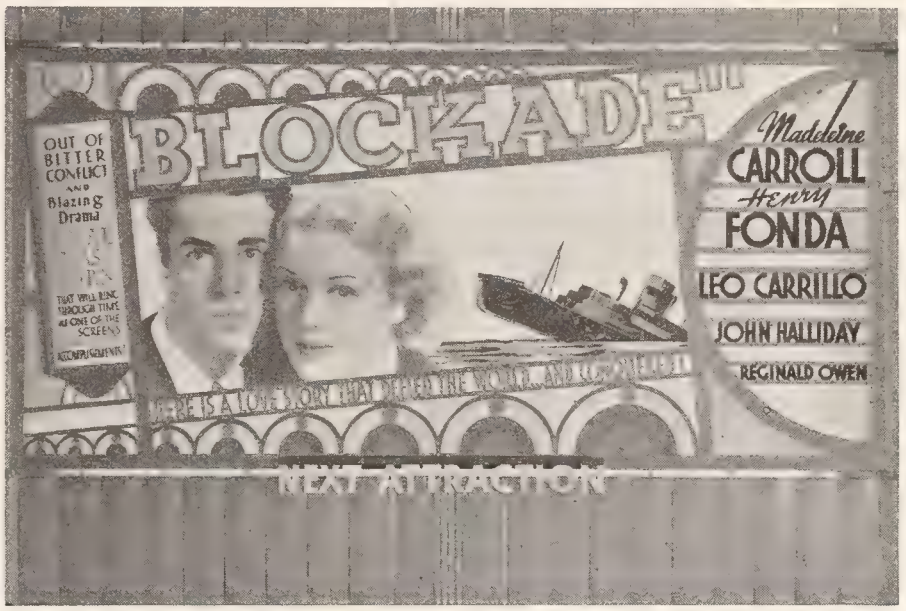
Round Table In Pictures

Columbia's "Is It True What They Say About Hepburn?" teaser campaign in answer to a recent exhibitor blast was tied in neatly to his campaign on "Holiday" by Charles Bierbauer, Wilmer & Vincent's Colonial, Allentown, Pa. Theatremen used the line in a lobby display poster to head rave review on the picture from prominent critics.

To publicize his date of "King Kong" at the Queen, Wilmington, Del., Art Cohn used for his street bally man wearing grotesque oversized papier mache "Kong" head. In addition to doing his tricks atop marquee, photo below shows the bally man seated in front of theatre as Art puts it "reading his favorite trade publication."

Reproduced above is street car float put out by Paramount's publicity department in Buenos Aires under the direction of Guillermo Fox on behalf of the opening of "Buccaneer" at the Gran Teatro Opera.

For "Kid Comes Back" at the Granada, Santa Barbara, Howard Ralston planted boy on step ladder on prominent corner fishing in can. As crowds gathered, boy would pull out the "fish" for their inspection on which was printed "you don't have to fish for laughs, see" etc., etc.



Reported as being one of the best stunts engineered recently by Manager W. C. Ricord, Fox Westlake Theatre, Los Angeles, Cal., was lobby display used to exploit his opening of "100 Men and a Girl." All props used in the set were promoted from the Universal Studios, credit card was planted at side of display.

Outfitting his staff as real hillbillies, Harold Cohen, Embassy Theatre, Lewistown, Pa., sent them around the city as part of his ballyhoo for "Kentucky Moonshine." Boys attended local annual automobile race where their antics attracted considerable attention.

Utilizing shields, spears and pennants actually used in the production, Dave Martin, Fox Bruin, L. A. publicized "Robin Hood." Elsewhere in his foyer, Martin displayed bows, arrows and targets, and silk pennants were hung from chandeliers throughout the house.

Designed by U. A. exploiteer Charles Perry and executed by John Murt, Warners' Philadelphia art head, was this lobby display for "Blockade." Figures of Fonda and Carroll were taken from pressbooks, blown up and printed on transparent muslin lighted from rear.

Detachment of the U. S. 38th Infantry from Fort Douglas in Salt Lake City put on a show at peak hour on the opening of "Yellow Jack" at the Utah Thetare there. Drum corps and detachment paraded through town, attending night show; stunt arranged by Norm Sprowl.

School Ties In Anniversary Week

Under the supervision of Walter Reade, Jr., as reported by Herman Addison, Jr., an extensive campaign was put on to celebrate the first anniversary of the Community Theatre, Toms River, N. J., with the star, Helen Morgan, making a personal apparance and cutting the huge birthday cake as part of the reception.

Local show was produced especially for the occasion and tabbed American Legion Night with appropriate ceremonies on the stage and practically the whole organization in attendance, including their band. All week patrons were urged to save their ticket stubs for a grand drawing held on stage final night of the anniversary, winner receiving $150 cash prize.

Lobby was dressed in gala attire, huge birthday cake promoted from local bakery was on display for week ahead under cellophane and blanks were distributed to patrons in connection with a guessing contest as to how long giant candles would burn.

Schools also were brought into the picture through the staging of three contests: an essay, poster and ad contest. All three are reported to have gotten splendid response, tickets going to winners. Essays were run in papers, posters displayed in lobby and papers split cost of cut on the winning ad and ran same as a news story.

"Beat the Heat"

Crusaders Club Formed For "White Banners"

Following the first showing of "White Banners" at the New York Strand, thirty-five members of the motion picture appreciation class of Junior High School 66, Brooklyn, founded the first chapter of the Crusaders, which will become a national organization to promote "service, peace and courage, victory and hope," under the guidance of the Federation of Women's Clubs.

Mrs. E. K. Herbert, motion picture chairman of the New York State Federation of Women's Clubs, recited the oath to the students and she will organize chapters in thirty or forty more cities in New York State.

"Beat the Heat"

Olympic Champion Aids Turner on "Swiss Miss"

Teaser and display ads accounted for daily representation in the papers for Jerry Turner's "Swiss Miss" opening at the Rex, Beliot, Wis. Franz Hug, 1936 Olympic Champion flag thrower, who appears in the picture, made a personal appearance on stage and cooperated by performing his tricks on busy corners of town. Hug was presented with key to the city and interviewed by newspapers.

Group of girls in Swiss costume distributed samples of Swiss cheese and covered office buildings yodelling Swiss songs. Contest was used in several store windows in which were displayed a large wheel of cheese, shoppers were asked to determine the number of holes therein.

"Tom Sawyer" Revue Staged by Dallas

Modern day Tom Sawyers, costumed in overalls, straw hats, fishing tackle, etc., trooped through the streets of Holdenville, Okla., as part of David Dallas' parade and revue on the stage of the Grand as part of his campaign on that picture. Contacting principals of local schools, theatremen asked them to select five contestants from each school to participate in the parade. Stills of Tommy Kelly were furnished to teachers who helped gather the contentants; each entrant received a prize, winner and runner-up getting a fishing tackle and rifle promoted by Dallas.

Rustic signs were erected near rural schools bearing copy: "Warning, no fishing, see," etc., etc. Week ahead cards were planted in public libraries, "Read Mark Twain's immortal classic," and letters were mailed to all teachers stressing the literary and classic merits of the picture for discussion in classrooms.

Takes 16mm. Pictures

Leo DeWyer, proprietor of the Lake Theatre, Celina, Ohio, had 16 mm. movies made of a four-mile long "Lake Day Parade" which inaugurated the 1938 summer season at Grand Lake. The pictures, which turned out exceptionally well, were shot by Kroger Babb, publicist for Chakeres Theatres, Inc., of Springfield, O. DeWyer obtained a special projecting camera, which enabled him to show the films in his theatre full screen size.

Katz Inaugurates "Lone Ranger" Club

Before leaving the Lane Theatre for the Loyal, New York City, Melvin Katz on "The Lone Ranger" held a special matinee at which prizes and gifts were presented to all children attending opening matinee. Through tieup arranged with local baker whose ad appeared on reverse side, autographed photos of the Lone Ranger were distributed.

Each child attending was given Ranger badge and club card and to those attending all the episodes, special prizes were awarded. Day ahead of opening a Lone Ranger attired in proper fittings, mounted on a white horse, made the rounds of the neighborhood.

"Beat the Heat"

"Woman" Street Bally

A police girl ballyhoo was used successfully by a number of Loew theatres on "There's Always a Woman." Attractive girls, supplied by the Chorus Equity, were dressed in abbreviated police uniforms, and distributed "summonses" to passersby, requesting their appearance at the nearest Loew theatre showing "There's Always a Woman."

"Beat the Heat"

American Flag Trailer

Loew's Advertising department had prepared a short American Flag trailer which was used on every Loew N. Y. screen on July 4th. This trailer will be a stock item in the theatres for use on all national holidays. The musical background used is "Stars and Stripes Forever."

"It's a State of Mind," Says Loew's Ad Head

Summer Hazards Mostly Mental; There Is Business to Be Had, Asserts Oscar A. Doob

In seeking about for further opinions on the so-called summer problem, this department fell happily upon the idea of drafting none other than Oscar A. Doob, to speak a piece. The Loew's Theatres ad chieftain, persuaded that an article from his pen might dispel a lot of doubts, sets forth his views on this page and a right smart job he has done of it, too.

DEAR MIKE:

Thanks for your flattering letter asking me to dash off 200 to 2,000 words giving some thoughts on this summer's boxoffice problems. Most showmen are too busy to read 20 words, not to mention 2,000—but here goes:

This summer differs from most summers of the last 10 or 20 years in one strange way. This summer we—the industry itself—have succeeded in building up for itself a brand new kind of opposition! We've turned on the kind of heat no cooling plant can combat! It's a kind of competition harder to lick than beaches, amusement parks, golf, night baseball, good roads and all the summer bugaboos put together.

This new opposition is the nation-wide (I assume it has seeped into the smaller communities) pessimism about the movies; that dark, gloomy feeling that the movies are on the down-grade; that it is a great risk to buy a movie ticket with all the chances against getting your money's worth; that Hollywood is nuts; that the stars are poison; that show-business is racing to hell!

Must Counteract Opposition

In my humble opinion, Mike, the first job of this particular summer, is to try to counteract this self-produced opposition. We must try to snap the moviegoer out of the mood that he is taking too long a chance when he buys a ticket. Right now, thanks to the rugged individualism in our industry, the moviegoer, if he reads, must say to himself: "It can't be a good picture, this is July and there aren't any good pictures; let's go for a ride or a swim." Ana your cooling plant wastes its zephyrs on deserted seats!

And that, I think, is the urgent problem of the moment: First, let showmen snap out of the gloom themselves. You say that a lot of the boys seem to be "hanging on the ropes gasping for solid showmanship ideas." There really isn't any reason for the gasping or the hanging, except that it seems to be a popular thing this summer to view with alarm. So business is off—but it probably isn't off nearly as much as 90 per cent of the other businesses in any given community. And it would be off less if the boys in our topsy-turvy business didn't blow hot and cold so readily. The potential patronage of any theatre you mention is as much interested in the movies today as it ever was. Nothing, so far, has come to replace the movies.

After selling ourselves that the movies are still the prime, low-priced entertainment of this generation, the second thing is for showmen to do everything possible to sell the public that all's well with the movies and that this summer, like last, has its full share of money's-worth entertainment value. The best way to do that is to forget it's summer and high-power every good picture you get.

So far as the Loew Circuit is concerned, we do not grade our selling activities to the season. We try to stay in high-gear all year. J. R. Vogel, in charge of out-of-town theatres, and C. C. Moskowitz, chief of the New York circuit, have never called the advertising department and said: "It's summer; no use trying for business; pull down your sails; stop trying; just coast along until fall."

For instance, we service our out-of-town theatres with what we call a "portfolio service" on all circuit attractions. Art Schmidt, handling that department, has no instructions to prepare "summer portfolios" or "winter portfolios." Perspiration may drip into his typewriter, but theoretically he's supposed to help our theatres sell every attraction for all it's worth.

Claims Business Can Be Had

This summer thing is a gag. It furnishes beautiful alibis to those who can't resist that desire to relax when the golf season opens. Except in rare cases, you can't do as much business in the hot weather as in winter—but you can do enough business to make it well worth your while to keep the theatre open.

A lot of kids go to camp in the summer—but a lot more of them stay in town. A lot of the teen-age fans hie themselves to beaches and other open-air amusements—but even open-air necking isn't a seven-night occupation and you can get 'em at least one night a week if you don't give up without a struggle.

There are many reasons for letting down and slowing up in summer—if you're looking for them. But the fact remains that the movie business is really less seasonal than many other businesses. Business is harder to get in summer, but there are theatres that did 90 per cent business with "Three Comrades" during the first hot blasts of this summer. Several of the still-standing Loew circuit records were made in summer.

There is no cure-all panacea or recipe that fits every situation. But there is a frame of mind that fits 'em all. And that is to forget it's summer, except to realize that summer presents a special resistance to sales, but hardly more resistance than a blizzard in winter.

Of course, the theatre without air-conditioning is at a disadvantage, just as theatres without a heating plant would be out of luck in the winter. If you have a cooling plant, keep on reminding the public about it. Air-conditioning has become commonplace; we're too apt to take it for granted. But it's still a good idea to keep on reminding a sweltering public that you have a cool spot for them.

Once a showman decides he is not too tired and that the problem isn't hopeless, then he can search around and analyze the local situation. By picking out every avenue to publicity, exploitation and advertising, he'll keep his theatre ALIVE during the summer. Shoot your publicity arrows at the spots where the crowds are. You won't send heralds to a school that's closed, but you'll find ways of reaching the kids who are in town—probably 80 or 90 per cent of 'em don't go away to camps.

Editors and publishers are human. They take a keen interest in the business welfare of the real estate boys, the auto dealers, the department stores—and when things are bad for those groups they often lend a helping hand. Why not get the same help for your business? Dark theatres are a liability to the newspapers. They want to keep you open and advertising. A frank discussion of your problem with the publishers will bring a response in most instances. With that receptive mood established, feed the papers cheerful, optimistic stuff—the kind of printed "conversation" that will counteract the unfavorable stuff of the last few months. There really are a flock of good pictures being released in July and August; plenty to talk about and prove that there are good pictures in summer.

I really believe that this summer problem is a state of mind. If any exhibitor can get into the way of thinking that there is profitable business to be had—in July and August—then he can take each attraction and weigh its selling possibilities and go after every group of moviegoers who are likely ticket-buying prospects. Such a campaign might include everything from telephone calls to a special billboard at a beach. But if one says "What's the use, it's summer," the boxoffice is licked before it opens.

Loew's right now is trying to wage a campaign to get over the idea that "Loew's Has the Pictures—in July." We plan to open the new "Fall season" earlier than usual, in mid-August. We are trying to stay in high-gear—and the results are not entirely unsatisfactory! It's a frame of mind.

PROVEN CIRCUS-TYPE EXPLOITATION

In the wake of the announcement by Wilmer & Vincent circuit executives of a return to circus methods of exploitation to build grosses, there has been quite a bit of action in other situations to the same end. With this in mind, your Round Table queried various of the members for details on what they regarded as their most representative circus-type exploitation campaigns in the past and set down briefly on these pages are the ideas selected in answer.

"BEAT THE HEAT"

Thomason Goes "Circus" To Sell Comedy Date

For the benefit of a laff picture played while he was at the Crystal, in Ellis, Kan., R. M. Thomason (now at the Uptown, Sedalia, Mo.) put together an advance featured by the line "The Circus of Fun Is Coming" and the date, purposely withholding the title until later. This was carried out in wide distribution of small heralds and to add interest while the trailer was run, Thomason had one of the staff dressed in clown costume lead a small dog fastened with a giant piece of rope across the stage while on the grand drape was a 24-sheet that folded when the curtain opened.

Following, all the house staff was dressed in "clown" and title chest banners. Circus type heralds were distributed in the draw area, bannered parade wagons made up to resemble regular circus vehicles with animal cages and bandwagons. These made all the surrounding towns where parades were organized. The clowns performed in the manner of regular circus comics and in front of the theatre, the day ahead. Thomason planted a "walking bicycle" of his own construction, offering prizes to those able to ride it. The rest of the campaign was in keeping.

Sign-Painter Stunt Works for Soriero

Among the smart ideas recalled by Tom Soriero, now skippering the United Artists Theatre, Los Angeles, was a sign-painting bally put on for "Street Singer," while at the Rochester, Rochester, N. Y. Since the date was one of the first talking pictures Soriero employed the theatre side wall which could be seen from a distance in most directions and had two skilled sign men painting the picture display for a week ahead. What collected the crowds was that the painters were attired as women and a lot of laughs were gathered when the vagrant breezes blew up the skirts of the painters, revealing colored bloomers.

During the war, while at the Park, in Boston, Soriero used the community-sacred Commons to advertise a picture called "Battle Cry of Peace." Under cover of darkness, Tom took a squad of carpenters and had them erect a 24-stand on the most prominent corner of the Commons where the date was billed. Since, at that time, everything was under government control, Soriero says it took almost an act of Congress to have the board removed after it had remained up for a number of weeks.

MINSTREL SHOW, PARADE SELECTED BY LEIGHTON

What's become of the old-time minstrel show and bally? Sounds good enough for a repeater the way Bert Leighton tells about it in using a local troupe with "Mammy" for a stage show date and street parade every day around noon, years back when Bert was with the Fabian circuit. Minstrels carried theatre banners and covered the main business district.

Street Floats and Parades Feature Harris Campaigns

Milt Harris, Loew Theatre Cleveland division ad head, reports a number of sockaroos that worked well, including a huge street float for "Broadway Melody," title in cutout letters, and a lot of good lookers in costume, sitting within and around the letters. Records of the hit tunes were amplified through loudspeakers. Playing "Good Earth" during the time of the Cleveland Exposition, rickashaws used on the grounds were employed to carry girls holding lettered parasols, also on the downtown streets.

For "Vogues," an auto parade of bannered open cars was organized, each carrying mannikins attired in the latest styles provided by cooperating store and brought to the theatre daily for fashion revue in lobby. During Easter Week, a bevy of good lookers, appropriately costumed, were used to distribute tagged Easter flowers, tagged with theatre and attractions. On "Captains Courageous," tieup was arranged with the Byrd South Pole Ship at the Exposition for guest tickets in a prize contest and on "Come on, Marines," local Leathernecks and their band paraded.

Hodges Erects Stage On Theatre Marquee

Listed among his top stunts by Jack Hodges, now at the State, Cocoa, Fla., was a tiein on "42d Street" put over for the Tampa Theatre, in Tampa. On the marquee Hodges erected stage with a background of title letters in colored lights and each night during the run of the date, Jack had local singing and dancing stars perform before large audiences of a size that had to be handled by special police. On the corner, Hodges used a clown cop with an old-fashioned "stop and go" platform, which also played to large crowds, and another "stopper" proved to be an authentic horse-drawn hansom cab imported from New York, used to transport patrons to the theatre. Recommended, too, by Jack for a successful repeat, was his idea of tying a balloon 300 feet above the theatre roof to which were planted loud-speakers through which was announced to Tampa that "42d Street" was in town.

Wild Animals and Parades Top Charninsky Offerings

It was in the interest of "Circus Clown" that Louie Charninsky put on one of his well-known parades, featuring six high school bands, steam calliope borrowed from local carnival, wild animals borrowed from the zoo, clowns, tumblers and a fleet of bannered cars. On another Joe E. Brown picture Louie set up a giant cutout head of the star with mouth open, and offered passes to patrons throwing baseballs into the opening. For a recent jungle picture, Charninsky was able to borrow the zoo's largest lion for lobby display and reports it as his top attention-getter. In other instances on similar dates, all manner of other wild animal displays have brought fine display results.

The "Hopalong Cassidy" dates have given Louie many opportunities for colorful lobbies, by use of rustic board fronts to simulate ranch houses, Indian trick-rope artist and bally-man in full cowboy regalia. Stalls in lobby holding horse and rider has also attracted.

Boy Bicycle Bally Repeated by Johnson

So good that he worked it again on a recent date was the street bicycle parade organized by Bill Johnson for "Hit Parade" at the Opera House, Millinocket, Me. Johnson used 12 to 15 boys with their own bikes, each equipped with signs containing either theatre name, feature, playdates or members of the cast. Boys decorated the bikes with crepe paper and other colorful material around the theatre and covered every street in town in exchange for passes. Attention was drawn to the bally by sounding horns and bells. Stunt landed publicity.

Morris Advises Pet Parade As Top Attention-Getter

Recommended as his most effective street stunt by Seymour Morris is a "kids' pet parade" which he has used at Schine's State, Cortland, N. Y. Youngsters parade in costume carrying or leading their pets and merchants sponsor the event by awarding prizes for the best costumes and winning pets. Judging is done on the theatre stage, where the parade ends. Where possible, added stage attraction of comedy acrobats, tumblers, etc., is advised, and Morris finds best results obtained at a Saturday matinee.

Also recalled by Morris is a picture with a circus story which was exploited by the house personnel attired in clown costume and wearing lettered chest banners. Lobby was dressed with serpentine and balloons, and in center was placed small sawdust circus ring with cutouts of the stars and wild animals, with scene stills cut into the beaver board. Canvas top covered the ring with the title of the picture encircling. Canvas canopy was also strung along the marquee to give the front appearance of a "front entrance."

Boucher Jumps Circus With Parade for "Circus"

While operating the Universal houses in Winchester, Va., Frank Boucher, through cooperation of the city fathers, ascertained date of local appearance of the Walter Main circus, which featured an elaborate street parade. Boucher hastily booked in a showing of "The Circus" to start the same day of the circus, then secured a permit for his own parade to start just ahead of the circus procession and over the same route. Colored arrows, reading "This Way to the Circus" were posted on trees, telegraph poles, all over town from the circus grounds to the theatre. The circus people endeavored to outmanoeuver Frank's parade out of its position with frequent stops of the circus bally, however, Boucher replied in kind by stopping his own procession as often.

Frank's quickly organized parade was composed of high school band, decorated trucks and cars, rented stuffed animals. Along the route of march boys distributed circulars advertising the picture. The Big Top executives were very hot under the collar, says Boucher, and tried to stop the parade, but the theatreman was too strong locally and put it over for big returns. Incidentally, that's one good way of licking the tough opposition of a visiting circus and Frank thinks it can be worked again wherever the situation is serious.

Machine Gun Barrage Tells 'Em for Krendel

It was on "Forgotten Men," a war picture, that Dan Krendel thought up the idea for a private battle on his marquee, while at the Capitol, in Windsor, Ont. Sand-bag entrenchments covered the marquee on all sides, tin hats and machine guns were planted along the bags. Krendel then supplied some of the ushers with a lot of blank machine gun cartridges and told them to go ahead. Between the firing and warlike bugle calls, there was plenty of excitement, until the district business men asked Dan to soft-pedal the gag since all their help would rush to the street when the "war" broke out. Krendel substituted fireworks display at night, letting off bombs, rockets, roman candles, etc., which proved as effective.

The reliable "deaf-couple" gag is also fancied by Krendel which stirred up a lot of interest for him on "Common Clay," as he recalls. For those unacquainted with the procedure, Dan gives the details. He hired a couple of vaudeville actors, who from their own wardrobes made up as aged rubes, one carrying a long, exaggerated ear-horn. For three days ahead, they made the city, elbowing their way into crowded street cars, the man of the duo shouting a rehearsed spiel into the apparently deaf spouse's ear-horn. With a lot of what's and whens, and repetition of the stars, picture, playdates, theatres, etc., Dan says there were few car-riders who did not know of the attraction. Street car conductors, of course, were in on the gag after the first day, but played along by permitting the duo to operate.

"YANK" CHEER LEADERS TELL 'EM FOR RALSTON

For his date on "Yank at Oxford" at Warners' Granada, Santa Barbara, Cal., Howard Ralston organized a parade of bannered "jallopies" as a welcome to Robert Taylor. At each corner, motorcycle escort would pull up, collegiates would leap from the cars, form a group, and follow the cheer leaders in a loud "rah, rah, rah," for the star, picture and theatre.

"Color Week" Campaign Is Billings' Choice

To call attention to "Becky Sharp," one of the first all-color pictures, Billings Booth, then at the Winter Garden, Jamestown, N. Y., sold all the merchants on the theatre block the idea of an "Uptown Color Week," putting it over through a recently formed merchants' association. Billings pointed out the sales advantages in plugging colorful new merchandise and when the stores responded, Booth started with a drive ahead on "Paris in Spring," so that those participating could use the title of the picture.

Accompanied successfully, Billings was able to sell the city fathers on allowing him to decorate the streets for the following date on "Sharp," which was put over with varicolored streamers, banners, lighting, etc. All store windows were again in keeping, and to top the campaign a special newspaper section was featured with a co-op page in color. The color activities covered a period of 17 days.

"Charlie McCarthy" Welcomed By Corker on "Follies" Date

For "Goldwyn Follies" in Athens, Ga., L & J city manager Moon Corker decided to welcome Charlie McCarthy to town and secured cooperation of the local papers to work the stunt. The Mayor and other civic heads plus a lot of other prominents were brought in to help and a parade planned.

On opening day some 50 decorated cars were at the station to meet "Bergen" (a local ventriloquist) and his dummy, who were placed in a bannered car filled with beauty winners in a college contest. Preceded by police escort with sirens screaming, the parade made the main streets and the University campus, the procession lasting over an hour and joined by numerous other cars en route. Parade wound up at the City Hall, where "Bergen" and "Charlie" were officially welcomed and given the key to the city. In a contest tied in with department store for prize of a McCarthy doll, there were hundreds of kids on hand to take in the proceedings. Photographers along the line of march shot lots of stuff for the papers, which featured the party in page one stories.

Danny Crashes All-Star Game With Bally on "Elmer"

When the big league all-star game was played in Cleveland, the Warner bookers dated in "Elmer the Great" to capitalize on the event and Sid Dannenburg worked out a plan to crash the ball park with a bally to plung the picture. Since the folks in charge said thumbs-down on any tieups, in or outside the park, Danny bought a lot of tickets to all parts of the ground, and in the seats planted about 25 youngsters, all dressed in baseball uniform and decorated with processed oilcloth signs, front and back.

The kids were given specific instructions not to remain in their seats, but to keep moving on any pretense, to rest rooms, concession stands, up and down the aisles, until every one in the park had seen the bally, noted the picture title, theatre and date. The results were highly gratifying, Sid reports, to the extent that the papers went for it. And to make sure that no one was missed, Danny even had some extras out front with banners to attract further notice.

Erle Grabs Page One With Indians, Candles

It was in Pittsburgh while doing field work for United Artists that Erle Wright, now Loew's new England district ad head, planted a gag on "Whoopee" involving some visiting Indian tribes, camped in the city parks. Wright invited the redskins to visit the theatre during the run to see the picture and to dine later at prominent restaurant. The Indians, in full regalia, were posed in the lobby long enough to stop traffic and in addition there were crowds following the aborigines as they toured the town. The newspapers played along on the stunt and the city commissioners cooperated by granting permission for the visiting.

Since "Whoopee" was played during the football season, Erle secured a lot of yellow berets lettered with name of staff picture and theatre, made a tieup with schools wherein every student attending wore one of the hats. During intermission, the students went through various formations, winding up by turning their backs to the field so that the lettering was visible to the crowds. Cameramen were on hand to get the shot, the stunt also getting a good plug from all in attendance.

Just ahead of the date on "City Lights" in Pittsburgh, the city had completed a new boulevard up the side of Mount Washington, a high elevation within the city limits. Wright secured hundreds of red-fire candles guaranteed to burn for ten minutes, wired them together in bunches of 10, with long fuses attached, then had the bunches planted all along the boulevard. After dark on the opening night of the picture, a squad of boys ignited the candles so that from below it appeared as if the entire mountain was afire. Thousands were attracted to the scene and newspaper beseiged with inqueries. "Plants" scattered through the crowds informed the curious of the tieup.

Widespread Exploitation Ideas Offered On July Contest Dates

TIEUPS and promotions of all kinds in behalf of the eight pictures in the July Contest are provided by the participating distributors and detailed in the press books on the attractions in question. Advertising directors have striven to round up as many boxoffice aids as possible to aid exhibition dates, and below are outlined just a few of the many effective ideas offered by the home office staffs.

As announced, the July Contest is open to all theatremen playing any of the eight pictures during July. Each of the six companies participating offers one all-expense week's trip to New York for the top campaign on each company's picture or pictures selected for the competition, as follows:

Paramount— "Tropic Holiday"

Nationwide tieup with Sunkist Orange dealers for which the California Fruit Growers' Exchange has provided dealers with 35,000 tiein window posters. Bottled drink tiein with Mission Dry is along similar lines and a fashion hookup with Modern Merchandise Bureau is arranged. Special picture postcard to be mailed from Mexico City, signed by Martha Raye, is also provided. Bob Burns' newspaper column hookup is also explained.

Paramount— "Professor Beware"

Four complete campaigns are offered here for de luxe houses, first-runs, second-runs and neighborhoods. Detailed are sketches and suggestions for comedy lobby and front including the "talking hen" featured in the picture. The famed Lloyd spectacles are also plugged in many ways, as teaser ads, giveaways, etc. Newspaper tieins, a four-day art feature plant and a gag-writing contest. And auto dealer tiein based on the picture also has possibilities.

Warner Brothers— "Cowboy from Brooklyn"

Song title contest successful on previous date has been repeated here. Scene still with clue-caption is run each day with contestants required to write in title of song in picture fitting each still. Parties, contests, floats, ballys, lobbies and tieups, etc., are provided for in a double-spread of 34 detailed ideas. National tieups have been made with Calox tooth powder and Univex home movies. Music hookins and novelty accessories are also outlined.

RKO Radio— "Having Wonderful Time"

Seven contests are outlined here as follows: bathing girl, beauty, red-head, post card, odd camp names, snap shot and anecdote. Each is hooked to either newspapers, service clubs, merchants or to be promoted by the theatre. Traveling ballyhoo using bus with windows framing enlargements of stills or poster cutouts, is detailed. Mailing postcard with message from Ginger Rogers is suggested, as are ideas for lobby, co-op merchants' page and fashion tiein of vacation clothes.

Twentieth Century-Fox— "I'll Give a Million"

Three newspaper tieins are provided. One takes the form of a "spend a million" contest, with readers invited to write on what they would do with that much money. The second is a four-day "stars in disguise" idea with paper running cut of each star to be identified. Third is a "hobo reporter" slant, with prizes given to those spotting the "hobo." Street ballys are also suggested, as is a lucky-money gag. Teaser angles, animated displays and merchant tieins are given.

Twentieth Century-Fox— "Always Goodbye"

Top newspaper contest here is a three-day tiein for woman's page, in which prizes are offered for the best solutions to three problems taken from the situations in the picture. Mat illustrations for contest are available at exchanges. Fashion show to emphasize the clothes angle is also detailed, as is tiein with women's clubs. Radio announcements, fan magazine tiein, safety campaign, are included, as are hookups with doctors, florists, classified page, among others.

United Artists— "Algiers"

National tieups are arranged covering Lanvin, Max Factor, French Line, Montgomery-Ward, Wurlitzer, Modern Merchandise, Lektro-Shavers. Contests cover "famous debuts" idea and best fan letters to Charles Boyer, classified page tiein and a gag-contest on card-"kibitzing," suggested by a sequence in the picture. Also suggested is tiein with locals who have traveled in Algiers, an "Algiers" bazaar for local charities, carriage bally and lobby peep-show.

Monogram— "Romance of the Limberlost"

National promotions are topped with tieins with Screen Book to find Miss Monogram, who appeared in picture and which is to break in "Life" in a descriptive spread. Other fan magazine tieins are listed, as is essay contest with Clover Farm Stores. Among other tieins are Zell products, Postal Telegraph, Consolidated Hats, Roll-a-Door Closets, Adams Hats, Jean Parker Handbags, Lee Knitwear. Newspaper and other slants are listed, including gag idea of a kissing stunt for charity.

Blood-Donor's Movement Aids "Yellow Jack"

To aid the stricken in the Philadelphia district unable to provide for blood transfusions, a blood-donors' movement was inaugurated by the Philadelphia Warnerites under the supervision of zone manager Ted Schlanger in conjunction with local date of "Yellow Jack." Mayor Wilson declared a holiday to honor the Spanish American War veterans, monster parade was held and grandstand was erected on main street, equipped with amplification and radio hookup to broadcast the ceremonies, in which prominent officials participated.

Headquarters were established at the Colonial Theatre by the Stanley-Warner Theatres and the Veterans of the Spanish-American War, where blood-tying was free.

Through tieup with the Philadelphia Health Council, letters carrying the "Yellow Jack" endorsement were sent to entire mailing list, over station WIP a dramatization of the anniversary of the death of Dr. Lazar (the doctor who dies in the picture) was given in addition to various plugs over three other stations. Every drug store was tied up and all publications and bulletins from the drug companies carried recommendations and endorsements of the picture. Libraries were covered with 20,000 bookmarks and cards were placed on the bulletin boards in all hospitals, nurses' homes, health societies, service organizations, etc.

Various Organizations Aid

Philadelphia Ledger interviewed Private John Andrus, former private who served with Major Reed and allowed himself to be used as an experiment. This netted the theatremen a big two-column spread with art work and picture endorsement. Two visual education programs were held daily at health centers, playgrounds, schools, community centers, Big Brother organizations and the like and special screenings were held for army officials, chief resident physicians of all hospitals and superintendents of nurses.

These were the highlights of the campaign as reported for zone manager Steve Barutio by J. M. Flynn, in charge of neighborhood theatres. The theatremen participating in the campaign included Tiny Goldsmith, Cross Keys Theatre; Ben Blumberg, Commodore; Jack Lexey, Broadwav; Sam Phillips, Plaza; Jack Goldman, Imperial, and publicist Al Zimbalist.

Egan Ties "Blockade" to Anti-Jay Walker Campaign

Two uniformed boys helped city police in their anti-jaywalker campaign as part of Pete Egan's "Blockade" date at the Palace, Calgary, Canada. Employees during the forenoon distributed to pedestrians approximately 2,000 cards declaring "This isn't a 'Blockade'—but it is safety first. Your cooperation will prevent accidents." Below was tiein copy for the picture, cards were numbered and to those holding lucky numbers corresponding with those listed at theatre, guest tickets were awarded.

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parentheses after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1937-38 season.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

J C JENKINS—HIS COLYUM

Hastings, Nebraska.

Dear Herald:

Gladys E McArdle of the Owl theatre at Lebannon, Kansas, is peeved at us. She says we overlooked her when we were calling on Mrs. Raeburn of the theatre at Almena. Gee whiz, Gladys, we stand convicted, but you should remember that our mind seems to be slipping. Glad to hear from you and hope you will jump on us again.

Horn & Morgan operate the Star theatre at Hay Springs, Nebraska, and the Star is the most popular and widely known theatre between Rushville and Chadron, and its where the folks all go when they want to see a good show. The boys are HERALD fans and they asked us to have their subscription extended. Thanks, boys, and we will stop and see you when we go to the Big Plunge at Hot Springs, S. D., to take another bath. Hay Springs is where they grow such wonderful potatoes.

The Sun theatre at Gothenburg, Nebraska, is operated by our old cellmate, Glen Van Way, and Gothenburg is right in the center of the finest alfalfa district in the world, and we won't except any world, either. Here they feed thousands of cattle every year and they have two alfalfa meal mills that furnishes alfalfa meal in train loads. Glen ought to be doing a wonderful business in this locality, since he has a lovely theatre.

If you know of anyone who has a longer continuous theatre operating record than B. W. Merrill of the Lyric theatre at Edgar, Neb., he wants to hear from you. He says that next January he will have rounded out thirty continuous years in the business. We'll bet the last nickel we've got on B. W. The producers in Hollywood should remember this boy for working for them for thirty years without a vacation. He, too, wants his subscription to the HERALD extended. Thanks, B. W.

Harmon & McNab are a couple of boys that everybody ought to know. Their Rex theatre at Orchard, Nebraska, seems to be the rallying place for all lovers of entertainment. The boys have a reputation for giving them about the best there is in that line. Not only that, but Orchard is in the center of a great deal of shelterbelt activities, and here is where Uncle Sam's boys are active killing jackrabbits, and Harmon says he never goes out of town without wearing leather chaps to keep the rabbits from biting him.

R. R. Bailey operates the Royal theatre at Ainsworth, Neb., and R. R. wants the HERALD, says he don't see how he can get along without it. We don't either. The fact is that the HERALD is as necessary to a theatreman as Joe E. Brown is to the box office.

Bert Beams operates the Auditorium at Red Cloud, Neb. That's where they are shipping out so much wheat, and he also has the Sunbeam at Geneva and the Lyric at Sutton. Bert says all of these theatres need the HERALD. Somehow that boy Bert always seems to know just the right thing to do, except when we call on him he never seems to realize our fondness for huckleberry pie. Doggone the doggone luck anyhow.

Up at Lake Benton, Minnesota, is where the boys get so many mallard ducks, and O. J. Rosco has the Majestic theatre. O. J. invited us to come up there this fall and go duck shooting with him. O. J. seems to know a good theatre and he knows a good duck shooter, too.

Verdigre, Nebraska, is located on the bottom land near the Verdigre creek, and this creek overflows something awful occasionally, and the Verdigre folks have to wear rubber boots, but fortunately A. V. Jacminek's Empress theatre is located on higher ground and A. V. lives up on a hill. Sometimes there are a lot of catfish in the Verdigre and catfish go fine in Verdigre, especially on Friday.

Over at Holstein, Iowa, is where E. W. Kugel operates the State theatre. As we remember it, we called there once, but E. W. was out billing his show, but we had a nice visit with Mrs. Kugel. She told us they were going on a vacation to the Black Hills of South Dakota and we told her the best way to go to get there, and when we got home we sent her a little booklet we wrote once (in a weak moment) called "Some of the Beauty Spots of the Black Hills." Do you remember it, Mrs. Kugel? Good luck.

Our old friend, P. G. Estee, is still furnishing entertainment at his theatre in Parker, South Dakota, for those holding tickets, and probably for some holding passes. Anyhow, he and Mrs. Estee are listed as among our best friends, and they always entertain us royally every time we call on them. P. G. is strong for crackers and dried prunes.

Fred W. Anderson of the Joyo theatre at Fairfield, Nebraska, should excuse us for not calling on him as we should have done, but nevertheless we are for him a hundred per cent, but then Fred, you know, these grasshoppers keep us pretty busy, and we have some biggern a span of mules.

362 Scenarios Received In Vatican Competition

An International Film-Scenario Competition, organized by L'Illustrazione Vaticana, of Rome, to further moral films, brought together 362 scenarios from 19 nations, according to Today's Cinema, motion picture trade publication of London.

Several of the prize winning scenarios will be produced in different countries and will then be widely distributed and interchanged under sponsorship of the Roman Catholic Church.

Symphonic To Make 'Barber of Seville'

Symphonic Films is negotiating with Paramount to produce a complete opera, "The Barber of Seville," for Paramount release. Auditions for singers were to start this week. The music will be played by the 122-piece National Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra of the United States. Frederick Feher will be producer and conductor.

Jack Daily Returns to Coast

Jack Daily, formerly with Paramount's advertising department and more recently with Paramount's Salt Lake City office, resumed his studio post this week. He will handle theatre contacts and special exploitation.

Jack Schulze has been signed as art director for Edward Small Productions. Mr. Schulze had been with Mr. Small for three years when Mr. Small headed Reliance Pictures.

U.S. sues Majors, aiming at Equity Decree to divorce Exhibition, end Block Sales

From a publicity release by the Department of Justice:

. . . Restoration of free enterprise and open competition amongst all branches of the motion picture industry is the primary objective of this proceeding.

To this end and as a first step, a separation of production and exhibition interest is sought in order that all motion picture theatres shall be free from the domination and control of any producer or any group of producers, and shall be immediately responsive and responsible to the tastes and demands of their respective patrons.

Freed from producer control, it is hoped that the theatres of the country will become a free, open and untrammeled market to which all producers may have access for the distribution and licensing of films based upon merit.

Exhibitors likewise will have access to all available motion picture products in accordance with their respective abilities to pay for and utilize that product.

. . . The Department desires to encourage and not to retard the development and orderly operation of the motion picture industry. It must act through litigation because it has no power to speak authoritatively or finally on any issue except through institution of judicial proceedings. However, though the form of its action be adversary, its substance permits and the policy of the Department encourages the fullest cooperation with the industry.

MARTIN QUIGLEY, Editor-in-Chief and Publisher

Vol. 132, No. 4 — July 23, 1938

"It Seems to Me"

"WILL HAYS falls into the Hitler tradition . . . " observes Mr. Heywood Broun in his column in the New York World Telegram. It appears that Mr. Broun had been reading Thomas Mann's little book entitled "The Coming Victory of Democracy" and had come upon some remarks paraphrased thus: "The man who sets himself up as the censor of painting, literature, music and sculpture betrays a contempt for the masses and for their opinion."

This led Mr. Broun to Germany of today and Hitler, and presently home again, in these words: "Thomas Mann is too polite to mention the fact that even in America there have been efforts to tell free people what they should read and what they should see and to standardize expression. There is of course a vast difference in degree, but Will Hays falls into the Hitler tradition. He is the czar of the film industry, which may account for that fact that so many Hollywood products seem to be wearing long grey whiskers."

This would hardly be of sufficient importance to warrant discussion, were it not that Mr. Broun and his viewpoint are representative of a school of commentators, numerically few, but vociferous and ubiquitous. They constitute a group of Leftish-Liberals who consider that the last national election was a plebiscite which delivered the land, the people and the arts to them.

MR. BROUN, like many of his contemporaries of the press, is a showman-in-print, a fireside crooner of the Corona. His role is as a New Deal philosopher. His act includes trade unionism of the C.I.O. design through his presidency of the American Newspaper Guild. He studies the problems of the workers and the causes of the great common people from his seats of vantage at the racetrack, the Stork Club and his country place at Bridgetable Corners in Connecticut, a member of the George Bye Post of the American Legion of Violets. This little society is dedicated to self-concealment and the preservation of the quietude of country life, their private lives being completely concealed, save in the newspapers, the newsreels and on the radio, with only an occasional softball game for the local yokels and autograph collectors. This is germane to our considerations of the moment only for the orientation of this pundit who is so critical of the screen business and its wares. He is super-rotund, full of laissez faire, among other things, and is commonly most good humoured, except when facing his typewriter.

There is almost certainly nothing personal in Mr. Broun's view of Mr. Hays. It was by no studied design, one can be sure, that he elected to seek to bracket Mr. Hays with Herr Hitler just because the German dictator and his works are most especially malodourous to the people of the motion picture industry.

Mr. Broun just had a column to write, and having taken off on the subject of Thomas Mann, a person as unknown to the masses as Erasmus, he had to pick up a pinch of something and somebody more familiar to his newspaper audience, hence Hitler and Hays.

One can only guess at just how much and how well Mr. Broun knows Herr Hitler, but it is only obvious enough that he has no large fund of information pertaining to Mr. Hays and the motion picture, despite his glibly caustic disposal of them.

SOMEWHERE Mr. Broun has read that Mr. Hays is "czar of the movies." That story has been around since about 1922, when it was incorrect by far, and by considerably farther now. He has also read somewhere that Mr. Hays tells the producers of Hollywood just what they may and may not produce, do, or say. He has picked up the cliche picture of Mr. Hays, the sort of caricature-stereotype that is produced by routine journalism and headline language.

The columnist from Connecticut would have his readers believe that a Hitlerish Hays stands between the great common people of the box office millions and the screen, forbidding them in their own beloved medium a forum of life, liberty and pursuit of happiness, "with a contempt for the masses and their opinion."

Mr. Hays is no czar, and has never resembled one.

The motion picture industry is the diligent, extravagantly attentive servant of the amusement seeking masses. Mr. Hays serves the industry that serves.

Mr. Hays is, exactly, the head of a trade association which represents as much mutuality as can be contrived between the spectacularly, and often violently, competitive member companies, which include the principal producers and distributors of the American picture industry.

The authority of Mr. Hays is the authority of the members, so far as they delegate authority to him. They are corporations engaged in the making and merchandising of product for profit. They seek to make and sell as many motion pictures to as many patrons for as many dollars as possible.

In this they resemble most other business enterprises.

SUBSTANTIALLY every motion picture, from this group, is made with the hope that it may be sold to everybody. The industry has grown up with that policy. Mass buying power in the expression of the predominantly average traits and interests of the people has created the industry. The showmen of the motion picture business are in fact only the purchasing agents of the masses.

This makes the motion picture industry most immediately sensitive to the common people.

It would be exceedingly strange if it should prove to be true that the motion picture industry in its forty-and-odd years a-growing in the service of the box office majority could be found in fundamental error by such self-appointed attorneys as Mr. Broun.

There would seem to be a considerable probability that most of these academic experts of whom Mr. Broun is representative have it in mind that they would make the screen a forum for their professional complaints and hellraisings.

"Escapist drama" and "the opium of entertainment" are phrases of hissing common to this school of expression.

Not so long ago, Mr. Hays was bold enough to declare that the motion picture does offer escape.

This Week

Anti-Trust Suit

The United States Government, through the Department of Justice, on Wednesday filed suit in the federal court for the southern district of New York to obtain a decree in equity ordering the separation of production and exhibition interests and ending block sales. A release by the Department announcing the suit said ". . . Restoration of free enterprise and free competition amongst all branches of the motion picture industry is the primary objective of this proceeding." The Department said that its only course of action was litigation and invited fullest cooperation within the industry. A statement from Will H. Hays said, "The industry welcomes the opportunity for clarification of film trade customs. . . ."

Details of the suit and first reaction of the industry are reported in full on pages 12 and following.

Divorcement Ruling

The North Dakota law barring ownership of theatres by distributing companies, sponsored by Allied States Association and commonly called the divorcement law has been ruled constitutional by a federal court in that state. Although the decision will be appealed, probably to the supreme court, the news prompted W. A. Steffes, president of Allied of the Northwest, to comment that similar legislation in the 47 other states would be pressed at the next sessions of their legislatures.

Developments are on page 17.

"IT SEEMS TO ME"

There is that about the contemporary scene, abroad and at home, and in the unending controversial aspects of most of the products of expression from the press to the WPA theatre, which would suggest that most anyone more than half-witted would properly want escape.

It is unfair and contemptuous of the masses and their opinion that the Brouns and other cultists of the New Deal should demand of the people that their theatre be made a house of controversy, an arena of quarrelsome causes.

The motion picture industry, to be a success, must stay out of trouble with the customers. Mr. Hays is part of the instrumentation by which the industry keeps in focus on its job. He hears from the world and tells his clients—and that's what the columnists call a "czar."

—TERRY RAMSAYE.

Industry Campaign

Within 24 hours after Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, proposed that advertising be "stepped up" as a means of "bringing us out of this recession," industry leaders met and set up machinery for launching a nationwide advertising campaign to make the public aware of the features which will be offered during the new season. The drive, to be conducted with a budget of more than $500,000, will be undertaken by all three parts of the industry, production, distribution and exhibition. Committees already have been appointed and the campaign is expected to get underway early in September. Mr. Hays suggestion was made last Thursday at the third annual awards luncheon of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers in New York.

All available details on the campaign are included in a story on page 27.

Otterson Buying

The movement to organize the American distribution and exhibition of "artistic" productions made by French and British producers will be in active operation by September 1st according to Carroll S. Trowbridge who will be in charge of sales and distribution for the new organization headed by John E. Otterson, former president of ERPI.

Mr. Otterson is now in Europe arranging production deals and in a cable to Mr. Trowbridge in New York this week reported the closing of contracts for 25 British and French pictures.

"Viewed nationally," says Mr. Trowbridge, "there is a vast audience of discriminating people in the United States who want this type of entertainment.

"With a supply of such pictures now assured, active negotiations are under way for the establishment of a nationwide chain of theatres," he added.

Succeeds Saperstein

Jack Kirsch, 36, this week was unanimously elected president of Allied Theatres of Illinois to fill the unexpired term of Aaron Saperstein, who died July 10th. The term expires next March. Van Nomikos, acting president, continues as vice-president. Mr. Kirsch said that Allied planned to continue negotiations with the Balaban and Katz circuit on clearance.

Rabbi Abraham Saperstein, 82, father of the late Aaron Saperstein, died in Chicago Tuesday after a long illness.

GN Merger

A plan for merging Grand National with Educational awaits only the formal approval of Educational before it is presented to federal court in Los Angeles under the Grand National 77B reorganization, Edward L. Alperson, co-trustee of Grand National said this week. Earle W. Hammons, president of Educational, is planning to withdraw his company from the short subject production field and enter feature production, it was reported simultaneously. If the merger is completed these features would be released through Grand National, completing the feature schedule of that company.

World's Fair

Although 75,000,000 visitors are expected in New York City drawn by the magnet of the World's Fair, the effect of their impact on film exhibition in the city is open to debate. Most favorable indication, however, is the fact that Chicago theatres in August, 1933, had one million more customers than they had in August of the preceding years.

Lynn Farnol, new advertising and publicity manager of United Artists on page 38 cites a few conclusions from a survey of the tourist trade in New York which he made while with the advertising agency of Donahue & Coe.

Coming Attraction

After sweltering through the doldrums for several months Hollywood production has awakened from a quiescence which had given opportunity if not excuse for loud exhibitor protest and occasional questionable headlines in the lay press and is once more talking and making pictures—big pictures, important pictures. For more than a month now the production pace has reached new highs, not only in actual total of films in work but in the calibre of product. Approximately 75 pictures have been started since June 15th and at no time since then has the number of films in work averaged less than 50. Of these at least 40, based on reasonable expectation derived from story and star material and budget attention, should make commendable showings regardless of competition or changing public taste.

A resume of Hollywood activity and lists of the leaders at each studio start on page 25.

Swedish Films

The committee of the Riksdag, Sweden's Parliament, which has been discussing means for improvement of Swedish cinematographic films, has been studying the possibility of obtaining funds by taxing the profit made by producers of foreign films, says the Motion Picture Division of the Department of Commerce at Washington.

The committee has discussed various other means of giving Swedish film production a more substantial support and the suggestion has been made that the fees received by the Censor Bureau might be used for the giving of prizes to the producers of the best Swedish films. It was also suggested that such films should be exempted from the payment of the usual examination fee.

The report of the committee favored a more rigorous censorship of films since many films portray too high a valuation of luxury and comfort and emphasize the erotic side of life. An investigation was proposed to the end that there should be a more effective use of films in the service of education.

The committee's report was discussed in the Second Chamber of the Riksdag and it was decided to turn down all the suggestions of the committee. It is felt that there is no likelihood of the renewal of the suggestions.

Chicago's Problems

Free bands and free baseball are the latest problems of Chicago's theatre owners, who, hard pressed by the competition, are at a loss for a solution to the 5,000,000 free admissions for the season at the city's nightly concerts and the 7,000 nightly "softball" games that dot the city's vacant lots.

See page 56.

$1,000,000 Expenditure

A $1,000,000 expenditure for the expansion, new construction, and remodeling of properties in Australia is being considered by Twentieth Century-Fox and will depend upon the results of an intensive study of the company's affiliated theatre interests which will be made by Dan Michalove, assistant to S. R. Kent, president. Mr. Michalove will sail on the Mariposa from San Francisco, August 17th and upon his return will report to Mr. Kent and Spyros Skouras, executive of National Theatres which holds a substantial interest in Hoyts circuit and allied groups. Hoyts is the dominant circuit in Australia and National Theatres holds 87 per cent of its common stock and about 10 per cent of the B preference shares.

Warner Profit

A net operating profit of $3,282,765 for the 39 weeks ended May 28, 1938, was reported this week by Warner Brothers coincident with the circulating of reports in Wall Street that the company shortly will announce a plan for refunding $29,412,985 of six per cent convertible debentures due September 1, 1939. The Warner profit for the period compares with $5,561,032 for the same period last year.

The financial news of the week is told on page 34.

Aviation Coverage

Complete and detailed coverage of the flight around the world in three days and 19 hours made by Howard Hughes, motion picture and oil producer was made available to theatres throughout the world in record time by all five newsreels but they were taken completely by surprise by the feat of Douglas Corrigan who flew from California to New York non-stop and return by way of Dublin, Ireland, leaving the aviation experts astounded and the tabloids dripping of drama. To make up for missing Corrigan's landing-by-mistake in Dublin, the newsreels made plans for shipping pictures of the young flier from England to New York via the first flight of an experimental trans-Atlantic airline, subject, of course, to the vagaries of the weather.

The story of newsreel activity is told on page 31.

Reorganization Plan

The reorganization of RKO moved one step nearer completion this week when George W. Alger, special master, approved, with four amendments, the plan advanced by Atlas Corporation. Mr. Alger termed the report, in the main, fair and equitable and said he would submit his formal report to William Bondy, federal judge, about August 1st. The proponents of the plan, according to Hamilton C. Rickaby, attorney for Atlas, will accept the amendments. Opposition, however, will be voiced by Nathan Rosenberg, attorney for H. Cassell and Company, independent debenture holders. The week also brought the signing of the Federal government's petition to intervene and become a party to the presentation of evidence and argument on the constitutionality of Section 77B of the Bankruptcy Act.

Schenck and Budgets

Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board of directors of Twentieth Century-Fox, said in London Monday that he has no objection whatever to spending £150,000 (about $750,000) on a British picture if the result can profit the American and British markets. He said he was interested in having Marie Tempest star in "Old Folks at Home," to be produced in England. He said his company will not set up its own studios in England as long as there is space available to rent.

Mr. Schenck was scheduled to meet Darryl F. Zanuck, vice-president in charge of production who is vacationing, in Paris Wednesday.

U. S. SUES MAJORS TO DIVORCE EXHIBITION AND END BLOCK SALES

The skyline of lower New York was lost in clouds of a heavy summer rain on Wednesday morning, and throngs were scurrying officeward out of the subway kiosks off Foley Square. It was nine by the clock when a Yellow taxicab drove up to the two-block wide United States Courthouse and deposited its passenger, a medium-sized, somewhat stock person of marked Western appearance.

He took the granite steps two at a time, brief case in hand, to the revolving door that stands in deadcenter of the impressively long whitestone pillars that run up the front of the Courthouse. On in to the elevator he went to the third floor, and to the office of John Harlan Amen, Chief of the Anti Trust Division in New York for the United States Department of Justice.

The Westerner — he hails from Wyoming—was Thurman Arnold, former professor of law at Yale, and now national chief of the Justice Department's anti trust prosecutions. Mr. Arnold had come fresh from a night in an uptown hotel, where he had checked in the afternoon before from his office in Washington.

There was a rustling of foolscap papers in the Courthouse office of Mr. Amen, and Lamar Hardy, the United States District Attorney for New York affixed his signature, penning the name directly under that of Homer Cummings, who, the day before, in Washington, had affixed his name and the seal of his office of the United States Attorney General.

Mr. Arnold chatted for an hour with Mr. Hardy and Mr. Amen, and then sent for Paul Williams, special and private assistant to the U. S. Attorney General. To him he entrusted the papers, and with the documents Mr. Williams walked up three flights to the sixth floor office of the Chief Clerk of the Federal Court for the Southern District of New York. It was exactly 10:15 in the morning when Mr. Williams placed in the hands of the Clerk, in the name of the United States Government, a bill of complaint in equity charging the eight large motion picture corporations, 24 of their subsidiary and associated companies and 133 of their officers, executives, board members and financial associates with jointly and severally violating the Sherman Anti Trust Act.

After the action had been filed, Henry W. Goddard, Federal District Judge, signed an order for service of subpoenas on all defendants, corporate and individual, for appearance in court within 20 days, indicating that the Government intends to proceed promptly.

The lengthy bill of complaint, which had been in the process of writing for weeks in the Justice Department in Washington, named the following "Big Eight" defendants: Columbia Pictures Corporation; Loew's, Inc.; Paramount Pictures, Inc.; Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation; Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation; United Artists Corporation; Universal Pictures Company, Inc., and Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc.

The government would divest Loew's and RKO of their production and distribution activities, and divorce the other six corporations from exhibition. The contention is that Loew's and RKO were primarily exhibitors.

And so, the Administration moved into the newest phase of its regulative attentions to the motion picture industry which began with the Blue Eagling of the days of the National Recovery Administration and its codes.

The government's pronouncements came in two documents. The first was the bill of complaint in the suit, making charges. The second was a public statement from the Department of Justice which assumed as proved, before trial, the contentions of the complaint and proceeded to indicate what the government would have done.

The statement of the Department of Justice contained a casual reference to consent decrees, and it implied, in passing, contingent possibilities of criminal action and "additional legislation."

In mid-afternoon a statement issued from the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., under the heading: "Industry Welcomes Opportunity for Clarification of Film Trade Customs, says Will H. Hays."

Motion picture securities on the New York market sold off on the news with recessions ranging from fractions to a drop of 10 points on Paramount preferred.

In Washington it was indicated that the immediate cause of action was in the accumulation of complaints from independent exhibitors concerning tactics of circuit competitors affiliated with the major companies.

The fact has been generally known that secret operatives of the Department of Justice, and some not working so secretively, have been out in the field nearly two years investigating the independents' complaints and gathering information which undoubtedly will be used in the presentation of the government's case. There was hardly an exhibition office in the land whose books and/or records had not been subject to the probings of the investigators.

"It is the belief of the Department of Justice that certain rearrangements must be made in the moving picture industry in order to maintain competitive conditions in the future," it was declared in a formal statement issued by the Department, after initiation of the proceeding. "Those rearrangements require a more constructive effort than mere prosecution for past practices. The aim of the civil suit which is now instituted is to accomplish those arrangements under the guidance of the court. In the opinion of the Department, this can only be done by proceedings before a judicial tribunal."

The Department of Justice declared it was interested on its own initiative "because the motion picture business is not a private affair, but a matter of vital concern not only to those immediately engaged in the industry but to 85 to 90 million people who attend the pictures every week."

The Department charges that the "finer theatres and theatre chains are now dominated by five of the major companies"—Paramount, Loews, RKO, Warner Brothers, and Twentieth Century-Fox, and that these companies, together with the three other majors, United Artists, Columbia and Universal, control about 65 per cent of all pictures produced "from the selection of the story to the final showing at the theatre," and that "from 80 to 90 per cent of the quality feature films upon which exhibitors are dependent for the successful operation of their theatres are produced or distributed by the eight major companies."

The Department charges that while there are enough independents to furnish the basis for "substantial competition" with the majors' theatres, the independents are prevented from competing because product is not made accessible to them, "regardless of the price which the independent be willing to pay for the film."

"Special types of contract and contract modifications" are other independent handicaps cited, and "The independent is also subject to numerous oppressive discriminations such as block booking, full-line forcing, the imposition of preferred playing time and high rentals."

Besides driving independent exhibitors out of business, the majors are charged by the government with preventing any new competition from entering the business, preventing independent producers from finding a satisfactory market for their films, and "There is no opportunity for new forms of artistic expression which are not approved by those in control of the major companies, even though there exist communities which would support them."

The Department of Justice let it be known that it "believes the equity suit to be a more equitable step than the institution of a general criminal proceeding," but, it was pointed out, "specific violations with respect to which these equitable considerations do not apply are not thus protected."

Primary objective of the Government, it was announced, is the "Restoration of free enterprise and open competition amongst all branches of the motion picture industry.

"To this end, and as a first step, a separation of production and exhibition interest is sought in order that all motion picture theatres shall be free from the domination and control of any producer or any group of producers, and shall be immediately responsive and responsible to the tastes and demands of their respective patrons. Freed from producer control, it is hoped that the theatres of the country will become a free, open and untrammeled market to which all producers may have access for the distribution and licensing of films based upon merit. Exhibitors likewise will have access to all available motion picture products in accordance with their respective ability to pay for and utilize that product.

"Permanent injunctions to restrain all discriminatory practices against independent producers and exhibitors are also sought," it was said, on the belief "that the public interest will be served by restoring free enterprise to an industry which affects so vitally the welfare and morals of large sections of our citizenship."

Government Explains Film Trust Case

At 12 o'clock noon on Wednesday, an hour and a half after it filed its bill of complaint trust action against the eight major companies, the Department of Justice issued the following publicity release:

In accordance with its previously announced policy of making public the grounds for each important proceeding instituted, the Department of Justice today issued the following statement:

INTRODUCTORY STATEMENT

A petition in equity was filed today in the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York against the major motion picture companies, their associated and subsidiary companies and numerous individuals connected with the industry. The petition was filed under the Sherman Antitrust Act and it alleges that the defendants jointly and severally violated the Act.

The policy of issuing statements in connection with antitrust proceedings is relatively new. If this policy is to be effective, it must be clearly understood. At the outset, therefore, we will outline the general purpose which this policy seeks to serve and to which this particular statement seeks to conform.

These statements issued by the Department are not ordinary press releases. They are intended (1) to guide business men who seek information on the probable policy and action of this Department in other cases where the circumstances are similar; (2) to aid the Department in formulating a consistent antitrust policy; (3) to serve as a warning to those contemplating similar practices; and (4) to bring to the attention of Congress certain aspects of a total factual situation which may need considrration in connection with further legislation.

At the outset of this statement, it is well to clarify the two objectives which an antitrust proceeding involving a great industry and affecting millions of people can serve. First, it may act as a deterrent to practices leading to restraint of trade and monopoly control. This is a police function. Second, it may provide a means of maintaining competitive conditions in the future and make violations less likely. This is a constructive aim requiring cooperation on the part of the industry.

" . . . the problem of reckless driving is solved in two ways: first, by arrests and prosecutions instituted by traffic policemen, and, second, by rules of the road formulated by persons who are surveying the whole problem. . . . "

—says Department of Justice.

To use an analogy, the problem of reckless driving is solved in two ways: first, by arrests and prosecutions instituted by traffic policemen; and second, by rules of the road formulated by persons who are surveying the whole problem.

It is the belief of the Department of Justice that certain rearrangements must be made in the moving picture industry in order to maintain competitive conditions in the future. Those rearrangements require a more constructive effort than mere prosecution for past practices. The aim of the civil suit which is now instituted is to accomplish those arrangements under the guidance of the court.

In the opinion of the Department, this can only be done by proceedings before a judicial tribunal. In the past it was the custom of business men to seek from the Department some vague form of approval for their plans of operation which involved antitrust questions. That practice is now generally discredited. It put the Department in a position of acquiescence in practices the evil result of which could not be foreseen at the private conferences with representatives of the industry. The truth is that without a judicial proceeding the Department is not in a position to inform the industry of what arrangements it will accept. The law contemplates that the Department must work with the courts and that it must not bind itself in any way except by a public proceeding in court. The Department can only talk through the medium of complaints filed in court and applications for relief addressed to the court. No situation can ever become crystallized without this form of proceeding. Approval voiced by individual representatives of the Department in private conference cannot be binding on the Department or create immunity from prosecution. Such approval clarifies nothing and it lacks the sanction of public confidence. It does not provide Congress with a guide for amending the laws, where they are achieving an uneconomic result.

The constructive task of the Department of Justice, therefore, may only be accomplished through judicial proceedings which enable the Department to state its objectives in such a way that its policy may be examined by the court with reference to existing law and changed by the legislature if the existing law does not present an economic solution of the problem. This method of action through judicial proceedings furnishes the only path to constructive achievement. Under this policy, a law suit should be considered as the beginning of cooperation between the courts, the legislature, the Department of Justice and the industry to achieve a common end. The Department's position can be openly stated in court. Any negotiations for settlement that the parties may undertake are conducted with reference to particular charges. If any settlement is reached by way of consent decree, or otherwise, it is subject to judicial approval and a full public explanation.

In order to facilitate these ends, it is necessary to put each suit in its proper setting by statements such as the one which follows. Such a statement is intended to go beyond the issues of the suit and survey the general problem of which the suit is a part. Its purpose is to open the door to constructive proposals at any stage of antitrust litigation, whether directed to the courts under present provisions of law or to the recommendation of additional legislation.

With the above statement of general antitrust policy in mind, we may proceed to consider the particular problems of the motion picture industry which give rise to the necessity for this suit.

I. ECONOMIC CONDITIONS IN THE INDUSTRY WHICH CREATE MONOPOLISTIC CONTROL

Reasons that led Department to make investigation. The investigation by the Department of Justice was made in response to numerous complaints by independent producers, distributors, and exhibitors and by the theatre-going public. Independent companies complained that the defendants were threatening their complete exclusion from the business. The Department of Justice was interested on its own initiative because the motion picture business is not a private affair, but a matter of vital concern not only to those immediately engaged in the industry but to 85 to 90 million people who attend the picture theatres every week. The industry has previously had the attention of the Department and cases involving various features of the business have been adjudicated.*

Parties Defendant

The defendants named in the petition are the eight major motion picture companies, viz., Paramount Pictures, Inc., Loew's, Incorporated, Irving Trust Company, New York, New York, as Trustee in Bankruptcy for Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation, Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation, Columbia Pictures Corporation, Universal Corporation and United Artists Corporation, 25 subsidiary or associated corporations and 132 individuals, officers or directors of the corporate defendants.

Producer-Exhibitor Combinations

The public theatres constitute the only market for the commercial distribution of motion picture films. The finer theatres and theatre chains are now dominated by five of the major companies, Paramount Pictures, Inc., Loew's, Incorporated, Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation, Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., and Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation. These companies, together with the three other major companies, United Artists, Columbia Pictures Corporation and Universal Corporation, control about 65% of all pictures produced from the selection of the story to the final showing at the theatre.

The actual control of product is even greater than would appear from this figure, because from 80 to 90% of the quality feature films upon which exhibitors are dependent for the successful operation of their theatres are produced or distributed by the eight major companies.

The evils of the producer-exhibitor control were summarized by Mr. Adolph Zukor, now chairman of the board of directors of the defendant Paramount Pictures, Inc., in a statement published in 1918 in which he predicted exactly what has happened since that day:

"The evil of producing and exhibiting coalitions is one of the gravest perils that has ever confronted the motion picture industry. For some time past this condition has been developing and now threatens to halt the industry's progress, if indeed it does not set it back beyond the point at which it first took its place among the organized industrials of the day. It has been permitted to develop this far because no one individual, either producer or exhibitor, has dared face the facts himself, and compel other producers and exhibitors to face them with him.

"We should all realize that the most effective way to develop the industry to its largest capacity is to maintain a broad open field of endeavor in its every branch. The exhibitors now enjoy the advantage of having the choice of several well-established feature programs from which they can select any range of subjects suitable to their individual requirements. Also because these producing firms are well established they are in a position to produce pictures far ahead of release date, giving the exhibitor an added advantage in being able to arrange his bookings far in advance, and therefore avail himself of a careful selection of subjects. The producers, in feeling that they have all the exhibitors in the country as prospective customers, are encouraged to make greater efforts and expend bigger sums for their productions and equipment. On the other hand, the exhibitors, in keeping all their lines open, have the choice of all the production on the market. In this manner the business opportunities of both factors are unrestricted and permissible of any possible expansion. The moment exhibitors limit the market of producers, or the producers limit the buying opportunities of the exhibitor, the business is retarded and its growth is stunted.

* * *

"If the business is to progress it must advance upon the basis of free and unhampered selection of product for exhibitors, large and small, and the exhibitors alone can cure this evil by

Absence of Competition Between Major Companies

In acquiring theatres and chains of theatres, the major companies have not occupied, to any great extent, the same territory. Indeed, there appears to be a virtual division of territory. Operating in their separate divisions of territory, the theatres of each major company afford a market for the pictures produced by the others. As the aggregate annual production of the major companies is sufficient to fill comfortably the theatre programs of their respective theatre, outside pictures are put under an impossible handicap. So effective is the combination that these companies in the production of pictures have pooled their most valuable assets and made them available to each other. These assets consist of stars and feature players of known drawing power, as well as directors, technicians and physical properties such as sets and scenes. Seldom are these facilities made available to independent producers.

Suppression of Independent Theatres

So far as ownersip is concerned, there are enough independent theatres to furnish the basis for substantial competition with the theatres controlled by the major companies. This competition, however, is prevented by the major companies by denying to independents equal access to the films distributed by them. A theatre affiliated with a major company is given first access to the product of all the major companies before the independent is permitted to exhibit it on any terms. Thus, in a territory where an independent exhibitor is in competition with a theatre affiliated with a major producer, he may not be able to obtain first-run pictures. He must wait until the affiliated theatre has exhibited the choice films. This is true regardless of the price which the independent might be willing to pay for the film. This is not the only handicap. There are special types of contracts and contract modifications, including various possible reductions in film rentals where pictures turn out to be unpopular, which are given to the affiliated theatre. The independent theatre is denied such contracts.

The independent theatre is also subject to numerous oppressive discriminations such as block booking, full line forcing, the imposition of preferred playing time, and high rentals.

The control of the finer theatres by the five major producer-exhibitors has given them the actual power to exclude other producers from these markets. This in the judgment of the Department constitutes monopolistic power forbidden by the Sherman Act.

This monopolistic power has a tendency to drive independent theatres out of the business or to compel them to sell to the producer-owned theatre chains on the latters' terms.

Growth of Combination During Last Twenty Years

In the early days of the industry, the three branches of production, distribution and exhibition were to a large extent operated separately. A struggle for industry control developed between producers and exhibitors, as a result of which some producers entered the exhibition field—as in the case of the defendants Paramount Pictures, Inc., and Warner Bros. SAYS 'CONTROL' IS UP TO COURTS

tures, Inc.—and some exhibitors entered the production field, as in the case of Loew's, Incorporated. In 1919, the very next year after issuing his prophetic statement of the evils expected from such a combination, Adolph Zukor, then a leading producer, determined to enter the exhibition field. He moved swiftly.

Other companies moved to keep up with him. The period of the 1920's became one of constant and aggressive acquisition of independent theatres by major companies. That struggle has resulted in domination and control of the best motion picture theatres on a nationwide scale by the major companies.

Economic Effects of Combination

The correctness of any view of the economic effects of the control described above must of course be subject to proof. The legality of the methods of control must be determined by the courts. In order, however, to make its policy in bringing this suit intelligible, it is necessary that the Department state what it believes to be the broad economic effects of the present methods and practices of the industry. These may be summarized as follows:

1. Independently-owned theatres are being driven out of business because of the onerous and discriminatory conditions not only on the rental of film but with respect to other trade practices. At the present rate at which independently-owned theatres are being driven to financial failure, it will only be a question of a short time before there are no independents left in the field.

2. New competitors who attempt to enter the field of motion picture exhibition find it almost impossible to secure film for exhibition on any reasonable and non-discriminatory basis. The result is that there is practically no effective new competition.

3. Those independently-owned theatres that have managed to date to survive are compelled, in order to get pictures, to operate under terms which leave them very little freedom in the selection of film and in the management of their own business.

4. Independent producers find it practically impossible to secure a satisfactory market for their film because of the domination by the major companies over the exhibition houses. These independent producers are up against an almost hopeless bargaining disadvantage in securing markets for their film in exhibition houses that are controlled by the major producers with whom the independent producers are trying to compete.

5. New capital investment in the motion picture business is discouraged because of the great difficulty of competing on a fair basis with the major companies, either in production or exhibition, so long as the major companies control the principal markets for film.

6. Theatre patrons in any given community are not given an opportunity to exercise choice as to the type of pictures they desire to see. Under present conditions it is impossible for community taste to find expression through a locally-owned theatre free to bargain for the type of films its patrons wish. As matters now stand, each community is regimented into accepting the kind of picture which will make the most profits on a nation-wide scale.

7. There is no opportunity for new forms of artistic expression which are not approved by those in control of the major companies, even

"Industry Welcomes Opportunity For Clarification," Says Hays

The Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, from headquarters in New York, issued the following statement Wednesday afternoon on the trust suit filed by the government against the eight major companies, and others:

"Commenting on the civil suit brought by the Department of Justice to explore certain procedures and customs in the motion picture industry, Will H. Hays, President of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, said today:

"'Motion picture producers, wholesale distributors and leading exhibitors of the nation will generally welcome the prospect of a comprehensive, fair and conclusive endeavor to clarify the application of existing laws to the trade customs inherent in the development of the motion picture industry. The entire matter is being approached in that spirit through which beneficial results can come to all concerned. Courts clarify and explain the meaning of law. Such a suit as this can do just that.

"'The trade customs of the industry were born and have developed under unique and peculiar necessities never before encountered in commerce or law. Yet the existing structure of production, distribution and exhibition of motion pictures has brought to the theatre the greatest classics of literature, history, drama and music at a price that has commanded a universal audience even during the darkest days of depression.

Calls Relationship Best Ever

"'The relationship between producers and consumers of motion picture entertainment is better today than ever before. The millions who comprise the motion picture audience feel a definite sense of partnership with the industry and an appreciation of the progress and the quality of entertainment shown on the screen. Such values should not be impaired.

"'American motion pictures with world-wide audiences are ambassadors of good will. They occupy about 75 per cent of the screen time of the world in spite of quotas, embargoes and other foreign trade restrictions through a system by which an art industry has been created and is operating in a manner that transcends all barriers of language and geography. This world significance of the American motion picture depends upon the stability and efficiency of that industry. In all of its world-wide relations the American motion picture industry has found its government to be helpful and understanding in every respect.

"'On the economic side, an industry starting a few years ago with nothing, now normally employs more than 280,000 people, keeps 17,500 theatres in more than 9,000 cities and towns in the United States alone in regular operation, produces $1,000,000,000 worth of business in the local communities and pays to the Federal Government about $100,000,000 a year in taxes. It has pioneered in a labor policy which has kept wages high, working conditions much above the average, and the industry relatively free from unfortunate labor disturbances.

"'It is hoped that judicial clarification will dispel the fog of uncertainty with regard to some customs which have grown up in the industry. Pictures, like other dramatic entertainment, must be created, not manufactured. Pictures go on tour, as does a road company, each in a definite theatre first, for a specified period and within a given territory to draw upon. This explains the well-known trade expressions of first-runs, clearance and zoning. Yet so finely adjusted is the system that the most expensive production of the year is available in time to the smallest theatres in the land for the lowest possible admission price.

Supply of Product Vital

"'Not merely the methods but much of the structure of the industry is the result of necessity. The assurance of a continuous supply of product and the regular service of entertainment is vital to the very existence of the theatre. Thus it was that the processes of integration began that have brought the well-established units which today are such important and useful factors.

"'In this industry the advantages of big business and little business supplement each other through the joint efforts of the great units making and distributing the greater pictures and the smallest theatres exhibiting them in every hamlet in the country.

"'In this great field the keenest competition always is the order of the day. With every studio competing to produce the best entertainment, every distributor competing for sales, and every theatre competing for the best film product involving 12,000,000 individual transactions every year, the problems of trade relations have grown with the growth of the industry. This industry has not shirked its responsibility for the solution of these problems. A committee of leading producers and distributors is now engaged in considering readjustments in the intricate machinery of this business to the end that it may even better serve the public interest.

Calls Self-Regulation Solution

"'The real customers of the industry—a potential motion picture public in the United States of approximately 110,000,000 people—are interested primarily in the entertainment and social values of the screen brought to them at prices to meet everyone's pocketbook. The middlemen of the industry, the wholesale distributors and the retail exhibitors have seen in self-regulation, rather than in legislation, the final solution of the trade problems peculiar to the business. If the present action instituted by the Department of Justice, in civil proceedings, clarifies the law applicable to the complex business operations of the motion picture industry it should promote the further progress of the screen.'"

'DIVORCE' IS CALLED PRIMARY END

though there exist communities which would support them.

II. REASONS FOR PROCEEDING IN EQUITY

The petition in equity which has now been filed comes as a result of an investigation conducted by the Department and its observation of the operation of the motion picture industry over a period of years. The Department has concluded after long and careful study that free competition in the industry (both in production and exhibition) ought to be restored and that the most direct course to that end is to divorce the business of production and distribution from that of exhibition. Such a result can be accomplished only through an equity decree which will require the major companies to divest themselves either of their ownership of theatres or of production and distribution facilities. One reason for determining to proceed first in equity rather than criminally is, therefore, the fact that only an equity decree can accomplish the result which the Department believes to be essential.

A further reason for instituting equity rather than criminal proceedings at this time should be noted. In the course of its study of the motion picture industry the Department attempted, through the voluntary cooperation of the major producers, to adjust the difficulties of independent exhibitors who brought their problems to the Department and who consented to such a course. The Department believes that in the light of its dealings with the industry in the past, it would be inequitable to institute a general criminal proceeding relating to the general subject matter of this suit. Specific violations with respect to which these equitable considerations do not apply are of course not covered by this statement.

III. ECONOMIC RESULTS TO BE ANTICIPATED FROM THE PRESENT ACTION

Restoration of Competition Is Primary Aim

Restoration of free enterprise and open competition amongst all branches of the motion picture industry is the primary objective of this proceeding. To this end, and as a first step, a separation of production and exhibition interest is sought in order that all motion picture theatres shall be free from the domination and control of any producer or any group of producers, and shall be immediately responsive and responsible to the tastes and demands of their respective patrons. Freed from producer control, it is hoped that the theatres of the country will become a free, open and untrammeled market to which all producers may have access for the distribution and licensing of films based upon merit. Exhibitors likewise will have access to all available motion picture products in accordance with their respective abilities to pay for and utilize that product.

Permanent injunctions to restrain all discriminatory practices against independent producers and exhibitors are also sought. It is firmly believed that the public interest will be served by restoring free enterprise to an industry which affects so vitally the welfare and morals of large sections of our citizenship.

Suit May Throw Light on Application of Antitrust Laws to Other Industries

In addition to the benefit to this particular industry and its patrons, the present suit may settle questions that are vital in the application of the antitrust laws to other industries in which manufacturers or producers, knit together through a common trade association, seek directly or indirectly to dominate and control markets.

" . . . The Department of Justice can only talk through the medium of complaints filed in court and applications for relief addressed to the court. No situation can ever become crystallized without this form of proceeding. Approval voiced by individual representatives of the Department in private conference cannot be binding on the Department or create immunity from prosecution. Such approval clarifies nothing and it lacks the sanction of public confidence. . . . "

" . . . It is the belief of the Department of Justice that certain rearrangements must be made in the moving picture industry in order to maintain competitive conditions in the future. Those rearrangements require a more constructive effort than mere prosecution for past practices. The aim of the civil suit which is now instituted is to accomplish those arrangements under the guidance of the court. . . . "

Suit May Develop Need For Congressional Action

Until the evidence is produced, it is too early to state whether the antitrust laws by themselves are sufficiently effective to restore competitive conditions. If it appears from such evidence that further aid is needed, the results of the investigation and trial will be brought to the attention of Congress.

The Department desires that this suit result in the clarification of the antitrust laws with respect to the motion picture industry.

The application of the general principles of the antitrust laws to particular industries demands distinctions which cannot be drawn in advance of the production of actual proof. They can only be staked out with respect to particular industries through the clarifying process of judicial action. This is the purpose of this suit.

The Department desires to encourage and not to retard the development and orderly operation of the motion picture industry. It must act through litigation because it has no power to speak authoritatively or finally on any issue except through institution of judicial proceedings. However, though the form of its action be adversary, its substance permits and the policy of the Department encourages the fullest cooperation with the industry.

Fight Imminent in Kentucky Over Games Decision

The Kentucky act declaring lotteries legal, which went into effect July 9th, this week was termed unconstitutional by the State's Attorney General Guy H. Herdman in an opinion. He was asked if it were legal for a merchant to give purchasers tickets and give prizes to winners of ticket drawings.

Mr. Herdman said the act was intended to make such transactions and "also newspaper drawings" and Bank Night legal, but he said he believed the court of appeals would declare the act a nullity.

Other chance game developments of a week included the statement of Deputy Police Chief Guthrie of Toronto who said he intends to enforce the ban on Bingo and other games of chance; the decision of suburban Portland, Ore., theatres, which is expected soon, on whether they will abandon the "illegal" practice of Bank Night or carry it to court for a test case; and Allied of New Jersey's appointment of a committee to investigate the Bingo situation in the state.

In Toronto a place when Bingo is played is now defined under the Criminal Code as "that in which payment is made to the operator either from the stakes played for or in the way of a direct or indirect fee from the players for the use of appliances, tables, chairs or any paraphernalia used in playing games of chance" and is officially designated as "a common gambling house."

In Portland the 20 suburban houses that were notified last week to stop Bank Night appear to be split on how to solve the question. Almost all have started giving away free tickets to drawings "in order to make them legal."

The appointment of the Allied committee occurred at a meeting of the New Jersey organization at Asbury Park. The consensus was that the "non-theatrical" Bingo games are cutting heavily into theatre attendance. Cooperation in eliminating the competition, where practiced illegally, may be requested of local authorities.

Tampa, Fla., theatres, which discontinued Bank Night drawings following a notification by County Solicitor Williams that he would bring criminal charges against them if they continued the drawings, have applied to the state supreme court for a restraining order against the solicitor until the court shall have decided the legality of the drawings in Florida.

Following similar moves in New Haven and West Haven, Hamden, Conn., officials have placed a final ban on all money game giveaways in or out of theatres. East Haven, another neighboring town, still reserves such action.

The Clay County Grand Jury, Indiana, has branded Bank Night a lottery scheme in returning indictments against Stanley Cooper and Harold Reese, theatre operators of Brazil, Ind.

"DIVORCEMENT" LAW RULED LEGAL; U.S. SALVES "FEARS" OF WITNESSES

Federal Court in North Dakota Holds Allied-Sponsored Measure Constitutional; Wisconsin Independents Start Large Suit

Developments having potential far-reaching effects, legal and otherwise, on the manner and method of conducting the motion picture business took place this week, as follows:

The United States Government, through the Department of Justice, on Wednesday forenoon filed a sweeping anti-trust suit in the southern district court of New York, against the large companies. (See page 12.)

First test case of the Allied-sponsored theatre "divorcement" state law, through which Allied would force distributors out of exhibition, was lost by the distributors when a federal statutory court in North Dakota declared the law constitutional. The majors will appeal, but presumably the decision paves the way for Allied to proceed with its campaign, attacking so-called distributor - circuit "aggressions" through legislation.

Independents in Wisconsin entered a $1,050,000 Clayton anti-trust action in the United States courts at Milwaukee against distributors and large circuits, claiming an unlawful conspiracy attempted to force them out of business.

The United States Attorney General's office declared there was no intention of abandoning its investigation into Fox West Coast Theatres in California.

Allied States Association demanded film rental adjustments to compensate exhibitors for failing to deliver pictures, distributors' promise of which reputedly influenced the exhibitors to purchase block contracts.

Ominous soundings that the motion picture would be a subject of study by the Administration's monopoly investigation of all "big business" were found beneath the Attorney General's declaration that witnesses from the film industry need have no fears that any testimony will be used as the basis for future criminal prosecutions by the Department of Justice.

Despite the week's court and other challenges of existing trade practices and conduct, and the hints in Washington of threatening Government probings, the organized industry this week proceeded with the task taken on four weeks ago of formulating a program of self-regulation.

First joint discussions are near between distributors and exhibitors, on what should be contained in the program and how it should be adapted to distribution-exhibition practice.

The distributors' committee, headed by Sidney Kent, Nicholas Schenck and Leo Spitz is about ready to present its findings, its working board, called the "negotiating committee," having concluded the preliminaries to a program. This sub-group, composed of Ned Depinet, William Rodgers and A. Montague, has been meeting almost daily since its inception. Its progress reputedly was one of the reasons for the hurried trip east, from Hollywood, last week, of Will H. Hays, MPPDA president. Mr. Hays returned to Hollywood Tuesday.

A report of the progress by the committee was made to the board of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors Association, by Nicholas Schenck and Ned Depinet, in New York last Friday.

The substance of the report was said to have indicated that the distributors' working committee is nearing a phase of its work at which it will be possible to call in exhibitor representatives for preliminary discussions of the plan.

North Dakota Divorcement Decision Unanimous

Paramount was the complainant in the test case on the constitutionality of Allied's "divorcement" law in North Dakota, losing last Friday in a decision handed down in the United States district court by Judges Sanborn, Thomas and Sullivan. The law had been enacted at the last legislative session, but enforcement had been halted pending the test.

Paramount's appeal is expected to be filed with the U. S. supreme court in October and a hearing on the appeal may be held before the end of the year.

Paramount officials and attorneys decided against applying for a rehearing of the case in the statutory court before going to the Supreme Court after conferring on the opinion.

The procedure to be followed will require the North Dakota state officials to prepare and enter a decree dismissing Paramount's action attacking the constitutionality of the statute. With the signing of this decree by the statutory court, Paramount will apply for a writ of supersedeas to continue in effect the temporary injunction which it obtained some time ago restraining North Dakota officials from enforcing the law. The company then will have 90 days in which to file its appeal to the United States supreme court.

Temporary Injunction Continues

The three-judge federal statutory court which early in June heard the arguments on the constitutionality of the statute which requires producers and distributors to divest themselves of theatre operating interests within the state was unanimous in its decision upholding the right of the state to enact and enforce the legislation. The court ruled, however, that pending final determination of the case the temporary injunction restraining the state from enforcing the statute should remain in effect.

"In the event of an appeal," the court said, in this respect, "we think the present status should be preserved until the ultimate decision of the case by the supreme court."

In its findings of facts and conclusions of law, the court held the theatre "divorcement" statute was enacted to prevent monopoly, restraints of trade and unfair competitive practices for films; that the act is "not arbitrary, capricious or palpably in excess of legislative power" as contended by counsel for Paramount. The court added that it could see little, if any, relation of the act to interstate commerce acts or copyright laws and that it has no purport of licensing of films.

Called Up to the State

On the other hand, the court saw no merit in one of the defense's major contentions, which was that the act could be justified as a valid exercise of the police power of the state because it was a measure to safeguard "the public health, safety or morals."

The key to the court's findings, therefore, would appear to be its declaration that "if a Legislature deems it necessary to mitigate the evils of competition between small chains and large chains, or to discourage the activities within the state by chains grown so large as to menace the public welfare, it may adopt measures to accomplish those ends."

The June hearing on the constitutionality of the act occupied nine days. The plaintiffs, in addition to Paramount, are its theatre operating subsidiary, Minnesota Amusement Company and American Amusement Company, a subsidiary of Minnesota, which operates about 20 theatres in North Dakota, the only affiliated theatres in the state and, hence, the only ones affected by the statute. The defendants are the State of North Dakota, its Governor, attorney general and other state officers.

Myers Sees Vindication

Abram F. Myers, chairman of Allied States Exhibitors Association, who was instrumental in the drafting of the "divorcement" legislation, its introduction in the North Dakota Legislature and its defense before the statutory court in Fargo last month, issued the following statement on the decision: "The decision is a complete vindication of Allied's position that operation by distributors in competition with independent theatres dependent on them for product is inherently wrong."

Mr. Myers, in a special bulletin from Allied

"DIVORCE" LAW FOR AUSTRALIA SEEN

Legislation similar to the "divorcement" statute in North Dakota may be introduced in Australia, it was reported by Leon S. Snider, joint managing director of the Snider-Dean circuit, on his arrival this week from London.

Mr. Snider was interested in the North Dakota action and said that the New South Wales Government has been contemplating similar legislation "as a move to compel major distributors to come to terms with exhibitors."

As an authorized spokesman for the New South Wales Exhibitors' Association, Mr. Snider effected a cooperative working arrangement with the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association in England for an exchange of views on overbuilding, performing rights licenses, admission prices and similar trade problems. He said he planned to confer in Washington with Abram F. Myers, general counsel of Allied States, and with Ed Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America.

Mr. Snider approved the idea of Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy for greater cooperation between the American and British industries, pointing out that this coincides with his own views that the industry is international.

ALLIED DEMANDS ADJUSTED RENTALS

headquarters in Washington, called the industry's attention to the following "excerpts" from the decision:

". . . Defendants introduced evidence showing the extent and nature of the controversy which has existed between independent exhibitors and the producer-distributors owning theatres, which tends to prove that the independent owner is at a disadvantage in competition with affiliated theatres . . .

". . . No evidence that producers who have affiliated theatres have an agreement or understanding that none of their number shall enter the competitive territory in which another of them has theatres. They apparently have refrained from competing with each other in the exhibition field . . .

". . . A producer which owns theatres has the power to make it impossible for the independent exhibitor to procure films from it, and difficult to procure them from other major producers in case the producer-exhibitor desires those films for itself . . .

". . . There is evidence tending to show that producers with affiliated theatres have exercised the power possessed by them for their own advantage and to the detriment of their independent competitiors . . .

". . . The existence of unusual power to deal with competitors unfairly, where coupled with the opportunity and temptation to use that power is probably a sufficient basis for legislative action to prevent the possibility of its exercise. This must certainly be so where there is, in addition, evidence of past aggressions . . ."

Cites Three Cases

Mr. Myers declared, "The industry now is confronted with the task of defending itself in the supreme court at the next term in three cases involving records and findings that are devastating; the Perelman case from Philadelphia; the Interstate Circuit case from Dallas; and the divorcement law case from Fargo. The records in all three cases bear out the claims which Allied has made over a period of nine years, namely, that the Big Eight have been engaged in contracts, combinations and conspiracies in violation of the anti-trust laws..

"All are aware that these repeated warnings have been either ignored or ridiculed. Refusal to heed these warnings, which certainly were based on broad experience, is costing the industry a great deal more than would have been involved in a good-faith effort to work out exhibitor problems with the bona-fide representatives of independent exhibitors. As a result of its headstrong policy the industry now has an unprecedented accumulation of woe and the end is not in sight."

"Divorcement" bills in all the other 47 states will be pressed at the next sessions of state legislatures as a consequence of the North Dakota law having been declared constitutional, W. A. Steffes, president of Allied Theatre Owners of the Northwest, said in Minneapolis. Mr. Steffes is chairman of a committee of Allied States appointed to advocate "divorcement" bills.

Wisconsin Owners Ask $1,050,000 Damages

La Crosse (Wis.) Theatres Company, Inc., filed suit in Federal District Court at Madison last Thursday, asking $1,050,000 as treble damages under the Clayton anti-trust act from six defendants, including three major film distributors..

The plaintiff, operator of five "independent" motion picture houses, charged that an unlawful combination had been formed in an attempt to force the company out of business.

Named defendants in the action were: Paramount Pictures Distributing Corporation; Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation; United Artists Distributing Corporation; Minnesota Amusement Company of Minneapolis, and its subsidiary, Wellworth Theatres of Wisconsin, Inc., and Ed Ruben, of Minneapolis, president of the Wellworth Company.

In its complaint the La Crosse company asserted it had been unable to obtain adequate film service and had been compelled to pay exorbitant and unjust prices for any film it could get since it refused to sell out in 1934 to Mr. Ruben.

Representing the independent owners is Robert A. Hess, attorney, Milwaukee.

BUSINESS JUDGMENT AND PRICES

"Monopoly," as defined by the Sherman and Clayton acts, is but "an insignificant part" of the problem of keeping prices right for the consumer, according to H. S. Dennison, president of the Dennison Manufacturing Company, and J. K. Galbraith of Harvard University, whose book, "Modern Competition and Business Policy," has just been published by the Oxford University Press.

The anti-trust policy of the government, . they write, "deals with monopolies, and the monopolies which come within the definition of the Supreme Court are of very narrow importance; their restraint on the country's whole production of wealth is fractional in comparison with the perfectly legal restraints which business judgment imposes on the producer who has reached the size where he must plan his production with regard for its effect upon price."

"Even when the courts succeeded in dissolving a 'trust,' at best they only replace monopoly restraint with that dictated by business judgment without being able to give any assurance that the prices under the later will be lower than the monopoly price," the authors add.

Justice Department Continues With Fox West Coast Inquiry

J. Law, of the Attorney General's office, denied in Hollywood reports that he has been ordered to discontinue his probe of the books of major studios as part of a Department of Justice investigation of charges against Fox West Coast. Mr. Law stated the probe is continuing in status quo and a report is expected shortly.

Allied Demands Rental Cuts For Non-deliveries

Film rental adjustments to compensate exhibitors for undelivered pictures, the promise of which influenced product deals, are demanded by Abram Myers. It is alleged that "86 pictures were not made or are being withheld" by the major companies on 1937-38 pacts.

The bulletin states: "Recently executives of the Big Eight, hearing disturbing rumors, rushed to Washington to assure Government officials, including the President, that the motion picture business is capable of regulating itself.

"We suggest the performance would be more impressive if these executives stopped yelling at each other and accounted to the exhibitors for the pictures they promised but did not and apparently will not deliver this season.

"It would be easier to believe that a new day is at hand if the major distributors, instead of relying on a technical provision of the standard exhibition contract, explained frankly to their customers why these 86 pictures were not made or are being withheld and made an adjustment of film rentals commensurate with the savings effected by the distributors by this juggling of product."

Mr. Myers further suggests that the matter be taken up by the distributors' trade practice committee which is formulating an industry program, as one of the causes of friction between exhibitors and distributors.

U. S. Allays "Fears" of Witnesses in Probe

Representatives of the motion picture industry need entertain no fears that any testimony they may give before the Administration's monopoly investigating committee will be used as the basis for future criminal prosecutions by the Department of Justice, according to Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold, head of the anti-trust division in Washington.

Dismissing as groundless rumors that the Department would use the committee hearings this fall to bolster up cases and to develop new leads, Mr. Arnold disclosed that there is little or nothing that goes on in big-industry of which the anti-trust division is not aware, while at the same time the Department is surfeited with "leads".

There is no thought in the department of making the probe a "fishing expedition," he said. Little or nothing can be developed with which the Department is not already familiar, and so far as building up cases goes, it is easier for the Government to secure information by the grand jury and other methods it habitually follows.

"The monopoly investigation is intended to gain information looking toward remedial legislation," he explained. "There is absolutely no thought in the anti-trust division of ferreting out information at hearings conducted by the monopoly committee and using such information for possible criminal prosecutions under the anti-trust statutes at a later date.

Of course, Mr. Arnold said, if by any chance information is developed during the hearings which it is felt should be investigated, the Department will accept the issue, as it is required to do under the law. But the situation so disclosed will be investigated in other ways, and the testimony which showed its existence will not be used. In brief, witnesses before the committee will be permitted to claim immunity and that claim will be honored by the Department of Justice.

To give official standing to Mr. Arnold's statement, the Department issued a formal announcement outlining the situation in which it disclosed that since witnesses could claim immunity, it would exercise care to see that no one against whom it intended to bring a case would be permitted to testify before the committee.

INDUSTRY ADOPTS HAYS' IDEA OF UNITED AD DRIVE

Howard Dietz Heads Working Committee of Campaign to Make Public Conscious of New Season Attractions

In one of the speediest moves made by the organized industry for the general welfare of the film business at the box office, Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, suggested, and in 24 hours the industry had in work the machinery for, a concerted, nationwide advertising drive to acquaint and make the public conscious of the film attractions which will be offered in the approaching new season.

An agreement to launch the campaign was reached last Friday at a meeting at the MPPDA headquarters, New York, which was attended by presidents of the major companies, sales managers, directors of advertising and publicity and heads of the major theatre circuits.

Mr. Hays urged the campaign as a business stimulant when he spoke in New York last Thursday at the third annual awards luncheon of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers. (The winners of the AMPA awards were listed on Page 56 of MOTION PICTURE HERALD, July 16th.) The attempts by business and government to lift the country out of the recession are necessary, Mr. Hays declared, but they are futile unless, through advertising, the public becomes aware of what is being done.

On the same day that Mr. Hays proposed the "stepping up" of all advertising, particularly in newspapers, an informal meeting of advertising and directors and national circuit operators was held in the offices of Spyros Skouras, National Theatres executive. The specific idea of an advertising campaign was discussed in detail at the gathering.

Following the voting of approval by the executives at Friday's meeting, Howard Dietz, advertising and publicity director of Loew's, Inc., was chosen to head a working committee which will conduct the drive.

Campaign To Be Industry-Wide

The campaign will be industry-wide, with production, distribution and exhibition participating. The drive will have no official connection with the MPPDA but it has not yet been determined how independent exhibitors will participate.

Under the general plan, a budget will be supplied by all participants in the campaign. The total appropriation has been tentatively set at more than $500,000 but less than $1,000,000. Contributions will be apportioned among individual companies in accordance with the number of pictures and display whch figure in the campaign. Circuits will contribute according to placement of copy and number and run of theatres in individual territories.

Included in the campaign will be elaborate plans for supplementary activities, such as the use of lobby displays, trailers, publicity, radio, billboards and posters.

With Mr. Dietz on the "working committee," are Charles E. McCarthy, of Twentieth Century-Fox, and Robert Gillham of Paramount. The advertising and publicity directors of other companies comprise a committee of the whole which will supplement the work of the Dietz-McCarthy-Gillham unit.

Heading a distributors' committee which will function in conjunction with the working committee is George J. Schaefer of United Artists. A producers' committee to cooperate with the eastern committees on all phases of the campaign was formed this week under the chairmanship of Fred Beetson of the Motion Picture Producers Association.

Members of the Hollywood committee are Frank Whitbeck, MGM; Herbert Moulton, Paramount; Howard Benedict, RKO; Frank Seltzer, Roach; Fred Marshall, Columbia; Harry Brand or Troy Orr, Twentieth Century-Fox; David Lipton, Universal; Robert S. Taplinger, Warner Brothers; George Dickson, Disney; Al Vaughan, Goldwyn; Paul Snell, Principal; Russell Birdwell, Selznick International; John LeRoy Johnston, Wanger; Ted Richmond, Grand National; Joe Reddy, Lloyd; William Pierce, Jr., Monogram; Walter Compton, Republic; Charles Leonard, United Artists; Ben Wallerstein, Warner Theatres; Jack Gross, RKO Theatres; Thornton Sargent, Fox West Coast; and Harry Wallen, Paramount Theatres.

Members of the distributors committee are Neil F. Agnew, Paramount; Herman Wobber, Twentieth Century-Fox, William A. Scully, MGM, and Gradwell L. Sears, Warners.

On the circuits' committee are Joseph Bernhard, Warner Theatres; J. J. O'Connor, RKO Theatres; C. C. Moskowitz, Loew's; and Mr. Skouras.

Starts Early in September

The committees now are working on a detailed budget and the campaign, under present plans, is scheduled to get underway early in September. The committees also will decide on the extent and type of advertising to be used as well as its placement and distribution.

In his talk, which prompted the movement, Mr. Hays declared:

"You who direct motion picture advertising richly deserve the appreciation and congratulations not only of the industry, but of all who are interested in the improvement of the screen.

"It has been said that business, like a wheelbarrow, does not get anywhere unless it is pushed. Advertising is the pusher.

"Much is being done by business and by government to bring us out of this recession. It is necessary. But it is all futile unless the public is told about it. That is the job of advertising. The advertising of every business must be stepped up. I believe it is the essential of today. Advertising not only sells what is already produced but creates the demand which results in increased production.

"I recommend that the motion picture industry do its part by advancing and stepping up its advertising campaigns. We need more, not less, advertising. Newspaper advertising is essential to this end.

"Through a sense of public responsibility, through self-discipline and self-regulation, you have made motion picture advertising clean, interesting and efficient."

A formal announcement of the meeting at the MPPDA which resulted from Mr. Hays recommendations was issued by the association. It stated:

"Discussed and formulated were preliminary plans for a concerted effort by the motion picture industry to bring to the public's attention the impressive array of important pictures being prepared for early showing."

Those who attended this session included Neil F. Agnew and Y. Frank Freeman, vice-presidents of Paramount; Mr. Gillham; Mr. Schaefer; Lynn Farnol, advertising and publicity director of United Artists; Nicholas M. Schenck, president of Loew's; Mr. Dietz; Oscar Doob, advertising and publicity director of Loew's Theatres; Ned E. Depinet, J. J. O'Connor and S. Barret McCormick of RKO; Gradwell Sears and Mort Blumenstock of Warner Brothers; Jack Cohn and Maurice Bergman of Columbia; Nate Blumberg and Louis Pollock of Universal; Mr. McCarthy and Mr. Wobber of Twentieth Century-Fox; Mr. Skouras of National Theatres, and Gordon White of Educational Pictures.

Mr. Schenck started for Hollywood shortly after the meeting to make preliminary arrangements for producer participation. Mr. Hays left on Wednesday for the Coast.

On Wednesday Mr. Schaefer, chairman of the Distributors Committee of the MPPDA, invited producers, distributors, affiliated and unaffiliated theatre circuit operators and theatre owners to a meeting at the Hotel Astor, New York, on July 27th, to discuss "A plan to stimulate greater box office attendance."

CANADA TO CONDUCT ADVERTISING DRIVE

An initial appropriation of $1,000 from Famous Players Canadian Corporation this week established a co-operative fund for advertising a "Go to the Movies Week," which will be held throughout Canada from September 19th to the 24th, according to N. A. Taylor, chairman of the Motion Picture Branch, Toronto Board of Trade.

All film distributing companies in the Dominion are being asked to contribute to the fund, and an invitation has been made to independent theatre interests to support the campaign.

MPPDA Authorizes Feature for Fair

The Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America formally announced this week, as was generally expected, that it will produce "Cavalcade of America," a film panorama of the highlights of American history, for presentation at the New York World's Fair of 1939.

The picture will be exhibited in the Federal Building at the Fair, under the auspices of the United States New York World's Fair Commission, of which Edward J. Flynn is the United States commissioner general.

"This story of America," according to the MPPDA announcement, "will be made up of episodes and scenes taken from great feature pictures of the major events, forces and personalities in the country's history, as portrayed by the best writers, actors, directors and technicians."

STUDIOS POURING MILLIONS INTO NEW RECORD ACTIVITY

It's a High Mark in Production Pace with 40 Films in Work Expected to Write Good News at the Theatres

by GUS McCARTHY
in Hollywood

Millions of dollars have been poured into production the last few weeks for the screens of America's exhibitors. More millions will continue to be poured into it for months to come. "Happy Days Are Here Again" is being sung here in Hollywood in louder keys than ever before.

While the workaday world, which expects great things to come barging out of Hollywood without interruption, was looking askance at a town which seemed to be suffering all the woes and travails to which mankind and his industry are subject, anemic looking production abruptly came to life. The business of making statements and concocting replies to them (matters which made questionable headlines), suddenly gave way to a burst of picture making activity.

In sum, approximately 75 pictures have started since June 15. At no time since that date has the number of productions in work averaged less than 50. Items representative of every note in the screen entertainment scale are included. Their costs range from ultra-expensive budgets to those in which every nickel and dime is being efficiently and economically spent.

Columbia has been occupying itself with four productions which, it anticipates, will keep the studio prominent in the public's eyes. Prominent is "You Can't Take It With You," a comedy romance drama which engaged the combined talents of that noted writer-director team of Robert Riskin and Frank Capra and will present such screen notables as Jean Arthur, James Stewart, Lionel Barrymore, Edward Arnold, Mischa Auer, Ann Miller, Spring Byington and Donald Meek.

Much is expected of "I Am the Law," a topically visaged romance melodrama, with Edward G. Robinson, Wendy Barrie, Barbara O'Neill, John Beal and numerous others. The perennially popular Joe E. Brown will be seen in "The Gladiator," a David Loew production which satirizes college athletics and wrestling. Anne Shirley, Nan Grey, Margaret Tallichet, Joanne Tree, Peggy Moran, Cecil Cunningham, Noah Beery, Jr., Marjorie Main and Ralph Bellamy will be the principal participants in "Girls' School," a story of one day's exciting happenings.

Other product to come from Columbia will include "Crime Takes a Holiday," with Jack Holt and Marcia Ralston; "Juvenile Court," Paul Kelly, Rita Hayworth; "The Lady Objects," Lanny Ross, Gloria Stuart; "Paris on Broadway," Lanny Ross; "Phantom Gold," Jack Luden, Beth Marion.

EDUCATOR PRAISES VALUE OF FILMS

"The talking picture is one of the best mediums we have for instruction in the fine arts as well as in other branches of learning," the Rev. J. J. Gibbons, S.J., of Rockhurst College, Kansas City, said this week.

"We have been hoping here that the film industry will not be very hard hit by the preesnt slump in business," Father Gibons said. "The high grade of pictures that the industry has been turning out in the last few years is certainly deserving of approval from the public. We try to advise our students not to miss the good pictures."

MGM's Leaders

MGM expects Leo the lion to do no little roaring about the topical and adventurous "Too Hot to Handle"; the musical spectacle "The Great Waltz"; realistic "Boystown" and the lyric "Sweethearts." Considerable boasting is being done about these and "Marie Antoinette."

Two of the forthcoming features will be in color. Robert Taylor will star in both. Much preliminary work has been done on "Northwest Passage," from Kenneth Robert's best selling novel. Spencer Tracy and Wallace Beery will be in the film, which W. S. Van Dyke will direct, with Hunt Stromberg the producer. So far Taylor alone has been announced for "Hands Across the Border," an action romance of hockey rivalry between West Point and Royal College of Canada.

Joan Crawford's next vehicle will be an adaptation of the stage play "The Shining Hour," and Luise Rainer will be seen in "Dramatic School," from an European stage play. Another foreign subject, "Balalaika," a London stage musical comedy success, will feature Nelson Eddy and Ilona Massey.

Dashiel Hammett's "The Return of the Thin Man" will reunite William Powell and Myrna Loy. Gold having been found in the "Judge Hardy" series, Mickey Rooney et al will soon be on the screens again in "The Hardies Out West." Rooney also is scheduled for "Roosty." "The Citadel," in production in England with Robert Donat and Rosalind Russell, will be followed by "Goodbye Mr. Chips," from a James Hilton novel, with Donat again featured. An original musical by George O'Neill, "In Old New Orleans," will feature Jeanette MacDonald and possibly Nelson Eddy. Mervyn LeRoy's first production for MGM will be "The Wizard of Oz," in color. Judy Garland and Buddy Ebsen have been set for roles. Another LeRoy production will be "A Day at the Circus," featuring the Marx Brothers. "Honolulu," a dancing musical, has been selected for Eleanor Powell and Allan Jones. Robert Young and Florence Rice have been booked for "Vacation from Love," original by Harlan Ware and Patterson McNutt.

Paramount in Action

Paramount has been spending money gloriously on production, but there are no doubts on the lot but that the dollars will return to the company's coffers in the company of plenty more, picked up in a great many heres and theres where the slogan, "If It's a Paramount Picture, It's the Best Show in Town," has its significance.

Something more valuable than buttons is required to produce such films as "Men with Wings," "If I Were King," "Artists and Models Abroad," "Paris Honeymoon," "Zaza" and "The Arkansas Traveller." That half dozen of potential "pack-'em-inners" comes pretty close to being the most imposing program with which Paramount ever concerned itself, at one time, in its history.

It is the ambitious forerunner of a schedule of a dozen soon to be given the starting gun. Among them will be "St. Louis Blues," "Thanks for the Memory," which will feature Bob Hope and Shirley Ross, "Say It in French," with Olympe Bradna and Ray Milland, and "Disbarred" in which Randolph Scott and Gail Patrick will be starred.

On the list also are "Illegal Traffic," "Cafe Society," "Tom Sawyer, Detective," which will feature the group of youngsters including Donald O'Connor, Billie Lee, Billy Cook and Keith MacKenzie who are now making "Sons of the Legion," and an untitled feature for Gladys Swarthout. Bob Hope and Martha Raye will be seen in "Never Say Die," "The Lady's from Kentucky" will feature George Raft and Frances Dee; and "I Robbed a Bank," a title about which the Producers' Association probably will have something to say, is based on G-Man J. Edgar Hoover's book, "Criminals in Hiding."

RKO Radio's Appraisal

RKO Radio's present and prospective activity, in the words of Mr. Pandro S. Berman who has charge of things over there, is "an honest appraisal of a group of pictures that can't do anything but click heavily at the box office." The facts particularly pertained to four films.

"Gunga Din" is the biggest picture RKO Radio ever essayed. It has a whale of a budget. The sets are reputedly more expensive, massive and spectacular than any since "Intolerance." Producer - director George Stevens has the show in charge. It will feautre Cary Grant, Victor Mc-Laglen, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and Sam Jaffee.

The Marx Brothers are the big numbers in the comedy "Room Service," a stage play for which the company spent a small fortune. The combination of director Mark Sandrich, song writer Irving Berlin and actors Fred

75 PICTURES STARTED SINCE JUNE 15

Astaire and Ginger Rogers will function in "Carefree." Barbara Stanwyck and Henry Fonda are to be starred in "The Mad Miss Manton," an action romance, considered the biggest "clothes" picture that studio has made since "Roberta." In the immediate offing is the first of the Leo McCarey Production's series, "Love Affair," which will star Irene Dunne. Charles Boyer is tentatively being considered to appear with Ginger Rogers in "Stolen Honeymoon," and Ginger will go it alone again in a film version of the famous Broadway musical "Irene."

In addition to these top flight potentialities Jack Oakie and Lucille Ball will follow up "The Affairs of Annabel" with "Annabel Takes a Tour," and Louis Hayward will be seen in another "Saint" story, this time "The Saint Strikes Twice."

Warners' Talent Parade

Practically the entire array of Warner Brothers' talent is being paraded in such pictures as "Head over Heels," "The Sisters," "Angels with Dirty Faces," "Wings of the Navy," "Brother Rat" and "Heart of the North," which is being done in color, and "Valley of the Giants," and "Racket Busters" and "Boy Meets Girl" are ready to learn what previewers think of them.

The stages are set for 13 more big ones. "Juarez," a story of Maxmillian and Carlotta, the ill-starred royal rulers of Mexico, will have Paul Muni and Bette Davis as headliners under the guidance of producer Henry Blanke and director William Dieterle. Errol Flynn, George Brent, Claude Raines, Patric Knowles, Ian Hunter and Melville Cooper will be featured in "Dawn Patrol." Bette Davis will go back to the Old South for "Memphis Belle." Claude Rains will portray the patriot who financed the American Revolution in "The Story of Haym Solomon." Casts are still to be chosen for "We are not Alone," a romance based on James Hilton's novel, and the Cosmopolitan Magazine story, "You Can't Escape Forever."

Universal Making Eight

Universal has eight pictures in various stages of production. "Road to Reno," which returns Hope Hampton to the screen, is a story of divorce complications treated from the comedy viewpoint. "Youth Takes a Fling," down to earth romance, will present Joel McCrea and Andrea Leeds. Deanna Durbin and Jackie Cooper are teamed with Melvyn Douglas, John Halliday and Irene Rich in a story revolving around the problems of an adolescent girl. Adolphe Menjou, Andrea Leeds, Edgar Bergen, Charlie McCarthy, George Murphy and Rita Johnson are the principals in John M. Stahl's "Letter of Introduction."

To follow up these films and the balance which are of lesser importance, the company will embark upon "Swing That Cheer," second in the Collegiate series; "The Last Express," a Crime Club number; "The Comet," "Adam's Evening," "Three Smart Girls Grow Up" and "Rio," which will feature Danielle Darrieux.

The cost of Universal's current and immediate program is estimated at $6,000,000.

Zanuck's Pace

Though Darryl F. Zanuck traipsed off to Europe for a polo playing vacation, 20th Century-Fox didn't shut up shop. His lieutenants have been carrying on apace, and the pace Mr. Zanuck usually sets doesn't permit anyone slow to think or act to have a finger in the pie.

In work is the collegiate football comedy romance, "Hold That Co-Ed," in which Marjorie Weaver, George Murphy, John Barrymore, Jack Haley, Joan Davis and Ruth Terry are active. So is "Five of a Kind," which, after one notes that the Dionne Quintuplets are in it, calls for little further elucidation. John Ford is directing an action naval spectacle in which Nancy Kelly, a seventeen year older who won plaudits for her work in the stage play "Susan and God," makes her film debut, with Richard Green, Slim Summerville, Douglas Fowley, Joan Valeria, Preston Foster, John Carradine, Warren Hymer and Maxie Rosenbloom also present. Warner Baxter, Alice Faye, Arthur Treacher, Keye Luke and Charles Winninger are the leads in "By the Dawn's Early Light," a comedy melodrama. "Suez" and Jane Withers' "Down to Earth" have moved into the cutting room.

Mr. Zanuck will return in a few weeks and with him Warner Oland will return to the screen in "Charlie Chan in Honolulu." Something will be done about starting the studio's first color feature, "Kentucky," about August 15th and then, in due course, will come "The Average Man," a musical with Eddie Cantor in the title role, "Dance Hall," which will feature Alice Faye, "The Little Princess," a Shirley Temple number, "Three Musketeers" for the Ritz Brothers, and "Jesse James" for Tyrone Power.

Monogram's Next

Monogram, which just completed "The Barefoot Boy" and "The Circus Comes to Town," will proceed to "Starlight over Texas," an Ed Finney production starring Tex Ritter, "Wanted by the Police," with Frankie Darro, E. B. Derr's "Gang Bullets," "Gangster's Boy," which will star Jackie Cooper, "Murder in the Big House" and "Land of the Sky Blue Water," a special for Movita and John Carroll.

United Artists Active

The United Artists group has been active. Selznick recently wound up "The Young in Heart" in which Janet Gaynor, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Paulette Goddard, Roland Young and Billie Burke are featured. Hal Roach and Fredric March, Virginia Bruce, Patsy Kelly, Alan Mowbray, Nancy Carroll and Eugene Pallette in "There Goes My Heart." Goldwyn's "The Lady and the Cowboy" is rolling along with Gary Cooper, Merle Oberon, David Niven, Thomas Mitchell, Patsy Kelly and Fuzzy Knight. Nickel-nursing has not been practiced on any of them. Eddie Small's production plans, particularly for "The Duke of West Point," suffered a tragic setback with the death of Jack Dunn.

Selznick's Three

In the way he goes about things, David O. Selznick is planning three pictures for quick production. "Made for Each Other," a straight romance drama, will feature Carole Lombard and James Stewart. It goes to work July 26th. Dates are still to be set for "Titanic," based on the fate of the liner which struck an iceberg in 1912, and "The Earl of Chicago," a comedy for Edward Arnold.

"Gone with the Wind" will go into production for sure some time before Christmas, but in the meantime, "Heartbreak Town," the realistic story of a Hollywood child star, will be in production.

Wanger's Starting Date

August 15th has been set as the starting date for Wanger's "Trade Winds." Fredric March and Joan Bennett will be starred in the story which Tay Garnett wrote and will direct. A John Ford production, "State Coach," will follow, as will "A Man and His Woman," based on "The Illusionist," and "Winter Carnival," a picture of the famous Dartmouth College midwinter sports-social fiesta which Mr. Wanger himself originated while a student there.

Goldwyn's Aims

Goldwyn's prospectives are "The Daring Age," which will mark the screen debut of violinist Jascha Heifetz and feature Adolphe Menjou. It concerns the problems facing modern youth. The second, "The Last Frontier," in which Henry Hathaway will direct Gary Cooper, is a story of the heroes who brought peace to natives and whites in the Philippine Islands after the Spanish-American war. The screen play is being written by Gene Fowler and Howard Estabrook.

"Wuthering Heights," an Emily Bronte love story, will star Merle Oberon and William Wyler will direct.

Hal Roach Budget Pictures

Roach will follow "There Goes My Heart" for United Artists with three other million dollar budget productions and four Laurel and Hardy comedies. "Topper Takes a Trip," a sequel to "Topper," will feature virtually the entire original cast. The conservative banker's "ghostly" companions will follow him on a trip to Europe. "Water Gypsies," which will present Jean Arthur, Brian Aherne and Roland Young, is a melodrama romance of life on the Thames River barges in London. "Captain Midnight," a story of Australia in the 1850's, will co-star Margaret Sullavan and Brian Aherne. Mr. Roach is looking for a story in which Roland Colman will be starred.

NEWSREELS PLAN COUP TO MATCH "CALIFORNIA VIA DUBLIN" FLIGHT

Pictures of Douglas Corrigan at Baldonnel Field Placed on Plane Making First Test Trip for Transoceanic Airline

Another chapter in the history of newsreel competition will probably be written before the week ends, inspired by the $69.50 daredevil airplane crossing from New York to Ireland by Douglas (I-made-a-mistake) Corrigan.

If arrangements are successful, as conducted and concluded Tuesday afternoon with the utmost secrecy, exhibitors in this country will receive this week pictures of Mr. Corrigan and his "Corrigan Clipper" standing on Baldonnel Airfield at Dublin Monday evening. They are scheduled to be flown across the Atlantic for some of the American newsreels in an experimental trip conducted for trans-oceanic airways study by Imperial Airways of Britain and Pan-American Airways of the Americas. The hop was to start Wednesday and end Thursday night.

Admittedly the pictures do not show Mr. Corrigan arriving at his destination, for the world knows that Mr. Corrigan neglected to send word ahead, or behind for that matter, that he was making the trip.

Things being what they are in Ireland today, on the comparatively quiet side, the newsreels evidently feel that the country does not require a regular newsreel camera station, for there wasn't a camera within brick-throwing distance when Irishman Corrigan alighted, without passport or permission and less than 30 gallons of gasoline to spare, and announced that he was from New York. Flabbergasted after hearing of the feat from radio broadcasters and reporters, the newsreels over there quickly got their bearings and dispatched an army of cameramen from London across the Irish Sea and Dublin to film what could be had.

Test Flight Express Tried

The pictures, of course, would have comparatively little value on arriving in this country through the regular steamship channels, which means ten days after the event. But at this point Paramount heard of the closely guarded plans of Imperial-Pan American air systems to make a trial hop across the ocean to Newfoundland and straight down the Atlantic Seaboard to North Beach Airport on Long Island. Within a few hours at least Universal News and Pathe heard of the hop and arranged for their films to travel along. MGM's News of the Day in New York had not heard how they fared, and repeated attempts to reach Fox Movietone News officials to determine how they stood, were unsuccessful.

By four p. m. on Tuesday the newsreels had tied up enough space on the plane for their films of Mr. Corrigan's post-flight activities, and also a full record of King George and Queen Elizabeth of England arriving on their visit of state in France amid the booming of a 101-cannon salute of welcome.

At the time this account was written, Tuesday evening, the newspapers, news wire services and radio news broadcasters apparently were unaware of the contemplated flight, for not a word had been uttered publicly or a headline published. The story broke in the press Wednesday.

Up to press time the newsreels were still hoping that the experiment would not be postponed and that their films would arrive safely on these shores, days ahead of steamers. They recognized, however, the fickleness of the elements.

The newsreels didn't get any pictures of Mr. Corrigan's takeoff, either, as he stole away in the early morning when the summer sun was just rising over the Atlantic's horizon off Long Island's shore. The reels had paid little, if any attention to his arrival in New York from California, flying non-stop in his $900 "crate" with two nickel chocolate bars and a bottle of water. Not a camera was on hand, nor hardly a witness, save for a few night-shift field mechanics and a Department of Commerce air inspector, all of them shouting warnings. The cameras could have filmed the police emergency car, the fire wagon, ambulance and crash wagon that raced down the field with the "Corrigan Clipper," all expecting the worst as the little home-repaired plane rose unsteadily from the runway.

Newsreel coverage of the earlier flight of the week, however, was entirely different. The job of filming the takeoff of multi-millionaire movie and oil-producer Howard Hughes was as easy as shooting Atlantic City's annual baby parade, lollypops and all.

In this instance all of the reels enjoyed equal and elaborate representation and coverage, with no "scoops" scored as a result of the many preparations made by Mr. Hughes' aircasters and forecasters, by his managers and press agents, and, of course, by Grover Whalen, for whose New York World's Fair the flight was conducted, with all of the well-stocked larder, 700 pounds of radio equipment, gauges and gadgets and four assistants that went aloft in Mr. Hughes' $70,000 "flying laboratory."

Mr. Hughes even staged a rehearsal for the newsreels, two days before the start of his actual flight, making a special run down the ways at Floyd Bennett field on Long Island and cruising over New York's skyline so that newsreels could picture him well in advance of his actual take-off and develop the films in time for Mr. Hughes himself to carry to Paris where they were deposited for foreign theatres who could pass them off, if they pleased, as pictures of the official takeoff. Presumably some of these shots got to U. S. theatres, but how they were labeled was not determined.

The five American newsreels—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's News of the Day, Paramount News, RKO Pathe News, Twentieth Century-Fox Movietone News and Universal Newsreel—pooled their interests in the Hughes rehearsal, getting an equal 200 feet from the camera of each competitor, to make a 1,000-foot special. On his arrival in Paris, Mr. Hughes handed the pictures to Major E. E. Aldrin, his agent there, who in turn distributed a film can, properly labeled, to a representative of each of the five companies—pictures of Hughes' takeoff delivered by Hughes himself.

Complete Coverage

Someone was heard to say that it rained newsreel cameramen on Floyd Bennett Field when Mr. Hughes returned from his jaunt. Anyway, camera crews were in airplanes, on the ground, in the airport control tower, in the upper part of the hangar and all over the place. They even went out west to meet the big ship winging its way home.

The net results could be seen in the report of the air-express division of Railway Express, which handled 533 shipments of newsreel film and photos weighing 2,240 lbs. on Thursday night and Friday morning after the Hughes' reception in New York.

Three special clerks worked eight hour shifts in each of the five air-express distributing agencies, and two trucks were added to handle the surplus film shipments.

Expenses of the coverage, however, were not exorbitant, due to the well organized manner in which the event was arranged, to get the fullest possible publicity for the World's Fair.

There had not been a spectacular flight and New York reception in some years, so the newsreels were able to revive all the old time coverage machinery that they had learned to set up four or five years ago for handling this type of story, and the "story" went off without a hitch. The reel editors had planned the story thoroughly weeks before it actually happened. They had made considerable advance material on Hughes and the members of his crew. On the actual take off they had a dozen outfits, secured a good picture and got prints out the next day.

As the flight progressed at unanticipated speed all of the reels were in something of a quandary Wednesday night when it came to closing the midweek issue, because Hughes at that time still had to fly from Alaska to New York. They finally took a chance on Hughes' ability to come through by the following day and sent the midweek reel out short, leaving space for the picture of Hughes' actual arrival.

Hughes came through practically on time and the cameramen were thoroughly set for the arrival. They had four camera outfits on the ground and others in the air. Paramount also had a man in Chicago and a man

100 CAMERAMEN COVER KING'S VISIT

by PIERRE AUTRE
in Paris

The state visit of King George and Queen Elizabeth this week to France brought out one of the greatest array of newsreel cameras ever assembled in Europe, second to the King's Coronation. The six French, four British and five American newsreels had 100 cameramen shooting the voyage and arrival of the British rulers. Three reels were made in color, by British Pathe Gazette, using Dufaycolor; French Reportages Films, using Ondiacolor, a French process, and a special reel, done in the French Kalichrome.

Black-and-white pictures were sent almost immediately by plane to England for quick shipment to Canada and the United States.

Virtually the entire French motion picture business in Paris, including all of the American representatives, viewed the Royal cortege from office balconies on Champs Elysees. Darryl Zanuck was present on the balcony of the Fox office.

MERGER OF EDUCATIONAL AND GN IS ALMOST SET

Educational's Plans Reported to Contemplate Production of 12 Features and 12 "Featurettes"

A plan calling for the merging of Educational Pictures with Grand National has been worked out, and now hinges upon the approval of Educational's board of directors, presumably a formality, Edward L. Alperson, co-trustee of Grand National, revealed this week in Hollywood.

Within ten days after approval of the proposal by the Educational group in New York, Mr. Alperson said, the plan will be presented to the federal court in Hollywood for approval under the section 77B reorganization of Grand National.

Coincident with the talk of a merger, it was reported in New York that Earle W. Hammons, president of Educational, was considering withdrawing from the short subject production field, or at least partially, in favor of features.

The plans of Educational's executives, while still not definitely set, are understood to contemplate the production of approximately 12 features annually and possibly in addition, a number of "featurettes," presumably of the type of four-reel features planned by Hal Roach for United Artists release.

Mr. Hammons steadfastly has refused to discuss his plans, saying that he has had several deals under consideration and that he would not be in a position to discuss any of them until one was concluded. It is definitely known, however, that he has had his eye on the Grand National setup.

The pending merger with Grand National, it was understood, could have been consummated several months ago had not Mr. Hammons been reluctant to withdraw from the short subject field.

20th-Fox Deal Expires

The necessity that Mr. Hammons find a new distribution channel at this time is occasioned by the expiration of a five-year selling and releasing arrangement with Twentieth Century-Fox.

In 1933, at a time when virtually all the industry was under the effects of the depression, the Chase banking interests and Western Electric, which had financial interests in Educational, effected the releasing arrangement with Fox, in which Chase also had, and still has, its largest film holdings. By thus eliminating Educational's own exchange system, considerable savings were effected.

Fox now is relinquishing the distribution tiein with Educational, in favor of producing its own short subjects.

Mr. Hammons returned to New York Monday after a brief visit to the coast, and delayed any further action for at least a week by going on a vacation.

GN Distribution Plan

The final plan for Grand National distribution is to provide 36 features and two or three series of western pictures for the new season, Mr. Alperson said. With 18 features and a series of eight westerns already set under the Fine Arts Pictures deal, two more "Renfrew of the Royal Mounted" films from Phil Goldstone's Criterion Pictures and one Anna Sten feature to be produced by Eugene Frenke, Mr. Alperson said the amalgamation of Educational and GN would bring approximately $1,500,000 into the new organization for production of the 15 pictures needed to fill out the contemplated feature program and the added westerns series.

Mr. Alperson and Loyd Wright, co-trustee, in a statement regarding the financial condition of Grand National from May 28th to July 1st, declared that receipts were $211,326 and disbursements $144,298, leaving a balance of $67,027.

The federal court on Tuesday approved a compromise settlement of the $168,750 claim of Anna Sten and United Players Productions, Inc., against Grand National for a payment of $30,000, with the proviso that the company produce two Anna Sten features, the first of which will start in 90 days. United and Miss Sten entered the claim charging breach of contract.

in New York standing by fast planes in the event that Hughes might have landed before he reached New York and they would have had to go after him.

To take care of the traffic jams on the roads and to rush the films back from the field they had planes at Floyd Bennett just to fly the film to the laboratories. They also had motorcycle runners. They used both of these methods as they shipped the film as fast as it was shot. Because of the careful planning they gave the story in advance they had little trouble with the crowds on the field and managed to secure Hughes' sound-track statement when he got out of the plane.

When the announcement came that New York was going to give Hughes a ticker-tape reception the following day, the reels made plans to follow up their first special with a second one on the reception. On Friday, they used the same set up that was developed with the Lindbergh reception and was used ever since on similar affairs, placing cameramen from the Battery to the end of the parade at strategic picture positions. Each cameraman had a messenger and as fast as the film was shot, he rushed it back to the reel's office while the cameraman went on to a second location. Besides the usual units, they had extra sound outfits and lighting setups in reserve at City Hall. In this case plans worked successfully, because Hughes said practically nothing on the steps of City Hall and the Mayor took him inside to the Aldermanic Chamber for his principal address. Because of this reserve outfit, with lights, they were able to get in on Hughes' speech. This was chiefly due to a last minute concession by the Mayor.

One of the more amusing aspects of the newsreels' coverage was the fact that the reels had in one issue the start of a world-circling flight and in the immediately following issue the coverage of the completion of the flight—with nothing in between. He landed so unexpectedly in Paris that only one newsreel secured the actual pictures of his landing. Moreover, the pictures of his reception in Paris could not be brought back to New York on the quickest possible boat before Hughes had completely circled the globe and outdated them. While the newsreels had arranged for coverage of Hughes' arrival in Moscow and had also arranged for Hughes to bring the film on to New York with him, Hughes rushed his take-off so fast that the Russians did not have a chance to get the film aboard the plane.

All the newsreels covered Hughes landing in Minneapolis. Again this film trailed the flyer into New York.

Plans had been made for Hughes to carry a camera and make pictures during his flight for all the newsreels but they fell through at the last minute.

Mr. Corrigan's flight was the first of the five "solo" air crossings of the Atlantic which was not pictured by the newsreels in preparation, take-off and landing.

The latest oceanic air project has some potential importance in air traveling. Imperial Airways and Pan-American Airways are together in an arrangement pointing toward their acquiring a large part of the mail and passenger business when regular service is established across the Atlantic, which air-minded optimists predict will be an eventuality.

For months they have been experimenting along the British coasts with the so-called "pick-a-back" plane, about which little is known on this side. The idea is to fasten a smaller plane, the "Mercury," atop a large seaplane, the "Maia," "pick-a-back" fashion, ride a few hundred miles out to sea, release the smaller plane to continue on across the ocean and return the larger plane to the home port. Air students and mechanics are more familiar with the benefits of the arrangement.

The Texan Howard Hughes spent $300,000 to prove how much the latest in scientific gadgets mean to air travel; the Texan Doug Corrigan spent $69.50 to prove how little they mean. Mr. Hughes, when apprised of Corrigan's flight, shook his head noticeably and whispered, "It's remarkable, really remarkable."

1,000 Attend New York Preview Of "Alexander's Ragtime Band"

Members of the New York press and some 1,000 celebrities were guests of Twentieth Century-Fox Tuesday night when a special press review of "Alexander's Ragtime Band" was presented at the Hollywood Theatre, on Broadway, New York city.

The picture, reviewed in MOTION PICTURE HERALD, May 28th will open August 5th, at the Roxy Theatre.

Among those who attended the opening were Irving Berlin and his wife, the former Ellin Mackay; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Bernhard; Mr. and Mrs. Leo Spitz; Mr. and Mrs. Jack Cohn; Mr. and Mrs. Nate Spingold; Ed Fay; Mr. and Mrs. Colvin Brown; Mr. and Mrs. Herman Wobber, and Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Moskowitz.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Speed

A while back Hollywood was demonstrating the physical phenonema of inertia in ways that astounded scientists. There were some suggestions made that the town might just as well be given back to Will Rogers' famous Escrow Indians and the lots be turned over to realtors for sub-division purposes. Nobody was doing anything. Then, either prodded into it, for reasons of personal pride or economic necessity, those who have the say about production started to disprove the theory that there's no such thing possible as perpetual motion. New pictures went into work with such a speed that it was difficult to keep track of all. Projects that had been dawdling along for weeks and months suddenly crossed the finish line. "Marie Antoinette" was a good example of that state of affairs. Two nights before its International Premiere scenes were being reshot, added and eliminated. Gazing out our window nowadays we can't see very far in the blur; in-the-work production, the eleven new items added to it during mid-July, have stirred up quite a dust cloud.

Upon a horizon we cannot see, because of intervening foothills, the busy Warner studio added three activities to its work sheet. Into production went "Brother Rat" adornments to the cast of which are Wayne Morris, Priscilla Lane, Jane Wyman and Jane Bryan, Eddie Albert, Ronald Regan, Johnny Davis, Henry O'Neill, Olin Rowland, Gordon Oliver, Louise Beavers and squads of personalities of lesser film repute. "Curtain Call" likewise is before the cameras. It will feature Kay Francis, John Litel, Ian Hunter, Melville Cooper, Ann Keith, Donald Crisp and Cecil Cunningham. In far away Florida, George Brent, Olivia de Havilland, John Payne, Frank McHugh, John Ridgely, Regis Toomey and Donald Briggs are doing what they can to bring "Wings of the Navy" to screen realism.

Paramount Starts Three

Things are stirring, too, at Paramount, where another three productions were given the starting signal. On the way to eventual moving picture theatre merchandise is "King of Alcatraz," in which Lloyd Nolan, Gail Patrick, J. Carroll Naish, Robert Preston, Anthony Hart, Colin Tapley, Harry Carey and Dorothy Howe will be seen. Keeping this prison melodrama company is "Sunset Trail," a Harry Sherman "Hopalong Cassidy" for the familiar William Boyd, George Hayes, Russell Hayden and sundry others. "Escape from Yesterday," which the studio anticipates will be a matter of interest for many tomorrows, is going along and engaging the talents of Akim Tamiroff, Frances Farmer and Leif Erickson as its principal players.

MGM, recovering from the revelry of its "Marie Antoinette" opening celebration, gathered strength enough to add two pictures to its active list. "Stablemates" started, but nobody seems to know very much about it other than Wallace Beery and Mickey Rooney are the leads. Many exhibitors will probably consider that sufficient as far as names are concerned. There's a little more detail about "Listen Darling," however, and it is known that Freddie Bartholomew, Judy Garland, Mary Astor and Walter Pidgeon will work in it.

"Mr. Doodle Kicks Off" kicked up the new dust at RKO-Radio. Joe Penner, June Travis, Billy Gilbert, Richard Lane, William Davidson and Pierre Watkins will be among those present when the show is available to the public.

Columbia's contribution to the new work is "Juvenile Court!" Paul Kelly, Rita Hayworth, Frankie Darro, David Gorcey, Hally Chester, Dick Seltzer, Allan Ramsaye and Lee Shumway are the leading players.

The three Gleasons, James, Lucille and Russell are the ones to whom things are expected to happen in Republic's "Everything Happens To Us." Harry Davenport, William Bakewell, Wallis Clark and Paul Harvey will also have their moments.

Eight Completed

While all this was going on, eight features were turned over to the scissors manipulators in the various cutting rooms. The boys and girls in those departments at 20th Century-Fox were given three to keep them busy and their minds off the heat and sunshine that suddenly descended on the heretofore fog enshrouded Westwood Hills. Receiving attention is "Straight, Place And Show," a Damon Runyon yarn which will provide spectators and exhibitors with the Ritz Brothers, Richard Arlen, Phyllis Brooks, Ethel Merman, Sidney Blackmer and George Barbier among others. "Safety In Numbers" with the familiar "Jones Family" contingent as well as some new recruits is nearing final picture form and the editors are doing all they can to keep all the production effects and as much as possible of Tyrone Power, Loretta Young, Annabella, Henry Stephenson, J. Edward Bromberg, Joseph Schildkraut, Sidney Blackmer, Sig Rumann, Maurice Moscovich, Nigel Bruce, Miles Mander, Rafaela Ottiano, Leon Ames and George Zucco in "Suez."

Columbia's snipping and splicing experts have "I Am The Law" and "Wings Of Doom" in their charge. The first will present Edward G. Robinson, Wendy Barry, Barbara O'Neill, Otto Kruger, John Beal, Arthur Loft, Gene Morgan, Robert Middlemass, Douglas Woods and Charles Halton. In the latter Charles Farrell, Jacqueline Wells, Frederick Burton, Alexander D'Arcy, Eddie Earle, Addison Richards, Hugh Sothern, Ed Stanley and Charles D. Brown will be seen.

A Harry Sherman picture, "The Mysterious Rider," first of a new series was completed for Paramount. Douglas Dumbrille, Sidney Toler, Russell Hayden, Charlotte Fields, Monte Blue, Weldon Heyburn, Bob Kortman are those principally concerned in the portrayal of the Zane Grey story.

Out at Universal they finished "Freshman Year." The collegiate comedy romance will feature Dixie Dunbar, Ernest Truex, William Lundigan, Constance Moore, Stanley Hughes and Frank Melton.

SAD ENDING —OR ELSE

The hero will lose the girl in the last reel of "The Sisters" as the story was originally written and first filmed or the contemplated new and happier ending will have to be shot without the services of Errol Flynn as the hero. The actor laid down this ultimatum to Warner studio executives this week when he was informed that, dissatisfied with the present conclusion, the executives were planning retakes. Flynn is starred in the picture with Bette Davis.

Circus Stuff

It's 24 miles and as many degrees Fahrenheit from Hollywood & Vine to the Monogram ranch, a right turn from Saugus—where Bill Hart's mountain ranch looks down on the truck-clogged Ridge Route—and a couple of gear shifts into the Mojave desert. It's 90 in Hollywood this afternoon, therefore 114 at the Monogram ranch, but they're making "The Circus Comes to Town." contradictorily, and any showman knows how much hotter it is inside a circus tent than outside.

For that reason the young men who attend to things for Scott Dunlap, who attends to the making of Monogram pictures, have removed the thermometers from the premises, so it isn't possible to read the torrid temperature. But neither is it necessary. Anne Nagel, propped against a plank in her pink tights between shots, pores over a damp script. Jack LaRue, wearing felt hat and tightly buttoned coat, steams slightly. Technicians stripped to the waist yell to the stout fella with the hose to turn it on them. Herbert Rawlinson, Betty Compson, Marjorie Main and others in the cast—but not just now—cook quietly in camp chairs, speak not at all, await their turn.

But the heat is no hardship for two of the cast. One of these is Snowflake, the colored veteran of 300 films, clad now in brown checked suit, stiff collar, grey derby, malacca stick. The other actor undisturbed by the temperature is a chimpanzee.

WARNER NET 3 MILLIONS FOR THIRTY-NINE WEEKS

Columbia Pictures Votes Quarterly Dividend; A.T.&T. Net $37,032,603 in Three Months

Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., and subsidiary companies on Monday reported for the 39 weeks ending May 28, 1938, a net operating profit of $3,282,765, after deducting all charges including amortization and depreciation and normal federal income taxes but without provision for Federal surtaxes on undistributed profits. The earnings compare with a net operating profit of $5,561,032, after similar charges for the corresponding period of 1937.

The net profit from operations for the 39 weeks, before amortization and depreciation of properties, normal federal income taxes and federal surtaxes on undistributed profits, was $8,432,787.

Earnings per share, without providing for Federal surtaxes on undistributed profits, were equivalent:

On preferred stock to $31.83 per share on 103,107 shares outstanding at May 28, 1938. Dividends in arrears as of June 1, 1938, amounted to $24.06 per share.

On common stock, after allowance for current dividend requirements on the preferred stock, to 80 cents per share on 3,701,090 shares outstanding (after deducting shares held in the treasury) at May 28, 1938.

The balance sheet as of May 28th showed current and working assets of $27,927,788, including $3,850,844 cash and inventories of $22,023,901, while current liabilities aggregated $18,540,966.

The total amount of optional 6 per cent convertible debentures, series due in 1939, outstanding on May 28, 1938, was $29,987,000. Included under current liabilities was a net amount of $574,015 of these debenture obligations representing the balance of purchase-fund requirement due on August 1, 1938.

At the close of the fiscal year on August 28, 1937, the balance sheet showed current assets of $28,213,964 with $4,058,253 cash, while current liabilities were $23,099,815.

Coincident with the release of the Warner financial statement, reports were circulated in Wall Street that the company, within the near future, will announce a plan for refunding $29,412,985 of six per cent convertible debentures due September 1, 1939.

Officers of the company have been working on some plan since the early part of the year when the directors ordered consideration of a plan. Besides the debentures, the company has outstanding $39,000,000 bonds and mortgages for its own account and subsidiaries, plus 103,000 shares of preferred and 3,700,000 shares of common stock. The total consolidated funded debt amounts to $73,000,000.

Other financial news of the week included the prediction by Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board of directors of Twentieth Century-Fox, that his company's earnings for the first six months of this year were close to the 1937 level. For the first half of 1937, the company's net profit was $3,755,483. Mr. Schenck made the statement just before sailing for England aboard the Normandie. He said the company's budget for the 1938-'39 season was $25,000,000.

Columbia Pictures Corporation this week announced that the board has voted a quarterly dividend of 68¾ cents per share on the $2.75 convertible preferred stock, payable August 15th, to stockholders of record August 1st.

American Telephone and Telegraph Company this week reported that its net profit, including dividends from subsidiaries, was $37,032,603 for the three months ended June 30th. The earnings are equivalent to $1.98 a share. In the March quarter the profits were $38,634,000 or $2.07 per share and in the June quarter last year they were $43,737,928 or $2.34 a share.

John S. Tapernoux, president of French Motion Picture Corporation which is now in the process of reorganization, filed a monthly report of the company for the period June 13th to July 12th, in the United States district court, New York, this week. He listed receipts at $1,326 and expenditures of $1,157.

Trading of film company officials in the securities of their corporations was at a standstill in May, it was disclosed this week by the semi-monthly summary of the SEC.

The commission, however, listed reports of officials of several companies regarding their holdings when they took office. E. H. Seifert, Fort Lee, N. J., reported the holdings of 60 shares of Consolidated Film Industries preferred stock on March 24th, when he was elected a director, and Leon Kaplan, Los Angeles, held 300 shares of Grand National Films common when he became a director, June 6th; Ira Seidel, Los Angeles, who joined the directorate of Grand National, Feb. 16th, reported that he held none of the company's equity securities.

A 1937 report by S. Machnovitch, Universal Pictures officer, showed that he held no securities of the company directly but, through Universal Corp., held 228,927 shares of common, 220 shares of first preferred and 20,000 shares of second preferred. Reports for Peyton Gibson, also an officer, likewise showed no direct holdings but, through Universal, 228,927 shares of common, 220 shares of first preferred and 20,000 shares of second preferred. A report from Willis H. Taylor, Jr., New York, Universal director, showed no stocks held.

Consolidated Income Accounts Of Warner Brothers Compared

The consolidated income account for Warner Brothers for the 39 weeks ended May 28, 1938, compares with the accounts for the corresponding periods in 1937, and 1936, as follows:

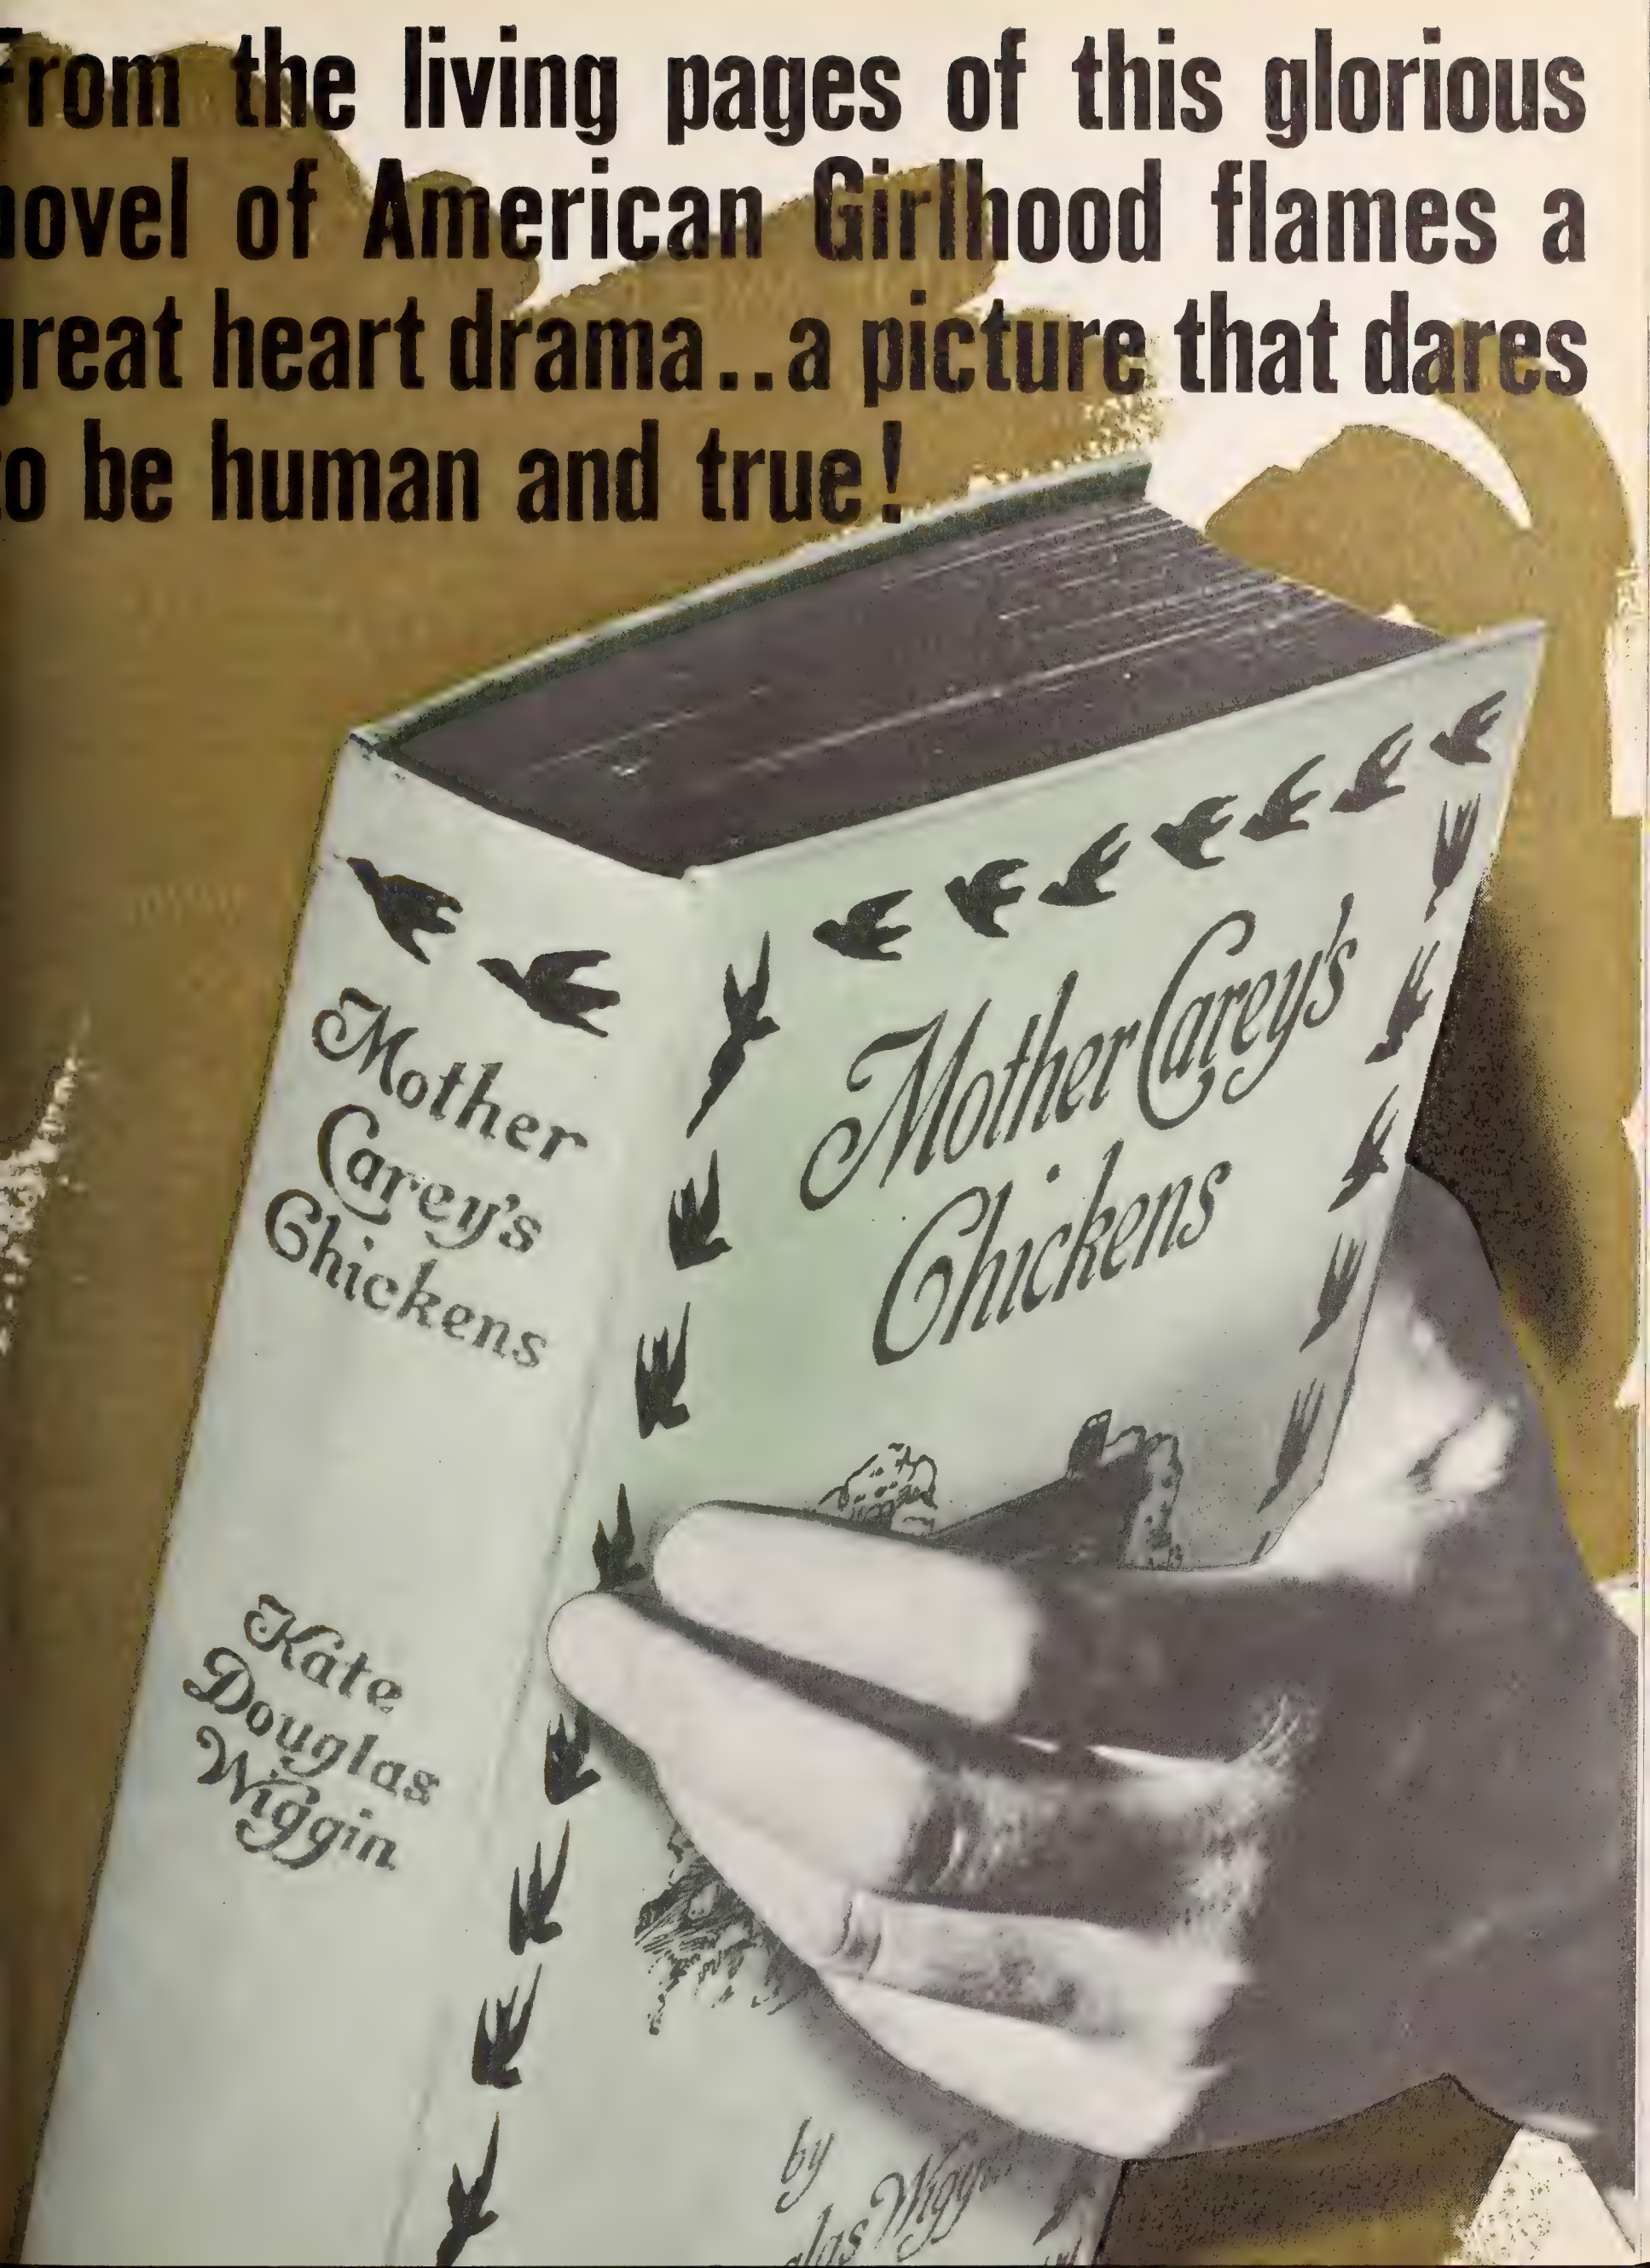
Dispute Continues Over Wanger Film

The controversy which has been carried on since the release of Walter Wanger's "Blockade," continued this week with Los Angeles, Boston, Omaha, Kansas City and New Orleans the centers of attention.

In Boston, Catholic laymen protested against the showing of the film at Loew's State and Orpheum Theatres and this was followed by the unanimous passage of an order by the Boston city council, asking the mayor to ban the picture.

A meeting in Los Angeles Tuesday called by the Motion Picture Artists' Committee was attended by 350 for the purpose of protesting the pressure of organized minority groups of the screen. John Abbott, film librarian of the Museum of Modern Art, New York, presided. Mr. Wanger was the principal speaker.

He said the time has come for Hollywood to strike back at its critics.



After seeing the film Mayor Maurice Tobin said he saw no reason for barring it.

In Omaha, scheduled openings for the film were cancelled twice but this week Eddie Forester, manager of the Omaha Theatre, announced in open letters in newspapers that the picture would be played starting Thursday despite protests. Protests against the showing of the picture were registered by the Omaha council of the Knights of Columbus and by The Voice, a Catholic newspaper.

Declaring the picture is Communistic propaganda, the Holy Name Society of Kansas City adopted a resolution protesting the exhibition of "Blockade."

Alice Ames Winter, chairman of the Community Service of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, in Hollywood, this week issued a review of "Blockade" on MPPDA stationery. The picture was praised in the review and Mrs. Winters concluded with: "Not for children —but gripping drama for those of us who face the world as it is."

From the living pages of this glorious novel of American Girlhood flames a great heart drama...a picture that dares to be human and true!

Even the birds are singing for Jay Means and his Oak Park theatre giveaways in Kansas City.

A woman went to the theatre the other afternoon and wanted an oval-shaped bowl of the sort the theatre gave away as a premium two years ago. She had used hers for two years as a bath for her canary. After breaking it last week, she bought another bowl of a different sort, but the bird refused to use it. She tried still another, but the canary was adamant. In desperation, the woman went to Means and asked him to find her one of the original kind. Jay didn't have any, but he appealed to some of his regular patrons, and they brought in two.

Fair's Visitors Will Cool Feet In Film Theatres, Say Farnol

And Points to Chicago's Million Added Attendance in Month

Lynn Farnol, who has just left a post with the advertising agency of Donahue & Coe to take charge of publicity and advertising for United Artists Corporation, has for some months been engaged in a study of special aspects of the impact of tourist and other visitors to New York upon metropolitan merchandising. Mr. Farnol has here set down some extracts and comments for a forthcoming report of the findings of the research, as they more especially apply to the motion picture and its theatres.

by LYNN FARNOL

How will the World's Fair affect the motion picture and the legitimate theatres of New York City?

Will those 75,000,000 visitors expected in Manhattan next summer descend like a cloud of locusts, buying tickets as well as goods, and bring a boom to Broadway unknown since the days of '28-'29?

Any estimate has to be based on two known factors,—first, the Century of Progress in Chicago, the type of visitor, the money he had and how he spent it and the time in which he was able to spend it, and second, the tourist in New York.

Spends Under $8 a Day

The tourist in New York is a puzzle. It's a good guess that 22,000,000 visitors come to New York each year from points more than 50 miles distant. We know that his average stay is a little less than 3 days, and that he spends less than $8 a day for everything, including what shopping he does. That's a tidy sum, $475,000,000. His season is from July to September.

Macy's is his dish in the way of stores. It's the biggest in the world. And Radio City is the thing for him to see. About 425,000,000 people are escorted through and around the granite slabs during the course of a year. It's anyone's guess as to how many wander around on their own. It's a simple physical advantage that delivers this trade to the door of the Radio City Music Hall. And it won't be much of a miracle for that trade to keep right on coming to the Music Hall, World's Fair or no World's Fair.

The Music Hall's "Cut"

There will be few people who come to New York for the Fair who haven't an interest in seeing the Center. Perhaps they've seen it before, but that won't keep them from the Music Hall. That great showplace, having started the tide running and having the physical advantages, is certain to have about all the tourist business that can be crowded into its acres of seats.

A small point should be made here, which is that most of this business will be pretty much its regular tourist trade, stepped up by some undetermined figure, which may be 15 per cent or it may be 50 per cent. It won't be a foot-weary army of tourists, looking for a place to sit down, for, beyond much question, the American Legion Convention demonstrated that people may be in New York for a good time and still refuse to pay 99 cents for a movie even if the greatest stage spectacle in the world is thrown in with it. For hundreds looked at the scale of prices and walked away.

Million More in Chicago Fair

How will the other motion picture theatres fare? Pretty well, you can tell yourself, if the experience of Chicago is any criterion. Chicago's cinema palaces during August, 1933, had one million more customers than in the August of the preceding year.

Why? Simply because movies are inexpensive and Fair visitors haven't much money to spend. Motion pictures are the familiar thing to them, the entertainment that they know and love, and what could be finer than to sit down in a fine motion picture theatre after a day of pounding the pavements, take off your shoes, relax and be entertained without being made to think too much about it.

It is questionable whether any New York motion picture theatre beside the Music Hall and possibly the Astor has anything of a national reputation, and, as such, means anything to the World's Fair tourist. The chances are that the theatres will get more patronage or less depending entirely on the pictures that are offered.

Certainly the legitimate theatre will get an increase in its business, just as the department stores will. But it isn't going to be any overwhelming landslide. A good guess is that with each thousand World's Fair tourists there will be a couple with enough money to see "I Married an Angel" or buy some beads at Saks Fifth Avenue. Even then, one or two out of each of the thousands in 75,000,000 is a lot.

Newsreel Cameramen Among Award Winners

Leaders in the newsreel, radio, magazine and newsreel fields honored their fellow workers at the dinner of the fifth annual Headliners' frolic in the Hotel Ambassador, Atlantic City, this week.

Among the award winners were Albert Mingalone, Paramount News; H. S. Wong, News of the Day, and Norman Alley of Universal News. The awards were made for outstanding achievements in the various fields from June 1, 1937, to June 1, 1938. Some 200 persons from all sections of the country attended the affair.

Time, Inc., Signs Guild Agreement

A contract covering 350 editorial employees of Time, Inc., including those associated with "March of Time," was signed this week with the New York Newspaper Guild, a chapter of the American Newspaper Guild which is an affiliate of the Committee for Industrial Organization.

Minimum wages established in the contract range from $25 a week for office boys to $75 a week, after two years' experience, for writers and photographers. Researchers are subject to a $60-a-week minimum after three years' experience.

Other provisions include a five-day 40-hour week, equal time off for overtime, vacations up to one month, sick leave, and severance pay.

18 Studios Protest SWG Vote

All 18 studios affected by the recent election that named the Screen Writers' Guild as sole bargaining agent for film writers have filed protests with Dr. Towne Nylander, chairman of the National Labor Relations Board in Hollywood.

The studios contend that they were not given an opportunity to verify the employment of the voters as of June 4th, the date required for eligibility.

Dr. Nylander said he would forward a report to Washington and that the studio appeal would be made necessarily at some later date in the federal court, ninth district, San Francisco, following certification of the guild as bargaining agent.

Dr. Nylander this week postponed hearing on a petition of the Studio Utility Employees, Local 724, asking to be declared the collective bargaining representative for laborers at Republic. The petition was filed when Local 724 charged that the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes was absorbing its members at the Republic studio. The postponement was ordered pending attempts at settlement of the dispute by conferences.

AFRA Contract Ratified

The New York local of the American Federation of Radio Artists this week voted ratification of the agreement reached last week with the National Broadcasting Company and the Columbia Broadcasting System, providing for wage scales on sustaining programs.

An agreement between the Mutual network and other companies and the AFRA is expected to be completed within the near future.

National Decency Legion Classifies 15 Pictures

Of 15 pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week eight were approved for general patronage, five were listed as unobjectionable for adults and two were cited as objectionable in part. The pictures and their classification follow.

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Endstation" (German), "Highway Patrol," "Little Miss Broadway," "Little Tough Guy," "Love Finds Andy Hardy," "Professor Beware," "Rollin' Plains," "The Unholy Beebes." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "Algiers," "Gordian der Tyrann," "Mercedes" (Spanish), "Passport Husband," "Que Tiempos Aquellos" (Spanish). Class B, Objectionable in Part: "El Derecho y el Deber" (Spanish), "Sky Giant."

Boy Meets Girl

(Warner Brothers)

Comedy

Someone has said that the movie came of age when it learned to laugh at itself. That would make "Boy Meets Girl" a prime specimen of a grownup art, for it laughs, guffaws and shouts in merry amusements at the things of which the movies are made, the people who make them and the processes of their making. Without touching so many as one serious note the picture manages quite incidentally to present a pretty accurate although satirical impression of Hollywood.

Few pictures have had a more thorough audience preparation. The play by Sam and Bella Spewack ran up a nice score on Broadway and the title has become a permanent fixture of the American language. It would be hard to find a village where the name and general nature of the work are not well known. Sam Bischoff's production, directed by Lloyd Bacon from a screen play by the original playwrights, is exactly the film the public has been led to expect.

The return of James Cagney to the Warner trademark is another item of wide public interest. He and Pat O'Brien play the two irresponsible and irrepressible film writers whose antics are at bottom of the mad proceedings which make up the story. Ralph Bellamy plays an opportunist producer with just enough caricature to preserve a semblance of realism and Frank McHugh portrays an agent not too uncomplimentarily. Dick Foran kids his cowboy star part effectively and Marie Wilson makes much of her first stellar chore as the dumb young thing whose incipient and ultimately accomplished motherhood is a major factor in the fictional inventions of the scenarists on the screen. Although treated, necessarily, in humorous manner and frankly, the young lady's maternity is duly established as formally achieved.

The story is essentially simple, having to do with the devices by which two young writers without a story in their collective head manage to keep their names on a studio payroll. But it is wondrously complicated for purposes of comedy. The narrative is a succession of closely strung gags, each worked out in fast action, fast dialogue or both. The picture moves along at breakneck speed, line after line being lost in the upsurge of auditorium laughter.

The Texans

(Paramount)

Elaborate Westernization

Consequential name value in this fictional romance melodrama which is told against a background of post-Civil War historical episodes, production detail of which features a considerable quantity of spectacular action and thrill stimulation, is represented by Joan Bennett, Randolph Scott, May Robson, Walter Brennan, Robert Cummings, Robert Barrat and Harvey Stephens.

Unhappy days fall upon the Texas of a shattered Confederacy when a horde of unscrupulous northern carpetbaggers descend upon the populace. Die-hards, particularly a pretty girl, who no matter how bedraggled everyone else becomes always looks as though she stepped out of a modiste's shop, and a firebrand rebel, still unconquered, look to Mexico's Emperor Maximilian as an ally in continuing the struggle. Another southern soldier, predating the orators, realizes there is no north, no south, rather a united country and all must pull together. But the head carpetbagger decides he will tax the girl and her grandmother out of possession of a vast ranch and 10,000 head of cattle. Thereupon ensues the parade of spectacle. Though the herd crosses the Rio Grande, the patriot convinces the rebel girl that it should be driven to the railhead at Abilene where it can be sold for a fortune to a north which is starving for meat. Through storm and flood, blizzards, Indian fights and all the hardship that those who followed the Chisholm Trail experienced it goes. Captured by carpet bagger dominated Federals, started back to Texas, it runs into prairie fire. The carpetbagger meeting the fate which fiction and drama reserve for unsavory characters, a sympathetically inclined U. S. officer reroutes it to its destination. Even the promise of the die-hard rebel that a new organization known as the Ku Klux Klan will take care of the Yankee interlopers does not deter the girl from selling the steers when the iron horse comes chugging up. Although she gets a thorough going over from the repatriated hero, she knows now who she loves and whose life she would share. Dressed as if for the Easter Parade she goes off arm in arm with him and his coon-skin capped scout for a trapping expedition into the wild North Platte country.

The pattern for this kind of story was laid down long ago. In fact the author of the present version, Emerson Hough, set the pace with "The Covered Wagon." Scores of other productions, expensively or economically manufactured, have not let the public forget the original theme or the welter of effects with which it is embellished. None of them, even cowboy songs have been omitted from "The Texans." Thus, with this picture, exhibitors have the type of an attraction for which the public has evidenced a continuing desire. Nothing but elemental showmanship is necessary, therefore, to whet their interest for this feature which Lucien Hubbard produced and James Hogan directed from a screen play prepared by Bertram Millhauser, Paul Sloane and William Wister Haines.

Previewed July 13th in the Paramount theatre, Los Angeles. There were those in the audience who kept their eyes and ears glued to the screen. Others seemed to be concerning themselves more with speculations as to the whereabouts of Howard Hughes and his flying laboratory.—GUS MCCARTHY.

Sky Giant

(RKO Radio)

Aviators and Aviation

Had not Howard Hughes just completed his world fiight, "Sky Giant," bereft of timely topical significance, would simply be a more or less creditable incident in the present cycle of flying films. Regardless of its merits as popularly visualized entertainment, and they, for the most part are favorable, it automatically becomes an exploitation feature about which on-their-toes showmen need little instruction.

The elements common to all aviation pictures, and for that matter all romance-melodramas which have an action background, are included in the piece. Love, romantic conflict, comedy, excitement and adventure have been called upon to fulfill their expected functions. In the hands of Richard Dix, Chester Morris, Joan Fontaine, Harry Carey, Paul Guilfoyle and the less important cast members, they become realistic and convincing in an agreeable manner. But all this, as well as the detail devoted to illustrating how student fliers are trained to become ace transport pilots under military discipline (thrill action of which business is a sensational 20,000 foot power dive), is but a prologue to the show's exploitation feature.

In that feature tested pilot "Stag," and candidates "Ken" and "Fergie," take off on a route marking flight over Canada, Alaska, Russia and Siberia which reverses the Hughes course. There's a crack up, following which injured "Fergie" makes a martyr of himself that his mates may get back to safety. Heroized upon their return, "Stag" who has secretly married

A LITTLE GIRL TAKES A VACATION AND TEACHES US ALL A LESSON!

Some weeks ago, Shirley Temple and her parents left home to see America, just as thousands of other American families do every Summer. They wanted no fanfare, no publicity. All they wanted to do was to visit the many places they had heard about.

But although they tried hard to avoid crowds, everywhere that Shirley Temple went people rushed to get a glimpse of her. Most of them were adults. Poor and wealthy, some obscure and many in the most exalted walks of life, all dropped everything to look at Shirley Temple.

There is a lesson in this for everybody in the motion picture industry.

What a wonderful business this is! What an amazing hold it has upon the people! Make no mistake, the American public loves the movies and its people.

The vacation trip of Shirley Temple shows better than anything else the enormous reservoir of public interest which we, as showmen, have not even begun to tap.

Of course, Shirley's vacation, with its attendant publicity, is a tremendous boon to exhibitors playing her next picture, "LITTLE MISS BROADWAY." But it is even more than that. It is a challenge to everybody in this business to do his utmost to get the last ounce of value from this great public enthusiasm.

Shirley Temple Tour Shows Adult Appeal

One of the unique features of Shirley Temple's trip across the country with her parents has been the adult appeal of her personality Everywhere she has gone she has been as much sought after by grownups as by children.

President Roosevelt quit work to entertain her at the White House, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau turned aside from fiscal problems to spend considerable time with her, Mrs. Roosevelt invited her up to Hyde Park and devoted practically an entire day to her entertainment. "Meg" plans an annulment when he realizes she loves "Ken" more than him. This situation is as unreal and hard to accept as the flying sequences are realistic.

Previewed in the Pantages theatre, Hollywood. The Hollywood audience, most of which has thought about nothing other than Hughes and his flight for the preceding several days, thought well of the picture. They seemed to be of the opinion that producer Robert Sisk, writer, Lionel Houser and director Lew Landers had been gifted with prophetic foresight even though the screen mechanics of it reversed the direction of the current world-belting flight. In fact during a production meeting in the afternoon, it was suggested that RKO-Radio's advertising department should make strenuous efforts to get the footage which Hughes shot en route to be used in the trailer exploitating "Sky Giant." —G. Alf's Button Afloat

(Gainsborough-General Film)

Comedy Extravaganza

This second effort from London's own Crazy Gang, makes it evident that when it comes to crazy comedy Britain can go one crazier than its American contemporaries. Better team work and more hilarious clowning have not been seen in a British comedy, and though much of the material is native in appeal, there can be little doubt that "Alf's Button Afloat" is infectious enough to be caught by audiences much farther afield.

Based vaguely on Darlington's yarn, the production is woven around a marine's adventures with a button made from a portion of Aladdin's lamp, a miraculous morsel whose Genii is able to grant any service, material or otherwise, its owner asks—even when the said Genii, influenced by a fleeting contact with a picture house, sports a Chicago outfit and announces that he "has got wise to himself"! These six clowns—Flanagan and Allen, Nervo and Knox and Naughton and Gold—multiple doses of the Marx Brothers and the Ritz gang rolled into one—make the most of their magical collaboration, secure crates of beer and armies of houris, stage a Grand Opera Act and a thought reading turn, and translate a court martial in which they are victims into a bonus presentation with full military honors! Much of the fun revolves around the Genii's confusions and at one moment provides for a hunt, circus horses which, on the call of the horn, go into their ring routines. It is all utterly inconsequential, irresistible fun, for the most part such as all the family will relish.

Naturally it is the Crazy team which register most of the laughs, with Bud Flanagan's confused comedy, Jimmy Nervo's grimaces and the leprecaun-like leapings of Charley Naughton to the fore. An effective character cameo is registered by Wally Patch as the irate sergeant, whilst Glennis Lorrimer is both charming and intelligent in the ingenue role.

Varnel's direction is bright, but his spacing has underestimated the laughs. Technical qualities are adequate though cutting of the ultimate hunt sequence—a somewhat tired essay in comedy action this—would improve the pace and the final appeal.

Premiered at the Folkestone CEA Conference to a mixed audience, the film was hailed as a most successful effort, its screening punctuated with repeated and prolonged laughter and exhibitor reaction being that it would sell itself.—AUBREY FLANAGAN.

The Terror of Tiny Town

(Principal)

Midget Western

Newspaper and magazine writers were lately diligent in notifying their readers that practically all the midgets in Hollywood (which is practically all the midgets anywhere) were working for Jed Buell in the manufacture of a film under the above title. Whatever expectation this publicity may have fostered is in the nature of a double asset, primarily as pertains to the physical stature of the players, secondarily as preparing the customers for a distinct surprise. Because Jed Buell didn't make the picture the way 99 per cent of the newspaper readers would have expected him to. He made it as a formal western melodrama, repute with all the orthodox fiixin's, and the midgets play it as seriously as any horse star from Broncho Billy Anderson to Gene Autry ever played a picture.

The story of the picture is by Fred Myton and direction is by Sam Newfield. Both men could have had Buck Jones or the Lone Ranger in mind, so far as the pattern of their procedure is concerned. And the midgets could have been as big, earnest and courageous as Ken Maynard, so far as the character of their performances and their attitude to their chores are pertained to. The action involves much riding, lots of shooting, a stage coach holdup, a man-to-man fight in a cabin about to be dynamited, cattle rustling, bar room brawling, plot and counter plot, just about everything the formal westerns of the past quarter century have contained. The humor is principally a by-product of the discrepancy between the size of the players and the settings in which they appear.

Showmen have a vast variety of ways in which to exploit the film. On top, of course, is the fact that it's the first midget melodrama. It could be billed as "The Biggest Little Picture Ever Produced." Or in variants of that phraseology. Sol Lesser calls it "A Rollickin', Rootin's, Tootin', Shootin' Drama of the Great Outdoors." It's exactly that.

Previewed July 15th at the Ritz theatre, Los Angeles, with no secret made of the name and nature of the film to be exhibited. The payees enjoyed it down to the ground.—W. R. W.

Booloo

(Paramount)

Jungle Adventure

There are two stories in "Booloo." One has meaning, sense and significance; is interesting and has commercial exploitation potentialties. The other is meaningless, serves no purpose and even detracts from the entertainment value of the first.

The authenticity of a dead adventurer's book is questioned by a scientific body. To preserve his father's good name, honor and reputation, his son goes into the Malayan jungles to prove that a white tiger to whom natives regularly sacrificed a beautiful girl did exist. In he goes and the footage devoted to wild life in the raw —fights between tigers, leopards and water buffaloes, the trapping of pythons and other serpents, the comedy provided by monkeys, birds and bear cubs and the perils of civilizations beleagured by superstitious savagery are that which made earlier similar pictures interesting entertainment and exploitation features. But a very inane melodramatic love story, the suspenseful character of which is rung in via remote control broadcast over short wave radio is Hollywood writing art and imagination at its lowest point. The dead man's story is proved even to showing the native girl about to be sacrificed to the white tiger only to be saved by the mighty white hunter who shoots him prior to being subjected to savage native torture. Hollywood's conception of nature in the rough comes off second best to that of Mother Nature's in the real in this case.

Previewed in the Stadium Theatre, Los Angeles. The audience which undoubtedly was sincere in its appreciation and applause of the actual jungle footage, had only hoots, hisses and similar aspersions for the contributions Hollywood artistry made to the film in seeking to improve on the melodrama, thrill and spectacle of nature.—G. M.

English Folk Romance

How much American audiences respond to glimpses of the English scene, and cameos of English custom and character, is for American exhibitors to decide, but true it is that they can scarcely fail to be charmed and indeed moved by this artless and sympathetic little story of romance and personality on the quiet and unsophisticated coasts of Britain's West Country—Devon.

There is not a great deal to the narrative of "Yellow Sands," adapted from Eden and Adelaide Philpotts' play, a simple and naive little business about an old lady and how she set right the romantic tangles of her family, by changing her will 'ere she died. But it is a natural and sincere effort, illuminated by convincing and charming characters, whose lives are so simple and so real as to be moving in a lyric way, a species of intimate spotlight on the existence of ordinary folk. Set, too, against this entrancing Devonshire scenery, with the narrative unfolding against rolling moorlands and wave lapped coves, and with the sound of the sea and the cry of wheeling gulls for music, it has an added charm which is not only one of the picture's strongest assets, but incidentally an added argument for extra British appeal.

It is the story of an old Devonshire lady's legacy and the cronies and harpies who hang on its ultimate gifts and the sagacity which make her realize that the only way to save their lives being shattered is to change it 'ere she dies. There is an allegedly Bolshevistic nephew whose blindness is cured by his sudden riches, there is a philosophic old drunkard, and there is a sophisticated gold digging barmaid. There are other possible personalities whose destinies are woven into a pleasant and natural pattern, two pixilated country aunts, a species of "Mr. Dick" who wheels the bathchair—and others. There is hardly one of these people whose lives are not interesting or convincing, and there is not one who is not given conviction by the actor or actress concerned. If the patron looks for excitement or sensation, he will look in vain. If he be content with an intimate domestic cameo against real Old England background, splendidly photographed in the manner of the modern guide book, he will find "Yellow Sands" full measure.

Marie Tempest's "Jennifer Varwell" is a crisply chiselled piece of character, and her nephew "Joe," for all his very unconvincing Bolshevist ranting, is brought to life by Robert Newton in a way which suggests that here is a manly young man who is also a grand actor. Wilfred Lawson's cunning old dipsomaniac fox is one of the film's glories, whilst Bell Chrystal's very winning "Lydia" must too be recorded. Director Brenon made "The Housemaster" a truly English film. He has done the same with "Yellow Sands," an opus which should have like chances of success across the Atlantic.

Previewed to a trade audience the film evoked not only very heartfelt applause, but appreciative comments from reviewers and exhibitors.—AUBREY FLANAGAN

Refugiados en Madrid

(Fama)

Civil War Refugee Drama

This high grade production opens up a new era for Mexican producers in theme, treatment and technique. The production, the first of FAMA, newest Mexican producer, is altogether different from anything that has been produced in this country. In getting away from the traditions of previous domestic films the producers succeeded full well in this engrossing story of the experiences of a horde of refugees in an embassy in Madrid at the height of the civil war ravage. Scenarists Mauricio de la Serna and Abe Tuvin made good their ideal to make of this a subtle plea for the right of asylum. First rate direction is given by Alejandro Galindo.

"Refugiados en Madrid" has an international appeal. The smooth action, with a fine balance of tragedy and comedy, is advanced by some of the biggest names in the Mexican amusement world—Maria Conesa, Fernando and Domingo Soler and Arturo de Cordoba. The right amount of love interest is provided by Vilma Vidal. La Conesa, though a veteran of the stage of some 35 years, is still remarkably beautiful. She contributes well with songs and dances. The handling of a large cast, each with well defined ideas of his or her own, living under abnormal circumstances in a place that is not a hotel, their fears, jealousies, loves, hates and ambitions, are done with a master touch.

This theme lends itself to melodramatic bloodshed. But there are only four killings—each with dramatic effect, two that are depicted, two that are implied.

Shown at the select Cine Teatro Alameda, Mexico City. Audience response was excellent. The film played for two weeks and was enjoyed by many Americans. United Artists has acquired world rights to this production.—JAMES LOCKHART.

Produced and distributed by FAMA. Sound by B. J. Kroger. Cameraman, Joaquin Figueroa. Running time 95 minutes. General audience classification.

Prison Break

(Universal)

Melodrama

A sound story, well prepared, acted, directed anl staged, establishes "Prison Break" as a feature that should appeal to those liking realistic melodrama in which a lot of excitement and a sufficient amount of love interest are included. Although the cast lists no spectacular names, the principal and supporting players are actors who know what to do and how to do it. Not bothering with meaningless inconsequentials, the picture plunges into its story at once, and while there is considerable dialogue, successive situations are action-crowded.

Even though in love with "Jean Fenderson," fisherman "Joaquin Shannon's" lot is none to too happy because of a feud existing between him and the "Fenderson" clan. A hard fisted, soft hearted man, he is happy that his sister "Maria" is to marry shipmate "Chris." After avoiding trouble with "Joe Fenderson," at a pre-wedding party "Joaquin" blunders into a situation that alters his whole life. Both "Joe" and "Chris" are slugged by "Red Kincaid," and the police finding "Joaquin" on the scene arrest him as the assailant. The charge turns to murder when "Joe" dies. "Joaquin," thinking "Chris" the guilty man, says nothing, and gets a five-year sentence. In prison he again meets with "Kincaid," refuses to be bullied by him, and the following fight precipitates a riot. Later, frustrating a jail break, he is paroled. Outside, fate is against "Joaquin." He can't find a job, can't marry "Jean." Finally accepting a shady job, he finds and captures "Kincaid," who has broken jail. Though recommitted to prison himself, "Joaquin" finds comfort in the knowledge that the girl will be waiting when he is free once more.

Wild Bill Hickok

(Columbia)

Western Serial

"The Great Adventures of Wild Bill Hickok," to give the serial its complement of title, assuming that the chapters are all as exciting and interestingly presented as the first two, is destined for highly receptive audience reaction from juveniles and the adult clientele who are partial to the "continued next week" type of theatre fare. The juvenile consumer, too, will want to join the "Flaming Arrows," a secret club of boys whose manifest duty is to keep "Wild Bill" informed of the machinations of the "Phantom Raiders," a definitely no good bunch. The locale is Texas to begin with but principally Abilene, Kansas, and "Wild Bill" is the marshal of that town. Thematically the story concerns the efforts of "Hickok" to enforce law and order in Abilene, protect a cattle herd which is being driven from Texas to Abilene and to clear the way for the railroad, construction of which has been prevented by the "Phantom Raiders." Then there is the action ending of the chapters with "Wild Bill" on the brink of disaster but very much in the picture when Saturday rolls around once again. Gordon Elliott plays "Wild Bill." His is a personality that fits the plainsman and he plays the part to the hilt. Others in the cast are Monte Blue, Carole Wayne, Frankie Darro, Dickie Jones, Sammy McKim, Kermit Maynard, Roscoe Ates, Moty Collins and a host of others. Directed by Mack V. Wright and Sam Nelson from a story by John Peere Miles. 15 episodes. Running time, approximately 20 minutes each.

Cinderella Meets Fella

(Vitaphone)

Outstanding Cartoon

Hardly classically reverential in its treatment of the hallowed and ageless fable of the little slavey girl who meets a Prince Charming boy is this jazzed up version from the iconoclastic pen of Leon Schlesinger but even the youngster most ardently devoted to the fairy fable lore will lose his bewilderment in witnessing the desecration of one of his favorite tales in gales of childish glee. The free hand of the artist has drawn Cindy's magic fairy godmother in screwball shades and the soundman has given the curly haired heroine a set of "Betty Boopish" vocal cords. As for the glamorous and dashing Prince, the female contingency in the audience will be startled after admiring the "Snow White" edition of the royal gentleman to witness the "goofy" picturization of the princely chap in this cartoon. The famous ball scene is reduced to a jitterbug session. The finale finds the romantic couple at a neighborhood showplace. However, the drawings, taken in the insane spirit in which they are sketched, will produce an hilarious audience response and should flavor any programme with a welcome touch of amusing nonsense. The technical makeup of color and musical background provide excellent help in creating the atmosphere for the subject.—Running time, seven minutes.

Poor Little Butterfly

(Columbia)

Cartoon

In this cartoon produced in color, a sailor boy arriving in the harbor aboard a turtle battleship takes shore leave. He meets a girl and spends all his time courting her. When the leave is over and the turtle battleship steams out of the harbor the girl is heartbroken but the boy falls overboard and swims ashore to continue his courtship. Produced by Charles Mintz. Animation by Manny Gould. Direction by Ben Harrison. Running time, eight minutes.

Sons of the Plains

Pioneer Drama

Using the by now well publicized and recognized fraternal likeness existing between the Mauch Twins, this miniature drama of pioneer western days provides two reels of absorbing and outstanding entertainment for the family trade. The subject can easily be utilized as an added attraction for any program. The boys are cast as twin sons whose mother and father were butchered by a band of marauding Indians. One of the twins is adopted by the chief of the tribe while the other boy becomes the ward of a picturesquely quaint scout. Years pass to brings the boys to adolescence and an encounter with each other. The redskin Mauch is arrested by the frontier police force on charges of attempting to arouse the braves against the white men. In the meantime an unscrupulous reservation agent is feeding the tribe "fire water" and gun powder so as to stir up the aborigines to rebellion in order to seize their rich reservation tract. The plainsman Mauch frere poses as his savage double and exposes the devilish tactics of the evil pale face. The revelation arranges an amicable settlement between the government and its primitive wards and solves the family relationship of the two boys. The call of their adopted kinfolk is stronger than their natural blood connection so the two lads remain with their respective foster parents. Filmed against beautiful outdoor scenery, which is made the more alluring due to the artistic application of color, the story has been given careful and generous technical treatment.—Running time, 19 minutes.

City Slicker
(Columbia)
Cartoon

Scrappy in this cartoon is a city slicker who pays a visit to his cousin in the country. Scrappy hasn't much respect for his cousin and he's hardly off the train before he's teasing the cousin with a variety of fun-making gadgets. When Scrappy uses the same tactics on his cousin's girl friend they put their heads together and poor Scrappy is repaid in kind. After a while the girl takes compassion on Scrappy and they become friends. The country cousin, however, doesn't like the idea of Scrappy taking the girl friend so he pretends he has the measles. Scrappy leaves in a hurry with the cousin having the last laugh. Running time, six minutes.

Rainbow's End
(Vitaphone)
Excellent

The high spot of this excellent miniature of a minstrel show arrives when, in the course of a performance by a group of hoboes, the one and only Eddie Leonard, the old minstrel man himself, appears to take part in the program. This unexpected appearance of the famed song and dance man will be relished mostly by those of the older set whose memory goes back to the good old days when a minstrel show meant big time stuff. Under the genial direction of Gus Van as master of ceremonies the audience is treated to some expert entertainment in the wizardy of Eddie Peabody's banjo playing, the colored clowning of Swor and Lubin and the smooth vocalization of Roy Cambell's Ambassadors. There is a well seasoned combination of song, dance and comedy to make the subject highly satisfactory material for family patronage.—Running time, 22 minutes.

Pathe Parade, No. 7
(RKO Radio)
Two Subjects

This release is divided into two subjects. The first one is an expose of spiritualism which is amusing and instructive. The public is hoodwinked into paying forty million dollars every year for phony seances. Joseph Dunnenger demonstrates a series of tricks illustrating the methods of spiritualists in mulcing the public. Fred Ullman and Frank Donovan, who produced this reel, describe cartoon craft as its second subject. The process of cartoon manufacture is shown from the first drawing to the finished production. Walt Disney's Studio is used as the background for the reel. Running time, 10 minutes.

Mechanix Illustrated
(Vitaphone)
Instructive

Sounding more like a classroom lecture on a science subject rather than the usual run of short subject material, this one reel demonstration illustrates briefly the manufacturing of paint from the mixing of its original component parts to its final blending as pigment product, the potency of ultra violet light as a bacteria killer and the benefits of liquid air as a preservative of perishable foodstuff. The simplest sequence for the spectator uninitiated in the practices of laboratory research is an inspection of a Pullman dining car kitchen whose space saving setup will be the envy of the movie going housewife. The material is directed for the greatest amount of audience appreciation to school science classes and the more technically inclined of the spectators. Color adds considerable interest and effectiveness to the proceedings.—Running time, 10 minutes.

The Awful Tooth
(MGM)
Our Gang

Although some humorless adults and particularly the more serious minded of the dental profession may consider the only comical point in this newest Our Gang comics to be its title, the less discriminating older folk and the easily pleased juveniles may find the material generally conducive to tickling their funny bones. The business of the subject concerns the attempts of the kids to raise money to purchase some needed baseball equipment. Working on the assumption that their molers carry some pecuniary value, they visit the dentist to offer their milk teeth for sale.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Hunky and Spunky
(Paramount)
Color Cartoon

In this "Color Classic" Max Fleischer introduces two new animated characters to his repertoire. Hunky and Spunky are mules, mother and son, who are shown cavorting in a desert. Spunky finds a friend in a rabbit and the two roam about while Hunky takes a nap. A prospector comes along and utilizes Spunky for a pack carrier. The heavy load weighs Spunky down and he calls to his mother for help. Hunky responds by booting the prospector to other lands. Running time, 7 minutes.

Queens of the Air
(Paramount)
Words and Music

An engaging musical subject, this features the orchestra of Vincent Lopez and five young women who have become known through their radio work. Nan Wynn offers "I'm Yours"; Betty Hutton vocalizes the "Dipsy Doodle"; Jean Ellington sings "I Wanna Be Loved"; Benay Venuta says "Thanks for the Memory," and Hollace Shaw is heard in "Only a Rose." Running time, 11 minutes.

Vitaphone Pictorial Revue, No. 11
(Vitaphone)
Interesting, as usual

Variety of material to interest the general audience is to be found in the latest issue from the Pictorial Revue group. For the scientifically inclined the opening sequence depicts the thousand and one uses of the miracle product known as bakelite. The middle portion of the pictorial concerns greyhound racing. The finale, aglow in dazzling color, is devoted to the manufacture of perfume.—Running time, 11 minutes.

Pictorial No. 11, Series 7
(Paramount)
Interesting

This "Pictorial" has the usual three subjects of interest. The first presents an Alpine scene with snow-covered mountains predominating, shows the snow melting and the subsequent trickle of water down the mountains increasing in volume as they go, eventually becoming a torrent. Narrated by David Ross. The second is the unusual excursion to remote Guadalupe Island in the Pacific, where seals, the largest known to man, are the sole inhabitants. The third subject deals with wine making in California from the time the grapes are gathered from the vineyard to the bottling process. Running time, 10 minutes.

The Lost Kitten
(Paramount)
Cartoon

In this cartoon, Pudgy, Betty Boop's little puppy, befriends a homeless and hungry kitten. The kitten takes advantage of the situation to eat not only the food set before it but also Pudgy's meal, and then disrupts Pudgy's nap by playful antics. Pudgy stands for everything but the affection of Betty Boop bestows on the kitten. The jealous Pudgy fetches the kitten's mother, who carries off the playful feline, while Pudgy once again contentedly rests in the arms of his mistress. Running time, 7 minutes.

Joaquin Murrieta
(MGM)
First-Rate Historical Mystery

The gentleman of the exotically flavored name was a notorious bandit of early Californian days. When finally the long arm of the Golden State vigilantes caught up with the desperado, they very ungraciously separated the thug's body from his wily head and auctioned off the grisly memento. However, complete victory was denied the law abiding folk when doubt was cast upon the identity of the decapitated skull. This "historical mystery" offers evidence as well as data on the murderer Murietta. Perhaps the matter is a little too strong for the children's hour.—Running time, 11 minutes.

Love and Curses
(Vitaphone)
Amusing

Done in a sophisticated "tongue in the cheek" style, this latest cartoon from the drawing boards of Leon Schlesinger caricatures the "Gay Nineties" playlet of the heroine, hero and villain. Inspection of some old pictures in a family album stir up the memories of an aged couple and they relive their younger days when little Emily was pursued by the arch fiend and general all around snake in the grass, Roger St. Clair, only to be saved from a fate worse than death by the devoted swain, handsome Harold. The gag ending shows the villainous Roger, still determined to ensnare the lady of his unholy desires, dropping in to recommence the chase. The comic byplay is more suited for worldly wise gatherings than for a congregation of children at matinee.—Running time, seven minutes.

Surf Heroes
Excellent

Particularly pointed fare for these times of hot weather and beach acrobatics is this excellent demonstration of life saving activities as practiced by personnel of Santa Monica. Together with some first rate camera work and an appropriately appreciative commentary by Pete Smith, the miniature document on aquatic first aid offers some exciting moments of watery rescues. Mr. Smith has seen introduced a couple of his stooges to offer the audience a good chuckle or two.—Running time, 10 minutes.

IN THE CUTTING ROOM

Too Hot to Handle

(MGM)

Romance and Adventure

For name value "Too Hot to Handle" will present Clark Gable and Myrna Loy ("Test Pilot"), Leo Carrillo ("Blockade"), Walter Pidgeon ("The Girl of the Golden West"), Walter Connolly, Marjorie Main, Betty Ross Clarke, Peter Lynn, Aileen Pringle, Patsy O'Connor, Virginia Weidler, Johnny Hines, Henry Kolker and Willie Fung.

In story it will be the exciting detailing of the exploits of a newsreel photographer, who doesn't hesitate to fake and frame the pictorial scoops that make him the envy of his competitors, particularly a rival camera man and a famous aviatrix who become part and parcel of a hardy crew who prowl the four corners of the world in search of sensational new events. Through wars, disasters and other great events is woven a three-cornered romance. The plot opens in the midst of the Chinese-Japanese incident, races across oceans to New York, over the waves to film a ship afire at sea, to the Amazonian jungles, where much of its romance, melodrama, excitement and sensational action takes place and back to New York for its thrilling climax. Mr. Don MacIlwaine of MGM's studio publicity department says "It's hot stuff."

Its direction is in the hands of Jack Conway, maker of such films as "Red Headed Woman," "Viva Villa," "A Tale Of Two Cities," "Saratoga," "Libelled Lady" and "A Yank At Oxford," which, it is a matter of record, were not only rich in showmanship devices, but were sufficiently appealing to draw the public up to box offices in large numbers. A Lawrence Winegarten production, "Too Hot To Handle" had its story birth in the minds of Laurence Stallings, remembered for "What Price Glory," John Lee Mahin and Leonard Hammond, who was Stallings' camera man during the Italian occupation of Ethiopia.

Slam bang action, natural comedy, sensationalism and highly competitive romance are being looked upon as the elements that will arouse unusual interest for the picture.

Hold That Co-Ed

(20th Century-Fox)

Football Comedy Romance

About two years ago, 20th Century-Fox came out with "Pigskin Parade," the first football musical, setting a new vogue in the industry's annual crop of films aimed not only at those who liked soundly constructed comedy romance entertainment, embellished with music and quick action, but the football enthusiasts as well. There will be music and dancing in "Hold That Co-Ed," but wideawake Darryl Zanuck, aware of the fact that public preferences do not remain constant, will, in this case employ straight, romantic, comic and melodramatic essentials above all else.

In tongue-in-the-cheek fashion, the story utilized in the production will be built around a swashbuckling governor who uses a state university and its football team to advance his own shady career. It is said that the story is packed with new twists which, it is expected, will find favor with hosts of gridiron followers as well as numerous others who know nothing about football, but who do know high class entertainment.

Considering the subject of casting from the dual viewpoints of talent, suitability and name value, it might be pointed out that John Barrymore, George Murphy, Marjorie Weaver, Jack Haley and Joan Davis will be seen in the principal parts and that featured roles have been assigned to George Barbier, Johnny Downs, Paul Hurst, Glenn Morris, Donald Meek, Ruth Terry and a score of others. Naturally plenty of football players from local universities will be seen in action.

The picture will come to the screen under the associate producership of David Hempstead, who was responsible for Shirley Temple's "Little Miss Broadway." It is being directed by George Marshall, whose latest accomplishment is "Goldwyn Follies," but who also made "Battle of Broadway," as well as several Will Rogers and Jane Withers features. While no writing or adapting credits have been announced, music and lyrics were provided by Walter Bullock and Harold Spina and Lew Brown and Lew Pollack.

Release date: September 17, 1938 (tentative).

The Gladiator

(Columbia - David Loew)

Farce Comedy

Even though there's always some kind of a love story in all Joe E. Brown's pictures, nobody pays much attention to that phase of them or takes any commercial advantage of it. The reason is obvious. Love always plays second fiddle to a welter of nonsense and tomfoolery when Joe E. is the hero. There will be a little love and sentiment in this one, still "The Gladiator" is being built to that wild and woozy pattern that has continued Mr. Brown as the juveniles' top flight screen idol as well as one who can provide grown-ups with a full order of ridiculous entertainment.

In the present case, Joe unknowingly dosed with a chemical that gives mere mortals superhuman strength, devastates a football field and makes the track and field accomplishments of great athletes pale into insignificance. His accomplishments also make him the campus hero. But when he has to get money to provide for a little boy he wishes to adopt, he quits college, turns wrestler and challenges the champion. The match, in the picture in which Brown and Man Mountain Dean went at it hammer and tongs, promises to be the most sensational ever seen on the screen, compared to it the grappling in "Swing Your Lady" is as rough as tiddley-winks. Brown wins the go and with it enough dough to get married and adopt the youngster.

Origin of the screen story is Phillip Wylie's novel which was transcribed by Charlie Nelson and Arthur Sheekman and adapted by James Mulhauser and Earle Snell with added dialogue by George Marion, Jr. Direction is in the hands of Edward Sedgwick, maker of "Fit for a King" and "Riding on Air."

Brown is starred and the supporting cast includes Man Mountain Dean, June Travis, Dickie Moore, Lucien Littlefield, Robert Kent, Ethel Wales, Donald Douglas, Lee Phelps, Eddie Kane and Wright Kramer.

Release date: August 15, 1938.

The Mysterious Rider

(Paramount - Harry Sherman)

Melodrama

Other than "The Barrier," a Rex Beach story, Harry Sherman has confined his production activities solely to the Clarence Mulford "Hopalong Cassidy" stories. Now, starting a new series, he turns his hand to the fictions of another well known author, Zane Grey. In addition to his many novels, short stores and articles, one has but to recall "Thunder Mountain" and "Wanderers of the Wastelands," among others to appreciate the character of his screen stories.

The story to be told in this production, "The Mysterious Rider," is action melodrama which has a romantic love interest counterpart. Twenty years before the screen story begins, a rancher is framed for the murder of his partner and forced to leave the country. His daughter, heir to the property, is left behind in the charge of a disloyal foreman friend, who, cheating her, appropriates the ranch. The man believed dead comes back in the guise of a notorious outlaw, Pecos Bill, and is accompanied by a real honest to goodness bad man. Breaking up a gang of rustlers, Pecos avenges the death of his partner, sees to it that the ranch is restored to his daughter, promotes a romance for her with a goodlooking young cowboy and known only to them as the mysterious rider leaves the country without revealing his identity.

There will be the customary complement of cowboy riders and the picture will feature Douglass Dumbrille and Sidney Tolar as the avengers. Russell Hayden and Charlotte Fields as the boy and girl, and Stanley Andrews as the man who was untrue to his trust and paid the penalty for his treachery.

The screen play was prepared by Maurice Geraghty and the production is being directed by Leslie Selander.

Release date: Oct. 28, 1938 (tentative).

The Circus Comes to Town

(Monogram)

Big Top Complications

This title should leave no doubt in any exhibitor's mind as to what the production's background will be; what may be done about it in the way of exploitation and how. Press agents of circuses, upon which evil days now have come, numerous pictures and the showman's primer have charted the course. It is not to be expected that anyone will prove himself ignorant.

While "The Circus Comes To Town" will be a story of a circus and circus people, its movitating plot is melodramatic romance. A girl is a member of a sensational trapeze trio. Both men love her. The owner fears that should she permit the girl to prefer one, it would result in disastrous consequences to her business, inasmuch as the trapeze trio is the ace drawing card. But trouble happens anyway and the trio does quit to go on to greater success in Europe. Yet when the girl learns that the woman owner is ill, discouraged and that the circus is about to fold, she persuades her partners to rejoin it. Comes the tragedy, the aerialist who loved and lost, loses his grip on himself. He does not want to go through with the sensational act. That the girl may not be injured because of his inability to perform, he drops from the high big top himself. The show goes on and later the owner, realizing the sacrifice the disappointed lover made, permits the marriage and all know the injured man will live.

The cast will feature Marjorie Main, lately in "Dead End" and "Boy Of The Streets" as the circus owner. Anne Nagel, formerly with Warner Brothers, Jack LeRue who gets a sympathetic part for a change and Grant Richards will be seen as "The Flying Pennies." The supporting cast lists George Cleveland, Herbert Rawlinson, Rolfe Sedan, Betty Compson, Snowflake, Harry Harvey, Chrelene Wyat and Speed Hansen.

Basis of the production is an original screen play by Marion Orth, whose credits include "A Bride For Henry," "Saleslady" and "Nothing Down." The film, which is a William Lackey production, is being directed by Karl Brown, maker of "Private Nurse" and "Port of Missing Girls" recently.

The Chaser

(MGM)

Racket Expose

The story to be told in "The Chaser" follows the experiences encountered by a young ambulance chasing lawyer who fakes serious accidents in order to make wealthy big corporations pay poor people. His career comes a cropper when a street car company's attorneys get the goods on his dishonest doctor who can make an ordinarily hale and hearty person look as though he had been run through a meat chopper. He is saved from serious consequences, however, when the girl who was sent to investigate him and who gets enough evidence on him to send him to jail for several life times, marries him just before his trial and thus is prevented by law from testifying against him.

The picture is being produced by Frank Davis, whose earlier credits include "Petticoat Fever" and "The Devil Is a Sissy." Direction is in the hands of Edward L. Marin, maker of "Hold That Kiss," "Married Before Breakfast" and "Everybody Sing."

Other than presenting Dennis O'Keefe, last seen in "Hold That Kiss" and "Bad Man of Brimstone,," "The Chaser" will serve to introduce youthful Ann Morriss, a Dallas, Texas, miss, whose previous training was in the home town little theatre. More familiar personalities are Lewis Stone, the judge in "Judge Hardy series"; Nat Pendleton, Lana Turner, who was Mickey Rooney's vamp menace in "Love Finds Andy Hardy"; Barbara Pepper now in "Army Girl," Henry O'Neill, John T. Quallen, Ruth T. Gillette and Irving Bacon.

Release date: August 5, 1938.

Touchdown, Army

(Paramount)

Football Feature

Last October Paramount turned out "Hold 'Em Navy," a seasonal football feature which had Lew Ayres, John Howard and Mary Carlisle as leads. The locale was Annapolis. Now, as Robert Cummings replaces Ayers, Howard and Miss Carlisle move up to West Point and Paramount is anticipating that "Touchdown, Army" will be similarly successful as an audience entertainment and showman's exploitation feature.

Football is the meat of the piece, but for more strictly entertainment purposes it has to do with the experiences and adventures of a cocky underclassman cadet, who broke every rule when it came to courting an upperclassman's girl, had his ears pinned back as only West Point military regulations and academic customs can do such a job, got himself thoroughly disliked, accumulated bushels of demerits, proved a regular guy, however, in an exam mix up and then got out on the gridiron in the Navy game to show one and all how football should be played if Army was to win.

Howard has been playing around in Paramount's secondary features for quite a spell, Miss Carlisle has had a film or two with Bing Crosby, and Robert Cummings just completed his part in "The Texans." As they are the centers of all activity, romantic, melodramatic and sportive, the supporting cast includes Owen Davis, Jr., Benny Baker who was in "Hold 'Em Navy," William Frawley, who is amusing in Harold Lloyd's "Professor, Beware," Raymond Hatton, the scout in "The Texans," and Minor Watson.

The picture is being directed by Kurt Neumann, who also directed "Hold 'Em Navy."

Blockheads

(MGM - Hal Roach)

Farce Comedy

"Blockheads" will be a typical Laurel and Hardy feature length comedy. While the production has a story basis, its action will be nothing more or less than a series of gags in situation and dialogue. The target of all that happens and goes on is farce.

Just as the war is about to end, Laurel is assigned to a post and ordered to guard it until relieved. Twenty years later he learns that the war is over. The forgotten soldier, brought back to America, is a public curiosity about whom the press makes much ado. The publicity reunites Laurel and his buddy of the trenches, Hardy.

This introductory sets the stage for the ensuing nonsense in which one mishap after another befalls the two zanies. Nothing goes right, not even their attempt to protect the woman next door, who has befriended them. The death they escaped in the war catches up with them as the husband of the woman next door, a big game hunter in exhibiting his collection of trophies points to two birds he killed with one shot.

While Laurel and Hardy, naturally, will dominate the action, parts have been written into the story for Minna Gombell, Billy Gilbert and Patricia Ellis which should give the supporting trio ample opportunity to display their talents.

Direction of "Blockheads" is in the hands of John Blystone, who made "Swiss Miss." The motivating story was prepared by Charles Rogers and Arnold Belgard while Felix Adler, James Parrott and Harry Langdon did the screen play.

As this will be the last Laurel and Hardy feature which MGM will release, Laurel and Hardy have concocted their own catchline for it—"Leo's last laugh."

Release date: August 12, 1938 (tentative).

Family Series

The audience entertainment worth of the Jones Family series has been established and this, the tenth in line should find customary favor with patrons. As all exhibitors know, the selling angles are many. Suffice to say it will be a family picture to which all members of all families, from youngest who can understand to oldest may be bidden without any qualms of uncertainty at all.

This time, the Jones Family becomes embroiled in new plots, romances, melodramas and comedies. Mother Jones faces a new career when she goes on the air for a series of broadcasts advising listeners on domestic problems as a result of a contest won by the eldest daughter. The program becomes an instrument of great assistance when Mr. Jones becomes involved with a gang of swindlers. The oldest boy complicates matters by falling in love and planning to elope. The program becomes a medium which unwittingly precipitates the son's misadventure, but after many amusing and exciting complications, the story makes an all ends well finish.

The Jones Family cast will be that which has carried the roles through the nine previous pictures. They are Jed Prouty, Shirley Deane, Spring Byington, Russell Gleason, Ken Howell, George Ernest, June Carlson, Florence Roberts and Billy Mahan. Marvin Stephens, who has been seen in one or two earlier episodes, will also be among those present. He was last in "Speed to Burn." In addition to the permanent members of the cast, important roles will be played by Henry Kolker, Iva Steward, Edward Earle, Paul McVey, Carrol Nye, Wilfred Lucas, Hal K. Dawson and Bruce Warren.

John Stone, who has produced all the series, will be again in charge, and Mal St. Clair, who just completed "A Trip to Paris," will again direct.

Release date: September 9, 1938.

INDEPENDENTS AND COOPERATIVES SQUIRM UNDER BRITISH FILMS ACT

Literal Interpretation of Labor Cost Clause Called Hardship to Producers Operating Under Plan Similar to Norton Group

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Already in its third month of operation, Britain's Films Act charter of the New Deal for native production is being peppered with bullets fired from the camp of the independent producer. Unlike most objectives of the marksman, it continues mercilessly to function—and the only exhaustion would seem to be on the right side of the bullets.

Motion Picture Herald already has exhaustively examined the effects of the virtually new £15,000 minimum on film finance, and outlined the unwillingness of the City—origin of the industry's financial life's blood, and sorriest victim of the last Act's paradoxical workings — to gamble furthur against the losing odds which the increased speculative element has set up. In that regard conditions remain unchanged, and the production boom, in spite of the exuberant optimism generated among the rosy spectacled, by the fact that just over a dozen — mostly minor — films are currently on the floor, has not yet appeared on even the farthest horizon.

Now the cooperative producers, pioneers and standard bearers of the New Spirit have found that the Act in its functionings, specifically in its literal interpretation of labor costs, essential factor in the registration of British films for Quota purposes, sets an immediate manacle upon their activities.

It should be recorded here that this new cooperative idea, of which the parent and spiritual adviser has been Captain the Honorable Richard Norton, chief of Pinewood Studios, is a slowly but visibly growing one. The foundation of Pinebrook, Limited, under Norton's aegis, launched cooperative production from the stage of ideas to that of practical politics. Under its principles equal shares of responsibility, and ultimately of profits, have been borne by the various parties concerned. Distributor, studio and production organization, each agreed to a share in responsibility, material and otherwise for the films they make, and to share on a like basis on any profits which might accrue. Similarly stars, leading players, directors, cameramen, etc., have, in most instances, instead of demanding large or even normal salaries, been willing to take ultimatedy an agreed cut on the films' takings, and immediately only a portion of the estimated income.

In the face of it the idea is a praiseworthy one—quite apart from its practicability. Since the formation of Pinebrook, other production groups have banded together and launched their film making activities on a similar basis. Inasmuch as to some extent it solved the primary and fundamental problem of securing the wherewithal with which the films could actually be made, and handed out for distribution, it seemed to give a needed if limited stimulus to the Quota film.

The Films Act, however, stipulates that every British film to qualify for Quota, must have had expended on its labor costs at least £7,500. The wording of the Act is specific in defining these as "The total amount of payments paid or payable by the maker of the film in respect of the labor or services of persons directly engaged in the making of the film. . . ." Asked for a definition of this in regard to the cooperative film where the labor costs would be judged only on the ultimate proceeds accruing after distribution, the Board of Trade made it clear that they could only accept as labor costs the definite sum to which the employee is entitled under his contract, the sum, in fact, for which he might sue did he not receive it! They have refused to accept as labor costs the producers' estimate of what that amount is likely to be.

Now the cooperative producers are in a temporary state of consternation. The decision of the Board of Trade, they contend, undermines the very principles upon which their enterprise is built, and will in fact limit the practicability of production on a cooperative basis, if it does not completely kill it.

How is it possible, they ask, for a cooperative production group to put down a definite sum in the case of an artist who is willing to work for £1,000 when he may ultimately draw £3,000 —and on the other hand may only be entitled to £500? On the one hand there is the danger that if his remuneration is set lower, it would be grossly underestimating the average financial risk.

Barred from Privileges

Into the bargain they claim the insistence of the Board of Trade on an immediate and rigid estimate debars any picture which should meet with exceptional success, from being classed in the double or treble quota category, since its estimated costs would not be calculable until distribution had been achieved.

There is obviously an arguable case for the producer, who should not be expected to lay himself open to the chance of litigation if the estimated salaries of his artists and technicians were not eventually payable and paid. No producer is likely to risk ultimate litigation by setting them at a high figure when the distribution—whether from accident or design—does not bring him back proceeds up to his expectations.

Nevertheless, the Board of Trade has a difficult tangle to unravel, and there is a larger body of opinion which believes they have had little option in coming to the decision they have done. They are notoriously determined this time to leave open no loophole through which financial manipulation might creep in, determined that the chiselling and side issue services which marked the operations of the last Act, shall this time have no chance. Nor can they be expected to suspend their judgment and decisions until the distribution of the film is concluded—on an average estimate two and a half years after production is complete! This would be necessary to secure exact balancing of accounts on the cooperative basis, necessary, too, in order to decide whether the film could count as a double or treble quota production.

There may be some practicable way out, in a system whereby single quota might be granted at the outset, with the additional registration if and when the proceeds justified it. Meanwhile, the Federation of British Industries Film Group and the independent groups are watching the matter and taking legal advice. More therefore will be heard of it.

Until the skies are a little clearer there is not likely to be a boom in cooperative production.

London Seat Plan Is Expected to Be Liberalized

The action of the powerful London County Council, which controls over 400 licensees in the Greater London area, in serving notice last week that film theatres under their licensing control will be compelled to display prominently a lighted plan of the seats available in the vestibule, together with the prices charged for them, probably will be toned down before it is enforced, Captain Paul Kimberley, O. B. E., managing director of National Screen Service, Ltd., said this week in New York.

Captain Kimberley is in America on a business visit and vacation along with his daughter Paula, who is on her first visit to this country. Captain Kimberley plans to be in New York until the 23rd of July, when he will sail for England on the Georgic.

Sees No Cause for Worry

In commenting on the London County Council action (reported in MOTION PICTURE HERALD, page 71, July 16th), Captain Kimberley said: "That situation will probably be taken care of by the London home county branch of the Cinematograph Exhibitor Association. Ultimately the London County Council will get together with the CEA and get down to something reasonable and fair." He said he didn't see any cause for worry as both groups in the past have always managed to straighten out the situation by an exchange of views.

Captain Kimberley said that conditions in England are a little on the quiet side because of the fight over "grading" but that studios are starting activity again.

Calls Convention Pleasant

He said that exhibitors' reaction to the recent Folkstone convention was that it was one of the most pleasant conventions yet held by the CEA. He said that the 1932 convention, which was held in London, was highlighted by the visit of the Duke and Duchess of York, now King and Queen of England, who spent two hours with the exhibitors.

For the last 11 years Captain Kimberley has conducted an accessory exhibition as part of the convention. He has been chairman of the exhibition for that length of time and is automatically reappointed each year. The exhibition is officially part of the convention and is sponsored by the exhibitors.

Captain Kimberley said that National Screen in England handles 3,500 accounts out of a total of approximately 4,000. He said the company's business has improved each year, including the current year.

In discussing chance games Captain Kimberley said that in England no inducement of any kind can be offered by exhibitors to get patrons into the theatres. He said that licensing authorities objected even to the practice of spotting a patron in the audiance and giving the patron a prize.

He said that the recent film bills will probably help to improve the home product and expressed the hope to see some good product from American studios in the coming year.

For the Empire

With the ultimate, if not express, objective of boosting the British Empire—certainly with the set purpose of using it as a subject of entertainment appeal—Alexander Korda has placed under contract, to collaborate on dialogue and scenarios, the distinguished British diplomat and Secretary of the British Government's publicity co-ordinating committee, Sir Robert Vansittart. Mr. Korda, whose "Sanders of the River," "Elephant Boy" and "The Drum" have already taken the Empire as inspiration and background, intends to continue this policy with certain of his forthcoming productions. On these Sir Robert Vansittart will work.

First in the group will be "Burmese Silver," upon which Sir Robert and Mr. Edward Thompson—author of the story—are at present engaged. Conrad Veidt and Sabu will appear in the film.

Also on the tapis is Zoltan Korda's production, "Four Feathers," for the screen version of which R. C. Sherriff will be responsible. On this Sir Robert will also work.

Sir Robert is likewise collaborating on the story of "Sixty Glorious Years," which Herbert Wilcox is making with Anna Neagle as the star.

Anna Neagle, for the second time in the role of Queen Victoria, in Herbert Wilcox' production "Sixty Glorious Years," now nearing completion at Denham.

Production Slow

Despite the generous use of rose coloured spectacles by the somewhat optimistic student of the British production scene, a factual examination of the situation reveals that the industry has not yet reached a state of boom, much less of normal production processes.

There are 74 stages in British studios, at the moment 15 of them are occupied with films in production!

Of these 7 are being made for American producer-renter organizations, most of them on the treble quota basis. The rest vary between £20,000 and £30,000 pictures and others made on the lower quota minimum.

Most active production organization is Associated British, who have three films in production at Elstree, "Premiere" starring John Lodge, "Marigold" with Sophie Stewart and "Yes Madam" with Bobby Howes and Diana Churchill in the leading roles.

At the Pinewood studios, Twentieth Century Productions are on the floor with Gracie Fields' "Keep Smiling," whilst Orion Productions are at work on the Elisabeth Bergner film "Stolen Life," which is due for release by Paramount and is the first of their new quota schedule. On another stage Geoffrey Toye is producing, with Victor Schertzinger's directorial aid, "The Mikado," to be released by General Film Distributors; a similar release awaits the Pascal production of Bernard Shaw's play "Pygmalion."

At Denham activity is divided between Herbert Wilcox, MGM British and London Films. Imperator are making on one stage "A Royal Divorce" which is being directed by Jack Raymond and is to be one of Paramount's releases. Denham is also the centre for RKO Radio's release "Sixty Glorious Years." The largest stage is occupied by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer where King Vidor is directing "The Citadel." Elsewhere in the studio Maxwell Wray is making the London Film production "Prison Without Bars," set for distribution by United Artists.

Ealing studios are taken up exclusively with George Formby's new film "It's In the Air," which is being directed by Anthony Kimmins and will be released by Associated British Film Distributors.

At Teddington Warner Brothers First National are concluding work on the Max Miller comedy "Everything Happens to Me," directed by Roy William Neill.

At the Nettlefold studios, Walton-on-Thames, Oswald Mitchell is directing a modest Butcher comedy, "Old Mother Riley in Paris."

Debuts

Five newcomers will make their screen debut —more or less—in the new London Film production "Prison Without Bars," which Maxwell Wray is directing at Denham for release by United Artists.

Considerable thought has been given to the casting of this film, in which the lead is played by a young French discovery Corinne Luchaire. The story deals with reformatory life.

The girls are Mary Morris, twenty-one year old actress, who was sent to Hollywood by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer as the result of a screen test; Lorraine Clewes, twenty year old Birmingham girl, who makes her first appearance in a film studio via the Alexander Theatre Repertory Company; Joan Ellum, sixteen year old Yorkshire schoolgirl, whose work created much interest in "South Riding"; Glynis Johns, fifteen year old who was also spotted in "South Riding" and Sally Wisher, eighteen year old who graduated through the London School of Dramatic Art.

Twenty to Come

A minimum of twenty pictures yet to be shown is promised by Gainsborough Pictures during the forthcoming season. Some of these have been made and are now awaiting trade shows—details of these have appeared in Motion Picture Herald.

Among the new announcements are one or two surprises. Among the last mentioned is a remake of "Sunshine Susie," record breaking English musical, which is to be a modern version of the film in which Jack Hulbert and Renate Muller originally starred.

Another production under schedule is "The Empty World," a prophetic story of the Wellsian type, written by Mrs. D. E. Stevenson. Barrie Lyndon's stage play, "They Came by Night," has been adapted as a starring vehicle for Will Fyffe. "London After Dark" is likewise to be adapted from stage to screen.

Numerous films are planned for Will Hay, whose "Hey, Hey, U. S. A." has just been concluded. Among these are "Mr. Smith Has His Day," the story of a nervous man's caravan holiday in Cornwall and in which the Graham Moffatt and Moore Marriott team will be revived, and another St. Michael episode probably to be written by Marriott Edgar and Val Guest. Hay will be further featured in an as yet untitled comedy written around the fictitious adventures of a London police constable.

Those films already announced include "The Blue Lagoon," Roland Pertwee's "Such An Enmity"; Roy Vicker's "The Girl in the News" with Margaret Lockwood and Michael Redgrave; another Will Fyffe character study, "Little Savage"; a Marjorie Allingham mystery story, "Death of a Ghost"; Margery Lawrence's "Madonna of the Seven Moons"; "Cavalcade of the English Music-Hall" and yet another Margaret Lockwood-Michael Redgrave subject, "Slade of the Yard."

Due for immediate production are "Rob Roy" and "A Girl Must Live," which will give a glimpse into the lives of the chorus, and Margaret Lockwood will star.

Publicity

Under the title of Five Star Press, Limited, three noted publicity men, Frank Shaw, Jack Griggs and Monja Danischewsky—each in his turn is associated with advertising and press work for leading English producers and renters —have banded together and launched an independent press and publicity organisation. They will specialize in publicity in Britain for visiting American stars, technicians and executives.

Napoleon Comique

According to publicity dispatches from Herbert Wilcox's headquarters, "there is nothing solemn in the approach to the romance of Napoleon and Josephine" in "A Royal Divorce." "Jack Raymond's film," it is stated, "is being treated in a realistic, humorous way with a tremendous emotional climax when Josephine is forced to accept the divorce."

CHICAGO THEATRES HIT BY FREE COMPETITION

Municipal Concerts and 7,000 "Softball" Games Nightly Get Into Exhibitors' Hair

by WILLIAM F. CROUCH in Chicago

Free attractions of diversified kinds are fast becoming the bane of Chicago theatremen who are finding the increase in various forms of free entertainment a serious contender to theatre patronage.

The free attractions offered by the city itself are the greatest threat to theatre business. Not that free attractions have not been offered in years past much to the detriment of the motion picture theatres. It is the increasing trend to make these attractions more spectacular, with the result that they bring out larger crowds, that is causing the Chicago theatre owners so much alarm.

The Chicago Park District, under the supervision of Mayor Edward J. Kelly, and aided by James C. Petrillo, head of Chicago Musicians Union, offers the greatest attraction, the Grant Park concerts, held nightly from July 1 to Labor Day. These free concerts draw an average of from 25,000 to 35,000 persons nightly when no special attraction is listed. About twice weekly some noted musician, singer or musical group is featured, and on these nights the crowd is often near or above the 100,000 mark. On nights when such personages as Rubinoff, Rudy Vallee and other big names have appeared the attendance has reached 225,000.

In the coming weeks such artists as Gladys Swarthout, Jessica Dragonette, Albert Spaulding, Zimbalist, John Charles Thomas, Jascha Heifetz, John Carter, Tito Schipa and Helen Jepson are scheduled to appear. Following her engagement at the Chicago theatre, this week, Martha Raye is to appear at one of the concerts. Rudy Vallee, Deanna Durbin and Bobby Breen are other film persons who are being sought.

It is estimated that the total attendance at the Grant Park concerts for ten weeks is near the 5,000,000 mark. Unnumbered are the thousands who enjoy the broadcasts of the concerts on the radio.

The Chicago Park District pays for the musicians who play regularly at these concerts. For the salaries of the artists who appear the musician's union pays the regular concert fee. For example, an artist such as Heifetz gets $3,000 for such an engagement. Bobby Breen in his appearance last year received approximately $1,000. Such artists as Rubinoff and Vallee have appeared gratis out of deference to Petrillo.

Special Promotion Shows

The free concerts are but one of the many city attractions that cut into theatre grosses. On weekends special shows are staged through the committee in charge of promotion for the city. Last weekend, for example, the police and fire departments staged a public demonstration with top admission of 25c at the huge Soldiers Field stadium. More than 70,000 attended. Aside from this the beaches attract hundreds of thousands and reliable reports from various golf courses of the public-fee type show that, business is far ahead of last year which incidentally was better than average. Major league baseball this year has shown a slightly better attendance than last year.

The subject of baseball brings up the consideration of what is perhaps one of the greatest menaces to local theatre business, especially in the neighborhoods. This menace is softball. Each week some 2,000 organized softball teams are in action in Chicagoland. More than 30,000 players are active in this organized form of athletics and can be found almost nightly playing or practicing on some of the many hundreds of "ball parks" which dot the city. According to Edward Cochrane, sports editor of the Chicago Evening American, there are in addition to the organized teams on more than 500 unorganized playgrounds, with approximately 10,000 players. So far this season in Chicago alone there have been 7,000 softball games played on the regular schedules.

According to Mr. Cochrane, whose sports department keeps two editors busy handling news of softball events alone, the increase in softball games in the past five years has almost trebled. The attendance increase at such games is six times greater than it was five years ago.

Almost in the fad stage is the interest in softball games. Every vacant lot of sufficient size has been turned into a ball park of sorts. In fact, lots large enough to handle softball games are a scarcity here. Most of the softball teams are organized by merchants who furnish the uniforms and equipment and see that a playing field is provided. So fast has interest developed in this sport that many of the fields have bleachers erected along the side lines which will accommodate as many as 500 onlookers. Traffic around the parks when games are being played is almost at a standstill.

12 Games in 10 Blocks

On last Friday night in a ten block area around 79th Street and Cottage Grove on Chicago's far South Side, 12 games were in progress with an estimated attendance of 3,000. The two theatres which are nearby found business anything but good, although the attractions offered were better than average. This is but one example of many as to the prevalence of the games.

One thing that adds to the interest of the games is that many of the teams are composed of girls. It is this trend towards women's teams that has brought about the added increase in softball games as many who once went to the theatre to see Hollywood's glamour girls cavort in shorts can now see practically the same thing in their back yard—and for nothing.

Chicago theatremen know they cannot stop the various forms of free entertainment but they are hard pressed to find a way to attract people into their theatres when so many free attractions are offered in competition.

Karsch Acquires Theatre Building

George H. Karsch, operator of the Lead Belt Amusement Company, Farmington, Mo., has acquired the New Grand Theatre building, Desloge, Mo., from the Robertson estate. The house is the eighth in the circuit and will undergo extensive improvements.

Three New Orleans Exchanges Refuse Collection of Tax

Three New Orleans film exchanges have adopted the position that they are not responsible for collection of the new sales tax following conferences and correspondence with state tax officials and attorneys. Four other major exchanges are billing exhibitors for the tax which is levied on film "usage."

Attorneys for Twentieth Century-Fox, Paramount and Grand National have given their New Orleans exchange rulings that the exchanges are engaged in interstate commerce and are not concerned with collection of the tax. The rulings do not question the validity of the law, but hold that the bookers are not responsible for its collection.

The exchanges that are billing exhibitors with the tax along with the film booking charge are Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, RKO Radio, Warner Brothers and Universal.

The tax is one per cent outside of New Orleans and two per cent in the city where a special one cent municipal sales tax is imposed.

The Ohio House of Representatives has approved the tax-extender bill anticipated to produce $7,200,000 in poor relief from excise taxes, including the three per cent admissions tax, which was extended through 1941.

Third Dimensional Effect is Claimed

Added to the numerous similar systems appearing down through the years is a third-dimensional effect in motion pictures which is now claimed to have been achieved through affixing a specially treated glass prism to the camera lens. The method is advanced by Joseph Valentine, Universal cameraman, who asserts it will be employed in filming the new Deanna Durbin picture, "That Certain Age."

The mechanism consists of a prism one-hundredth of an inch thick and slightly less than an inch in length and width, made of two pieces of glass fitted together at an angle of 45 degrees. One surface is covered with mercury. The prism is installed in the camera between the lens and the aperture where the film is exposed.

Associated Press quoted Mr. Valentine as saying: "Theatre owners won't have to buy any additional equipment for their projectors in order to retain the third-dimensional quality in the film. Patrons will be able to see clear, rounded, undistorted pictures on the screen, even when they sit far to one side.

"Since it costs only about $200 to equip a camera with the prism, I anticipate general use of the development in the industry," he added.

The New York Times reported from Los Angeles that, "while not claimed to be revolutionary, the result is a distinct improvement over the flat photography of the past and adds life and substance to the flickering images."

RKO PLAN READY FOR COURT ON AUGUST 1st

Four Amendments Made by Special Master in Granting Approval Are Accepted

RKO's plan of reorganization is near completion. Four amendments to the plan were inserted by George W. Alger, special master, this week when he granted approval of the plan and announced that his formal report will be ready for submission to William Bondy, federal judge in New York, about August 1st.

The amendments offered by Mr. Alger are as follows:

1. Both classes of stock, preferred and common, are to have cumulative voting privileges.

2. Present debenture holders are to be entitled to one share of preferred and five shares of common, or they may take one and four-tenths of preferred for each $100 debenture held. This is optional.

3. The Atlas Corporation, proponent of the amended plan, has agreed to underwrite the new stock. The referee demands a written agreement to this effect.

4. If an issue of new debentures is desired, the corporation must actively get the consent of 50 per cent of the preferred stockholders.

Immediately after Mr. Alger had closed the hearing with the announcement that "I find that the plan, in the main, is fair, feasible and equitable," Hamilton C. Rickaby, attorney for Atlas, announced the proponents of the plan will accept the amendments.

However, Nathan Rosenberg, attorney for H. Cassell & Company, promptly announced that he intends to oppose the report when it goes to Judge Bondy for confirmation. Mr. Rosenberg, representing independent debenture holders, contends that the plan is unconstitutional because it reduces the debenture holders from a secured to an equity position. He declared he already has prepared to appeal to the United States circuit court of appeals in the event that he is defeated in the lower court.

Permits Hardy to Intervene

The issue of unconstitutionality will require the intervention of the United States attorney general and it was to meet this situation that Judge Bondy signed an order permitting Lamar Hardy, United States attorney, to intervene and become a party to the presentation of evidence and argument on the question.

The government's petition stated that on June 3rd, H. Cassel & Company, Copia Realty Corporation and Fabian Operating Corportion of New York objected to the reorganization plan on the ground that Section 77B of the Bankruptcy Act was unconstitutional.

Judge Bondy also granted the petition of Ernest W. Stirn of Milwaukee, holder of 1,234 shares of unconverted Class A stock, to inspect the records of the Irving Trust Company, trustee of RKO, as to the holders of proxies on March 25th and November 10, 1931.

Mr. Stirn contends that two extraordinary stockholders' meetings held in 1931, which approved the conversion of Class A stock to common, were lacking the necessary votes of two-thirds of the stockholders, and that he is, therefore, entitled to preferential treatment under the RKO plan of reorganization.

The court order stated that the petitioner was to bear all the expenses of the examination ordered.

John Stover, attorney for Mr. Stirn, expressed dissatisfaction with Mr. Alger's report and indicated he would oppose confirmation of it.

Joseph M. Cohen, counsel for the Independent Stockholders Protective Committee, withheld comment, but indicated he also would oppose confirmation of the plan.

Mr. Alger set next Monday as the final date for the filing of objections to an agreement with Rockefeller Center for the Music Hall franchise, and to the certificate of incorporation for the new company.

Atlas Action Near Completion

Floyd Odlum, Atlas president, and David Sarnoff, RCA head, were scheduled to complete negotiations this week for the acquisition by Atlas of additional RKO securities under the investment company's option with RCA.

RCA's insistence on having a voice in the designation of the reorganized company's new management, in addition to representation on the new board of directors, in the event that Atlas does not acquire at this time the $5,500,000 balance of RKO securities held by RCA, was said to be an important factor in the negotiations.

Under its option, Atlas may acquire the entire RCA holdings or may obtain an extension of the option to December 31st, by purchasing one-twelfth of the holdings for $500,000 cash. Atlas, it was understood, favored the latter course until RCA made known its demand in regard to board and management representation.

Judge Bondy plans to leave on his annual European vacation next month. Should he conclude hearings on the proposed plan before his departure, it is considered likely that he would hand down his decision upon his return in September, thus presenting the possibility of RKO emerging from reorganization in October.

A board of directors for the reorganized company will have to be agreed upon and approved by Judge Bondy in advance of the court's final approval of the reorganization plan.

Mr. Alger has filed a petition requesting Judge Bondy to fix "reasonable compensation" for his services as special master in hearing and reporting on four issues of fact and law referred to him.

Ned E. Depinet, vice-president of RKO Radio; S. Barret McCormick, advertising and publicity director, and David Strumpf, art director, left New York by plane Wednesday for Hollywood to consult with studio officials on forthcoming product.

McCoy Named Atlanta Manager

Ralph McCoy, branch manager of Warner Brothers in Charlotte, has been promoted to branch manager of the company's Atlanta office. He succeeds Joe Vergesslich who, because of illness, will confine his activities to sales in the state of Florida. John Bachman, former Grand National branch manager in Philadelphia, succeeds Mr. McCoy in Charlotte.

World Adds "Illusion" Territory

World Pictures Corporation, which owns the American distribution of "Grand Illusion," a French picture, has acquired sales and distribution rights for the additional territories of Cuba, Venezuela, Colombia, Peru, Bolivia, Ecuador, Central America, Mexico, Philippine and Hawaiian Islands.

NATIONAL MAGAZINES RADIO FILM CRITICS Applaud MONOGRAM'S "ROSE OF THE RIO GRANDE" TIME

The Weekly Newsmagazine

Frank melodrama based on the Mexican border legend of a rough-riding Robin Hood of the last century. Its tall, broad, swashbuckling hero is John Carroll . . . who resembles Ronald Colman, has a hint of Douglas Fairbanks' agility, and sings in a rich concert baritone.

If I could see movies as good as this one, once or twice a week—I'd be a picture fan year in and year out . . . The picture has some delightful songs —but it's not a musical comedy. For the entire family, I promise a pleasant hour in—"Rose of the Rio Grande."

JIMMY FIDLER

Liberty

★★½ (Good to Excellent)
They've got something here. His name is John Carroll. He is tall, dark, handsome, young and the happy possessor of one of those at-last-we-are-alone-darling voices. Considering the pulling power of Messrs. Eddy, Crosby, and Powell when they begin giving out their dulcet tones, we feel this newcomer can walk right into the boys' club.

COE

Lively, Robin Hoodish, romantic adventure tale—reminiscent of present-day Westerns, but with considerably more color, vigor, and historic interest. The lovely Movita and the swashbuckling John Carroll, who sings as well as he fights, make an excellent romantic team.

PHOTOPLAY

You'll catch this someplace and you'll like it. Movita is really lovely, and John Carroll is excellent as the hero in a story concerning the brigandage in Mexico one hundred years ago.

The Smart Screen Magazine
SCREENLAND

Brisk in its dramatic inventions, colorful with the swashbuckling heroics of romantic melodrama, here is enjoyable entertainment for the whole family. John Carroll is splendid as the singing hero, and Movita is a most pleasing Mexican belle.

Recommended Preview: Here is a picture in the current vogue for action films...Chief interest lies in the two co-stars, John Carroll and Movita. Carroll, tall, dark 'n' handsome, with a beautiful baritone voice, shows promise of being another reason why girls leave home.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

CATTLE RAIDERS: Charles Starrett, Iris Meredith—The usual western which satisfied a fair crowd. Our business, like many other houses, has shown a falling off. Played July 2.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

HOLIDAY: Katharine Hepburn, Cary Grant—A very good picture that should really stand up at any box-office. While it is no "Awful Truth," it is satisfactory and pleasing in every way, and all of your patrons will like it very much. We played this picture to stiff opposition, and still packed them in. Book it in early if you can for best results. Running time, 94 minutes. Played July 3-4.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town patronage.

PENITENTIARY: Walter Connolly, Jean Parker—This picture did considerably more business than the balance of the prison pictures this year. My customers liked it. Very good.—E. C. Arnold, Avon Theatre, Hillsboro, Kansas. Small town patronage.

START CHEERING: Jimmy Durante, Joan Perry—One of the better musicals of the year. Pleased and did extra business.—E. C. Arnold, Avon Theatre, Hillsboro, Kansas. Small town patronage.

START CHEERING: Jimmy Durante, Joan Perry—Pleased all who saw it. And those that did see it all seemed to think that Durante stole the show. Running time, 79 minutes. Played June 17-18.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

WIDE OPEN FACES: Joe E. Brown, Jane Wyman—Here is a fine entertaining picture that failed to do business. I believe it should be played on the weekend.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada.

WIDE OPEN FACES: Joe E. Brown, Jane Wyman—This picture did way above average business and pleased generally.—E. C. Arnold, Avon Theatre, Hillsboro, Kansas. Small town patronage.

First National

FOOLS FOR SCANDAL: Fernand Gravet, Carole Lombard—Just a waste of time and film. How Warners figured that this deserved the top price allocation is beyond me. A complete flop at the till. Played July 3.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

SLIGHT CASE OF MURDER, A: Edward G. Robinson, Jane Bryan, Ruth Donnelly, Allen Jenkins—Good enough picture but I have yet to play an Edward G. Robinson picture that was any good at the box office. Running time, 85 minutes.—P. G. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

WOMEN ARE LIKE THAT: Kay Francis, Pat O'Brien—A very poor picture with Pat O'Brien trying to make love in a pathetic sort of way. Terribly miscast, as Kay Francis is too mature for romantic interest and also too cocky to take such a role. O'Brien had better stay in the "he-man" role if he wants to be any sort of box office for us. Running time. 78 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BIG CITY: Spencer Tracy, Luise Rainer—Very good picture which failed to draw. MGM has the product, if you can get them in to see it. Running time, 81 minutes. Played June 10-11-12.—O. W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D.

DOUBLE WEDDING: William Powell, Myrna Loy—Good show but not as good as the "Thin Man" stories. Running time, 85 minutes. Played June 17-18-19.—O. W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D.

FIRST HUNDRED YEARS, THE: Robert Montgomery, Virginia Bruce—Disappointing business on this picture. Did not gross film rental.—E. C. Arnold, Avon Theatre, Hillsboro, Kansas. Small town patronage.

GIRL OF THE GOLDEN WEST: Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy—Very good. It would have to be with Nelson Eddy and Jeanette MacDonald. Walter Pidgeon gives a fine portrayal of Jack Rance and Buddy Ebsen as Alabama really goes to town. Dance ensembles are good, but to me the high light is the drill with the horses. Struck two rainy nights out of three, but the picture is very good. Running time, 121 minutes. Played July 1-2-3.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas.

HOLD THAT KISS: Dennis O'Keefe, Maureen O'Sullivan, Mickey Rooney—I'll never cease to wonder where they get some of the titles. This one for instance, and the tragedy of it was that the picture is just as clever as it can be, chuck full of down-to-earth entertainment, but, that title without any doubt held out a lot of patrons that would not take a chance on a picture titled so. It just burns me up to have them miss a good picture and then attend the clucks that come through. The Irishers have it, in this one O'Keefe and O'Sullivan, and they make quite a team. Not forgetting Buck, the dog.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind.

LAST GANGSTER, THE: Edward G. Robinson, Rose Stradner—Business near zero. No draw.—E. C. Armold, Avon Theatre, Hillsboro, Kansas. Small town patronage.

SWISS MISS: Laurel and Hardy, Della Lind—There is just about enough story in this one for a good two-reel comedy. Metro will have to do better by "Our Nell" if they are going to keep this team in front. Sure, you have a certain number of patrons that will go for them. This new star, Della Lind, good voice, attractive, should go places. She is somewhat of a siren type, a little voluptuous in figure.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind.

TEST PILOT: Clark Gable, Myrna Loy, Spencer Tracy—Pictures of this type do big business. Would consider this one of the big pictures of the year.—E. C. Armold, Avon Theatre, Hillsboro, Kansas. Small town patronage.

TEST PILOT: Clark Gable, Myrna Loy, Spencer Tracy—Excellent production that pleased generally and took in the biggest gross in months. Played June 12.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

TEST PILOT: Clark Gable, Myrna Loy, Spencer Tracy—Metro comes through again. Although this picture is several months old, it still can mean money for any box office at any theatre, if exploited correctly. Run an airplane contest, tie in with your local post-office, have an advance teaser campaign. Give this one all you've got, and the picture won't fail you but should come through with flying colors. Running time, 119 minutes. Played July 8-9.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town patronage.

YANK AT OXFORD, A: Robert Taylor, Maureen O'Sullivan—We did not do a very good business on this Robert Taylor special.—E. C. Armold, Avon Theatre, Hillsboro, Kansas. Small town patronage.

Paramount

DANGEROUS TO KNOW: Akim Tamiroff, Anna May Wong, Gail Patrick—Anna May Wong is no drawing card for us. It seems that our patrons don't care for these Chinese actresses. Running time, 65 minutes.—P. G. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

DANGEROUS TO KNOW: Anna May Wong, Akim Tamiroff—Very weak and uninteresting. Might be all right as number three on a triple feature bill. Doesn't mean a thing at the box office. This picture was probably produced on an extremely low budget and sure shows it. Played June 29.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

DOCTOR RHYTHM: Bing Crosby, Beatrice Lillie, Mary Carlisle—The worst piece of junk that Paramount has put out this season. We played it on percentage and the checker stayed for one day only. The customers sense such stuff and stay away. I do not think that it compared to "College Swing" for snap and zip although some of the boys liked it better. Better send Lillie back to England. She is no draw for us in her quaint sense of humor. Running time, 80 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

DOCTOR RHYTHM: Bing Crosby, Mary Carlisle—Bing sings acceptably and a fair story with the much touted Beatrice Lillie doing her stuff. It's okay for a weekend but it did only average business. I can't help but think that the radio stars are slipping. There is no furor about Burns and Allen any more. That shows in the grosses that they are not doing as they did when they were first new on the radio. I don't think their constant appearance night after night helps them one iota in the theatre game.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind.

EVERY DAY'S A HOLIDAY: Mae West, Edmund Lowe—One of the few Paramount pictures that was liked. Mae West good, but not too often. Running time, 80 minutes. Played June 24-25-26.—O. W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D.

HEART OF ARIZONA: William Boyd, Natalie Moorhead—Very good western. Running time, 70 minutes.—P. G. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

HER JUNGLE LOVE: Dorothy Lamour, Ray Milland, Lynne Overman, Dorothy Howe—Very good picture that pleased the majority and did quite well at the box office considering the very hot weather. Running time, 78 minutes.—P. G. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

PRISON FARM: Lloyd Nolan, Shirley Temple—Little too rough, but held interest. Would class as good program picture.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

TIP-OFF GIRLS: Lloyd Nolan, Mary Carlisle—Another class Z-minus picture to no business. No wonder the show business is in the dumps. Played June 23.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

Republic

CALL OF THE YUKON: Beverly Roberts, Richard Arlen—Good action picture that pleased. Business above average.—E. C. Armold, Avon Theatre, Hillsboro, Kan. Small town patronage.

OUTLAWS OF SONORA: Bob Livingston, Ray Corrigan, Max Terhune—A dandy western. These Three Mesquiteers are second only to Gene Autry in drawing power for the weekend and they always please the western fans. I still insist, however, that a mistake was made when Syd Saylor was not included in these pictures because they need comedy and he can produce it. Running time, 62 minutes. Played July 1-2.—R. V. Rule, Gym Theatre, Beaverton, Mich. Small town and country patronage.

RKO Radio

BRINGING UP BABY: Katharine Hepburn, Cary Grant—One of the funniest comedies we have ever had in our house and it gave excellent satisfaction to better than average attendance. Played July 6-7.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

GO CHASE YOURSELF: Joe Penner, Lucille Ball—A cheap picture in every way. They spent no money on the cast, and I am sure that none was spent on the story, for there was none. It is a glorious two-reel comedy, and boy, if you had one in two reels, you would be patting yourself on the back, but for a feature, it is nix. I know that the reaction of the adults was that if they never saw Joe Penner again, that would be too soon. With the kids it was another story. What with cutting your seats, and the general wear and tear, we are for them anyway, but we don't want infantile entertainment in large doses for the adults. Just to get the kids in.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind.

SNOW WHITE AND THE SEVEN DWARFS: Walt Disney—Got a good date for a small town from RKO, June 4, 5, 6, and 7 and did a very nice business considering business is poor, generally speaking. It's a picture that will go out and do business for anyone any place. Outstanding production. It will make you some money. Played June 4-5-6-7.—J. K. Burgess, Iris Theatre, Velva, N. D.

SNOW WHITE AND THE SEVEN DWARFS: Walt Disney—The greatest single attraction ever to play this town. Broke all existing records and lived up to its reputation of pleasing 100 per cent. Held over extra time. Running time, 85 minutes.—H. F. Parker, Yarmouth Theatre and Amusement Co., Ltd., Yarmouth, N. S., Canada.

Twentieth Century-Fox

CHECKERS: Jane Withers, Stuart Erwin—Thoroughly enjoyed by a little better than average business. Jane Withers is justifiably popular here. Played June 29-30.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus N. Y. Family patronage.

FOUR MEN AND A PRAYER: Loretta Young, David Niven, George Sanders, Richard Greene, William Henry—Very good picture of the more serious type. This deserved the numerous stars given it by reviewers. Four devoted sons scatter to the four corners of the earth to clear the name of their father, who has been court martialed and is said to be a suicide.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

MR. MOTO TAKES A CHANCE: Peter Lorre, Rochelle Hudson—It's okay for the co-feature on a big double feature program. Don't play it for more than one day, single feature houses. Run a business builder with it, if you use them during the week. Not a drawing card by any means, so don't depend upon it for the real do-ray-me. Running time, 65 minutes. Played July 7.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town patronage.

RAWHIDE: Smith Ballew, Evalyn Knapp—Very good western. They seemed to like Lou Gehrig. Evalyn Knapp as the heroine is a pretty weak sister. Running time, 59 minutes. Played June 29-30.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan.

RAWHIDE: Smith Ballew, Lou Gehrig—Very good for weekend. Business average.—Harland Rankin Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada.

TARZAN'S REVENGE: Glenn Morris, Eleanor Holm—In the previous Tarzans we played, Tarzan was no actor. In this one, neither Tarzan nor the heroine can act. Their performances are on par with the local high school amateurs. The picture is extremely hammy; direction is poor; plot poorly constructed and it is evident that very little money was spent on the picture. Still we did good business, due, no doubt, to the popularity of Tarzan with the kids. Played June 22.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

TRIP TO PARIS, A: Jed Prouty, Shirley Deane, Spring Byington, Russell Gleason—Entertaining program picture.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

WALKING DOWN BROADWAY: Claire Trevor, Michael Whalen—This was hardly the type of picture our Saturday night fans enjoy, but we had no walkouts. Business fair. Played July 9.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

WE'RE GOING TO BE RICH: Gracie Fields, Victor McLaglen—I didn't care for this one, nor did many of my patrons. Although we played to good business at an admission five cents higher than opposition who played a big percentage picture on the same day, I still would not recommend it to any other exhibitor with a clear conscience. It really isn't such a good picture, and the people won't thank you for it. Running time, 80 minutes. Played July 5-6.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town patronage.

United Artists

ADVENTURES OF TOM SAWYER: Tommy Kelly, Jackie Moran—Pleased the cash customers 100 per cent and brought many extra shekels into the cash register. Played July 1.—B. Hollenberk, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

FIRE OVER ENGLAND: Flora Robson, Laurence Olivier—The same old story. British pictures do not take here. We think a lot of England, but when it comes to her pictures, that's another story.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada.

GAIETY GIRLS, THE: Patricia Ellis, Jack Hulbert, Arthur Riscoe, Googie Withers—Another one of those pictures that didn't mean a thing at the box office. Running time, 73 minutes.—P. G. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

GOLDWYN FOLLIES: Adolphe Menjou, Andrea Leeds—Pretty fair musical. Charlie McCarthy was good. The Ritz Brothers fair. There was too much ballet dancing to suit our patrons. Just average at the box office. Played July 5.—B. Hollenberk, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

STELLA DALLAS: Barbara Stanwyck, John Boles—Good production, but no business. Played June 7.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

Universal

FORBIDDEN VALLEY: Noah Beery, Jr., Frances Robinson—Pretty good western. Running time, 67 minutes.—P. G. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

IDOL OF THE CROWDS: John Wayne, Sheila Bromley—Another old one that was well liked by the action fans. Okay for double features. Running time, 60 minutes. Played July 8-9.—R. V. Rule, Gym Theatre, Beaverton, Mich. Small town and country patronage.

LET THEM LIVE: Nan Grey, John Howard—A preachment as well as entertainment. I picked this up old, but it pleased and did as well as the new ones. We like Nan Grey and we would like to see Howard in more pictures. Running time, 68 minutes. Played June 25-26.—R. V. Rule, Gym Theatre, Beaverton, Mich. Small town and country patronage.

ROAD BACK, THE: Richard Cromwell, John King—A really great show. Well received by our patrons. Should do business in any spot. A picture that sends you home thinking. Played May 22-23-24.—J. K. Burgess, Iris Theatre, Velva, N. D.

Warner Brothers

HE COULDN'T SAY NO: Frank McHugh, Jane Wyman—No reason for making it and it should have been paid for and shelved. Running time, 57 minutes—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

JEZEBEL: Bette Davis, George Brent, Henry Fonda, Margaret Lindsay—Very good, but a class picture that did not draw at the box office. Running time, 104 minutes.—P. G. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

PENROD AND HIS TWIN BROTHER: Billy and Bobby Mauch, Frank Craven, Spring Byington—Good program picture. This certainly brought out the children and also pleased the adults. Running time, 65 minutes.—P. G. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

GOLF MAGIC: New World of Sport Series—Interesting for golfers. We have two players in Tilbury.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada.

LITTLE JACK HORNER: Strange As It May Seem—Interesting and instructive.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada.

LOONY BALLOONISTS: Scrappy Cartoons—Audience took to this one. Enjoyed it very much.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada.

SAILOR MAID: Broadway Comedies—Fine slapstick. Okay, Columbia.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada.

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS NO. 5: All acceptable here.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada.

Educational

SING FOR SWEETIE: Two-Reel Comedies—This is an entertaining short musical comedy that does not get too dull. It's a nice short, and while nothing to get excited about, it should please all.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

CANNED FISHING: Our Gang Comedy—Swell entertainment for the kiddies, and not too boring for the older people. Although nothing like the old Mack Sennett Our Gang Comedies, it is so far above some of the product that it is distributed under the name of short subjects, that any exhibitor should be fairly well content with same. Running time, 10 minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y.

CAPTAIN KIDD'S TREASURE: Historical Mystery—Very good. This series should be tops with anyone's shorts of the season. We are asked when the next one will be shown. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind.

CLEANING HOUSE: Captain and the Kids—A very good cartoon featuring the famous comic strip stars. It is fast moving with plenty of laughs, and should find a place on every theatreman's program. Your patrons are sure to like this one.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y.

COUNTY HOSPITAL (Reissue): Laurel and Hardy—Still the ace comedians of the screen. A worthwhile reissue.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada.

GLIMPSES OF AUSTRIA: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—Very good. In color and very interesting, especially when world wide attention is being given Austria under her new rule. This would be a box office natural for an extra added attraction if exploited correctly. Running time, nine minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

JIMMY FIDLER'S PERSONALITY PARADE: Special—An interesting subject for those old enough to remember the old-timers, but he left out a number of the most popular stars.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich.

JIMMY FIDLER'S PERSONALITY PARADE: Special—I say now what I said when I was manager of the Brandon Theatre in Brandon, Vermont. A wonderful short subject, plus a glorious tribute to old and former actors and actresses. This short should be played some time or another by every exhibitor in the United States, in my opinion. I recommend this "Personality Parade" most highly and say to Jimmy Fidler, may you live to produce a second installment of your personality parade. Give that a thought, Jimmy; your first issue was such a success you should put out another. What say? Running time, 20 minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y.

LAND OF INCAS: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—A very good travel talk. Thanks, Jimmy, you are the tops in this line of shorts. The color is wonderful and the subject very interesting and well told. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind.

NEWS OF THE DAY: Good. Play this regularly and your patrons are bound to be pleased. Running time, nine minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

NIGHT AT THE MOVIES, A: Robert Benchley—Excellent. The best Benchley we have played. Usually his work is a little over the heads of our small town audiences but they took to this one like ducks take to water. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

OUR GANG FOLLIES OF 1938: Musical Comedies—A very good musical. Has Our Gang staging a musical. Lots of laughs. Running time, 18 minutes.—Cecil Ward, Stone Theatre, Bassett, Va. Small town and factory patronage.

RED, WHITE AND BLUE CHAMPIONS: Grantland Rice Sportlights—Very interesting swimming short, showing future champions in the Canal Zone. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Peynesville, Minn.

STRIKE! Grandland Rice Sportlights—Very good fishing reel that went over big here in this lake region. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn.

SURF HEROES: Pete Smith Specialties—Good and interesting. My patrons enjoy a reel like this, so they get 'em. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn.

WHAT PRICE SAFETY: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—One of the best short subject series on the market today. They are all interesting and hold the audience attention better than any two reel short we have. Running time, 20 minutes.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

Paramount

BETTY BOOP CARTOON: A good short is a Betty Boop short. I have forgotten the exact name of this particular Betty Boop, so at this time will say that any exhibitor may be sure of satisfied patrons if he shows Betty Boop.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y.

BIG CHIEF UGH-AMUGH-UGH: Popeye the Sailor—This was one of the first popular cartoons, and I believe today ranks second most popular of all cartoons. Very interesting, speedy, with plenty of laughs. If you play Paramount product be sure to book the entire Popeye series.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y.

CRIME FIGHTERS: Paragraphics—An excellent paragraphic that again shows "Crime Does Not Pay." Very educational and enjoyable. This company is the most consistent in shorts that we have this season. Running time, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind.

HOUSE BUILDER-UPPER, THE: Popeye the Sailor—Popeye used to be as big a draw here as the feature, but now the kids don't even seem to care to see him. This short wasn't bad, but not up to average. Running time, 7 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn.

HUNKY AND SPUNKY: Color Classics—Just a fair cartoon. Coloring was excellent and that is about all we can say for it. Fleisher has gone into second dimension on his work that sooner or later the balance of the cartoonists will copy. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Iigonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

JUNGLE GLIMPSES: Paragraphics—Good. Running time, nine minutes.—P. G. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

LISTEN TO LUCAS: Clyde Lucas—Another excellent headliner by Paramount. Put it in with a heavy feature and listen to the raves by the audience. We have not had a bad headliner from this producer in the past two seasons. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Inc.

FOUR JOIN RANKS OF CONTRIBUTORS

Four exhibitors have joined those reporting to the What the Picture Did for Me Department. They are:

A. C. ARNOLD, Avon Theatre, Hillsboro, Kans.

J. F. BURGESS, Isis Theatre, Velva, N. D.

O. W. CHAPEK, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D.

H. F. PARKER, Capitol Theatre, Yarmouth, Nova Scotia, Canada.

Read these exhibitors' reports in these columns this week.

PARAMOUNT PICTORIAL: I didn't care for this one particularly nor did my audience. I suppose they are all right in their place but personally I wouldn't advise any manager to book it in and expect results from it.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

PARAMOUNT PICTORIAL, NO. 8: I wonder how much more of these lastex bathing suits we are going to see this season. Every company in the business must have been to that style show to get their hand in the pie. The dog sequence was the only good part of the pictorial. Poor. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

TEARS OF AN ONION: Color Classics—A very good cartoon in color, different from the usual run and should make an attractive short subject that the exhibitor would be proud to show in any type of theatre. Running time, nine minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

RKO Radio

MARCH OF TIME: These subjects are a pain in the neck. They are interesting, but they do not fit into any program and do not sell any tickets.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich.

MARCH OF TIME: No. 9—I could play these every day of the week and the crowd would eat them up as fast as I could get them. Although they were a very hard subject to exploit at first, now all you have to say is "March of Time" tonight and that is all that is necessary. Running time, 21 minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash.

QUINTUPLAND: Dionne Quintuplets—This proved an acceptable short to run with "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs."—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich.

QUINTUPLAND: Dionne Quintuplets—Played this with "Swing Your Lady" and business was a little above the average. Played June 5-6.—Bill Simon, Rialto Theatre, Saguache, Col. Rural and small town patronage.

RHYTHM IN A NIGHT COURT: Nu-Atlas Productions—No good. Running time, 9 minutes.—R. W. Crickmore. Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash.

Twentieth Century-Fox

MOVIETONE NEWS: This is a fine newsreel, with one exception, the ubiquitous Roosevelts. We have had the President going fishing, son James going places, President Roosevelt talking on recovery, John's wedding, the First Lady dancing the square dance and last and worst, the President telling how he slept through the graduation exercises at Annapolis. If I had slept through anything as important as that. I would have said the light hurt my eyes. Probably this won't get published, but "Them's my sentiments."—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan.

Vitaphone

AT THE RACES: "Charlie McCarthy," Edgar Bergen—Good. Running time, nine minutes.—P. G. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

PORKY'S HERO AGENCY: Looney Tunes—This series can not be beat. Running time, 9 minutes.—R. W. Crickmore. Rainbow Theatre. Newport. Wash.

Miscellaneous

LOUIS-SCHMELING FIGHT: The most sensational flop of the year. Too short and would not pay express on this film to play it over. Kept more people away from the theatre than it drew in.—E. C. Armold, Avon Theatre, Hillsboro, Kan. Small town patronage.

Republic

LONE RANGER, THE: Lee Powell, Herman Brix—We are now showing Chapter seven and they like it. We are showing an increase of about 25 per cent business for the same dates last year. We are saving money, too, because by adding two shorts we have entirely eliminated the double feature. Running time, 16 minutes for Chapter seven.—R. V. Rule, Gym Theatre, Beaverton, Mich. A conversation on THIS BUSINESS OF CHECKING

AN eminent exhibitor—a man you probably know—recently paid a visit to our New York offices. When the matter at hand was settled, he arose to go.

"Just a moment," we said. "Now that you're here, would you like to have a look around?"

He paused, then sat down. "There's a couple of things I'd like to know," he admitted.

"Fire away," we invited.

"All right, I will. You might think me pretty blunt, but I'm curious. Ever since Ross Federal first checked my houses years ago, I've wondered about the outfit and this business of checking. What's it all about, anyway?"

An odd question from a man who grew up in the show business?

We thought not. You can never know too much about the factors of your business—and checking is an important factor in the motion picture industry.

So the exhibitor and a number of us lit up cigars and settled down to a discussion of "this business of checking." Would you like to listen in? The conversation should interest you!

"LOOK," said our visitor, "we exhibitors have certain ideas about checking. Give it to me straight—why should we be checked? Isn't it a reflection on our honesty?"

"Let's answer the first question first," we replied. "And let's dig into the fundamentals. Just so long as there are percentage pictures, there must be a box office check on those pictures. You have the theatre, the distributor has the product. Neither is valuable without the other. You are partners in business. Therefore, the fairest possible system is profit-sharing—which, if you analyze it, is the basis of all partnerships. Checking is a vital part of that percentage, or profit-sharing, system."

"Why? Why a vital part?"

"Here's the answer. You know the show business. You know that the difference between red and black ink exists at the box office. The public's the judge. To satisfy the public, the producer invests a whale of a lot of money in big pictures. And he's got to protect that investment! The picture that runs at your theatre is a valuable piece of property requiring the presence of a business representative. Actually, the checker is the bona fide representative of the distributor and his job is to protect his client's investment.

"Now," we continued, "the film company must get its rightful share of the box office receipts. That's good business, isn't it? The corner grocery store has a cash register, the theatre has a ticket machine. Does that mean that all grocery clerks and theatre cashiers are dishonest? Of course not! Nor does the presence of Ross Federal reflect on the integrity of any exhibitor. Ross Federal is the distributor's cash register and ticket machine—an impartial, impersonal third party."

"Okay, answer this one." The exhibitor grinned. "Isn't it more expensive for the film companies, and thus for us, to have a third party like Ross Federal doing the checking? You make a profit, don't you?"

"Naturally, we make a profit!" came our reply. "A legitimate profit and no more. In fact, we slashed our rates several times since we started eight years ago—voluntarily. That saving is passed on to you."

We continued: That's not the only saving, either. Think back to the time when there was no Ross Federal. Checking was expensive. Men were traveled long distances, put up in good hotels, etc. It amounted to a pretty penny. That's all done away with nowadays. If the distributor wants to check your house, our man is right in your locality. He hops in his car—we're 92% motorized—and drives a few miles to your theatre. He doesn't go to a hotel after the show, but drives home."

"HOW did you fellows get in business, anyway?" the exhibitor asked. "Some of us would like to know what your relationship with the distributor is."

"That's a fair question," we answered. Ross Federal is privately owned, privately operated. Here's how we started.

"In 1930, the film companies came to the realization that something had to be done about checking. It was costly and disorganized. So they got together and devised some plans, even trying to use the services of existing organizations in other lines of work. The experiments didn't pan out. The irregular hours couldn't be fitted into ordinary business schedules. Also, you really have to know the show business to work in it.

"While this was going on, Harry Ross established his own checking service, with headquarters in Chicago and branch offices in Milwaukee, Indianapolis and Detroit. He felt he would be able to solve the checking problem, having been both an exhibitor and distributor. He resigned his position as Paramount district manager after a 14-year affiliation and incorporated Ross Federal Service, Inc., in April, 1930.

"Highly interested, executives of all the film companies gathered at the Union League Club, New York, in July of that year. Mr. Ross was asked to present his plan, which he did. It provided for the consolidation of all checking activities in one trained service organization, with the service available to all. The plan was approved on the spot and Ross Federal became nationwide."

The exhibitor leaned forward. "'Available to all,'" he repeated. "To exhibitors, too?"

"Sure. We have done work for many exhibitors, both in theatre and research lines. Circuits have us check for them frequently."

"What's this research you mention?"

"Ross Federal does a lot of that. We make all kinds of surveys, not only for film people, but also for manufacturers, newspapers, radio stations, advertising agencies, etc. We study markets, find out what people like and don't like in products, measure advertising, and so on."

"What kind of research can exhibitors possibly use?" our visitor inquired doubtfully.

"Here's an example. An exhibitor in Pennsylvania had us check into his newspaper advertising. He was using three papers. We found that his patrons primarily read one paper, so he cut down on the other two. It saved him considerable money. His box office remained as high as ever, so he was actually increasing his profits. Exhibitors are becoming more research-minded every day, showing an increasing interest in finding out what their patrons want and how they act."

"ONE more question," said the exhibitor, "Just as a matter of curiosity, what is your policy toward exhibitors?"

"Just the same as yours would be if you were in our position," we responded. "It is to the advantage of all parties—distributor, exhibitor and ourselves—to be as businesslike and cooperative as possible. We have a job to do. We'll do it despite opposition and difficulties. But we prefer to work, naturally, in a pleasant atmosphere of cooperation.

"That is why Ross Federal goes out of the way to help exhibitors in their work. Just so long as it does not interfere with our own duties, of course. Our men take care of the door, substitute as cashiers, etc. Many a time we have run a theatre when the manager is taken ill or some emergency arises.

"It's all in a day's work. We feel that in the past eight years we have done a lot to clear up differences between branches of the industry. And this we know, the motion picture industry is a more closely knit group than most people in it realize.

"You know," said the visiting exhibitor as the conversation drew to an end, "this little talk has given me some new angles on checking. The trouble with you fellows is that you have never told exhibitors where you stood."

"Maybe you're right," we admitted. "What do you propose?"

"It's simple," he replied. "Just tell them what you've told me."

And so we have.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

FORWARD MARCH

Since the inception of the Quigley Awards, many new studio doors have been opened wider in a warmer welcome to showmanship. The past years have seen a keener interest in production circles, a quicker willingness to study the advantages of incorporating more boxoffice into pictures.

Undoubtedly, the annual Quigley Grand Awards presentations in Hollywood have had to do with it. More so, in the recent announcement of Jules Seltzer's appointment to the post of advertising manager in the Hal Roach studios, stemming from a meeting with Mr. Roach and production chief, Milton Bren, at the 1937 Grand Awards luncheon, in May.

From the beginning, the Awards have never faltered in their march forward to spotlight the efforts of the man in the field and, through his successes, to impress upon the industry the necessity of quick recognition of these endeavors. The selection of the 1937 Bronze Grand Award winner for this important studio position is another way of saying the Competitions continue to do the job for which they were intended.

"THE MORE, THE BETTER"

The virtues and weaknesses of circus-type exploitation continue to concern the members as communications to this department make known what the boys in the field have to say on the subject. Representative of the many in favor of circusing, and vigorously, is John Burhorn, manager, Gayety Theatre, South Chicago, who says it as follows:

"A combination of circumstances have kept people away from the boxoffice and out of the lobby where many of us theatre managers have been putting on exploitation stunts for our patrons to notice and admire. So the problem for the wide-awake manager it to move his exploitation into the streets, the highways and byways, in order that people may become conscious again that there is something doing at the theatre.

"That is the reason why circus methods are needed especially at this time. For the past 25 weeks, we have used one exploitation each week and in every instance on the outside of the theatre, a good many of them far from our regular location. Wherever people congregate that's where we try to sell our seats. The only medicine for the boxoffice, as far as we are concerned, is outdoor ballyhoo, the more startling and circus-like, the better."

In other words, if they won't come in by themselves, then it's up to the theatreman to go out and get 'em, says Burhorn, in prescribing barrages of Big Top ammunition to reduce boxoffice resistance. Wisely, the Round Tabler, who has been around long enough to know, sees no reason to change the mode of attack upon which showbusiness was built and, despite its critics, continues to flourish.

"To serve patrons a screen of make-believe under artificial light under manufactured weather, is not offering competition to the Great Outdoors. You have served that fare all winter, and they loved it. But it just won't do for July and August. Your theatre must breathe freshness, coolness and cleanliness, of course, but in addition, every member of the house staff, dressed in cool attire must appear to be enjoying every minute of it all; just awaiting the visit of each individual guest and finding it a pleasure to serve."—SID HOLLAND, CITY MANAGER, ELKHART AMUSEMENT CORP., ELKHART, IND.

The Warner laddies went completely circus last week with a stage-coach bally on Broadway in the interests of "Cowboy From Brooklyn" at the New York Strand. Round Tablers are now cocking an ear to learn whether or not the front-of-the-house staff at the New York Paramount will break out in chaps, spurs and suchforth, on behalf of the coming date for "The Texans."

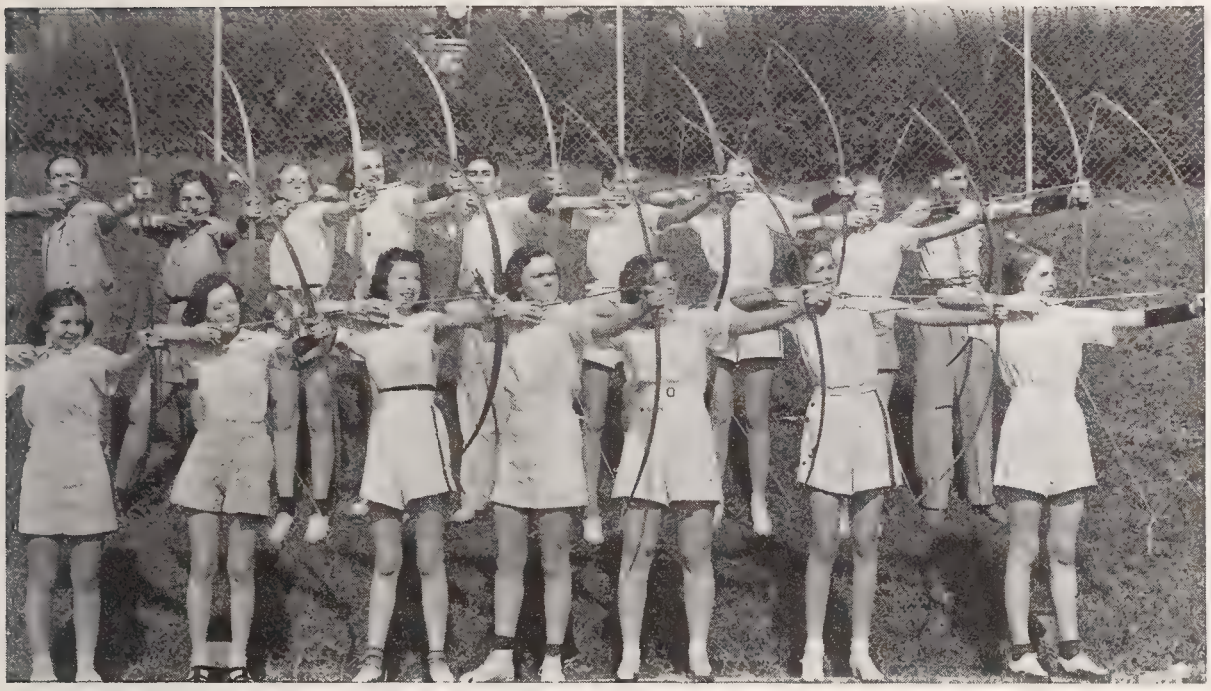
Round Table In Pictures

The bench shown above is occupied by, left to right, Manager Charlie Bierbauer and his assistant Nick Todorov of the Wilmer and Vincent Colonial Theatre, Allentown, Pa. Bench was planted in front of house as part of their "Gold Diggers" date. Also planted in lobby was desk on which was large album in which patrons were invited to sign their names, book later to be mailed to the stars in Hollywood.

For his "Old Chicago" date at the Sooner, Norman, Okla., Lew Chatham arranged effective tieup with local fire department. Two alarms were turned in within five minutes of each other and under supervision of city firemen, railroad flares were arranged in back of smoke screen atop theatre roof. Public address system was connected across street over which announcements were made as firemen hooked up large hose and chemical hose and ladders to roof. Stunt was advertised, papers carrying stories ahead and after run.



Jack Lexey, Broadway Theatre, Philadelphia for "Hold That Kiss" constructed this machine shown at left. An ampmeter was used as the dial and was operated by doorman standing nearby pushing button. Unless we're mistaken, that's Jack himself standing next to the machine.

Division Manager Harry F. Shaw, Loew-Poli New England theatres, entered the float shown at left at the recent celebration of New Haven's 300th anniversary. Advertising head Erle Wright is credited with construction of the float, which was entered in the four-hour parade, which featured papier maché MGM Leos and attractive girls.

Tying in with the spaghetti eating sequence in "Marco Polo," Manager Bill Smith, before leaving the Texas, Denton, Tex., for the Capitol, Amarillo, planted a spaghetti eating contest for local kids. Table was set up in front of theatre where the contestants did their stuff while crowds gathered to watch the performance. Promoted prizes were awarded and local dailies picked up the stunt for stories.

Ruth Tucker, Public Relations Director, Arkansas Amusement Corp., Litle Rock, Ark., forwards photo shown at left in connection with their opening of "Robin Hood" at the Capitol Theatre there. Night ahead of opening an archery tournament was held in downtown parking lot. 35 archers competed, including members of the Little Rock Archery Club and the archery club of the high schools and girl scouts. Contestants competed for trophy, and arrows; each archer in the younger groups receiving guest tickets to the show.

During a recent strawberry festival in Buckhannon, West Va., Garland West, Colonial Theatre entered this attractive float in street parade to sell his "Old Chicago" date. Concealed inside was a public address system, boy on float distributing heralds.

Wayne Goodwin, Butler Theatre, Butler, Indiana, for "Merrily We Live" dug down into the bag and came up with an old reliable. "Headless" man was sent out two days ahead of opening in outfit constructed by the theatreman, carrying copy reading: "I laughed my head off at," etc., etc.

SHOWMEN'S LOBBY LAFFS

This cartoon was created by J. Howard Thompson, Huntington, West Virginia.

PROSPECTIVE PATRON: "I'LL BE DAD-BURNED IF I'LL PAY SUCH PRICES."

Harmonica Contest Held for "Rascals"

Paul Townsend, manager of the Liberty Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla., tied up with local radio station KOCY in putting on a week-long harmonica jamboree in which every youngster was invited to participate in connection with the showing "Rascals," featuring Borrah Minnevitch and his rascals.

Preliminary contests were held from 7:45 to 8 P. M. on the Liberty stage Monday through Friday nights. The five winners competed in the finals on the stage Saturday night and were presented their prizes. Local newspapers contributed space in publicity stories and the radio station broadcast the elimination contests and finals from the stage of the theatre each night, giving mention of the picture playing at the Liberty in connection with the contest.

"BEAT THE HEAT"

Teaser Endorsement Ads

Reported as the first time such a stunt was pulled in Devils Lake, N. D., was the series of institutional ads run by Art Ableson, at the Lake Theatre for "Old Chicago." Six days ahead of run, endorsement ads were carried in dailies which included photo of and statement from the manager, assistant, usher, projectionist, doorman and cashier. Ableson reports the series created plenty of favorable comment.

Army Cooperates with Sprowl on "Yellow Jack"

Norman Sprowl, Utah Theatre, Salt Lake City, Utah, for "Yellow Jack" secured through the cooperation of the Commanding officer at Fort Douglas, a detail of 150 men, which, accompanied by a band, marched from their post to theatre opening night. Advance lobby display was set up by the army men, including pup tents, cots, mess kits, sidearms, etc. A recruiting station was also set up in front of theatre in addition to army recruiting service boards.

Tieup was also effected with Boy Scouts whereby they gave a stage performance for two days ahead of opening singing old time camp songs. Scouts set up a first aid station in lobby during run, service staff wore tropical whites during engagement and front was dressed in keeping.

"BEAT THE HEAT"

Field Runs "Joy" Contest

"What joy are you getting out of life?" was the basis of an essay contest planted in local daily by John P. Field, as part of his "Joy of Living" date at the Stratford Theatre, Chicago. Guest tickets were presented to those submitting the best letters. Stills were planted in various furniture stores and ladies' apparel windows and table was set up in lobby with two bottles of champagne. Card read as follows: "A toast to the Joy of Living."

Society Tiein Aids 'Algiers' Campaign For New York Date

Topping the campaign on "Algiers" at the Radio City Music Hall was charity tie-in for a "Night in Algiers" supper dance held at smart night club. Socialites who cooperated helped to land the party and picture on all the society pages.

Interest of youthful New Yorkers was sought through the creation of a new dance craze called "The Algiers" by the Arthur Murray studios and was a combination of the shag and tango. Dance was introduced at a special "Algiers" night at leading hotel with team from the studios instructing the patrons in its steps. Candid camera shots of the dancers and patrons trying to master the dance provided a ready avenue of publicity for the picture.

To gain sustained publicity well in advance of opening, a contest was arranged with the New York Journal-American, distinguished by the angle that the contestant was obliged to see the picture to enter. Each entrant was asked to submit a 200-word review of the film, with the winner receiving all-expense round trip to Paris on the French liner Il de France and a two-week stay in Paris at the Hotel Plaza Athenee. Secondary prizes in the contest amounted to $100. In pushing the contest, the newspaper brought a daily story and picture to its 650,000 readers for two weeks in advance of opening.

Numerous were the tieups effected, including windows and paid advertising arranged with chain drug stores linking Sigrid Gurie with their cosmetic selections; Wurlitzer emphasizing their pianos through the use of the star as a user; bus company joined in the campaign with ads and displays at their terminals, using the catchline "See Algiers—travel to romantic places," and various other slants in addition to the distribution of orchids to a number of women at top-flight night clubs, each bloom carrying a tag announcing the picture's opening at the Music Hall.

"BEAT THE HEAT"

Schools Aid On "Robin Hood" Date

Starting his "Robin Hood" campaign six weeks ahead of opening, R. C. Glasmann, manager of the Orpheum Theatre, Ogden, Utah secured the complete cooperation of the superintendents of city and county schools and distributed 500 crossword puzzle blanks to students in both junior and senior high school English classes and in English department of the college. Entire staff wore "Robin Hood" hats ahead and during run imprinted bookmarks were distributed at all libraries, and book tieups were arranged with cooperating stores.

Archery contest sponsored by the theatre was broadcast nationally over NBC and KLO directly from City Hall Park, located directly across from the theatre. Advance stories and art were carried in leading newspapers, sneak preview was held, special art pieces were designed for lobby display and numerous window displays were promoted.

Varied Slants Aid 'Wonderful Time'

Capitalizing on the vacation and summer-report theme of "Having Wonderful Time," Norman Pyle, assisting Gus Lampe of Keith's, Syracuse arranged an eye-filling float which told the town about the production. Built to represent a vacation scene, it carried 11 beautiful girls garbed in costumes of the various sports common to resort committees. Girls tossed candy kisses; copy attached to truck read "Have a kiss and enjoy a swell time at," etc., etc. Several prominent hotels in the resort section of New York State mailed thousands of postcards to Syracuse residents with tiein copy.

At the Paramount in Springfield, Mass., Manager Harry Storin effected a three-way tieup with a large furniture store, summer camp and newspaper. A popular June bride and groom were selected and presented with promoted $1,000 worth of furniture, and all expense honeymoon trip to nearby resort.

Another outstanding campaign was that engineered by Ed Miller, manager of Warners' Hippodrome and publicist Manny Pearlstein highlight of which was a contest sponsored by the Cleveland Press. Contestants submitted letters answering the question, "What Is Your Idea of Having Wonderful Time?" Winner received five-day, all-expense trip to Alexandria Bay and several incidental promoted prizes. Cleveland Press printed a four-page leaflet with art sketches of vacationists tying in with the film and building up the contest.

At Davenport, Ia., Glenn Caldwell's campaign at the Orpheum included a vacation trip to St. Paul for the winning couple in a photographic contest. The Davenport Times ran photos of couples or individuals who thought they were "Having Wonderful Time," each photo with a humorous caption. Tied into the campaign besides the newspaper were a camera store, hotel and transportation lines. Photos showed spooners in a car, couples or individuals depositing money at a bank, persons at soda fountains, etc.

"BEAT THE HEAT"

Warners Plant Contest On "Four's a Crowd"

Because of the important role which a large toy train layout plays in the Warner production "Four's a Crowd," a tieup has been concluded with the Lionel Corporation, manufacturers of miniature railways, which will result in an unusual amount of publicity and advertising on the film.

The Lionel Corporation will take ads in Boys' Life Magazine simultaneously with the release of the film plugging the feature and its stars, Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Rosalind Russell and Patric Knowles. The magazine has a circulation of nearly 300,000. In addition a contest to name a toy locomotive is being run in conjunction with Scouting, the official Boy Scout publication, reaching a total of 30,000 scoutmasters. The news of this contest will be passed on to more than 1,250,000 Boy Scouts.

The Lionel Corporation is also offering prizes to exhibitors for originality of lobby displays with toy trains, the company having made available toy train setups to the theatres at cost price.

July Contest

From date of this issue, there remains just one week to put over campaigns to be entered in the July Contest, the prizes for which are to be six all-expense one-week trips to New York, given by the six participating companies, each company offering one trip for the best campaign or campaigns on that company's pictures selected for the Contest as here noted:

Paramount: "Tropic Holiday" and "Professor Beware".

Twentieth Century-Fox: "I'd Give a Million" and "Always Goodbye".

Warner Brothers: "Cowboy from Brooklyn".

United Artists: "Algiers".

RKO Radio: "Having Wonderful Time".

Monogram: "Romance of the Limberlost".

Theatremen playing any of the above pictures between the first and last days of July are eligible to compete. Campaigns on one or more pictures may be entered and these may include dates starting in June and running into July; dates starting in July and running into August. Proof of everything listed must accompany entry.

Deadline for all pictures with the exception of the Warner entry, as noted, is August 13th. Because of a realignment of releases, deadline for "Cowboy from Brooklyn" entries is set forward to August 27th. Entrants are requested to keep this in mind so there will be no last-moment confusion over the two different deadlines.

Plans are now being made to have all the winners in New York at one time, if possible, and the tentative date selected is the last week of September. This time has been selected so as not to conflict with new season openings, etc., early in September, and to bring the winners to the Big Town when, we hope, the temperature will be a bit more acceptable.

See you in New York. —A-MIKE.

Golden Wedding Night Staged by Bryan

Generous was the newspaper publicity accorded William Bryan's "Golden Wedding Night" held in connection with "Girl of the Golden West" at the Manos Theatre, Vandergrift, Penna. Through stories run in paper, all couples who had celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary were invited to attend opening as guests of the management. Local automobile dealer provided cars for transportation of winners to theatre, florist provided corsages, cigars were available for the men and Bill reports that highlight of the affair was reaction from two couples who had never seen or heard a talking picture.

"BEAT THE HEAT"

"Sawyer" Ballyhoo

Three days ahead of opening of "Tom Sawyer" at the Prince Theatre, Ambridge, Pa., Manager Lige Brien planted a barrel in lobby of his theatre. Sound disc was placed atop with copy reading "For a barrel of fun, see," etc., etc. Brien reports the stunt as attracting attention.

Plants "Robin Hood" Archery Tournament

Intensive campaign, highlighted by an archery tournament, was put across by Manager R. C. Glasmann of the Orpheum theatre, Ogden, Utah, for "Robin Hood." The archery tourney was tied in with a national broadcast via NBC, with Station KLO serving as the local outlet. Stories on the stunt broke not only in the Ogden papers, but also in the Salt Lake City dailies.

Large cutout of Errol Flynn, taken from a 24-sheet, was stationed on the sidewalk in front of hotel and was also displayed during the tournament. As an advance plug, a special 48x72 art piece was placed in the Orpheum's lobby three weeks before the engagement started. Five hundred crossword puzzle contest blanks were distributed in city and county schools.

Ushers and cashiers wore green "Robin Hood" hats 10 days in advance of the opening. Daily spot announcements were made over KLO. Leaders in Mormon church activities were invited to a preview of "Robin Hood."

MORE CIRCUS-TYPE EXPLOITATIONS

Thacher's Horror Campaign Sells "Lady in the Morgue"

Having had more than a little success with other horror campaigns, Herb Thacher put together a hefty campaign along the same lines for "Lady in the Morgue," at the Hamilton, Lancaster, Pa., featuring a Midnite Spook Show. Illuminated three-sheet with plenty of shudder copy such as "Make up a party, if you come along, you'll be afraid to walk home," perked up interest. Ten days ahead, a transparent lobby display was constructed surrounded by "dare" copy inviting folks to turn on nearby light switch. Those who did viewed a tasty scene of a wax figure sufficiently cut up to suit the most sanguinary. Just before the feature went on, a ghost was floated over the audience, skull covered with illuminating paint and transported by the aid of an old fishing pole. "Hot" heralds also aided in bringing a lot of folks to the theatre.

The reaction was highly satisfactory, says Herb, especially since the picture is to be labelled a comedy rather than a shocker, with patrons reporting their pleasure both in the chills of the buildup and the laughs in the feature.

Ricord Promotes Ambulance For "Internes" Engagement

An ambulance gag on "Internes Can't Take Money" created plenty of excitement for W. C. "Rick" Ricord, Jr., at the Fox Westlake, Los Angeles. The stunt was lined up by having a girl "faint" on a very busy corner when an ambulance (promoted) would come tearing down the street with siren wide open and stop alongside the stricken dame. Ushers dressed as internes would then lift the girl into a stretcher and when the crowd was thickest would drop large window-shade banners carrying tiein picture copy. Since the picture was played about when sit-down strikes became popular, Rick had one of the ushers costumed as a hard-guy, sitting on a barrel next to the boxoffice with a sign reading: "Am on a sit-down strike and refuse to leave this theatre until I see," etc.

Travelling Gallows Stunt Sells "Noose" for Rosenfield

It was on a date for "The Noose" while with the Wometco circuit, that Joe Rosenfield, now at the Warner-Saxe, Milwaukee, worked a travelling gallows stunt. Joe secured a flat truck on which a regulation gallows was constructed, swung a dummy from the rope and for extra atmosphere had a prison guard, costumed and armed, on the truck.

One of the forerunners of the "moonshine" lobby was that created by Joe some time back wherein a confiscated still secured from the sheriff's office was displayed out front together with a lot of whisky jugs and two men made up as hillbillies.

In last week's issue was published a spread of circus-type exploitation ideas selected by members from their files as representative of effective exploitations of this nature that could stand repeating or adapting. The outlines set down below are similar slants from other Round Tablers who accepted invitations to contribute.

Various Exploitations Selected by Caldwell

It was a Marx Brothers campaign that Wally Caldwell forwarded, and among the gags used for the date at Loew's Valentine, Toledo, a lot of traffic was stopped by three life-size dummies of the Brothers secured to the street side of the theatre upright. Since the date was played in the summer, Wally used a man on the street dressed in fur overcoat, straw hat and summer shoes. carrying palm leaf sign reading "If you think I'm nuts, wait until you see," etc. Additionally, three ushers dressed as the Brothers clowned up and down the streets, distributed peanuts, and otherwise entertained.

For mobile street advertising, Caldwell has constructed a new type of Ford perambulator, 12 feet high by 20 feet in length, with space on sides for three's and sixes, and for copy, front and rear.

"Fargo" Stage Coach Run Detailed by Limerick

In nearby Fort Worth, George Limerick was able to borrow an old stage coach and for the date on "Wells Fargo" at the Yale, Cleburne, Texas, promoted locally the use of teams of mules and horses which were transported to Fort Worth from where the outfit was driven back to Cleburne day ahead of the picture's opening. Coach was colorfully bannered on all sides and specially made "baggage," including strong-box tied to the top and lettered. Driver was costumed and armed, as was the "express guard," played by R. D. Shaha, Limerick's assistant. The old stage route was followed to Cleburne, with stops made in all towns on the way in the trade area. School was dismissed in various stops so that the pupils could examine the coach, and when the bally neared home it was joined by an auto parade of locals.

In Cleburne proper the procession was halted for the chief of police to "arrest" Limerick for parading without a license. George was thrown into bastile long enough for pictures. The stunt was promoted by the Mayor and other prominents and came as a surprise to the Round Tabler but was good enough to land him front page notice on the stunt. Papers ran shots and stories of the arriving stage coach and the Fort Worth papers also noted the proceedings. Limerick reports lots of attention along the route with some 10,000 locals gathered in Cleburne to witness the finishing parade to the theatre.

"Catch the Firefly" Stunt Inaugurated by Dinerman

Representative of the citywide tieins executed in Cincinnati was the "catch the Firefly" stunt credited to E. V. "Dinny" Dinerman, RKO Midwest ad head, and tied in with the local Post on the date for "The Firefly." Stunt running five days, had girl making all parts of the town, announced ahead by the paper daily. Prize of $25 was offered the first day to the one who touched "the firefly" with a copy of the Post, saying "You are the Firefly from the Cincinnati Post and the Shubert Theatre." If the girl remained unidentified the second day, prize was raised to $50, to $75 the third day and $100 the fourth. Search ended on the day the picture opened.

The city was reported to have gone screwy over the tiein with everyone searching for the girl and a crowd estimated at 15,000 gathered around the day when she was identified, necessitating a police escort to get her away and an extra detachment to untangle the traffic.

"Pioneers' Day" Parade Favored by Dallas

An annual event, staged by David Dallas at the Grand, in Holdenville, Okla., is "Pioneers' Day," put on in conjunction with a picture stressing historical backgrounds. It takes the form of a parade and all-day pageant depicting the community's colorful beginnings and is tied in with the "Tree Blazers," an organization of locals who were residents of the city 40 years ago. All participants are in appropriate costume and the parade also includes relics, pioneer modes of transportation, etc. For the last celebration, the first white baby born in the community was featured in the line of march, as were representatives of various Indian tribes. Taking a leading part is the Indian girl serving as Princess of the Day and chosen previously in a contest put on at the theatre.

After the outside activities the program shifts to the theatre, where the highlights of the evening are an old-fiddlers' contest and an old time square-dance on the stage in which all the old settlers participate.

Burhorn Ties Parade To Civic Celebration

Tabbed high as one of his best promotions by John Burhorn, at the Gayety, Chicago, was idea planted on the occasion of elaborate civic celebration to mark the opening of a new street car line. A giant parade was featured in which many took part and viewed by thousands along the route. With a little fixing, Burhorn planted a theatre detachment right in the center of the procession, each member carrying picture banners. Street cars in the parade were also placarded.

Salvaging Store Displays For Theatre Lobby Showing

New England Member Creates Unusual Exhibits With Merchandise Display Material

by JACK A. SIMONS
Manager, Loew's Poli, Hartford, Conn.

How does Jack Simons construct those elaborate lobby displays of his without straining the ad budget? Among those curious to know was your Chairman who queried the Loewman and, by keeping at it, finally got the astute theatreman to "tell all" in the article that starts on this page. Another article from his pen on illusion-in-display will follow in a forthcoming issue.

"They have eyes but see not." It's been a long time since that was uttered but age has not dimmed nor tarnished the truth of its wisdom. Let's take for example an interesting experience of the writer while on a recent visit to New York. Our attention was attracted to a crowd in front of a store on Forty-Second street. Two colored urchins were in the midst of an exhibition of terpsichore.

The crowd, as though hypnotized by the spectacle, swayed in harmony, drinking in the scene with the zest of a first night. Here indeed was a veritable fairyland for the scientist in his endless search for the elusive riddle of mob psychology. What was this strange power invested in this pair of ragged ruffians? Experience taught us the answer. Standing in front of that store window made it unusual, unexpected, out of the ordinary. It was apart from the window rather than a part of it.

Credits Promotion

So, let us come back now to that sage's words of wisdom quoted above, "They have eyes and see not." Not a single person in that crowd tarried long enough after the "show" to even as much as take a quick glance into that window which furnished the back drop. If any single person in that crowd was approached and asked what was in that window, what lure the store had to offer, the chances are he would not know.

Those of us who have had long experience in theatre operation will readily understand that. Too, they will agree that if that dance team strutted its stuff inside the window instead of on the outside, the crowd would still have looked in and many would have observed the items displayed for sale.

And so we come to roost, bringing that problem right back to the theatre where its presence can be noted every day. All theatres have wall frames; all have shadow boxes and reader boards. But patrons, alas! "they see not." They know that all those gadgets were built for the very things that are put in them every week, year in and year out. So the best we get from patrons is an occasional glance. They buy a ticket and rush in, see the performance and rush out. Speed is all-important. Thanks to the trailer, they do know your next attraction unless they are asleep or too busy holding hands. So wall frames and shadow boxes and reader boards and the like may be just fixtures unless the theatreman does something more to bring deserved attention to these very necessary accessories.

Yet every theatre in the world pays dearly for those very things that to the patron seems just a part of the decorations. It was early in our experience that we detected this and it became then our problem to make them see what we had to sell. Naturally, the solution did not come over night and we still say not everyone sees our displays. Perhaps the majority miss them, but we do know that many do see them and that is our satisfaction. We found the rainbow's end in one word, promotion, the promotion of decorations and window displays that the various better class establishments all use. It may be a fancy head of a girl all decked out in a gala hair-dress, or it may be a full-length figure. Often it is a train, a horseshoe, a bolt of silk or velvet, any of these or a thousand and one other items, chrome shelving, flowers and what not.

Promote the item first and then make it blend in with some forthcoming attraction. You'll be not only surprised but amazed at the countless effects that can be worked out if you have a cellar full of just such items. And what a grand and glorious feeling it is when a single, solitary patron is observed by you standing in front of it and drinking in your message. Make close contact with the various window trimmers and department heads and when a window is changed borrow those pieces in which you saw potential value to your theatre.

Somewhere in your theatre you will find a place for it to go with some poster, a set of cut-out letters or a shadow box. And just because it is different, they will stop, they will look and they will read your message. If but one person has been impressed it may have created a potential customer. It has been our aim to focus special attention on some one strong forthcoming picture, making it stand out for as long as a month prior to playdate. Thus, it is firmly embedded by the time playdate rolls along. Fortunately, we are blessed with a miniature stage in a corner of our lobby that serves this purpose well. We are, however, thoroughly convinced that somewhere in the theatre, be it the lobby, foyer or mezzanine, there is an available spot for such a display. A little thought will soon reveal it and the possibilities it holds.

Shoe Display Aids "Maytime"

Recently we promoted a rather unusual and attractive shadow box that for weeks prior had rested in a downtown shoe store window. The box was divided into four separate compartments, each indirectly illuminated. Once this piece was safe in our fold we went into a huddle to figure out its adaptation to something we had to sell. The result was a re-creation in miniature of four separate scenes as culled from the stills for "Maytime." First we pasted the stills we intended using on a piece of beaver board and then cut out each particular item in the picture, such as the figures of Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy, benches, tables, etc. In the five-and-ten cent store we bought a few cents worth of tiny flowers, shrubs, toy furniture, etc. Thus we had our props, actors and all, and it was but an easy task to assemble them into "living scenes." In each of the four compartments of the promoted shadow box we had an idea that was different, something away off the beaten path for patrons to look at and they did. The result was it helped to inform the natives that "Maytime" was on the way here. We did have beautiful posters and art work on the picture, all of these in their customary places, but this promoted shadow box with the unusual idea it contained, stole the show and again satisfaction was ours.

The principal thought behind it all is that we espied this piece when it first went into that store window, displaying in each of the four compartments women's shoes and hosiery. To get this after it had served its purpose at the store that bought it became our goal. Nor did we have any idea of just what our own tie-up would be until it was safe in our cellar.

Once we saw a collection of very clever Walt Disney characters in a store. With no thought of an immediate tie-up in mind we promoted them nevertheless and stored them away for some day to come. Along came the Walt Disney Revue and we were set. Instead of the cut-out letters going up on our reader board, Mickey and his gang took their place. Yes, they stopped and looked for was this not out of the ordinary, cartoon figures up where letters should have been?

Repeats News Sign Idea

A shadow box affair attracted our attention in a store because it was animated, ad copy moving on a ribbon somewhat similar to the electric news flash sign in Times Square. This we must have. Not long after the store was through with it and before you could think twice it was enroute to its new home. Some home-made alterations, making that revolving ribbon sing forth our message, a still here and there, a dab of paint and in any man's language, we had something. For a theatre to have bought such an affair would have been well nigh out of the question. At another time we saw a beautiful shadow box in the shape of a horseshoe. It was most attractive due to the fact the horses were in motion and the background was of gold chrome. Well, that had to be ours. That was certain. Replacing the name of the store in cut-out letters, we made it over to proclaim our new show season. Again, we observed a giant pair of Neon nose glasses in an optician's window. The tie-up thought came quickly. Harold Lloyd was on the way. With the greatest of care it was moved not long after to our theatre, glasses, transformer and all. We had a head of Lloyd made up in proportion to the glasses and again we had something that drew attention.

Promotes Stores For Lobby Ideas

A group of small shadow boxes calling attention to the new show season was obtained from a store window where they were used for shoe displays. On account of the built-in lights they were very attractive and once we had them it was an easy task to put them to work.

Uses Novel Twists

On the last mad Marx Bros. picture we worked out a stunt that was out of the customary routine insofar as wall frames are concerned. In the frame shown we inserted a very ordinary and undignified card that read: "This is where the Marx Bros. poster belongs but they wouldn't stay put and are at large somewhere in the lobby." Away up on the ledge, some distance from the frame, we put up the regular 40 by 60 high on the wall with an added card reading: "Here we is!" And so again they looked and knew the maniacal Marxes were soon to light here. We were particularly anxious to attract advance attention to the coming of Eddie Cantor's "Strike Me Pink." So the customary shadow box was removed and in its place we set a huge target. The center circle was painted pink and designated as the bull's eye. We provided plenty of rubber suction darts and let them fire away. They did, enjoyed it and our message breezed across.

In all of the promotions mentioned not one cost a single cent other than our own tie-in. It can be done anywhere once the proper contacts are established. Make your assistants promotion and contact conscious and you'll be surprised at the various things they'll drag into your theatre that can be made up to strongly sell your merchandise.

"BEAT THE HEAT"

"Swiss" Lobby Display

For his lobby display on "Swiss Miss" at the Regent Theatre, Bay Shore, L. I., George Daransoll built a replica of a 250 lb. swiss cheese, cow bell was added together with atmospheric blowup of the Swiss Alps for background. Flat stills were also used with imprinted snipes carrying scenes from the picture together with title, cast and playdates. Dealers of Swiss cheese were contacted and Daransoll promoted window displays which included window streamers, scene stills, etc.

A New Approach

Soft-pedaling of icicles, polar bears and suchlike in theatre cooling copy takes a new turn, as noted by the institutional advertising, here illustrated, adopted by the Balaban & Katz Chicago theatres. The trend away from ice-copy was indicated in these pages recently in a series of one- and two-column caricature ads by Hal Kopplin for the Wometco Miami circuit, and that the same tendency is being stressed in other situations indicates a departure from the conventional selling attack.

The displays reproduced on this page are of one-column slugs and two-column size and are unusual because they suggest heat deliberately. "Our reason," says Bill Hollander, B. & K. ad chief, "is that Chicago has been air-condition conscious for many years, perhaps longer than any other city, and has seen icicles for so many years that a radical departure may be worthwhile." Credits go to Jimmy Savage, of the B. & K. ad department, "the gent who struggled with it," writes Hollander.

IN COURTS

$500,000 Offered to Settle Fox Action

A $500,000 cash offer to settle an important angle in the $9,535,261.91 William Fox bankruptcy action has been filed with Federal Referee Allen B. Endicott, Jr. in Atlantic City. If accepted it would end recapture of assets suit against the All-Continent Corporation.

Mrs. Eva Fox, wife of the former executive, and their daughters, Mrs. Mona Tauszig and Mrs. Belle Schwartz made the offer. Hiram Steelman, trustee of the William Fox estate, and his counsel, William Elmer Brown, Jr., recommend that it be accepted and have petitioned the federal court to do so. Referee Endicott has set a hearing on this for August 15th, after all creditors have been notified.

Since May 29, 1936, when Mr. Fox went into bankruptcy, Mr. Steelman and Mr. Brown have sued All-Continent, Mrs. Fox and the daughters, to recapture assets Fox transferred to them. This suit is pending in U. S. district court and it is the one Mrs. Fox and the daughters offer to settle for $500,000. In addition they offer to withdraw an estimated total of $41,000,000 out of the more that $55,000,000 total of creditors' claims against Mr. Fox.

RKO Radio Trustee Seeks Damages from Music Hall

The Music Hall declined to play those RKO pictures which were rejected because they were "unsuitable for the theatre," spokesman for Rockefeller Center said this week in commenting on a $72,374 damage suit filed in Federal Court, New York, by Irving Trust Company, RKO reorganization trustee.

The suit charges breach of the franchise agreement between the Music Hall and RKO for failure to play the minimum number of pictures annually specified in the contract. Rockefeller Center is named a defendant as guarantor of the Music Hall contract.

Fox Theatres Receivership

Of a total of $30,000,000 in claims originally filed in the receivership proceedings of Fox Theatres Corporation, $12,313,597 have been rejected and $8,098,349 have been allowed; claims totaling $2,411,427 have been partly settled, and only the claim of William Fox for $7,176,627 remains to be disposed of, according to a report filed this week in federal court by Milton C. Weisman, the receiver. An interim fee of $12,500 has been allowed Mr. Weisman for his services from January 13th to July 12th of this year and a payment of an eight per cent dividend on a $1,110,055 claim has been allowed to the Chicago and Title Trust Company.

Twentieth Century-Fox Denial Filed

Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation and Twentieth Century-Fox Music Corporation this week filed a general denial in U. S. district court in New York to the suit of F. Gilbert Pollay, doing business as 20th Century Music Publishers. The answer asserts that the defendants will rely on the legal right deriving out of their trade mark "20th Century" registered in June, 1936. They ask for dismissal of the suit.

Schulberg Signs With Selznick

B. P. Schulberg, for seven years in charge of all production at Paramount and more recently an independent producer releasing through that company, has joined David O. Selznick's producing staff at Selznick International.

Maurice Silverstone, chairman of the United Artists executive committee, Charles Schwartz, film attorney and member of the United Artists board of directors, and James Mulvey, eastern representative for Samuel Goldwyn, who is also a board member, arrived on the coast this week.

The objectives of the trip include, in addition to production conferences with United Artists producers, the resumption of negotiations with John Hay Whitney and Mr. Selznick for an extension of the distribution deal with Selznick International and conferences with Charles Chaplin over the latter's objections to the proposed plan for producers' participation in company profits.

Mr. Schulberg began his career as a reporter on the New York Evening Mail. From this he turned to the editorship of a film magazine and subsequently became a publicity director for motion pictures, a scenario writer and finally a producer.

He was the discoverer of the noted director, Joseph von Sternberg, and brought to the American screen Marlene Dietrich and Emil Jannings among others. Some of Mr. Schulberg's productions of the past were "Wings," "The Last Command," "The Way of All Flesh," "Underworld" and "Shanghai Express."

Not Guilty Plea Made By Tower Officers

A plea of not guilty was made this week in United States district court of New York by Tower Magazines, Inc., Catherine McNelis, President; John P. McNelis, circulation manager and brother of Miss McNelis; Joseph D. Flynn, business manager and E. Frederick Low, comptroller, to an indictment charging them with using the mails in a scheme to defraud advertisers. The indictment was returned on July 7th. Miss McNelis and her brother were released in bail of $5,000 each and Mr. Flynn and Mr. Low in $2,000 each. September 2nd was set as the date of trial.

Attachment Granted Baynes

George McLeod Baynes, plaintiff in a $30,000 suit against Atlantic Film Productions, Ltd., was granted a warrant of attachment against the defendant's property this week by Philip J. McCook, New York supreme court justice. The action is based on an alleged contract under which Mr. Baynes contends he was to represent Atlantic in the distribution of "Thunder in the City" in the United States and Canada. Mr. Baynes claims he secured Columbia Pictures as distributor but had not been paid.

Paramount Obtains Injunction

An injunction restraining Exclusive Studios of Chicago from continuing production of 16 mm. versions of Popeye and Betty Boop cartoons was obtained by Paramount. Paramount charged Exclusive had violated its contract.

OBITUARIES

J. V. Gomis, Paramount Secretary, Dies in Spain

J. Vidal Gomis, Paramount's secretary and acting manager for Spain, died at Barcelona, July 16th according to a cable received at the company's home office in New York.

Mr. Gomis was about 60 years old and had occupied his post with Paramount since the outbreak of the Spainsh civil war.

No successor will be appointed for the time being, Paramount announced.

Jack Dunn

Jack Dunn, 21, Olympic skating champion, died July 15th in Hollywood Hospital, Hollywood, after a two weeks' illness. Mr. Dunn was scheduled to have been featured in Edward Small's "The Duke of West Point." He was also scheduled to play the title role in "The Life of Rudolph Valentino." Funeral services were held July 20th. Interment was in Calvary Cemetery.

Arthur Warde

Arthur F. Warde, 66, theatrical manager who directed road companies of "The Birth of a Nation" and "Intolerance" died at his home in Brooklyn, July 13th, after a two months' illness.

Bernard J. Riley

Bernard J. Riley, 73, better known as Barney Riley, a theatrical press agent and executive until his retirement in 1932, died July 12th in the Brunswick Home, Amityville, L. I. Mr. Riley was advance man for "The Old Homestead," and had been associated with the late David Belasco.

Pauli Newgold

Mrs. Pauli Newgold, 65, a hairdresser known to hundreds of stage and motion picture actresses as Madame Polly, died of a heart attack July 11th, at her home in Brooklyn.

Orders Midland Action

Judge Albert L. Reeves in U. S. district court in Kansas City has instructed the Security Service Company of Chicago to proceed with the reorganization of the Midland Investment Company, owner of the Midland theatre. Judge Reeves approved the reorganization plan which calls for payment by Loew's of $90,000 per year for a period of 10 years.

Dismissal Plea Granted

Lott Theatres Corporation and Sam H. Grisman this week won a dismissal of the suit of Typhoon Air Conditioning Company, Inc. However, Timothy A. Leary, New York supreme court justice, granted leave to Typhoon to amend it complaint within 10 days.

Creditors To Meet

Creditors of Meridian Pictures Corporation, which is now undergoing voluntary dissolution, have been ordered to meet August 3rd, at the offices of Edward J. McDonough, receiver, in New York to show cause why the company should not be dissolved.

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parentheses after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1937-38 season.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

Walter Simon, Denver architect, designed the stunning new Fox Chief theatre.

In keeping with the beautiful architecture of the Fox Chief theatre of Pocatello, Idaho, are the 1248 American Seating Company chairs. Fully upholstered with full spring seats, these chairs make the movie habit pleasant and restful.

Comfortable Seating stimulates the movie habit

THE management of the Fox Inter-Mountain Theatres knows that theatres must not only be beautiful—they must also be comfortable.

Significantly, this organization selected American Seating Company chairs for their new Fox Chief Theatre in Pocatello, Idaho. Reasons aplenty for this wise choice! But major among them are these: American chairs are luxuriously comfortable. They make theatre-going more enjoyable. And they stimulate the movie habit, make people anxious to return.

If you are planning a new theatre or if you wish to re-seat your present house, see what the American Seating Company has to offer. What you want —no matter how unique or "different" —can be supplied. And you'll like the prices. Write us for complete information.

A NEW CATARACT THEATRE REPLACES THE OLD IN NIAGARA FALLS, NEW YORK

■ Seating 1,600 on two floors, the new Cataract theatre in Niagara Falls, N. Y., is of a rather ornamental style, in adaptations of modern patterns largely in plaster. The wide auditorium has radial plan emphasized by curved steppings at the rim of the ceiling. The side walls have a series of narrow murals painted (by a special "dab" method) in water color on acoustic plaster. These murals are separated by fluted plaster pilasters, and lighted from troughs at their bases. Auditorium chairs, by Heywood-Wakefield, have spring-edge seats and spring backs. They are covered in mohair, have modern end standards in taupe with coral trim, rubber arm rests upholstered in coral mohair. At left is shown the foyer. The Cataract is owned and operated by Charles Hayman, and was designed by Eugene DeRosa. The new house replaces Mr. Hayman's old Cataract theatre, long an outstanding theatre in Niagara Falls.

"Doll Up the Theatre, Not Reduce Prices"

The exhibitor "must doll up his theatre," not cut admission prices, to increase attendance, Fred H. Wehrenberg has told members of the MPTO of St. Louis, Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois, of which he is president. In a general letter to members, he said:

"Experience has taught us that we go through this same summer slump each and every year and the cutting of admission prices will avail us nothing. . . . What the exhibitor must do is to doll up his theatre, in place of cutting his prices of admission, and use every means at his command to try to keep his head above water during this off-season period."

FIRE RULES REVISED BY UNDERWRITERS FOR AIR SUPPLY SYSTEMS

NEW regulations have been issued by the National Board of Fire Underwriters for the installation of air-conditioning and ventilating equipment. Representing revisions of certain of the July 15, 1937 regulations, those referring to equipment in buildings other than residences provide, in part, for the following practices:

Combustible coverings for ducts should not be used generally, particularly in concealed locations of non-fire-resistive construction, unless covered with cement or gypsum plaster coating of quarter-inch thickness, while combustible coverings "shall not be used" on any ducts with air entering above 175° F.

Neither inlet nor outlet openings shall be located less than 3 inches above the floor, except that in theatre auditoriums such openings are permitted beneath seats.

Whereas the previous regulations referred only to sprinkler systems for the protection of air filters, this section has been changed to recommend the provision of water, gas or other approved fire extinguishing equipment in the enclosure of the conditioning system.

207 NEW THEATRE PROJECTS REPORTED FIRST HALF OF '38

THEATRE construction projects reported to Better Theatres' Projects Bulletin Service during the first half of 1938, totaled 207. This number is 21 more than the projects reported during the first six months of 1937.

Actual theatre construction, according to the best available figures and estimates of architects and contractors, was apparently somewhat less during the first half of this year than in the same period last year. Figures of the F. W. Dodge Corporation, generally regarded as an authority on building activities, for the first three months of this year and covering 37 eastern States, indicated that the number of theatres constructed or under construction was about 10% less than last year's number, and Dodge figures for April and May showed a similar decrease.

The 207 projects cited in the Better Theatres reports, however, refer only to reports of new theatres planned during the first half of 1938, only some of which actually got under construction during this period.

Tabulation of these reports (a complete list of the projects represented appears on the following two pages) shows that the East North Central States—Illinois, Michigan, Ohio and Wisconsin—led all other sections of the country in the number of theatres thus projected, with a total of 38. Of these States, Ohio led with 16 projects. However, the Pacific States reported only one less new theatre than the Midwestern group, while the West South Central group—Arizona, Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma and Texas—is accredited with 34. The number of reports from the other sections of the nation are:

West North Central, 30; South Atlantic, 28; New England, 14; East South Central, 13; Middle Atlantic, 8, and Mountain States, 5.

Average Capacity 900

On the basis of projects for which seating capacities were available—approximately 60% of the total—the average capacity is approximately 900, which is about the average maintained throughout 1937. This figure is higher than the average obtaining from 1932 to 1936, and also notably greater than the average of 640 seats shown by the last Hays Organization figures for all theatres operating at the end of 1936.

Of the 207 projects reported, cost data were available on 95. The average estimated cost of these theatres was approximately $50,000.

Among the producer-distributor theatre interests (not including circuits affiliated with Paramount), Warner Brothers has been the most active in the construction of new theatres in the United States. This circuit now has five houses under construction—the Lane in Philadelphia, with 1,000 seats; Warner, Wilmington, Del., the Beverly and Kennedy in Washington, D. C., each to seat 1,000, and a theatre as yet unnamed, at State College, Pa., which will also have 1,000 seats.

An unusually interesting small theatre among the current projects is the Normandie, to be erected on 53rd Street in New York, just off swanky Park Avenue, at a reported cost of $150,000, although it will seat only 600. Built by the Goelet Estate, large realty owners, the Normandie will be operated by Philip Smith, Boston exhibitor.

Among the latest reports of new construction plans is one that Herman Weingarten, New York operator who recently entered the Florida field, has launched a theatre building program embracing twelve houses and representing an aggregate construction cost reported to be $1,250,000.

AUDITORIUM VISION SEEN AS AN URGENT PROBLEM OF DESIGN

THE MOST immediate use of the data on theatre plan conditions that the Projection Practice Committee of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers has collected for studies looking toward auditorium design standards, will be directed toward the development of practical methods of eliminating obstructed vision, which exists to some substantial degree in all theatres today.

That the SMPE committee, which is headed by Harry Rubin, Paramount projection supervisor, regards obstructed vision as a serious defect in auditorium design was indicated by its recent resolution, which has been approved by the Society's governing board, disapproving of "any noticeable and unpleasant obstruction of the screen view of one patron by other normally seated patrons no matter where located." The resolution further gave clear vision "regardless of positions of patrons one or more rows ahead" as a minimum requirement, and cited both the staggering of seats in successive rows, and the so-called "reversed" floor slope as possible methods of attaining acceptable visual conditions.

Discusses the Problem

Commenting on the resolution and the efforts to be made during the coming months on the problem, Ben Schlanger, New York theatre architect and chairman of a subcommittee in immediate charge of the standards studies, told Better Theatres there are two schools of thought as to method—those who believe in "second-row vision" and those who desire "first-row vision."

"It is important," he said following the meeting of the committee, "that the exhibitor should fully understand the meaning of this phraseology, because the adoption of one or the other in determining seating arrangements may directly and substantially reflect on box office receipts."

As explained by Mr. Schlanger, first-row vision implies that the patron may sit centered in his chair without having to move his head in either direction sidewise and also without having to sit abnormally erect. Second-row vision, he said, becomes feasible when a staggered system of seating is used—that is, the seats are arranged so that the arm rest of a seat immediately in front is in line with the center of the chair in which the patron is seated.

"The exhibitor," he continued, "should want to know, first, how important it is to achieve first-row vision, and second, if it has any importance, is it practicable and economical to obtain in the construction of the theatre.

"It is more important to achieve first-row vision in viewing a picture than it is in the case of viewing a stage performance, because in the case of a stage performance the viewer has to maintain a clear view of a width on the stage of approximately 3 or 4 feet for rather short periods of duration, whereas in the case of the motion picture, the patron has to maintain a clear view of practically the entire width of the screen at all times.

"This is apparent when you realize that image sizes on the screen are comparatively large and shift with considerable rapidity across the entire width of the screen, the average width of which is about 18 feet. In other words, in the case of the stage performance, a slight and unnoticeable shift of the head will permit a clear view of the limited stage width in use at one time, whereas an uncomfortable amount of head shifting is necessary to view the necessary amount of screen area.

Getting First-Row Vision

Concerning the problem of achieving first-row vision Mr. Schlanger submitted a diagram of a seating area which is reproduced here. In this drawing, he explained, the shaded area "A," when used for seat locations, demands careful study in order to accomplish first-row vision, because an unpracticably excessive floor slope will develop if the general levels of this floor area and the screen level are not properly related.

"This area," he pointed out, "happens to be the most desirable area for seat locations. Areas 'B' to either side of 'A' area produce seating positions which automatically become staggered, thereby eliminating obstruction caused by heads immediately in front and requiring clearance over the head two rows ahead. This advantage of the 'B' areas is ineffective unless a designed staggered system is used in the 'A' area since the floor slope in the 'A' and 'B' areas cannot vary. The 'C' area does not create any sightline clearance difficulties because preceding heads obstruct the view of only comparatively small screen areas, as may be seen by studies of the horizontal sightlines of heads indicated at D and E. The vertical sight lines of these heads develop similarly."

Bringing Motion Pictures in Style to a Little Coal Town

Still Finding Use for the Film Pioneer

One of the most significant aspects of the modernization of the motion picture exhibition plant, which got well underway in about 1934, has been the establishment of attractively designed, competently equipped theatres in more and more small towns.

During the period of circuit development, use of the automobile was also being extended, and many of us thought we saw the end of the small town and obscure neighborhood theatre. Instead, we have seen that very type of playhouse assume a new importance.

The story of Mr. J. E. Isaacs in Cumberland, Ky., told in these pages, is not unlike many another that bears upon that importance. Boiled down to their essentials, all of those stories point to the happy fact that through men of initiative and personal resources, the motion picture still discovers ways of growth.

His patrons are mostly Kentucky miners, yet J. E. Isaacs gave them the up-to-date Novo theatre—and is he glad!

TUCKED BETWEEN great hills that reach off across the Southeastern corner of Kentucky, hills that form one of the nation's chief soft coal fields, Cumberland is just a little coal town. Its people are miners and those who supply them food, clothing, implements and professional services—such as they require. Trade is keyed to miners' wages. But about a year ago J. E. Isaacs decided to scrap the tiny storeroom picture house he had started in 1925 and build himself a modern cinema—strictly as a matter of good business. His new theatre, the Novo, has been operating since the first of the year with such results that he is planning to build modern theatres in other coal towns.

J. E. ISAACS

THE MAN

J. E. Isaacs got into show business in another mining town—Matoaka, in West Virginia. That was in 1915, when he converted a Matoaka store in a picture theatre.

In 1917 the war interrupted this beginning, but soon after being mustered out of the army, he converted a store in Norton, Va. Showbusiness was getting into his blood by now, and enjoying unexpected success, he took over the opposition house in Norton.

Then in 1922 he began to get interested in the talk he heard about the development of coal operations in the Black Mountains of Kentucky, and selling his Norton properties, he crossed over into what was then a wilderness, on mule back (for there were no roads), and coming to the little settlement on the Cumberland river that was Poor Fork before it took the name of the river, he decided to settle down there, at least for a time.

Here, however, he first opened up a dry goods store, which he operated until 1925,

Hard times—coal piled up for lack of orders.

Looking down on Cumberland, Ky., from its enclosing hills, laden with the coal that is practically its main support.

A sawmill to reap a little from mountain timber.

Cumberland turns out for the Novo's opening. Adjoining the new house is the little theatre it has replaced.

when he got the itch to get back into show-business. Again he converted a store into a film theatre, calling it the Cumberland. It wasn't much of a theatre, but it met the needs of the town at that time. That it has been succeeded by a modern theatre, designed by a leading theatre architect, is not so much the result of changes in the town as of changes in the times.

"You can't get small town people into your shows with any kind of theatre anymore," Mr. Issacs commented in describing his operations at this point. "The automobile takes them to the cities, and even the films themselves have given them an idea of better things. In addition, it is bad for everybody in the motion picture business for theatres to be like those that were all right when the movies were only 'the nickel show.' The making of pictures has progressed, and the theatres must be in keeping with that progress, otherwise the motion picture itself loses prestige.

"I have always operated along these lines as much as I could. When sound came in 1928, I put in the most expensive make of equipment. All of the theatres in the other towns in that part of the country, even the larger places, were installing some of those cheap makes that were being put out at that time. Other exhibitors thought I had lost my mind to install such sound equipment in a town like Cumberland, but business from then on was outstanding."

THE THEATRE

The Novo, which is one of a group of three theatres operated by Mr. Issacs in the Kentucky coal country, is the first of his theatres of modern planning. Built at a cost of approximately $32,000, it is of brick, semi-fireproof construction, with a store on each side of the theatre entrance. With the facade receding at the center, the marquee extends back to a point in line with the entrance doors in a shallow vestibule, forming the ceiling of the latter. Since the Novo has no local competition, marquee attraction boards were dispensed with, and the lamping was reduced to a minimum to keep operating costs as low as possible (see accompanying photograph). A lateral name sign on the marquee is in channel letters, with neon lighting, and there is also a vertical name sign of sheet metal in a modern shape, with letters painted behind neon tubing of the same outline.

Cumberland's Main Street.

Cumberland's new school.

The marquee is also the vestibule roof. The box office base is of Tarso, which has the appearance of marble. (John Eberson, architect.)

Entrance is through a small lobby with display frames, and from there directly into a foyer-standee section of the auditorium. This foyer has a standee rail of plaster painted with Flexment, which was used because of the hard surface it imparts to plaster, withstanding treatment of which standee rails are susceptible. A damask curtain surmounts this barrier. Walls and ceiling in this foyer area are also of plaster, painted in warm tints, while doors and millwork is a combination of natural-stained walnut with painted modernistic embellishments in shades of blue and cerise. The carpet here and in the aisles is of a modern pattern in black, blue and orange.

The Novo draws from the many coal camps around it. Above is pictured Benham, a mile away. Benham has a well equipped school, a public playground (at center foreground) with tennis courts—and there's still the old swimming hole (right) for the old-fashioned. The mountains are scenic enough to be resort country similar to the Ozarks.

The auditorium is finished entirely in Neuwood, with decorative sections employing the same material in overlapping curved strips, which are painted with a casein non-bridging paint that does not modify the sound-absorbing qualities of this material. The general color scheme is blue and gray, the shades of which proceed from a dark blue at the proscenium to a light gray at the rear. The stage curtain is of blue and gold plush. The ceiling, also of Neuwood, is painted in the same manner as the walls, with a central motif (which appears in the accompanying photograph as an air-diffuser or light trough) also painted.

The auditorium is lighted entirely from lamps concealed in a trough across the rear of the auditorium, about 12 feet from the floor, wired in five circuits to give varying intensities of light, which is directed upon the ceiling at calculated points for reflection into all of the seating area.

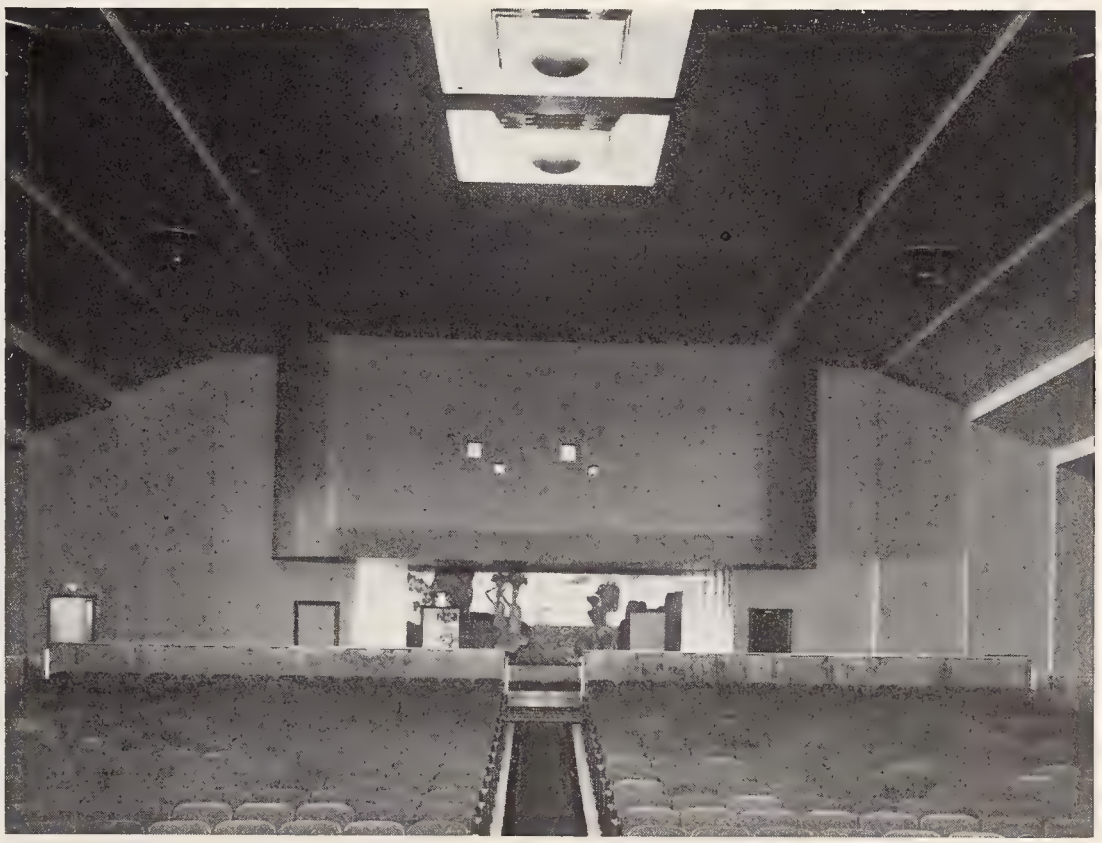
● The Margate theatre is a new theatre recently opened by the Ventnor Realty & Leasing Company in the Margate, N. J., section near Atlantic City, and also not far distant from this operator's Ventnor theatre in Ventnor, N. J., a theatre built 16 years ago but remodeled into an entirely modern theatre about a year ago. The operating organization is headed by George F. Weilland, while P. Mortimer Lewis is secretary and treasurer. The theatre, seating 850 on one floor, is housed in a fireproof building of cement block finished with stucco. It was constructed at a reported cost of $70,000, while equipment is reported to have cost $20,000. The Margate section itself has a population of about 4,000, but the drawing population is estimated to be 30,000.



The front of the Margate is finished in plum-colored architectural glass as also are the fronts of commercial area adjoining the entrance. Doors are of birth in natural color. The marquee dominates the low front. The sides are splayed, with each surmounted by a channel letter name sign lighted in neon. The sides of the marquee consist entirely in attraction boards of silhouette letter type, while the soffit is lamped with "Birdseye" reflectors. The box office is located at the the left side of the entrance, above which it is entirely of plated glass, rounded. The floor plan is L-shaped, and entrance is directly into a foyer which leads in a straight line to the rear of the auditorium, which, though separated by doors, appears continuous with it, an effect partly achieved by employing the same style of carpeting in a directional pattern. In the foyer proper (which here may be also called a lobby), the treatment is dominated by rose-gold mirrors from floor to ceiling on each side wall, flanked by glass block pilaster illuminated from behind. Other areas of the foyer walls are covered with dark red rubber, used also on standee rail.

for a Resort Residential Community

The side walls of the Margate auditorium are covered with a mohair fabric carrying a small French modern pattern in gold on an old rose ground. The fabric is laid over rock wool acoustical treatment. The front wall is of plaster, painted to harmonize with the wall coloring. The ceiling is formed in longitudinal steppings at the sides, extending to a flat central panel, from which are suspended the sole sources of auditorium light. These consist in square porcelain reflecting "baffles," below which are steel lamp bowls. The light from the latter is reflected by the porcelain, while concealed above the square plates are other lamps, which reflect light upon the white-painted plaster ceiling. The Margate is air-conditioned by a Carrier system, which introduces air into the auditorium through Anemostat diffusers along the innermost ceiling steppings. Other equipment, and the furnishings, include Simplex projectors, Peerless Magnarc projection lamps, Hertner motor-generators, Simplex sound system, Ward-Leonard dimmers, Vallen curtain control, American auditorium chairs, Cochrane carpeting and Wagner attraction boards.

NEWS OF THEIR ACTIVITIES REPORTED FROM ALL SECTIONS AND BRIEFLY TOLD

BEN MURPHY, manager of the Booth theatre in Knoxville, Tenn., for the last year and a half, died recently. He was 26 years old.

BROOK HALSEY, formerly assistant manager of the Paramount in Oakland, Calif., has been named manager of the Fox West Coast Strand theatre at Vallejo, Calif.

A. P. PETTIT, owner of the Iowa in Wintersett, has contracted with the Boy Hansen Metal Products Company of Davenport, for the erection of a new marquee.

The Royal, a Commonwealth house in Trenton, Mo., is being re-equipped and refurnishing, following a fire.

FAY GARDNER has taken over the Star theatre in Curtis, Neb., from the Star Enterprises.

The International Seat Corporation of Union City, Ind., has moved its New England sales office to 43 Church Street, Boston. J. E. O'BRIEN is district manager.

WILLIAM A. HOFFBERG, consulting engineer associated with BEN SCHLANGER, New York theatre architect, has gone to England to study the use of welded steel balcony construction in the Majestic theatre in London. The study, Mr. Hoffberg says, is prompted by the legalization by the new New York City building code, of welding for steel structures. The advantages pointed out are greater flexibility in design and savings in the cost of steel framing which may amount to as much as 20 per cent.

O. W. MCCUTCHEON plans to remodel his 500-seat Malone theatre at Sikeston, Mo.

L. E. SCHNEIDER, district manager of Interstate Theatres, has announced that an improvement program is now under way for the Capitol at Brownsville, Texas. An air-conditioning system will be installed and the sound equipment will be replaced with latest type RCA photophone system. A new marquee will be built, the face of the theatre refinished, and the interior rearranged.

Great States Theatre plans complete renovation of the 1,120-seat Grand in Alton, Ill.

WILLIAM BERNES has taken over the operation of the Esseness in Rushville, Neb., from JOHN C. GATES. The house has been renamed the Plains.

K. H. GASTON has purchased the Mayflower in Florence, Kans., from MAX DAVISSON.

ANDY SASO, formerly associated with the Hamrich Theatrical Enterprises in Seattle, Wash., has been made manager of the Padre theatre at San Jose, Calif. Mr. Saso succeeds WILLIAM BROWN, who has been transferred to the managership of the Mission in the same locality.

JOHN EBERSON, New York theatre architect, has removed to larger quarters in the Bond Building on Broadway, taking the entire ninth floor, necessitated by increase in both new theatre construction jobs and remodeling, for independent operators as well as circuits, with architectural treatment in all cases following the Eberson "modern luxury" idea of styling.

MARION PARKINSON, owner of the Iowa theatre in Jefferson, Iowa, has remodeled the house and also installed an air-conditioning system.

RICHARD MARSHALL has resigned as manager of the Fox Oakland at Oakland, Calif., and has been succeeded by RALPH ALLEN, formerly of San Jose.

FRANK MURPHY has been appointed manager of Loew's State in Syracuse, N. Y., succeeding EDWARD MCBRIDE, who has been transferred to the Loew's State in Providence, R. I. Mr. Murphy comes to his present post from Wilmington, Del., and at one time was a Loew's assistant manager in Boston. Another Murphy, Walter, is assistant manager of the Syracuse house.

Warner Brothers signs 20-year lease on the first theatre to be constructed in Wilmington, Del., for many years. Shown are Joseph Bernhard (left), general manager of Stanley-Warner Theatres, and William F. Carvell, Sr., president of the Old Time Petroleum Company, the owners, as they completed the deal. The theatre will seat about 2,000 and the estimated construction cost is $660,000.

GEORGE H. KILLIE has opened the Lehigh theatre in the Community Hall at Lehigh, Iowa.

The Fort theatre at Fort Atkinson, Wis., is to be remodeled. Plans call for the installation of new seats, an entirely new front and marquee, the renovation of rest rooms, general redecoration and the furnishing of new carpet. A new lighting system and projection equipment are also to be added.

HERBERT ROSENER, owner and operator of the Clay theatre in San Francisco, plans to remodel his recently purchased Nob Hill theatre in Portland, Ore.

H. S. STATLER has bought the Avalon in Venango, Neb., from RODNEY DAVIS.

R. O. ROBINSON is refurnishing and redecorating his Grant City theatre in Grant City, Mo.

Following extensive remodeling work, including the installation of new seats and new projection equipment, the Plaza theatre in San Francisco, Calif., has been opened by the Blumenfeld Theatre circuit under the new name of Vogue.

R. E. FULLER is operating the Balsalm Hotel theatre in Dixville Notch, N. H., for the summer months.

LIONEL LANGLOIS, owner and manager of the Alamo at New Roads, La., has erected a new theatre at Woodville, Miss., called the Fern. The house seats 450 and is of brick construction. A. M. RANDALL, son-in-law of Mr. Langlois, has been named manager.

G. W. SUMMERS has purchased new Motiograph projectors, and a Mirrophonic sound system for his Royal theatre at Unionville, Mo.

VAN NESE PHILIP, in charge of RCA Photophone's export activities, is making an extended tour of the company's licenses and distributors in Europe and South Africa. Mr. Philip is expected back in this country in September.

TRUE STORIES FROM ALTEC FILES

FRED SCHWEPPE,
Owner-manager of the Capitol Theatre, Elmira, New York

Effects Repairs While Emergency Kit Carries Show

ELMIRA, N. Y.—"In the middle of a matinee, recently, my sound failed," said Fred Schweppe, owner-manager of the Capitol Theatre here. "With everything on, the sound was barely audible.

"The regular Altec man here was sick in bed, but Altec had sent another inspector from New York to cover this territory. W. B. Essex was in my theatre within five minutes. Finding our main amplifier was defective, he connected up an emergency amplifier which he carried in his car. Sound was restored so quickly the audience hardly noticed the interruption. While operating on the Altec emergency amplifier thru the evening and night show, the main amplifier and short-circuited filter were repaired.

"We saved an entire day's receipts, a tidy sum that almost equals the cost of Altec protection for a year."

How to Plan Your Lighting Scheme
2. COMBINED SYSTEMS FOR THE AUDITORIUM

• The second of a group of articles presenting specific illumination schemes, continuing in this discussion consideration of the type of theatre which was dealt with in the first article

By FRANCIS M. FALGE

IN A PREVIOUS issue [May 28, 1938] the problem of lighting the parts of a theatre interior other than auditoriums was discussed. In this article a discussion of the lighting of the auditorium of the same general type of theatre of modern architecture and seating about 1,100 is presented.

In the average theatre, and the one discussed may be regarded as a typical example, auditorium lighting is often neglected; in many cases it is imperfectly planned and therefore does not create the most comfortable and otherwise most suitable environment. The theatre auditorium is the part of the theatre in which the patron spends most of his time and it therefore offers an excellent opportunity to impress him so that he will look forward to coming back. In this respect, good auditorium lighting, by helping to create a restful atmosphere, can iron out the box-office depressions created by a poor picture now and then. Good auditorium lighting saves money, too, in insurance and other services. Specifically, efficient and effective auditorium lighting does this for the theatre:

1. Creates a desirable atmosphere.
2. Provides safety, thus decreasing insurance costs.
3. Simplifies maintenance and encourages cleanliness.
4. Discourages undue familiarity (important from the feminine point of view).
5. Enhances the presentation.
6. Encourages the feeling of warmth or coolness.
7. Minimizes confusion (and saves time) in finding seats.
8. Minimizes the need for usher service.

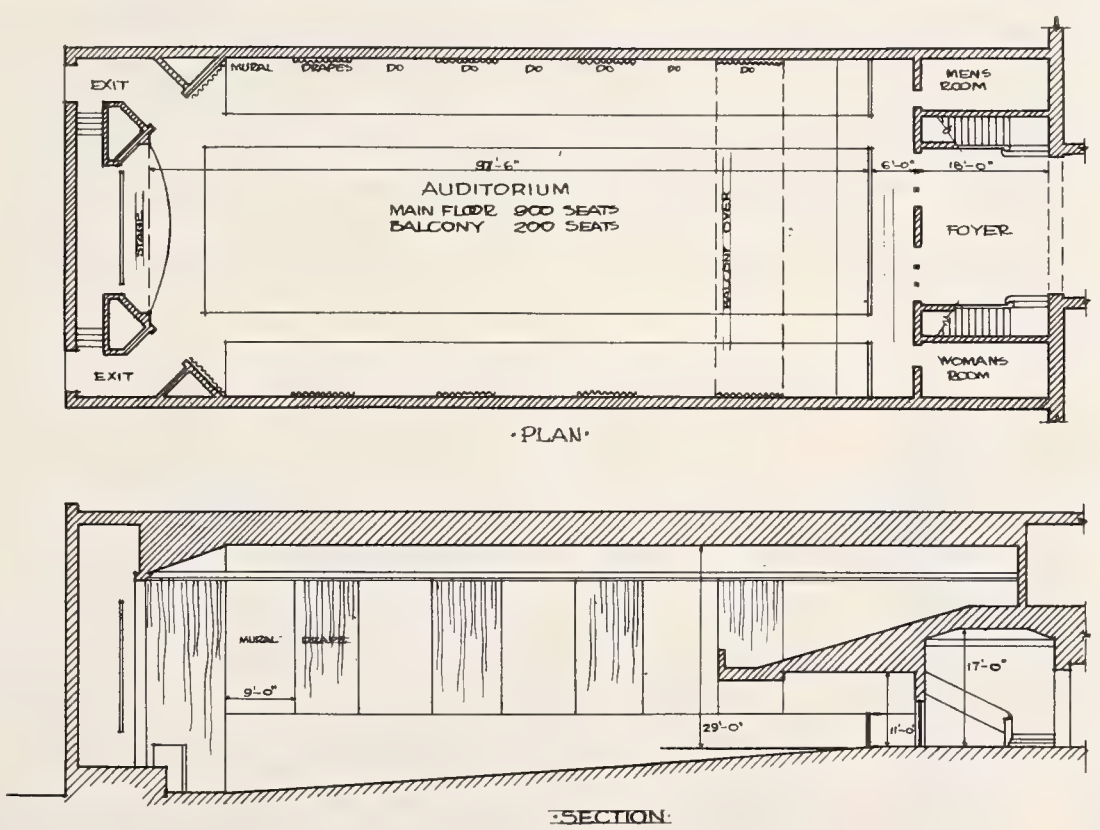
Adequate illumination encompasses the following:

1. Enough light.
2. Freedom from annoying glare.
3. Good color selection.
4. Good control.

In the previous article it was determined from the "Wattage Estimating Chart for Theatre Illumination" which accompanied it that the following auditorium lighting levels were desirable for this 1,100-seat house:

Auditorium, intermission—5 foot-candles.

Auditorium, during pictures—0.1 to 0.2 foot-candle.



First, it is necessary to decide on the type of illumination to be used, both from the standpoint of architectural and decorative effect, and from the standpoint of the system involved. When this has been done, it is an easy matter to decide upon the amount of illumination needed.

The usual types of auditorium lighting have two distinct disadvantages:

1. Considerable volume of diffuse light that is injurious to picture contrasts.
2. Where a single system of lighting serves for both utility and decoration, the latter is usually achieved at a sacrifice of comfort.

Such characteristics make for inefficient lighting because of the necessity of building up the volume of colored light to "seeing" levels, yet rarely is enough light provided because of economic limitations.

The most satisfactory solution is to provide two separate systems, one for utility with resultant easy seeing, and the other for decoration alone. The former can then make efficient use of light of a white or light tint to favor complexions, readily distributed so as to be free from glare, and without destroying screen contrasts. Thus the supplementary decorative lighting system can perform its function by making more effective and economical use of color.

Determining Specific Wattages

A simple, practical solution to the problem of providing light for seeing is to use "downlighting." Such light is produced by equipments located in the ceiling which direct the light strongly to the seating area without reflection from ceiling, or sidewalls, and without interference with the screen. Now in this auditorium under discussion let us use downlighting, supplemented by other lighting for decorative purposes, half of the illumination by downlighting, and half by indirect lighting. From the wattage estimating chart referred to above, it is easy to determine the required watts per square foot.

The auditorium is 97.5′x48′, or 4,680 square feet. From the chart, 2 to 3 watts per square foot are needed for 5 foot-candles of downlighting and bearing in mind that our theatre is located where the air is generally pretty clean, 1 watt per square foot is selected to provide 2.5 foot-candles, making a total of 4,680 watts of downlighting. For indirect lighting, 4 to 8 watts per square foot are needed for 5 foot-candles. Two watts per square foot are accordingly selected to produce the other 2.5 foot-candles, or a total of 9,360 watts.

Selection of Downlighting System

THERE IS a wide variety of types of downlights to consider, as indicated in Figure 1. Appearance, efficiency and freedom from glare are the deciding factors. In this case, let us say, it is desired to keep the ceiling as clean-appearing and smooth as possible, and for that reason a system which projects light through as small a hole as possible is preferred. Such equipment is illustrated in Figure 1, as indicated in the caption.

An eliptical reflector combination, such as those shown in the two drawings at bottom of Figure 1 (and as discussed in the article on downlighting in the May 28th issue, by Victor G. Anderson of the Rambusch Decorating Company) provides illumination most efficiently. The lens system at middle left uses a somewhat smaller hole, though it is somewhat less efficient. Because of the smaller hole, the latter system is selected, and the equipment is directed at an angle of approximately 20° to the front of the auditorium so that the light will be cut off close to the vertical. In this manner the small amount of brightness at the opening is practically eliminated.

The equipments should be placed over the aisles because they require the most illumination. The units should be located on approximately 16-inch centers, and 12 are required. To use 4,680 watts, 400-watt lamps are necessary.

Supplementary Indirect Lighting Provisions

TO MAKE a system of downlighting completely comfortable, some additional lighting is needed to relieve contrasts. This lighting is also useful for decorative purposes, especially during intermissions and "breaks" in the show. It was previously determined that 2.5 foot-candles were desirable, and 9,360 watts would be necessary to produce it.

The architectural treatment, let us suppose, includes the use of murals on the side walls, separated by velour drapes, and it is desired to light these murals and thus utilize them as a secondary light source. Four potential methods of lighting are indicated in Figure 3. The advantages and disadvantages of each are stated below to

The "Wattage Estimating Chart for Theatre Illumination," referred to in this article, and published in the May 28th issue of BETTER THEATRES, will be found useful in connection with many lighting problems. Therefore BETTER THEATRES *will be glad to supply the chart in a permanent form, free of charge, if enough requests are received. determine the best method to use in this particular case.

A. Floodlighting from top or bottom

Because of the height of the murals, it would not be practical to get the floodlights far enough out (at least one-fourth of mural height) to get good coverage. If the floodlight were placed at the top, spilled light would cause glare. If the floodlight were placed at the bottom, patrons in the balcony would look into it. This method is rejected.

B. Striplighting from top or bottom

Much of the reasoning in A applies to striplighting from top or bottom, though the distribution of light would be somewhat better. However, this method is also rejected.

C. Directional lighting from side

Because the murals are narrower than they are high, the reflectors need not be placed out so far from the mural surfaces.

Modern theatres are often the last word in appointments and equipment. Invariably these new theatres such as the Rhodes in Chicago, above, have Vallen Electric Operated Curtain Controls and Noiseless Tracks.

Also when theatre owners wish to modernize and give their stage curtains graceful, flashing elegance they turn to Vallen Equipment. If you have a stage curtain problem of any kind write Vallen today for the most practical, economical solution.

By setting the drapes out from the surface a foot, reflectors may be easily concealed so as to light a surface approximately 4 feet wide. A continuous parabolic cylindrical trough, or concentrating reflectors, will provide even coverage along one side of the mural. Because the reflectors are concealed, no one is annoyed by looking into them. The individual reflector type has the advantage of providing color with colored glass roundels instead of colored lamps. Several color circuits can easily be provided. This method deserves consideration, though the murals, which are, say, 9 feet wide, would not be uniformly lighted.

D. Indirect lighting with silhouette strips

A somewhat more unusual effect can be obtained by the use of light troughs projecting out from the mural surface and supported by pins. When lighted, the troughs appear in contrasting silhouette with the mural background. By this method, greater coverage of the mural is obtained and a symmetrical fading off effect achieved. It is especially pleasing if the silhouette strip is worked into the mural so as to be a part of it. Two or three color circuits for varying illumination levels can readily be provided.

Method D is selected because it is somewhat more unusual than Method C and because the fading-off effect is symmetrical and therefore not objectionable. Dividing the number of murals, eight, into the required wattage indicates the need for approximately 1,000 watts per mural. By utilizing two circuits with like colors on 12-inch centers, eighteen outlets will be provided per circuit. By lamping one with 40-watt lamps of a light tint, 720 of the required watts will be provided. The other circuit may be wired for 25 watts so that lamps of 10- to 25-watt size can be used and in any color to meet the requirements of proper lighting during the performance.

Lighting Beneath the Balcony

A simple method of lighting is desired beneath the balcony, but it must be comfortable and glare-free. It is therefore decided to utilize indirect wall pockets placed at the rear wall, directing their light up to the underside of the balcony. Four pockets are needed. Each should be provided with two lighting circuits; one circuit with a 100-watt lamp for performance lighting, and the other permitting the use of two lamps to carry up to 200 watts. To relieve the brightness of the wall and to improve efficiency, a mirror is fitted at the wall above the pocket so as to redirect the light upward to the balcony ceiling.

With this excellent system of lighting the need for aisle lights is debatable. As they do help to define the aisle ways and because they are useful for emergency lighting, it is decided to use them, placing the units on every other seat standard on alternate sides of the aisle.

The analysis just given is for a complete lighting service. Because the system is relatively efficient in the utilization of light, the wattage is not excessive. It is true that local conditions play an important part in planning a theatre of this kind, just as it influences the selection of marble or less expensive brick or tile; however, given a practical method of providing for better lighting, a compromise can be easily and more sensibly made if it is found necessary.

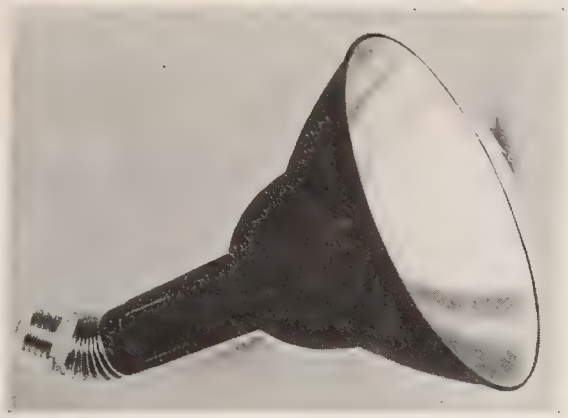
Reporting New Developments in Equipment and Its Use

Test Reel for Both Sound and Picture

A TEST REEL for both sound and image has been placed on the market by the S. O. S. Cinema Supply Corporation of New York. Developed by George G. Popovici, a member of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers and formerly associated with Erpi and Paramount, the film provides material for testing the projection and sound equipment on a single strip of 450 feet.

The sound test material consists in recordings of both male and female voices, piano and orchestra music, fixed frequent footage for focusing the optical system, and other fixed frequencies at a constant level for determining reproducer characteristics, frequency range, presence of flutter, making track adjustments, etc. The sound was recorded on Mirrophonic equipment.

The music and voice recordings extends upward to over 9,000 cycles, the constant-amplitude frequencies being in step from 50 to 8,000 cycles per second.



For testing image projection conditions, the reel provides (printed alongside the sound track) classified targets for the apprehension of travel ghost, marginal and radial lens aberrations, image definition, film jump, weave and lateral waver.

Also available is a 16-mm. reduction of the standard 35-mm. test reel.

New Adjustable Display Reflector

AN ADJUSTABLE reflector for incandescent lamps, with swivel arrangement at the socket, has been developed by Climax Reflector, Inc., of Canton, Ohio. Measuring 10½ x 7⅛ inches, it is designed for general indoor display purposes, and location at such points as the inner edge of the marquee to direct light on attraction announcements across the entrance.

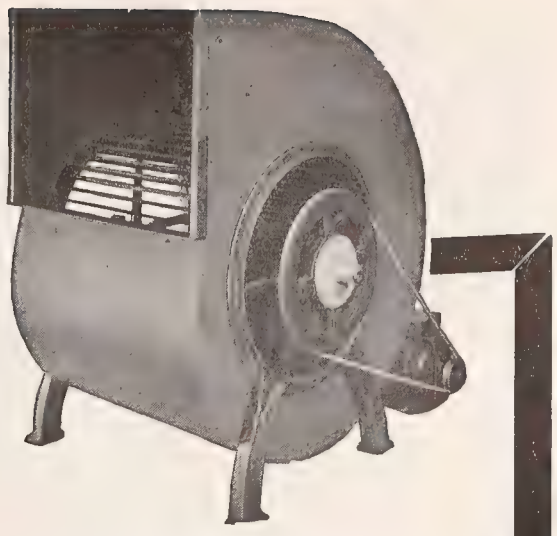
The reflector accommodates standard 150-watt lamps, and the candlepower given is 3,800, producing 78 foot-candles at a distance of 7 feet. The screw base is standard, and the swivel permits turning the reflector, with the lamp, at a maximum angle of 85°.

Ultra-Violet Lamp For Effect Lighting

A HIGH-INTENSITY mercury vapor lamp, designed so as to permit almost complete emission of the ultra-violet radiation, has been announced by General Electric and Westinghouse. It is intended for use in various kinds of effect lighting.



The lamp has an outer bulb which acts as a filter, shutting out nearly all the visible light, but passing the ultra-violet "with little diminution," the announcement says. A faint purple glow visible when the lamp is burning, is not regarded as of sufficient intensity to interfere in the creation of fluorescent effects achieved by directing the rays of the lamp upon fluorescent materials.

The lamp has the same electrical characteristics as a 100-watt high-intensity mercury vapor lamp used for illumination, and is used with the same type of transformer. It has a designated life of 1,000 hours.

To Reduce Noise

A NEW type valve designed to reduce noise in the operation of air-conditioning mechanical equipment has been developed by engineers of the Carrier Corporation. It has what the engineers call a "vapor cushion," which is essentially the effect achieved by the valve cover—as gas escapes at the first opening of the valve, a "cushion" is created, absorbing the sound.

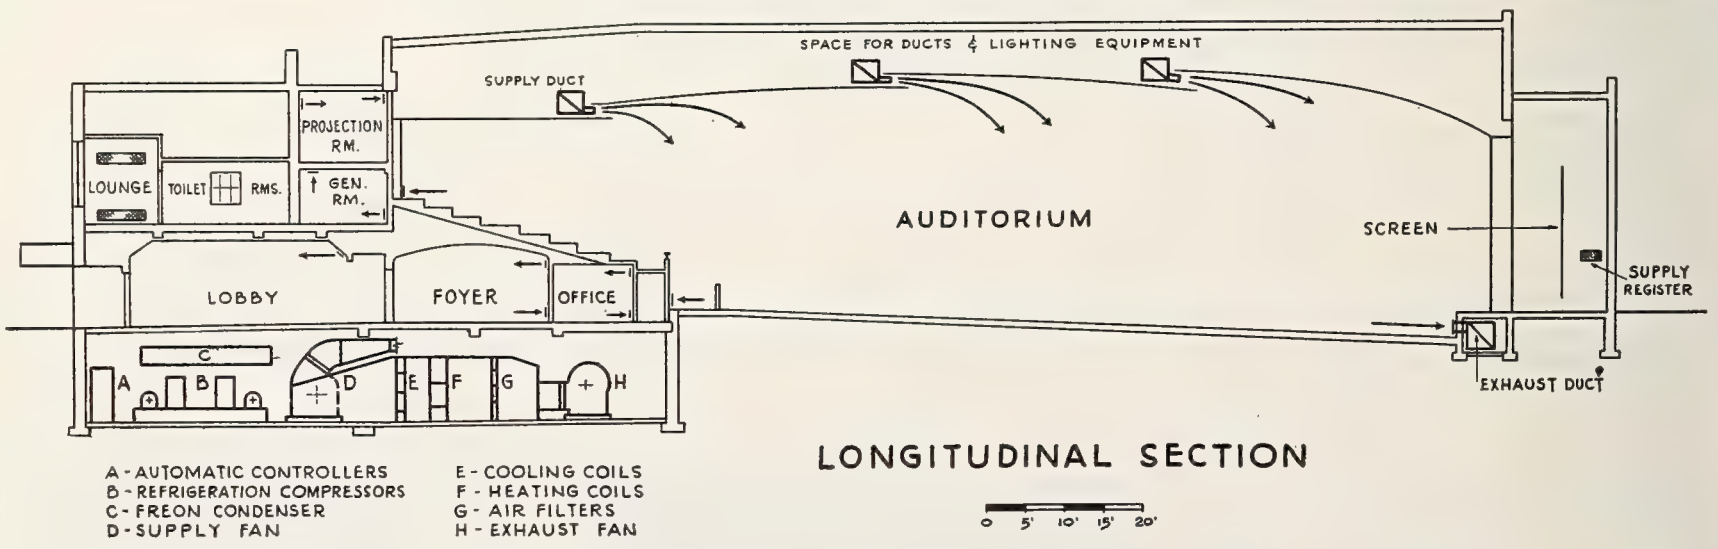
Air-Conditioning the Princeton Playhouse

Immediately above is pictured the compact equipment room in the basement of the Playhouse. At upper left is shown one of the auditorium ceiling coves in which air inlets are located, and also exhaust openings along the stadium parapet.

• The air supply provisions of the Playhouse in Princeton, N. J., have a number of interesting aspects, here discussed by the designing engineer » » » »

By S. A. S. PATORNO



THE FIRST theatre in Princeton, N. J., to have complete air-conditioning, the Playhouse has a system that is otherwise of interest because of the manner in which it was designed, which made effective air-conditioning a basic element of the theatre plan; because of the compact disposition of equipment; and also because of the part played by insulation in providing for economical operation.

The Princeton Playhouse (the unusual architectural interior treatment of which was featured in BETTER THEATRES a few issues back), is one of a group of buildings sponsored by Princeton Municipal Improvement, Inc., a six-million-dollar real estate development, consisting in apartment, store and office buildings, and a hotel, in addition to the theatre, with exterior architecture entirely in Colonial. The architect for the development is Thomas Stapleton of New York.

The Playhouse air-conditioning system includes a cooling tower concealed by the architecture of the building. The tower, while contributing to low-cost operation, also eliminates shutdown hazards, such as water shortage or an emergency restriction by the municipality of water consumption.

Unlike most projects, a budget cost was prepared for the mechanical equipment in this building, based on architectural sketches, and before working drawings and specifications were prepared by the consulting engineers. This system informed the owner of the proper cost before plans and specifications were completed, with a resultant saving in time and fees.

The Princeton Playhouse is an excellent example of a structure properly designed and supervised with a view towards economy in operating costs and accomplishing the concealment of the complete air-conditioning system. Entirely exposed on all sides, all walls and roofs were insulated, the auditorium walls with 4 inches of rock wool, auditorium roof with 2 inches of cork, and the roof over the stores with 1 inch of cork.

The size of the system was naturally reduced by the rock wool insulation. Significant are the operating economies which resulted during the past winter season; in the coldest weather, with the system shut down overnight, and from Saturday night to Monday afternoon (no Sunday performances), the inside temperature never dropped below 60° F. from the normal 70° maintained during performances.

The entire theatre is completely air-conditioned (stores and toilet rooms are heated by direct radiation. The theatre is conditioned by means of a central system of filtering, heating, cooling and dehumidification during the summer. The supply air is passed through filters, then through direct expansion cooling coils, and thence distributed to the auditorium and various other rooms. The cooling equipment, which is by the Worthington Pump & Machinery Company and was installed by their Carbondale division, was selected for its durability and the ease with which the varying load conditions can be met. The 104 ton refrigeration equipment consists of two heavy-duty vertical Freon compressors, each belt driven by 50 h.p. General Electric motors, especially designed for quiet operation.

Foyer, showing cornice inlets from auditorium.

Each compressor is equipped with automatic capacity reduction valves in order adequately to adjust the system to meet varying loads. The auxiliary equipment consists of a condenser, a Marley cooling tower, and a circulating pump for circulating water through the cooling tower and the condenser.

Sound Isolation

The subject of sound isolation was thoroughly studied, and in addition to the specifications calling for especially designed quietly operating motors and machines, others called for the isolating of pipe hangers from the building construction, isolating the pumps and the machines from the piping system, by use of flexible connections.

The conditioned air is circulated by a blower and exhauster of American Blower Corporation make. The fresh air is drawn from one side of the building and exhaust air is discharged on the other side of the building, above the roof.

The supply air is delivered into the auditorium by means of duct outlets concealed in the ceiling space between the lights (see longitudinal section and interior view of auditorium). The outlets were sized and spaced to obtain the proper diffusion of the heated or cold air as supplied. The air is exhausted partly through ornamental grilles located below the stage, and the remainder through grilles located below the stadium.

The foyer and manager's office on the first floor, and the lounge on the second floor, are heated and cooled by the main air conditioning system. The lounge is provided with a concealed thermostatically controlled radiator. The lobby is provided with a built-in unit heater in the branch duct. The unit heater coil is thermostatically controlled to heat the lobby, while the fan motor is manually controlled and is turned on only when the main fan is shut down and quick heating is desired.

Operating Characteristics

Minneapolis Honeywell controls for the air-conditioning system were designed to afford the maximum in economy throughout the year. During the summer, the inside temperature is automatically reset, as scheduled in advance, in accordance with the outside temperature. The control system automatically cools with outside air as long as possible, and reverts to compressor operation only when the full supply quantity of outside air is insufficient to cool the theatre properly. Whenever the compressors are used, the outside fresh air is limited automatically to a minimum of 10 cubic feet per minute for each of the 1226 seats, if the theatre is full. During the heating season, the system is automatically operated without the use of steam as long as possible by taking advantage of the heat given off by the occupants, which is substantial. The steam is turned on only when the outdoor air begins to cool the theatre below the desired inside temperature.

The projection room and generator room are provided with independent supply and exhaust systems, under the direct control of the operator.

The equipment used in the Playhouse air-conditioning system includes, besides the items previously named Nash Engineering Company vacuum heating pumps and cooling tower circulating pumps. Warren Webster & Company heating specialties, Aerofin direct expansion coils, American Radiator Company tempering stacks, American Air Filter Company air filters, Bethlehem galvanized iron sheets for the ventilating ducts, and Jenkins valves.

Mechanical Equipment And Hardware for Stage

• Concluding a series of four articles on equipping the stage adequately for its occasional use for home talent shows and similar special attractions

By O. T. TAYLOR

THEORETICALLY a stage performance could be given without either scenery or mechanical aids of any sort, but such performance could hardly be considered complete. From a practical and artistic point of view the scenery, the setting in which the performers appear, is of major importance. To make the performance still more enjoyable, still more interesting, it is found desirable at times to change quickly from one scene to another. The most practical, efficient and economical manner in which to effect such quick changes is by means of devices to raise cycloramas, drops, borders and other hanging pieces into the fly lot; and so to construct set pieces, flats, profiles, etc., that these can be easily and quickly "set" and "struck."

Combination Handline and Counterweight

The full counterweight system for raising and lowering hanging pieces is the ultimate in efficiency and ease of operation. But for the majority of theatres, except those in which stage attractions form a major part of the program, this system may be found too costly to justify installation. A happy medium is to use rope line sets for all lighter hanging pieces, and confine to counterweight sets only the permanently located heavier drops and other heavy hanging equipment. The following should definitely be installed on counterweight sets: asbestos curtain, grand drapery, grand drapery border (or teaser), act curtain or traveler, close-in curtain, motion picture screen, sound system-horns and cyclorama. All of these are part of the motion picture presentation set and are also used in conjunction with stage scenery proper.

Borderlights should also be installed on counterweight sets. The pipe batten with movable arms used for the cyclorama must be counterweighted, and it is advisable to have one or more spare counterweight sets well located on the stage.

For the average-size stage, four- or five-line sets are the generally accepted standard. The lines in the counterweight system are of flexible steel cable or wire rope. On the stage the lines are attached to a permanent batten of 1¼-inch wrought iron pipe, from which point they extend to the gridiron, over loft blocks, to a head block with a single sheave, grooved for all cables and hand line.

Inasmuch as the head block sheave has to carry a load equal to the weight of the object to be lifted, it should be equipped with a roller bearing and shaft of sufficient capacity to carry the load. The off-stage ends are fastened to the upper end of a specially constructed arbor containing the necessary castiron weights to balance the batten and its load.

To operate, raise and lower the sets, a ¾-inch manila rope handline is attached to the upper end of the counterweight arbor, run over the head block sheave to the floor through a floor block back to the lower end of the arbor. Actually the counterweight, not the batten and scenery, is raised and lowered by means of the handline.

Sets consisting of four or five lines of ⅝-inch manila rope are adequate for all other hanging pieces, such as drops, borders, legs, etc. The line sets, sufficient in number for all requirements, are rigged similarly to the counterweight sets and the off-stage ends are loose, not attached to a counterweight arbor. The lines should be long enough to rest on the floor at both the stage and off-stage ends, with about 10 feet of additional length on each line, all sets to be equipped with trim clamp. Twenty sets of lines are not too many for the presentation stage of average size.

Supplementary Paraphernalia

Additional paraphernalia and hardware in general use on the stage include stage braces, belaying pins, sand bags, trim clamps, stage screws, lash lines and battens. A hand-operated draw-curtain track for light-weight curtains, is a very desirable and useful piece of equipment.

Schedule of Essential Equipment

In the following list are named the essential pieces of equipment and paraphernalia for efficient operation of a fly-loft stage (not the sets supporting the screen):

Four or five counterweight sets, complete.

Twenty manila rope sets, complete.

A Note on Stage Dimmer Equipment

[A type of light control equipment also adapted, in many instances, to such use of the stage as has been discussed in this series of articles, is the relatively new one employing Thyratron tubes. Mr. Taylor dealt with light control equipment in the April 30th issue; the following brief discussion of dimmer facilities is added to this final article so as to include, for the purpose of completeness, information on all types now available.—THE EDITOR.]

STAGE LIGHTING really should be expressive as well as versatile. Colors are produced by blending primary colors: brightness and quantity gradations of light should be produced smoothly and economically. Choice of suitable dimmer equipment for the calibre of stage productions to be presented, is very important.

Resistance Dimmers

Resistance dimmers, available both in slidewire and circular plate types, function by the absorption of the energy as heat. Overloads may cause damage, but they should be loaded to their capacity, otherwise the lamps will not dim completely nor will they dim at a rate corresponding to position indicators. Slidewire dimmers have capacities up to 1,000 watts; they are usually of inexpensive construction and are not ordinarily arranged for master control. Circular plate dimmers have a maximum capacity of 4,000 watts and are available in (1) inexpensive individual control models, and (2) in the heavy-duty theatre type arranged for master control.

Some models comprise double plates with two control handles, others of a dual capacity type permitting variable loading. For remote control some types have individual motors connected to suitable master control. At least 100 contact points are needed to provide flickerless dimming. Care must be used in maintaining all contacts and moving parts: A "flipper" switch should be provided so that when the resistance is all in use, the circuit will be disconnected, thus conserving the electrical energy.

Auto-Transformer Dimmers

Auto-transformer dimmers reduce the voltage of lamps by a transforming action, thus being of high efficiency as contrasted with the resistance types. They are of the circular and slider type; in some cases not arranged for master control, in other cases arranged for manual master control. The

For example, Test No. 9 of the amplifier trouble chart given below, is merely an instruction to use the power circuit trouble chart which appeared in these pages on May 28th. Eighty-eight distinct trouble tests, applying to conditions treated in the present installment, are covered by the references given below to charts previously printed.

The charts are used by reading them from left to right, exactly as in the case of previous installments. Thus, is case of sound stoppage definitely traced to an amplifier, the first step is to observe the plate current meter, and the second step will be No. 2, No. 7, No. 10 or No. 12, according to the facts observed. In every case the left-hand column describes the test to be made, and the central column indicates the various results that may be expected in all normal cases of trouble. Checking the result obtained, as listed in the central column, with the corresponding procedure listed in the right-hand column, will indicate what test is to be made next.

However, when the next step is obvious, the central column merely notes that trouble has been found and there is no corresponding notation at the right. Again, when a series of tests must normally result in a cure, the right-hand column also carries no further notation.

Such charts are not infalliable under all conditions, of course, or under all possible variations in equipment detail; they should be used as guides subject to such modification as individual circumstances require, rather than as a set of inflexible rules.

To Determine the Cause and Correction of NO SOUND, DUE TO AMPLIFIER TROUBLE

THE TROUBLE TESTS	THE CONDITION FOUND	NEXT TEST
1. Observe plate current meter	Reading normal	No. 2
	No reading	No. 7
	Very low reading	No. 10
	No plate current meter	No. 12
2. Operate plate current meter switch to take all possible readings	All readings normal	No. 3
	One or more readings zero or very low	No. 14
	No plate current meter switch	No. 12
3. Apply test phones across resistor or transformer load of first amplifying tube	Sound heard	No. 4
	No sound heard	No. 18
	Level at first tube output known to be too low to operate headphones	No. 22
4. Apply test phones across resistor or transformer load of second amplifying tube	Sound heard	No. 5
	No sound heard	No. 20
5. Apply test phones successively across resistor or transformer loads of remaining amplifier tubes	Sound heard on each test	No. 6
	No sound heard on one test	No. 24
6. Investigate output circuit for open or short	TROUBLE FOUND
7. Observe tube filaments	Tubes lit	No. 8
	Tubes out	No. 31
	One tube out	No. 28
8. Operate plate current meter switch to take all possible readings	No reading, any position	No. 9
	Some readings normal	No. 15
	No plate current meter switch	No. 13
9. Trace trouble according to NO SOUND chart printed in May 28th Better Theatres, page 30	TROUBLE FOUND
10. Operate plate current meter switch to take all possible readings	All readings low	No. 11
	Some readings normal	No. 15
	No plate current meter switch	No. 15
11. Trace trouble according to LOW VOLUME chart printed in May 28th Better Theatres, page 29	TROUBLE FOUND
12. Observe tube filaments	Tubes lit	No. 13
	Tubes out	No. 31
	One tube out	No. 34
13. Apply test voltmeter to all amplifier socket plate terminals	No plate voltage, any tube	No. 9
	No plate voltage, some tubes	No. 16
	All plate voltages normal	No. 36
14. Observe tube filaments	All normal	No. 15
	One or more tubes out or dim	No. 34
15. Replace tubes showing low plate readings	TROUBLE CURED
	New tubes give same results	No. 16

Tests for Amplifier Trouble

THE TROUBLE TESTS	THE CONDITION FOUND	NEXT TEST
16. Apply test voltmeter to voltage divider, by-pass and B circuits of low-reading tube or tubes	TROUBLE FOUND Trouble not found	 No. 17
17. Apply test voltmeter to all grid circuits of low-reading tube or tubes	TROUBLE FOUND
18. Apply headphones to speech input circuits	TROUBLE FOUND Level at input known to be too low to operate headphones	 No. 19
19. Visually and manually check all input connections and insulation; use high resistance voltmeter to test input circuit component parts, disconnecting them temporarily as necessary	TROUBLE FOUND
20. Apply headphones to second tube speech input circuits	TROUBLE FOUND No trouble found	 No. 21
21. Visually and manually check insulation and connections of second tube input circuits; use high resistance voltmeter to test component parts, disconnecting them temporarily as necessary	TROUBLE FOUND
22. Apply test phones across resistance or transformer load of second amplifying tube	Sound heard No sound heard	No. 5 No. 23
23. Apply tests No. 19 and No. 21	TROUBLE FOUND
24. Apply test No. 21 to the input circuit of tube at which sound is lost	TROUBLE FOUND
25. Apply a.c. voltmeter or test lamp to filament transformer primary winding	Primary voltage normal No primary voltage	No. 26 No. 33
26. Apply a.c. voltmeter or low voltage tester (flash light bulb, exciter lamp, etc.) to filament transformer secondary winding	Secondary voltage normal No secondary voltage	No. 27 No. 39
27. Trace supply line to sockets for break in line	TROUBLE FOUND
28. Replace tube	TROUBLE CURED New tube burns out with plate flashover New tube lights, but no sound New tube burns out, no plate flashover	 No. 29 No. 2 No. 40
29. Check control grid bias voltage at flashover tube socket, if not derived from cathode resistor	Grid bias zero or low Grid bias normal Grid bias derived from cathode resistor	No. 30 No. 41 No. 30
30. Apply test No. 21 to grid bias circuits	TROUBLE FOUND No trouble found	 No. 41
31. Inspect power line fuse	Fuse out Fuse good	No. 32 No. 25
32. Replace fuse	TROUBLE CURED Fuse does not hold Fuse holds, no sound	 No. 33 No. 13
33. Trace trouble according to NO SOUND chart printed in May 28th Better Theatres, page 30	TROUBLE FOUND
34. Replace unlit tube	TROUBLE CURED New tube does not light New tube lights, but no sound New tube burns out with plate flashover New tube burns out, no plate flashover	 No. 35 No. 42 No. 29 No. 40
35. Trace filament or heater line from filament transformer to socket.	TROUBLE FOUND
36. Use test milliameter (or voltmeter across tube load) to check all tubes for normal plate current	All plate currents normal One or more plate currents low or zero	No. 3 No. 37
37. Replace tubes showing low current reading	TROUBLE CURED New tubes no improvement	 No. 38
38. Apply test 21 to all grid and cathode circuits at low-reading tubes	TROUBLE FOUND
39. Replace filament transformer	TROUBLE CURED
40. Check filament transformer and its socket for cause of high heater voltage	TROUBLE FOUND
41. Check voltage divider and plate supply circuits to faulty tube for cause of high plate voltage	TROUBLE FOUND
42. Operate plate current meter switch to take all possible readings	Replaced tube reading still low No plate current meter switch Replaced tube reading normal	No. 16 No. 13 No. 3

NOTE A—If any trouble has involved burning out of a part, even of a fuse, check for high line voltage; if this exists no repair is permanent until voltage correction has been made. This note also applies to the chart on the following page.

NOTE B—If replacement is necessary per Test No. 39, do not install the new transformer until all its circuits have been checked to make sure no unsuspected short remains.

WARNING: AMPLIFIER VOLTAGES ARE DANGEROUS. When prescribed tests can be made with the amplifier turned off, bleed off the remaining high voltage charges of the filter condensers with a wooden-handled screw-driver or other well insulated conductor, before any work is done. Where tests must be made with the amplifier turned on, use only test prods and cords insulated for a thousand volts, and handle them carefully.
